An electric pickpocket alarm has been invented by a man in Manchester. Any attempt to touch his pockets, his watch, or other jewelry causes a bell to ring.

Four oranges eaten every day are effective in removing the desire for intoxicants. One should be eaten before breakfast, one each at 11 a. m., 3 p. m., and 6 p. m.

People who use the eyes much in reading, writing, etc., will rest the organs of vision by lifting the eyes every ten minutes or so, and gazing at some distant object.

The tallest chimney in the world is at the Townsend Works in Glassgow. It is 488 feet high. It is masonry to a height of 454 feet, with a copper pipe on top 34 feet high.

Amateur photographers are not happy in Russia. They have to secure licenses, and if they chance to take a snap-shot of a view near a fortress they are liable to be whirled to Siberia as spies.

An eminent London physician said that people who desire to avoid dyspepsia should chew every mouthful so that each morsel is ground thirty-two times between the teeth—one grind for each tooth.

When a Chinese lady approaches a muddy place, she beckons a boy. The boy drops on his hands and knees in the mud, and the lady uses him as a stepping-stone, for which service she gives him a small coin.

A cablegram was lately dispatched from Manchester, England, to Victoria, British Columbia, and the answer was received in ninety seconds after the questioner first touched the wire. The entire distance traversed is 13,000 miles.

A NEW PUBLISHER.

"Allow me, Miss Bawston, to make you acquainted with Mr. Brown, our book-maker."

"Yes; so delighted. I am always glad to know those wonderful men who publish books. What is your latest work from the press, Mr. Brown?"

"Ahem, I have spent a good deal of time this summer on an anthropological work entitled, 'The Coming Race.'"

"An expensive work, Mr. Brown?"

"Several of my friends have put their fortunes into it, Miss Bawston;" and he winked at the scorecard and hurried away.—Judge.

"Why do you use paint?" asked a violinist of his daughter. "For the same reason that you use resin, papa." "How's that?" "Why, to help me draw my beau."

AN INCOMPLETE HOUSE.

We run wild over the furnishings of a house, its furniture, carpets, hangings, pictures and music, and always forget or neglect the most important requisite. Something there should be always on the shelf to provide against sudden casualties or attacks of pain. Such come like a thief in the night; a sprain, strain, sudden backache, toothache or neuralgic attack. There is nothing easier to get than a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, and nothing surer to cure quickly any form of pain. The house is incomplete without it. Complete it with a good supply.

"What do you think of these eggs?" whispered the lean boarder.

"These eggs," responded the fat boarder, whose occupation was that of advertising clerk in a newspaper office, "are too late to classify."

UNNECESSARY RISKS.

The wise man runs no unnecessary risks. There are few greater risks than allowing a cold to fasten itself upon the system. Whether it attacks the throat, the lungs, the stomach or the muscular system, if given even a little time, it is sure to strengthen its hold and can then be shaken off only with great difficulty.

It is entirely unnecessary to run these risks. ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS applied to the back, chest, pit of the stomach, or to the lungs, will effectually prevent the trouble from increasing. They are simple in their ingredients, perfectly safe, and can be applied by a child.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS tone up the system.

These big sleeves are very old-fashioned. They wore 'em as long ago as 1836.

AN EAGER AND A NIPPING WIND,

A continuous down pour of rain, inclement weather, generally in winter and spring, are unfavorable to all classes of invalids. But warmth and activity infused into the circulation counteracts these influences and interpose a defense against them. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, most thorough and effective of stomachics and tonics, not only enriches the blood, but accelerates its circulation. For a chill, or premonitory symptoms of rheumatism and kidney complaint, particularly prevalent at these seasons, it is the best possible remedy. It is also invaluable for dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation and nervousness. Never set out on a winter or spring journey without it. Elderly persons and the delicate and convalescent are greatly aided by it.

There is such a thing as working yourself to death so that your heirs can afford an expensive funeral.

We have not been without Piso's Cure for Consumption for 30 years.—LIZZIE FERRELL, Camp St., Harrisburg, Pa., May 4, 1894.

The sea otter is the most valuable of all furs.

Wolfe's Worm Powders. The Great Remedy for worms. When your children are ailing, try them. At druggists, or send 25c. to JNO. WOLFE, San Rafael, Cal., and you will get them by mail.

The most beautiful pictures are those that lovers carry in their eyes.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.

If you can't remember what the string tied on your finger was to remind you of you are getting old.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Call It a Craze.

AN ALARMING STATEMENT CONCERNING WOMEN.

HOW BAD HABITS ARE FORMED.

The New York Tribune says: "The habit of taking headache powders is increasing to an alarming extent among a great number of women throughout the country. These powders as their name indicates, are claimed by the manufacturers to be a positive and speedy cure for any form of headache. In many cases their chief ingredient is morphine, opium, cocaine or some other equally injurious drug having a tendency to deaden pain. The habit of taking them is easily formed, but almost impossible to shake off. Women usually begin taking them to relieve a raging headache and soon resort to the powder to alleviate any little pain or ache they may be subjected to, and finally like the morphine or opium fiend, get into the habit of taking them regularly, imagining that they are in pain if they happen to miss their regular dose."

In nine cases out of ten, the trouble is in the stomach and liver. Take a simple laxative and liver tonic and remove the offending matter which deranges the stomach and causes the headache. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are composed entirely of the purest, concentrated, vegetable extracts. One Pellet is a dose; sugar-coated, easily swallowed; once used, always in favor. They positively cure sick headache and remove the disposition to it.

MR. E. VARGASON, of Otter Lake, Lapeer Co., Mich., writes: "I not infrequently have an attack of the headache. It usually comes on in the forenoon. At my dinner I eat my regular meal, and take one or two of Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets immediately after, and in the course of an hour my headache is cured and no bad effects. I feel better every way for having taken them—not worse, as is usual after taking other kinds of pills. 'Pleasant Pellets' are worth more than their weight in gold, if for nothing else than to cure headache."

E. VARGASON, ESQ.

CURE THAT COUGH WITH SHILOH'S CURE — TAKE THE BEST

25cts., 50cts. and $1.00 Bottle. One cent a dose.

It is sold on a guarantee by all druggists. It cures Incipient Consumption and is the best Cough and Croup Cure.

A friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm, and after using it six weeks I believe myself cured of catarrh. It is a most valuable remedy.—Jos. Stewart, 624 Grand Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from Colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents, at Druggists, or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This turns and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY,

Ship your Dried Fruit

—TO—

GILBERT BROS. & CO.,

GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS.

118-120 DAVIS ST., San Francisco.

A BIG SAVING

In ready cash can be made if you

PAY FOR TREES WHEN THEY BEAR.

We offer these Terms to Close Out Our Surplus of 200,000

PEACHES, PLUMS AND PEARS.

Price only 3c. each, F. O. B.

No Better Trees Grown. Address SACRAMENTO RIVER NURSERY CO., WALNUT GROVE, CAL.

SAVE SHOE LEATHER

Ask for Dyke's Diamond or Oval Soles and Revolving Heels. Imitations are worthless. For sale by leading shoe dealers. Agency, Donohoe Bldg., San Francisco.

If you want work, or can organize a lodge, write to the order of Fraternal Argonaut, Rooms 87 and 88, Donohoe Building, San Francisco, Cal.

Strong Nerves

Depend upon pure, rich, red, nourishing, strength-giving blood. The nerves derive their sustenance from the blood, and when they are weak it is because they do not receive the nourishment needed. The true cure for Nervousness will not be found in opiate or sedative compounds. These only allay the symptoms.

"My wife suffered many years with various troubles, severe headaches, debility, nervousness, indigestion and dyspepsia. She has been treated by different doctors, and tried different remedies, but Hood's Sarsaparilla has done more for her than anything else. We consider Hood's Sarsaparilla a most indispensable medicine Removes the cause by purifying and enriching the blood, giving to it just those qualities which are demanded for the proper support of the nervous system. Hundreds of women who once suffered from nervousness, write that they have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla and nervousness has disappeared. This was because Hood's Sarsaparilla purified their blood. for family use, and for all disorders caused by torpid liver and impure blood, in fact it is a wonderful health restorer to the whole system. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved itself in my wife's case, and we can faithfully recommend its use in every family."—JACOB ROMMEL, Morrison, Mo.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

HOOD'S PILLS act harmoniously with Hood's Sarsaparilla. 25c.

HOOD'S PILLS cure all liver ills, biliousness, headache. 25c.

Insist on ARM AND HAMMER SODA in packages

BEWARE of imitation trade marks and labels.

Costs no more than inferior package soda—never spoils the flour, keeps soft, and is universally acknowledged purest in the world.

Made only by CHURCH & CO., New York.
Sold by grocers everywhere.
Write for Arm and Hammer Book of valuable Recipes—FREE.

CABLED FIELD and HOG FENCE, 24 in to 58 in. high: CABLED POULTRY FENCE, 24 in. to 63 in. high. STEEL WEB PICKET LAWN FENCE, 18 in to 50 in. high. STEEL WIRE FENCE BOARD and ORNAMENTAL STRIP. Steel Posts, Steel Rail, Steel Gates and Steel Tree, Flower and Tomato Guards. We manufacture a full line of Wire Fencing, Gates and Posts, and solicit your patronage. Catalogue Free. De Kalb Fence Co., 100 High St., De Kalb, Ill.

JNO. WOODLOCK, PACIFIC COAST AGENT, 26 Beale St., San Francisco, Cal.

"DON'T BORROW TROUBLE." BUY

SAPOLIO

'TIS CHEAPER IN THE END.

MALARIA!

DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY.

Three doses only. Try it.

INCUBATORS

Send for Catalogue. W. C. Beach, Ripon, Cal

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE.

FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

BEAUTY, WEALTH, HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

LADIES, IF YOU WOULD POSSESS ALL these blessings, consult with stamp for reply.

THE C. C. & H. CLUB
STOCKTON, : : : CALIFORNIA.
(Mention this paper.)

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS

A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. WOODS & Co's.
"CASTLEWOOD" KENTUCKY BOURBON
CARTAN, McCARTHY & CO.
SOLE AGENTS, AND DISTRIBUTORS
SAN FRANCISCO

Leave Doubtful Seeds alone. The best are easy to get, and cost no more. Ask your dealer for

FERRY'S SEEDS

Always the best. Known everywhere. Ferry's Seed Annual for 1896 tells you what, how, and when to plant. Sent Free. Get it. Address D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Mich.

MOWERS! RAKES! REAPERS!

NOTHING BEATS THE BEST!

Write us for a Catalogue quick!

D. M. OSBORNE & CO.,
27 MAIN STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

Grain and Straw Carriers

L. Ph. Bolander, 115-117 Main St., S. F.

14 yrs. of experience has resulted in producing the BEST and the CHEAPEST. Correspondence solicited.

S. F. N. U. No. 666. New Series No. 13.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

Last year we commenced an elaborate plan of advertising, but before we were half through, OUR ADVERTISEMENTS DISAPPEARED. Why? Because WE WERE OVERWHELMED WITH BUSINESS. There was but one thing to do: withdraw the advertising and devote every energy to filling the orders with which we were flooded. This we did, and handled with reasonable promptness a most unprecedented year's business.

WITH ENLARGED FACTORIES, INCREASED FACILITIES, AND TWENTY BRANCH HOUSES FROM WHICH TO DISTRIBUTE OUR GOODS, WE CAN NOW CARE FOR ALL WHO COME. Last year we could not reduce prices because we were compelled in some way to limit the demand for Aermotor goods. We would have been satisfied with lower prices, but why create a demand which we could not supply? We have made the heaviest purchases of steel and material bought in America this year, and at unprecedented prices, and have made terms to dealers which enable them to make unprecedented prices.

In quality, character, variety, finish, and accessibility to full stock of goods and repairs, we are without competitors. In our plan of advertising last year, we proposed to furnish a feed cutter under certain conditions for $15. For reasons stated above we did not complete the advertising, and the feed cutter was not put out. We now propose to make amends in the following manner: We will announce in this paper our NEW ALL-STEEL VERY SUPERIOR FEED CUTTER, WORTH cash with order, f. o. b. Chicago. Only one to one person, he to furnish addresses of ten neighbors who ought to have something in our line. Cut, description and full information regarding it will appear soon.

$40 at $10

*We especially desire to caution you against paying excessive prices for windmills and tanks. The temptation on the part of the dealer to overcharge is great. $10 added to the price is $10 clear profit to the dealer. To be sure that you get the legitimate profit to the dealer, write us of your needs and you will be protected. We are, and always have been, makers of the lowest prices. Because of the prodigious output of our factories we believe in the most economical methods in making windmills, towers, pumps, etc. To such an extent has this become true, that we are enabled to have special tools for each piece, and thus reduce the hand labor on it to merely picking up the material and laying it down again. So small has become the cost of labor put on the material which we are mentioning. We have become the largest dealers in the country; the material, of course, being made up in the form of steel galvanized after completing and fixed, tanks, pumps, etc. To such an extent has this become true, that we are enabled to sell it at a price which is not worth the price of our goods (and one of our business rivals, while, that FOUR LARGE WINDMILL CONCERNS ARE BUYING THEIR TOWERS OF US THIS YEAR. THEY DO IT BECAUSE WE MAKE THE ONLY ABSOLUTELY RELIABLE AND SAFE TOWER; BECAUSE THEY CAN BUY OF US CHEAPER THAN THEY CAN BUILD; BECAUSE WE ALONE ARE PREPARED TO GALVANIZE EVERYTHING AFTER IT IS COMPLETED, AND CORRECTLY EVERYTHING EXACTLY RIGHT.

These concerns are wise, for, even though they may not furnish the best of wheels, the wheel will have the best of supports. Send to us your name and address, and those of your neighbors who may need something in our line, and thereby do them a good turn. The Aermotor Co. is one of the most successful business enterprises which has been launched in recent times. In succeeding advertisements will be discussed and made clear the lines on which that success has been worked out. It was done by a farmer's boy. A careful following of these advertisements may suggest to some other farmer's boy a career.

Aermotor Co., 12th, Rockwell & Fillmore Sts., Chicago.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE IS THE BEST.

FIT FOR A KING.

$5. CORDOVAN, FRENCH & ENAMELLED CALF.
$4.$3.50 FINE CALF & KANGAROO.
$3.50 POLICE, 3 SOLES.
$2.50 $2. WORKINGMEN'S. EXTRA FINE.
$2.$1.75 BOYS' SCHOOL SHOES.
LADIES.
$3.$2.50 $2.$1.75 BEST DONGOLA.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE. W. L. DOUGLAS, BROCKTON, MASS.

Over One Million People wear the W. L. Douglas $3 & $4 Shoes

All our shoes are equally satisfactory They give the best value for the money. They equal custom shoes in style and fit. Their wearing qualities are unsurpassed. The prices are uniform,—stamped on sole. From $1 to $3 saved over other makes. If your dealer cannot supply you we can.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubator & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE"

mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue mailed free, gives full description, prices etc. AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. BRANCH HOUSE, 217 S. Main St., Los Angeles.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, MAY 3, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVI. NO. 46. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., MAY 3, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1279.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$1 00
Six Months	2 00
Three Months	125
One Month	50
Single Copies	10

RICH PICKINGS.

The Immense Wealth Which Awaits the Japs.

PILLAGING THE SUMMER PALACE.

A British Officer who Helped to Loot the Summer Palace of China's Emperor Tells What He Saw.

It seems to be a pretty well settled fact that when the spring is sufficiently advanced to permit of a forward movement the Japanese army will proceed to Peking, and once there it is easy to realize, in view of their successors hitherto, that they will capture the Chinese capital without suffering very serious losses.

In view of this it is more than ordinarily interesting to find in the Pall Mall Magazine for February an account of how the allied French and English forces looted or pillaged the Summer Palace of the Chinese Emperor in 1860, when those nations administered so severe a lesson to the Celestial potentate. The story has been written by an English officer who took part in the affair. In part it runs as follows:

"One evening a general order was issued by the commander-in-chief to the effect that as the French troops were looting the Summer Palace he gave his sanction to half the officers in every regiment in his command starting at daybreak for a like purpose, and that they were to be back in the British camp by the hour of noon, in order to allow the remaining half of the officers to take their turn. Commanding officers were forbidden to go, which in many quarters caused the strongest possible desire for a temporary reduction of rank. I was at that period in charge of a wing of the Fifteenth punjaub Native Infantry; my substantive rank therefore was equal to that of a field officer, and so I was nominated to go with the first batch of looters.

"Having got the bearings of my goal aoernight, and being gifted with a tolerably good idea of locality, I put my horse's head fair for the far-off pagoda, and set out at a gallop across the country, giving a wide berth to several villages I was obliged to pass on the way, the inhabitants whereof I might guess were scarcely likely to be very amicably disposed; and after a smart canter of about an hour I drew rein, just as the sun was rising, abreast of the French sentries on duty outside the gates of the Summer Palace. The scene of that enchanting spot forms a memory that will haunt me to my dying day. The Summer Palace has been already so often described, that for me to attempt anything like a full account of it would be supererogatory. Suffice it if I say that it consisted not of one, but of a continuous succession of palaces, covering in all eleven square miles of ground; with pagodas, joss houses and rustic arbors studded about in the gardens, which were interspersed in all directions by shining canals, spanned by angular bridges of the willow plate patern; silver shimmering lagoons, dotted with emerald-like islets, and artificial hills breaking the dead level of the plain, one of them rising to a height of nearly seven hundred feet. Some strange and wondrous scenes have I witnessed during the course of my Oriental travels, but never anything that approached the marvel of this celestial palace, for many centuries held to be sacred by the Chinese themselves, and now about to be sacrificed in retaliation for their cowardice and treachery.

Turning sharp off to my right, I passed through a doorway, and found myself in a small room furnished with a great number of shelves, which were laden with what I took to be innumerable pamphlets, bound in yellow paper covers. It has occurred to me since that these were catalogues of the contents of the various palaces, warehouses, etc., in the place. Had this been so, and could I have read Chinese, what prodigious wealth of treasure should I have been able to come at by interpreting these inventories!

"I then proceeded on my way through the palace. The French, who had got in some four-and-twenty hours ahead of us, had routed about in every nook and corner of the buildings near to the entance; but it is conjectured that neither they nor our own troops ever penetrated much farther than about one mile from the south gate toward the interior. The ignorance which prevailed among all ranks as to the value of the various objects they passed was truly remarkable. There have, indeed, been many exaggerated anecdotes told of the treasure our soldiers pasred without recognition—such, for instance, as the story of the two huge lions guarding the entrance to the palace, which are stated to have been of solid gold, a statement which I can deny from experience, having scraped the metal of both of them with a sharp knife, and found it to be bronze. Yet, as an illustration of the extent of the ignorance that existed among our troops, I may relate that on several occasions I purchased little josses or sacred images of virgin gold from soldiers at their own valuation, which was generally the equivalent of their weight in silver dollars, or about one-twentieth of their intrinsic worth.

"Continuing my exploration I passed through courtyard after courtyard piled up with rolls of the richest and most exquisite silks—fabrics which would have fetched the most extravagant prices could they but have been got to England. One great curiosity I picked up during the early part of my ramble, which was the great seal of the Emperor of China, for impressing the commissions appointing mandarins—a piece of beautifully carved, pale-green jade stone about six inches square. My next prize was a large gold flower-pot, worked in filagree in the most remarkable manner, with a plant wrought in gold rising out of it to a height of about eighteen inches, the leaves whereof were made of soft gold, enameled green, and the fruit of turquoises, with ruby centers. I also secured a couple of beautiful old clocks. That Summer Palace was full of clocks; there seemed to be no limit to the supply, and it must have given employment to a small army of servants to keep them all wound. I next came to a little apartment in which were a good many French soldiers busily employed in breaking up a great model of the birthplace of the Emperor of China, made of pure gold, and far too ponderous to be moved intact; a party of sappers were letting fly at the lovely toy with their axes, splintering the yellow metal into fragments, and scrambling for them like beggars for halfpence.

(He secured a vast amount of valuable booty, and later on all the British force was let loose in the palace. The last incident, told of as follows, is the most fascinating in the list:)

"When we got back to the gates we found the troops in readiness to march back to Peking. The assembly rang out, the battalions fell in and then it was discovered that three companies of my regiment, together with a young lieutenant named Edmund Ward, were missing. However, even while the roll was being called, the little column came into view. I was just about to mount my horse when I heard a voice crying, 'Where's Harris?' and a moment later young Ward came toward me. He carried in his arms a large yellow image of Buddha, which he extended to me, exclaiming, 'What's this made of?'

"My hands dropped with the weight of the thing. I answered at once 'It's gold.'

" 'No!' he cried. 'Oh, Harris, it's not gold! Lord, what a fool I've been!'

" 'How so?' I asked. 'You've got a pretty good prize here, at all events.'

" 'But it can't be gold,' he continued. 'My dear Harris, the thing isn't gold.'

" 'Look here, Ward!' I cried, 'I'll give you £500 for it if you like. But don't take it; you're a chum of mine, and the image is worth at least double.'

"On this he broke out abusing himself for an idiot, a fool and I know not what else. I begged him to tell me the cause of all this lamentation, and to be quick about it, since the advance must be sounding directly. And then, in hurried words, he told me the following extraordinary story:

"On entering the palace gates, he led his three companies away toward the north, and they got well into the interior of the grounds, into a part quite unlooted. Presently, as they marched, they arrived at a little lake, with a small but high island in the center of it, on the top of which was built a very large temple. He thought this would be a good spot to begin looting and burning. Several bridges connected the island with the shore; and, crossing these, he and his men entered the great temple. Around the walls of the place, ranged in tiers like plants in a hothouse, were 500 images of Gautama, all exactly alike. While the men were setting light to the building, which was of carved wood, he made a slash at one of these idols with his tulwar, or native sword, and the keen blade shaved off an ear. Ward picked this up, and took it to the Subadar of No. 1 Company, a smart native named Nutha Singh, asking what metal it could be that was so soft as to be cut by a stroke of his sword. The man at once answered 'It is gold.' Upon this Ward cut off the ears of several more images and found them all precisely alike. Then Nutha Singh shook his head. " 'No, Sahib,' said he, 'we must be wrong. In what book was it ever written that there were 500 gold gods of this size? Impossible! Yet, would I give one of them to your servant to carry and we will find out what it can be.' Ward then told his orderly to bring one of the idols with him, and the flames now blazing up strong and fierce, they were forced to retire. Having concluded this remarkable story my friend again fell to bewailing his folly.

"But I stayed not to heed him. I had learned as much as I wanted to know, and, swiftly as my legs would carry me, I ran to where Gen. Sir John Michel, commanding the division, was surrounded by his staff.

" 'General,' I said, saluting him, 'may I say a few words with you in private?'

" 'Certainly,' he answered; and rode a little apart from others.

" 'I have to ask a great favor, sir. You have seen enough of me to know I would do nothing rash. Leave me here all night with my wing of the Fifteenth Sikhs, and I will be back in camp at Peking tomorrow morning.'

" 'What do you want to do?' said he, eyeing me doubtfully.

" 'I have just heard of an immense treasure, sir.

"He looked at me incredulously, slowly wagging his head, and said: 'I can't do it, Harris. I should like to oblige you, but I can't do it.' Then he added: 'But I tell you what I will do. Go and fall in now, and march back with us to Peking, and in the morning I'll send you away with your wing as a foraging party. How will that suit you?'

" 'Nothing could be better, sir,' I answered gleefully 'I shall then have daylight to work by and the fires will be nearly burnt out.' I saluted and hurrying back, mounted my horse just as the column began to swing forward in quick step on the march back.

"We arrived at the camp in time for mess that night. While we were lingering over the wine, comparing notes on our day's experiences, the Order Book was brought round by the orderly sergeant. The General Order for the following day was that the whole force was to parade at dawn and march away down country!

"I do not wish to start off any youths of adventurous disposition, or elderly gentlemen with a strong taste for treasure hunting, in quest of those 499 golden images; but I have very little doubt in my mind that they are still lying buried and blackened, under the ruins of that island temple in the Summer Palace."——Mail and Express.

MEN AND WOMEN.

Oliver Wendell Holmes left an estate amounting to $72,117.

Lucien Baker, the new Senator from Kansas, is forty-eight years old, and is said to be worth about $100,000.

Miss Willard thinks women would make good policemen. There is certainly no doubt as to their knowing more about what is going on than most policemen do.

Joseph Treiti, the railroad magnate of Vienna, who died the other day, left $1,000,000 to a society of that city to be used in prosecuting astronomical observations.

M. Ernest Carnot, the late French President's second son, who has been elected for his father's old constituency, Beaume, is twenty-nine years of age. He is a civil engineer.

General James N. Bethune of Georgia lies critically ill in Washington. He is nearly ninety-two years old. He was the first editor in the South openly to advocate secession.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox is an untiring patron of manicurists, givers of facial massage, chiropodists and shampooers. She believes on principle in being as good looking as she can.

Captain W. G. Kidd has been conductor of the accommodation train on the Nashville and Pulaski (Tenn.) Railroad since 1857 and has never missed a trip. He is seventy-two years old.

Prince Henry of Orleans has been declared at Paris a perpetual minor. His father, the Duc de Chartres, asked that Henry be placed under a guardianship. He won the case by default, as Prince Henry is now in Indo-China.

Florence Nightingale, at the ripe age of seventy-four, is enjoying excellent health. She is a rich woman, having, besides some private means, the $250,000 publicly subscribed for her by the English people at the close of the Crimean War.

The Emperor of Germany smokes cigarettes, the new Czar of Russia prefers a pipe, President Faure of France is a great consumer of strong cigars, the Sultan of Turkey alternates his cigarettes with a hookah, President Cleveland puffs a cigar after dinner.

Curran's ruling passion was his joke, and it was strong, if not in death, at least in his last illness. One morning his physician observed that he seemed to "cough with more difficulty." "That is rather surprising," answered Curran, 'for I have been practicing all night."

WASHINGTON, THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN.

It makes no difference how much one thinks or reads of Washington and of his career, nothing suffices to bring one to a realization of him as an individual, as a man, so satisfactorily as a visit to Mount Vernon, which was his home for fifty years.

This is not an imposing house to modern eyes, but it is tasteful and picturesque. Indeed, Mount Vernon was not the most imposing place in that neighborhood in the colonial days, as there were other establishments both larger and more handsome. It has often been said that the first President was, in his day, the richest man in the country. But this is not so. There were several in Virignia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania richer than he, and some of his biographers intimate that his unlucky wooings in early life were due to some extent to his lack of wealth. He was, however a careful man, and in his hands the estates he inherited and acquired by marriage increased in value, and he became one of the richest men for the day.

It is in looking at the records he has left of his carefulness in his own affairs that we get the best idea of Washington's wonderful administrative capacity. The country gentleman is usually thought of as an easy-going and careless fellow who whiles away the hours in idleness and pleasure. There may have been many such in Washington's time and in his neighborhood, but he was exercising all the time, in large affairs and small, that "infinite capacity to take pains" which some one has said to be the best definition of genius.

The house at Mount Vernon is of wood and painted white. Many who have only seen engravings of it have thought it to be stone, as the wood is cut in blocks to imitate stone. The light columns which uphold the roof of the porch are also of wood, sanded. Washington inherited the place from his half-brother. It is now above a century and a-half old, and is good, if taken care of, as it doubtless will be, for that much longer.—Harper's Weekly.

SHERIDAN'S WIT.

Richard Brinsley Sheridan was never at a loss to exhibit his wit. Once while visiting, feeling rather weary and wishing to rest, he was asked by a fellow-guest whom he did not admire, if he did not wish to accompany her for a walk.

Glancing out of the window, Sheridan replied: "It is very cloudy. We shall be caught in the rain."

The other waited awhile. Shortly the sun came through the clouds. "Shall we go now?" she asked. "It has cleared up."

"Why, yes; so I see," said Sheridan. "It has cleared up enough for one, but not enough for two. You go."—Harper's Young People.

TWO FAMOUS STORIES.

History of "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras"

NOT ORIGINAL WITH MARK TWAIN.

Neither was the Yarn on "The Great North American Pie Biter" Written by Him.

"The Jumping Frog of Calaveras," that unique humorous sketch which has much to do with having made Mark Twain famous, now appears to have emanated from the fertile brain of Samuel Seabough, the well-known California journalist of the days of '49. Up to the present time people generally supposed that the famous "jumping frog" was the original creation of Mark Twain.

In the early days of San Francisco, Mark Twain was a reporter on the Morning Alta, and wrote two stories for that paper which made him famous. One was the "Jumping Frog of Calaveras," and the other was the "Great North American Pie Biter." Both these yarns first appeared in the Alta and were signed "Mark Twain." They were copied into almost every English newspaper in the world, and one of them was translated into French long before its author became known outside of California.

As a matter of truth and of history, Mr. Seabough, known to his fellows as "Sam Seabough," wrote the "Jumping Frog of Calaveras" for the Independent, a paper published at Stockton, Cal., and the "Great North American Pie Biter" for the Chronicle, published at Angels' Camp, Calaveras county. Mark Twain subsequently transferred them from their rural burial-place to further publicity by means of the San Francisco Alta.

Mr. Seabough, who died some years since, was for many years the editor of the Sacramento Union and was also editor for a time of the San Francisco Evening Bulletin. Some years ago Frank Pixley the editor of the Argonaut published a statement in his paper that Mr. Clemens was not the original inventor of the stories. This was taken up by an old editor in Tulare county, California, who declared that Seabough was their author, and he called on him to publicly say so. At that time Mr. Seabough was the editor of the Bulletin, and a friend called his attention to the matter. He said it was true that he had originally written both stories for the papers named, but that Mark Twain had taken them and made them humorous and famous. He added that he did not propose to claim their authorship, for, as they then stood, they bore no resemblance to the originals, and both being actual occurrences, he considered that Mark had a legitimate right to dress them up, and was now entitled to own them.

Mr. Seabough was then asked how he came to write the originals of the stories. He said that in 1858 or 1859 he was editor of the Stockton Independent. A migratory miner who lived in Angels, in Calaveras county, with whom he was acquainted, came in one day, and among other items of gossip told him about the jumping frog. You will remember that, as the story ran, the jumping frog was owned by a gambler of Angels, who frequently matched him to jump against other frogs, and always won considerable money on his agility. One day, before a contest upon which a vast amount of "dust" had been wagered, some smart fellow among the gamblers fed the frog a handful of shot, and when the match came the great jumper was so heavy he could not jump at all. You know a frog will eat shot by the handful if you project them at him. In this case the loaded frog was defeated by an untrained, amphibious, four-footed reptile, which was caught by one of the boys in a neighboring swamp. Mr. Seabough said the story was no fancy sketch, but an actual occurrence. Indeed, the affair came near resulting in several shooting scrapes, as the backers of the jumping frog had lost large sums of money, the stakeholders declining to consider the swindle a valid ground for declaring the bets off.

As for the other story, Mr. Seabough said he was an eye-witness of the occurrence. He was then editor of the Calaveras Chronicle, and wrote a sketch of the "Great North American Pie Biter" as one of the local hapenings of the town. One evening he was called into a saloon by a fun-loving friend, and found in the middle of the barroom a tall, lank individual, surrounded by a group of half-drunken miners. Seabough said that the stranger was the most grotesque human being he had ever seen. He was fully six and a half feet tall, thin as a rail, long-necked, lantern-jawed, crooked-legged and shock-headed. His front teeth were extraordinarily large and protruded from his thin, over-short lips to such a degree as to amount almost to a deformity. One of the largest ones was gone, and as Seabough entered he was explaining to the inebriated crowd, which had evidently been plying him with whiskey, how he lost the tooth. He asserted that he was the Great North American Pie Biter, and that he had just arrived from Oregon, where he had been matched against the champion pie biter of the Northwest. He had wagered all his money on his ability to bite through seventeen Oregon apple pies, and would have won but for the fact that some person that was interested against him had smuggled a crockery plate into the pile of pies, upon which he had broken his tooth. There is no doubt that Mark Twain appropriated both these stories from the papers in which they originally appeared.

Not long ago the writer came into possession of a copy of the Stockton (Cal.) Independent for December 11, 1858, which was then published at San Andreas, Calaveras county. It contains the original jumping frog story, which is here reproduced. It will be seen that the story refers to the "pie biter" yarn written by Sam Seabough, fully a year before Mark Twain blossomed forth as a humorist.

"We once read with amazement the achievements of the 'Great North American Pie Biter,' who, after a series of disasters at cards, bet his last 'scad' on biting through the crust and trimmings of eleven pies at a single snap of his ponderous jaws, and was only balked by the sleight-of-hand of his wretched antagonist, who rang in tin plates and choke-pears about the center of the pile. We listened with profound attention, several years ago, to the narrative of a gentleman from 'York,' who was explaining to a large crowd a perfectly new system of exploding magazines, by means of what he termed 'the portable dog battery,' which he illustrated by the following instance of its terrible effects."

(Here is given the story of "Bill Skye's" dog as President Lincoln afterward told it in illustrating the route of General Popes' army—here the dog swallowed a piece of meat loaded with powder and a fuse, and at the proper time the explosion came. Then the frog story is given in this way):

"Joe B——, formerly of Calaveras county, was, is, and always will be a 'sport.' He bets on every game, but has a particular trenchant for 'dead things,' such as thimble-rig and French monte, and from some cause always a mystery, he was generally, 'dead broke.' Well, one day he was in a neck of woods where poker games were as thick as blackberries in the angles of an old Virginia fence, and those who played thm as much sharper than himself as a cambric needle is sharper than the Big Tree stump. Joe borrowed an X and set his wits to work for a raise. Lounging on an old log that lay over a prospect hole—now eloquent with the croaking of a hundred frogs—he observed a small, trim-built musical little cuss doing some of the tallest kind of leaping. Joe gave chase. Over banks of rubbish, through bogs and down into the deep hole went his frogship, and down went Joe, up to his eyes in mud and water. Joe had an 'idee'—he had. The frog was quickly fished out, and away he went to the landlord, as jolly an old Boniface as ever drew a cork from a bottle of ale.

" 'I'll bet an X,' said Joe, 'that this 'ere's a blood race-frog, an' kin jist outjump any other croakin' varmint in the nineteen States.'

" 'Take that bet,' said Boniface.

" 'Come down with your spondulicks,' retorted Joe, and the cash was staked.

"The champions were soon brought to the scratch, and at the word away they went—and away went the landlord's X, losing by a foot and a-half.

"Boniface was not satisfied. He offered to double the bet and jump in the morning.

" 'Done,' said Joe, and down went two 20's.

"That night tidings of the 'new game' spread throughout the neighboring gulches, and down the road as far as 'Sucker Creek' and 'Sardine Hill.' In they crowded, 'Sucker' and 'Sardine,' with the 'greenies' from Tadpole bar, and down went their 'dust' on the new game. Jack H—, who was an old turfman and never deceived in the 'pints an' muscle uv a hoss," bet his money on Joe's nag, and all 'Suckerdom' and all the 'Tadpole' boys went in on Jack's judgment. Old Boniface had his friends, who knew he was 'weighty' on a repeat.

"So next morning the frogs were brought to the score, surrounded by three hundred interested spectators. The word was given, and away they went—alas! for poor Joe and the 'Suckers' and the 'Tadpoles'—with a most disastrous result to them. The 'blooded frog' let down worse than 'Gray Eagle in his renowned race with 'Wagoner.'

"'Hello!' said one, 'he's sick; they've drugged him.'

" 'Lightnin' has struck the critter,' dryly remarked Boniface.

" 'Throw off,' remarked another.

"Ole Weaseleye pushed through the crowd, and picking up the discomfited racer and holding him above his head, squeezed out his stomach about a pound of bird-shot which Boniface had fed him in the night, mistaking them for flies.

" Forty high-pressure boats pulling against the current of the Mississippi, or a hundred howling wolves would be a dead silence to the roars and yells that followed Joe as his coat-tail disappeared behind the next hill."

Thus was the first original story of the "Jumping Frog of Calaveras" given to the readers of the Stockton Independent. Poor Sam Seabough little dreamed, when he wrote the sketch, that some day his fertile effort would be read all over Europe and translated into a dozen languages.—Once a Week.

A perfect arm, measured from the wrist joint to the armpit, should be twice the length of the head. The upper part of the arm should be large, full and well rounded. There should be a dimple at the elbow. The forearm must not be too flat, not nearly so flat as a man's, for instance.

The ship May Flint, the largest sailing vessel afloat, has left the shipyard at Newport News. It was formerly the steamer Persian Monarch. It will load coal at Baltimore for San Francisco.

"Mr. Allills was terribly frightened about his wife and sent for a doctor in great haste." "What was the trouble?" "His wife complained of feeling perfectly well."

A HUNT FOR A JOB.

Fifty Thousand Miles Covered in the Search.

FORCED TO HOIST THE "PIE SIGN."

A Railroad Man Visited Every State and Territory in the Union, but Without Success.

It is a wide country, but a man seeking work may apply for it in every town in the United States between Bangor and Benicia and not find it.

Of course, employment may be found at once, but the chances are the other way. Herewith is given a specimen case, says the Chicago Times.

A railroader reached Chicago four days ago without money to pay for a meal. The stranger had been working in one of the railroad yards at East St. Louis until the hard times of '93 had thrown him out of work, and since that time had been, to use a phrase common among railroad men, "jumping sideways" all over the country.

He was well educated and intelligent and had kept his eyes open during his trips in search of, as he termed it, "an office."

He carried a very creditable letter of recommendation from Chesapeake & Ohio officials for a long term of service on the trains and in the yards of that railroad.

In the story he told are many points of interest, chief of which is the fact that since he started on his so-far fruitless search for work he has been in every State and Territory of the United States, has compassed a journey of over 50,000 miles by rail on a capital so slender that it would have given a professional tramp the blues. Here is his story in his own words:

"I lost my job in East St. Louis a year ago last June. A friend lent me $5 and I started West.

"I tried Kansas City, but it was full of railroad men waiting for business to pick up, so I kept on west to Denver. There were no signs of any improvement there, but the boys said: 'Keep on west. You'll catch on in the mountains, sure.' So I decided to keep on. I went up to Cheyenne and got there at midnight, put up my last 'half' for lodging and breakfast, and in the morning hit the superintendent for a job, but was told there were enough idle railroad men in Cheyenne to stock the division, if need be. I was just a trifle blue. It was a 'toss-up' which way to go, so I struck for the west coast."

Surprise was expressed at his undertaking such a journey under such conditions. The railroader laughed and said:

"It is no trouble to do that in the West if you belong to anything. As far as traveling is concerned, the local lodges of the railroad organizations all have contracts with the companies that, in addition to fixing the rate of pay, provide for the transportation of brothers who are looking for work. The West is almost perfectly organized and a man will hardly get into a town before he is 'flagged' (giving the hailing sign) by some of the boys, and they never let him go hungry.

"If they are a little slow and the distance between meals gets too long for comfort, the stranger can hoist the 'pie sign' (distress signal), and if there is a brother in the crowd it brings him forward.

"From Cheyenne I went to Ogden, Utah, where I struck the Central Pacific, and over that straight to the Golden Gate. I found from the trainmen I rode with that there was no show for work on any divisions on the way, so I kept right along. I went down to Los Angeles on the Southern Pacific. The conditions there were no better. Railroad business in the West was completely paralyzed. I couldn't go any further West, so I started back East over the Southern Pacific.

"I came up over the Louisville & Nashville to Cincinnati, and from there made side trips into Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio, to points where I thought there might be work, but it was 'no go,' and I was getting awfully tired of traveling in the way I had for the last three months.

"I started out over the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton to go through to Toledo. There was no chance for work there, so I went to Detroit, from there to Saginaw, and from the latter place up through Northern Michigan, across 'the Soo,' and, after a trip across Wisconsin, arrived in St. Paul. I could find no encouragement either in St. Paul or Minneapolis, and just because I did not know which way to go, I started west again over the Northern Pacific.

"A conductor I had worked for twenty years ago was superintendent of one of the divisions out of St. Paul, and he got me a pass clear through. I tried Seattle, Tacoma and Portland, Or., but the search was a vain one.

"Then I started out over the Santa Fe to Kansas City. I got to Kansas City in January, stayed one day with a friend and the next started over the Kansas City, Memphis & Birmingham for Birmingham, Ala., determined to try the Eastern South. I did try it. I went over to Alabama, Florida and Georgia, like a deputy marshal with a search warrant, and at last in March struck what looked like a regular job in the yards of the Georgia, Southern & Florida railway, at Macon, Ga.

"They were handling an immense traffic in early vegetables. The job lasted twenty-three days, then came the worst freeze that country had ever experienced at that season of the year, and the vegetable trade was nil—likewise my job.

"I squared up, got another suit of clothes and started again. I went to Altanta, and from there to Norfolk, Va., across North and South Carolina. From Norfolk to Newport News, and from there to Washington, by way of Richmond. From Washington I went to Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston, staying a few days in each place, but not long enough to affiliate with any of the 'commonweal' armies that were tramping over the country then.

"From Boston I went all over the New England States, but with the single exception of a week in a hay field near Boston couldn't find a thing to do.

"I got through to Rotterdam Junction, New York, and from there over the New York Central to Buffalo, and went through Western Pennsylvania to Pittsburg, but that city was no good, so I came on here over the Panhandle.

"I started a year ago last June, and since then have been in every State and territory of Uncle Sam's domain. I have ridden over somewhere near 200 railroads, have made applications for work in the offices of over 600 superintendents and trainmasters, and I have not slept in a bed for over two months now; haven't had my clothes off only when I could strike a river where I could take a bath."

NOTES OF INTEREST.

A bicyclist, fifty-four years old, who finds fun in taking a run of thirty miles on the wheel, says the best food to start on consists of flaky crackers, tart apple sauce and a pitcher of milk. Porter-house steak doesn't sustain him as well as the above "preferred diet."

It is reported that a former lieutenant of the German army is seeking among the Pacific Islands an abode for a new society whose members propose to try living without the comforts of civilization. They will go naked, live in huts, and eat only uncooked fruits and drink only water.

How to Go to Sleep.—Begin at your toes to relax, loosen all your joints and muscles, unbind your fingers, shake your wrists loose, take the curve and strain out of your neck, go all to pieces, in fact, and see how the day's fatigue seems to slip off from you, and the gentle mantle of rest and oblivion enfolds you like a garment.

Dr. Robert Abbe, a surgeon of New York, of the kind called "in good standing," suggests the possibility of transplanting an arm or a leg from one man to another, provided some one can be found willing to part with such a member. The success of the attempt would depend in the main on promptly re-establishing blood circulation between the body and its new extremity, which might be accomplished by implanting thin glass tubes as joints for the larger blood vessels.

A curious story was lately telegraphed from Chicago about a father who wept over a dead body which he recognized as that of his son, observing scars, body marks, and other evidences that it was his boy, but while the father was thus engaged in mourning his loss in walked the son himself as living proof of the father's error. If it takes a wise child to know its own father, what kind of a father is it that could be thus mistaken as to the identity of his grown up son? "A mad world, my countrymen."

A case of large sloughing abscess in the St. Louis Hospital was treated by keeping the patient immersed (excepting the head, we suppose) in a tub of water for six weeks, the water being constantly renewed. The method has been successfully resorted to also in cases of crushed limbs, sloughing sores and gangrene. Suppuration is lessened and the coroding products of diseased action are promptly and continually removed. In Vienna (Austria) patients have been thus treated for many months—even a year.

The young ladies of the Epworth League connected with an Episcopal church in Jersey City have organized a physical culture class or athletic brigade and adopted the divided skirt as part of the uniform. Thus is one of the discarded stepping-stones of progress taken back, and made one of the corner-stones in the building up of a better physical and moral man—or rather, woman, this time.

Since milk has been found to be a favorite food for microbes as well as men, the latter have lost some of their regard for it. Heretofore it has been supposed that boiling—sufficient to sterilize it—impaired its digestibility, but now the Lancet declares that the fact is that boiling milk improves its digestibility and nutrient value. Dr. Chamonin finds that in Paris babies thrive on it, and that the rate of mortality among those thus fed is considerably less than among infants fed on raw milk—or that which has been only warmed and not boiled.

The Medical Record remarks that the modern tendency is to abolish devotional exercises in schools and substitute gymnastics and sanitation, but considers that this tendency is being carried rather too far in Vienna, where, as a means against spreading of diphtheria among scohol children, Dr. Kohn proposes they should inhale a disinfectant spray before leaving their classes. To carry out this sort of prophylaxis effectually, all the kids should be put through a hot bath and fumigating process before going into their classes each day.

A Philadelphia physician thinks that a great deal of nonsense has been written about hypnotism. "Any one," he says, "may hypnotize himself in a few minutes by closing his eyes, directing them inward and down ward, and then, imagining his breath to be vapor, watching its inhalation and expulsion from the nostrils. Babies invariably look cross-eyed before going to sleep, in this way producing what hynotists call 'transfixion.' Fishermen often hypnotize themselves watching a cork on a surface of shining water. An hour passes by as if it were a few minutes."

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, MAY 3 1895

A reflection or criticism upon that grossly unjust and un-American instution, the A. P. A., seems to be sufficient to throw the editor of the Index into a fit of the D. T.

If Theodore Durrant is not guilty of the crimes charged against him there is a great deal of able-bodied lying being done by people who could seem to have no earthly object in saying what they do, except to assist in bringing those crimes home to the guilty person.

The English press is making an exhibition of itself in the discussion of the China-Japan treaty. The chances are nine out of ten that Japan has received such assurance from Russia that she can afford to be indifferent to the wishes or menaces of England. At any rate, the Japanese are not likely to pay attention to the fulminations of blatherskite editors who declare that England will not permit Japan to do so or so. They will wait until Englishmen who have a right to talk say something, and then they will probably ask in their "artless Japanese way" what England will do about it if they decline to listen.

The new tariff law has been in operation less that a year and yet almost every day announcements are made of a raise in wages of some great manufacturing establishment in the East. This is a demonstration of the truth of the argument of the tariff reformers. The less interference the Government makes with the natural laws of trade and commerce the better it will be for all the people. The policy of our government henceforth must be to remove or lessen trade restrictions, rather than to increase them.

It will be interesting to the friends of Governor McKinley in this State to know that a powerful combination in his behalf has purchased the only Democratic newspaper establishment in Chicago with the purpose of running it in McKinley's interest on the issue of protection and the gold standard. With the Chicago Inter-Ocean whooping it up for free silver and protection and the Chicago Herald clamoring for McKinleyism and the single gold standard the g. o. p. is likely to become somewhat "rattled" in the great Northwest.

A noticeable and gratifying fact is that neither sectional nor party lines divided the Supreme Court in the Income Tax case. As the New York World points out, two Democrats—Fuller and Field—united with two Republicans—Grey and Brewer—against the law, and one man from the East with three from the West. One Democrat—White—united with three Republicans—Brown, Harlan and Shiras—in favor of the law, and two men from the South with two from the North. The World has strongly favored the tax, but it says in view of the non-partisan decision that "the high character and the essential integrity and judicial fairness of this exalted tribunal are again vindidcated by this decision.

The drift of population during the past few years has been strongly toward the cities, while rural populations have dwindled. Some economists profess to see in this fact a menace to the future prosperity of the country. The San Jose Herald takes a brighter view. It says these economists omit from their lugubrious calculations one important factor—the modern electric railway. There are many reasons for believing that the electric power is destined to reverse the tendency of population toward concentration in the great cities. The time is evidently not far off when the country as well as the city will be gridironed with electric roads, which will be used for transporting both freight and passengers. It is quite possible that in the days to come life will be made so much more attractive in the country than it can be made in the city that the tendency toward concentration will be reversed.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. Location of works, near Lone Pine, Inyo County, California

Notice is hereby given, that at a meeting of the Board of Directors, held on the 27th day of April, 1895, an assessment, (No. 8,) of fifteen cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin to the Secretary, at the office of the company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 1st day of June, 1895, will be delinquent and advertised for sale, at public auction, and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, June 22, 1895, at 2 o'clock p. m. to pay the delinquent assessment, together with costs of advertising and expense of sale.

D. HOLLAND,
Secretary.

Office, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. May 2, 1895.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
April 29, 1895.

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Halliday of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal. has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert-land claim No. 645, for the N½ of N½ sec. 15, Tp. 15 S. R. 36 E. M. D. M. before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal. on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co. Cal. William F. Halliday of Oakland Cal. Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, both of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND,
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Independence, Cal.
April 29, 1895.

Notice is hereby given that William F. Halliday of Oakland, Cal. has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert land claim No. 641, for the NW ¼ of SW ¼ sec. 12. Tp. 15S. R. 36 E. M. D. M. before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal. on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co. Cal. Joseph Halliday, Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, all of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND,
Register.

FOR SALE.

THE WHITNEY HOUSE

—The only hotel in—

LONE PINE INYOO CUNTY CAL

Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address

MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. J. MAILES, Proprietor.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will presen, he same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modo Cal.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

H. E. Wilkinson Plaintiff, vs. Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

The people of the State of California send greeting to Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now and heretofore existing between plaintiff and defendant upon the ground of the defendant's wilful desertion of plaintiff, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein, which complaint is hereby made a part of this summons.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to Court for the relief demanded in said complaint, viz: For a judgment dissolving said bonds of matrimony.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 10th day of April, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

BIG PINE HOTEL.

BIG PINE · CAL

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates

Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

(Official.)

Treasurer's Report.

To the Hon. Board of Supervisors, Inyo County State of California.

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith submit my report of the receipts and disbursements of this office for the Quarter ending March 31st, 1895.

Respectfully submitted,

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer.

RECEIPTS—

Jan. 1, 1895, Cash on hand	$20,499 93
J. S. Gorman, Tax-Collector	721 00
J. S. Gorman, Tax-Collector	12 50
P A Chalfant, Assessor	73 95
J. S. Gorman, Sheriff fees	33 00
J. S. Gorman, Tax-Collector fees	27 40
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees	74 80
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees	49 50
D. M. Geiger Int S Schl fd	22 40
Wm Roan "	42 00
J. H. Shannon "	33 60
Nathan Gilbert "	11 20
Sarah C. F. Wrinkle "	4 80
" "	13 32
" Int lake fd	20 87
P. C. Grant "	40 91
Samuel T. black, State School	4,904 55
	26 585 23
Feb. A. M. Given, Tax-Collector	376 33
A. M. Given, Tax-Collectr fees	5 00
A. M. Given, Sheriff fees	83 60
D. J Hession, Recorder fees	66 15
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees	55 80
	27,172 11
Mar. A. M. Given, Tax Collector	555 50
A. M. Given, Tax-Collector fees	29 00
A. M. Given, Sheriff fees	44 60
A. M. Given, Sheriff fine	50 00
D J. Hession, Clerk fees	55 75
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees	176 35
A. W. Carroll, Int State land	2 80
" "	89 22
J. G. Birchim "	32 00
" " Swamp land	15 68
Thos. W. Perry, Int State land	51 96
S. W. Austin, Schl Supt fees	4 00
J. S. Gorman, bal. Tax-Col	25 88
D. J. Hession, bal. Clerk & Rec.	7 75
A. A. Cashbaugh, Int State land	11 20
	28,323 80

DISBURSEMENTS—

Jan. Salary Fund	1,224 18
Hospital Fund	416 00
Bishop School Bond	5 40
Bridge "	121 46
Sundry Road istricts	1,190 60
General Expense	3,053 96
Bishop School	362 25
Union School	94 00
Milton School	41 75
Big Pine School	160 20
Riverside School	125 03
Lone Pine School	144 00
Station School	100 37
Round Valley School	70 00
Warm Springs School	70 00
Independence School	82 63
Fish Springs School Dist.	76 35
Independence Special	2 37
Fish Spring, Special	4 05
Irving Library	41 95
Big Pine Library	12 72
Round Valley Library	25 00
Milton Library	3 00
	7,427 27
Feb. General Expense	596 00
Independence Bond	605 00
Salary	1,624 98
Hospital Fund	41 00
Lone Pine school	215 15
Union School	85 00
Independence School	86 00
Bishop School	241 11
Milton School	240 00
Fish Springs School	83 00
Station School	129 87
Warm Springs School	123 60
Irving School	80 00
Big Pine School	4 60
Unapportioned County School	14 00
Warm Spring Library	25 00
Big Pine Library	3 00
Fish Spring Library	22 82
Lone Pine Library	40 11
	11 118 11
Mar. Fish Spring School Bond	234 00
County Bond	1,575 00
Unapportioned Property tax	1 22
Salary	1 083 78
Hospital	20 00
Fish Spring School	5 00
Big Pine School	102 00
Station School	65 25
Independence School	109 00
Round Valley School	101 00
Milton "	80 00
Bishop School	253 65
Irving School	111 00
Lone Pine School	180 00
Riverside School	125 00
Station Library	39 38
Big Pine Library	14 50
Lone Pine Library	3 10
General Expense	856 50
Apr. Cash on hand	12,075 31
	28,323 80

Treasurer's Trial Balance, Apr. 1, 1895.

To the Salary Fund	$	937 10
General Expense "		295 37
State General, "	738 26
Hospital "	587 74
Bond "	1 074 40
Bishop Special Fund	5 13
General Road	133 46
To the various Road District Funds:
No 1	337 22
No 2	275 39
No 3	282 25
No 4	340 84
No 5	194 61
Unapportioned County	58 12
Road Poll Tax	113 05
Bridge Fund	410 03
Swamp and overflowed Land	1,639 32
Institute	80 00
Teachers Library Fund	43 40
Big Pine special School	16 00
Coroner's	88 25
Unapportioned Property Tax	429 83
County School		948 33
To the various School Dist. Funds:
Riverside	88 16
Round Valley	128 14
Irving	764 37
Bishop	412 49
Station	127 12
Warm Springs	336 27
Big Pine	833 23
Milton	113 56
Independence	247 80
Fish spring	157 27
Union	391 49
Lone Pine	446 83
To the various School Dist. Library Funds:
Milton	$ 68 52
Round Valley	3 76
Irving	26 82
Bishop	129 67
Station	87 28
Warm Springs	7 41
Big Pine	35 06
Independence	31 31
Union	46 44
Riverside	20 31
Lone Pine	39 30
Fish Springs		4
Independence Bldg Fund	3 00
Fish Springs " "	19 84
Lone Pine " "	10 84
Independence Schl. Special	26 49
Independence Bond Fund		13 0
Bishop (old) " "	71 02
Bishop (new) " "	940 60
Union " "	344 00
Big Pine " "	626 49
Fish Springs " "	5 49
Lone Pine " "	1,362 96
Cash Balance		$12 075 3.
	$14,3 0 65	$14 209 65

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 1st day of Apr., 1896.

D. J. HESSION,
Clerk.

Examined, accepted and approved by the Board of Supervisors the 3d day of January, 1895.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Chairman.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING
EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.
FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc. given careful and promt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR
AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY--AT--LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases

Brown & Wills,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Social attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery.
All kinds of dental work done according to atest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING
IN ANY STYLE.
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Administrator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix, at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ALLIE R. BROWN.
Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased.

Dated February 15, 1895.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administratrix.
aug3 5t

NOTICE.

Whereas, the consent in writing of the holders of two thirds of the capital stock of the Lone Pine Canal Company, a corporation, to change the principal place of business of said corporation from the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, to the town of Lone Pine, in said county and state, is on file herein. Notice is hereby given that the principal place of business of said Lone Pine Canal Company, will be at the town of Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on and after January 26th 1895.

By order of the Board of Directors.

DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

[Official.]

Notice To Tax-Payers.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT I have received from the Auditor of the County of Inyo, State of California, the Assessment Roll for the year A. D. 1894-5, that the taxes on all personal property secured by real property, and one-half the taxes on all real property, will be due and payable on the first Monday in October and will be delinquent on the last Monday in November next thereafter, at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto fifteen per cent will be added to the amount thereof; and that if said one-half be not paid before the last Monday in April next at six o'clock p. m. an additional five per cent, will be added thereto; that the remaining one-half of the taxes on all real property will be payable on and after the first Monday in January next and will be delinquent on the last Monday in April next thereafter at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto five per cent. will be added to the amount thereof; that all taxes may be paid at the time the first installment as herein provided is due and payable.

A. M. GIVEN,
Tax-Collector.
oct5 td

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The co-partnership heretofore existing between R. W. Thomas of the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, and T. W. Hill of the same place under the firm name and style of "Thomas and Hill" heretofore conducting a general merchandising business at the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, is this day dissolved by the mutual consent of the said R. W. Thomas and the said T. W. Hill.

Witness our hands and the seals this 6th day of February, 1895.

R. W. Thomas
Thomas W. Hill

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK
Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.
A. J. DAVIS,
Independence,

The JOCKEY Saloon.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
MARSH. NAYLOR
PROPRIETORS
WINES, LIQUORS, CIGARS.
HEADQUARTERS FOR SPORTING EVENTS.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.
First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.
THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

FARROW'S
MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA.
This is the Standard Military Encyclopedia of the world and the only work of its kind in the English language. It has the endorsement of the War Department and the leading military commanders of America and Europe. It is issued in three large octavo volumes of about 1000 pages each, printed on fine paper, from new electrotype plates, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. It is a complete library of military information both for military and non-military people. Every library should have it. Circulars sent on application. Good agents wanted.
MILITARY AND NAVAL BOOKS.
All the leading up-to-date military and naval books. Price list furnished on application.
MILITARY-NAVAL PUBLISHING CO.,
611-621 Broadway, New York City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.

REDLANDS GOLD MINING COMPANY

Location of principle place of Business: Redlands, California.

Location of works, Panamint Mining District, Inyo County, California.

NOTICE—There are delinquent upon the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 1, levied on the 14th day of January, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders as follows;

Name.	No. Cert.	No Sh's	Am't
G W Osbun	194	100	$ 85
R C Avery	274	2 500	21 25
J H Allen	305	3 000	25 50
J H Allen	334	5 000	42 50
Emma Bingham	33	200	1 70
A J Boyer	169	200	1 70
J Bunt	238	400	3 40
E Bedford	332	620	5 25
Mrs. R B Clute	69	25,000	212 50
M F Clute	70	40,000	340 00
M F Clute	335	1,430	12 15
M F Olute	356	50	40
M F Clute	367	4,650	39 50
Geo. J Caldwell	104	40 000	340 00
Geo. J Caldwell	111	5,000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	112	9,000	76 50
Geo. J Caldwell	243	5,000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	243	5,000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	245	5,000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	247	1,000	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	248	1,0	8 50
Geo. J CaldWell	249	1,0	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	250	2,0	17 00
Geo. J Caldwell	314	5,000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	331	10,000	85 00
Geo. J Caldwell	360	550	4 70
Geo. J Caldwell	368	7,000	59 50
Geo. J Caldwell	369	600	5 10
W Coggeshall	201	100	85
Davis Donoll	94	300	2 55
Wm. Fussell	63	500	4 25
T E N Eaton	152	300	2 55
T E N Eaton	170	2,000	17 00
T E N Eaton	211	400	3 40
J M R Eaton	157	100	85
J M R Eaton	163	1,900	16 15
J M R Eaton	209	3,500	29 75
Mrs. T E N Eaton	198	300	2 55
Miss Grace Eaton	199	200	1 70
Geo. M Eaton	210	300	2 55
Chas. E French	223	4,000	34 00
Chas. E French	320	5,000	42 50
Chas. E French	324	10,000	85 00
Chas. E French	325	10,000	85 00
Abbie R French	230	1,000	8 50
J R Griffith	311	250	2 15
I M Hough	85	1,000	8 50
I M Hough	319	6,000	51 00
G L Houlton	125	1,200	10 20
G L Houlton	144	400	3 40
Hattie M Huffman	200	700	5 95
Maggie High	216	300	2 55
Hogan & Parker	363	5,000	42 50
E J Inwood	255	1,000	8 50
H W Comp. (trustee)	292	500	4 25
J W Jansen	80	600	5 10
W T Johnson	82	600	5 10
W T Johnson	140	300	2 55
W T Johnson	212	350	2 95
W T Johnson	239	300	2 55
E S Jacoby	161	100	85
Mrs. T Luther	234	100	85
A M Mitchell	25	300	2 55
W T Mitchell	185	100	85
W T Mitchell	299	400	3 40
R W McIntyre	165	30,000	255 00
R W McIntyre	283	5,000	42 55
R W McIntyre	285	19,000	161 50
R W McIntyre	286	250	2 15
R W McIntyre	354	300	2 55
G E Nally	145	1,000	8 50
H S Newlove	184	200	1 70
H S Newlove	190	300	2 55
H S Newlove	191	500	4 25
H S Newlove	300	1,900	16 15
Mamie M Norris	202	2,050	17 40
Mamie M Norris	203	1,250	10 65
Susie A Otto	117	1,000	8 50
Susie A Otto	118	1,000	8 50
Susie A Otto	119	2,000	17 00
John S Phelps	180	100	85
A L Park	43	10,000	85 00
A L Park	44	10,000	85 00
A L Park	45	2,000	17 00
A L Park	47	5,000	42 50
A L Park	48	4,000	34 00
A L Park	49	500	4 25
A L Park	122	1,000	8 50
A L Park	141	2,000	17 00
A L Park	153	1,000	8 50
A L Park	164	1,500	12 75
A L Park	188	500	4 25
A L Park	189	10,000	85 00
A L Park	207	3,400	28 90
A L Park	208	4,000	34 00
A L Park	231	10,000	85 00
A L Park	235	10,000	85 00
A L Park	206	3,000	25 50
A L Park	295	12,000	102 00
Ralph G Rohrer	321	300	2 55
O W Shafer	221	30,000	255 00
O W Shafer	222	20,000	170 00
O W Shafer	224	10,000	85 00
O W Shafer	225	10,000	85 00
O W Shafer	226	5,000	42 50
O W Shafer	227	5,000	42 50
O W Shafer	374	5,000	42 50
O W Shafer	375	950	8 05
Mclatyre Clute & Co.	376	1,550	13 50
S H Wheel r	59	4,000	34 00
J N Wilson	56	1,000	8 50
F H Wilson	57	1,000	8 50
M Holmes Wilson	58	1,000	8 50
Grant Wright	86	500	4 25
J J Suess	296	750	6 40
J J Suess	326	700	5 95

And in accordance with law and an order of the Board of Directors made on the 14th day of January, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary will be sold at Public Auction at Room 4, Chittenden Building, Redlands, California, on the 6th day of April, 1895, at the hour of 3 o'clock p. m. of said day, to pay said delinquent assessment thereon, together with cost of advertising and expense of the sale.

A. C. CHITTENDEN,
Secretary.

Office, Room 4 Chittenden Building, Redlands California. March 6th 1895.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Carpet Weaving.
MRS. J. R. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.
PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER
We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kinds of carpet and rug weaving.
Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished, at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.
First-class work guaranteed at low prices.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone
FRED BURCKHARDT

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY the 8th day of March, 1892, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 20 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit Commencing at the South-east corner of the south-east quarter of North east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 98-100; thence North-east following the meanderings of the bed of the Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence, thence following said Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, six and 80-100 acres; also lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29, in the town of Independence, the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Halhah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead, or lode, situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "La Dispricada Lode."

That certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura State of California, commencing at a point twelve and nine-twentieth (12 9-20) rods south of the general corner of the North-west quarter and the North-east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South-west quarter and the South-east quarter of Section No. one (1), in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardine Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and eleven-twentieth (68 11-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North-westerly along a small branch or swale to a point twenty-four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North-east quarter and the South-east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North east quarter of the North-west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West; running thence North forty-four and eleven twentieth (44 11-20) rods thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres: Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney, at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice, and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and alls bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent, of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER
Executor of the Last Will and Testament John Allen Hannah deceased.

Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th 1892.

SAVE YOUR SHOES
AMES' SHOE PROTECTOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES
is warranted to make the sole wear as long as the remainder of any ordinary shoe, and to save from 20 to 60 times its cost in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.
PAT. APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROP'R.
Horseshoeing ..... $3.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1894, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday ..... January 26th
" ..... February 17th
" ..... March 9th
" ..... April 14th
" ..... May 19th
" ..... June 16th
" ..... July 14th
" ..... August 11th
" ..... September 8th
" ..... October 13th
" ..... November 10th
" ..... December 8th

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND RHINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, MAY 3.....1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman .....GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman.....CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge.....GEO. M. GILL.
Sheriff.....ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk.....DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney..... ...P. W. FORBES.
Assessor.. .....P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer..... W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner.....I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed).....JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools.....S. W. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist.....FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist.....A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist .....J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist.....JOHN WILSON.
5th Supervisor Dist..FRANK FITZGERALD.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Lone Pine 11 a. m. Georges Creek, 2:30 p. m.; first Sunday in each month.

Independence, 7 p. m. except the Sunday before the full of the moon, when it will be in the morning at 11 o'clock.

Sunday Schools, Fort and Lone Pine 10 a. m.; Independence, 2 p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .66⅜
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5½
Pig lead	3.90

MARRIED.

WALLACE—HAMPTON—Near Bishop, April 24, 1895, by Rev. C. L. Logan, Mr. George L. Wallace and Miss Lulu Hampton.

Roses are out in full bloom.

W. P. Yaney come up from Olancha yesterday.

The Camp Independence school closed last Friday.

L. F. J. Wrinkle came up from Keeler last Sunday,

B. F. Hudspeth returned from Reno on Monday's train.

Forest fires are again raging in Wisconsin and New Jersey.

See assessment notice of Lone Pine Canal Company.

Breezy weather all the week, with quite a shower Wednesday.

The Standard Oil Trust has raised the price of kerosene.

The Bishop school closed last Friday with appropriate exercises.

Neil McLean is assisting Sheriff Given in the collection of sheep license.

Judge Davidson arrived home from Mojave on Tuesday morning.

Regular meeting Inyo Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M. to-morrow evening.

A few boxes of strawberries were shipped from Hawthorne to Keeler last week.

It is reported that Jake Tracey has a contract to haul supplies to Silver Peak.

The Lone Pine school closed last week with an entertainment on Friday evening.

There are three teams steadily employed hauling borax from Saline valley to Alvord.

Mrs. J. D. Blair, accompanied by her granddaughter Miss Rita Church, are expected down on to-days train.

P. Laberge and J. W. Lacey are running dry-washers on their placer claims at Santa Rita flat with good success.

T. C. Boland went north on Tuesday's train, returning Wednesday. He will be at Independence to-morrow.

Quite a number of bands of sheep have passed west of town during the week, grazing along the foothills on their way north.

C. P. Huntington has been arrested in New York, on a California warrant charging him with violating the inter-state commerce act.

Mrs. A. W. Eibeshutz had the first ripe strawberries of the season on Wednesday. Judge Gill was the pleased recipient of the first basket.

Owens River is unusually low at the present time. There has not yet been sufficient warm weather to melt the snow about the headwaters.

Agent Shively at Laws states that the C. & C. is handling more freight at present than at any time for ten years past. This indicates that times are better.

Pasted a dime on a sheet of paper and send to Crocker & Ames, 619 Montgomery St., San Francisco, for Ame's Shoe Protector, the wonderful saver of shoes.

Conductor Stock of the C. & C. has gone into the potatato business extensively on his ranch near Laws. He will plant five tons of seed potatoes.

The Vaughn Brothers are again running a dry-washer on their claim near Citrus. They took out $150.00 in ten days and indications are good for a summers run.

Bakersfield has had a real live lord sojourning there, and to prevent losing him he was incarcerated in the county jail. Bakersfield takes no chances of losing a good thing.

Stole Lots Of Plunder.

Quite a ripple of excitement was caused this morning by the arrest of a young fellow known as "Jimmie Fresh." There have been repeated pilferings about town during several months past and suspicion was directed to Jimmie about three weeks ago. He had sold two pairs of shoes to parties in town which were identified as being tolen from the store of A. W. Eibeshutz. Yesterday Mr. Eibeshutz charged him with the theft and he confessed to stealing about twenty-five dollars worth of goods. Not wishing to prosecute the young fellow he was allowed until Monday to leave the country. This morning a search was made on the premises of John Baxter, where Jimmie has been rooming lately, and a large assortment of goods was found, aggregating in original value abont $500 00. Most of the stuff has been identified as belonging to A. W. Eibeshutz and N. Rhine. Other things known to be missing have not yet been found and it is supposed that he has cached them somewhere. Upon finding that the theft amounted to so much value Mr. Eibeshutz swore out a complaint and a warrant was issued for Jimmie's arrest. Sheriff Given found the culprit hiding in an unusued ditch in the brewery lot and lodged him in jail. He was interviewed this morning and he declared that he had no statement to make, and intimated that he had an accomplice. His examination will probably be had this afternoon.

A Bright Prospect.

In a conversation with a resident of Bishop recently, who is in a position to know thoroughly whereof he speaks, the statement was made that the people of that section were in better circumstances than they had been for ten years. While ready money may not be any more plentiful just at present, yet the general financial status is greatly improved. While a few years ago farmers were compelled to mortgage at high rates of interest, it is now difficult to place a loan on good security at greatly reduced rates. Farmers have been working and saving and paying off their mortgages, and in most cases are now clear of debt. With a certainty of good crops this year and a better prospect for market, owing to the increased mining activity, the farmers, now clear of debt, will have plenty of ready money and business of all kinds will be improved correspondingly. The same conditions prevail generally throughout the county.

Mules For Market.

John Shepherd will start for Visalia on Sunday with a band of fifty-five head of four-year-old mules. They are all large, fine looking animals, in good order. Mr. Shepherd has rented a 320-acre pasture near Visalia where he will leave the band until he finds a suitable market. It is quite likely that the proposed Valley Road will create a demand for draft stock and Mr. Shepherd will meet with a good sale. Should he prove successful he has quite a number of animals left fit for market and will make another drive. Mrs. Shepherd is also going on the other side and will visit with relatives there.

Getting Ready For A Run.

Pat Keys came in yesterday from his mine at Beveridge to engage a packtrain for the purpose of conveying ore to the McEvoy mill. He will work his ore on the arastra there and expects to run through about a ton a day all summer. He expects the ore to yield about eighty dollars per ton. Pat brought in several specimens from the mine which show quantities of free gold, most of it very fine. There are now about thirty tons of ore on the dump and enough more can be easily got out to keep the arrastra running steadily. It will cost him eight dollars per ton to have the packing done.

Work will be commenced immediately on a large canal to be built in Fresno county The canal at its largest part will be twenty-eight feet deep and 400 feet wide. It will irrigate 300,000 acres of land and will be completed in twelve months, during which time it will give employment to 1500 men and hundreds of teams and will cost $1,500,000.

Wilfred Watterson arrived in town last evening and continued on his way to Bishop to-day. He spent the winter west of the mountains with a band of sheep, which is now at the lake on its way north. He says that feed has been excellent all along the line and that the sheep are strong and in good condition.

Geo. T. Rives has concluded arrangements with the Inyo Canal Company to furnish water for a mine in Inyo he has succeeded in selling to St. Louis parties. Mr. Rives will be Superintendent of the mine and will commence the erection of a mill immediately.—Hawthorne Bulletin.

The stockholders of the Lone Pine Canal Company met at Lone Pine last Saturday and elected directors and officers for the ensuing year as follows: J. A. McKenzie, President; D. Holland, Secretary; T. C. Boland, Treasurer; P. H. Mack, J. J. Gunn

Mr. Long, representing Henry C. Miller, has been in the valley for the past week looking after cattle. In company with J. C. Crocker of Big Pine he visited Bishop on Tuesday and came to Independence yesterday.

Hon. T. B. Rickey was at Independence early in the week, returning to his home at Carson last Tuesday. Charley Summers, who looks after his extensive stock interests in Mono and Inyo Counties, was with him.

Ansel White who left Santa Cruz early in 1866 is wanted. Any tangible information concerning him will be liberally paid for. Address, E. H. O'Hara, No. 469 S. Seventh Street, San Jose, Cal.

Judge Kyle, the fine trotting stallion owned by A. Stecker, was badly cut with barbed wire last week. He will recover, but it will be late in the season before he will be fit for use.

ANSEL WHITE.

Information wanted. If alive may hear something greatly to his advantage, or his heirs may if he is dead. Address, E. H. O'Hara, No. 469 South Seventh Street, San Jose, Cal.

EXAMINATION QUESTIONS FOR GRADUATING DIPLOMAS, INYO COUNTY, CAL., APRIL, 1895.

ARITHMETIC.

1. How many thousand shingles will it take to cover a roof whose rafters are 30 feet long and ridge pole 50 feet long if 4 inches in width and 5 inches in length of each shingle be exposed to the weather?

2. How many bricks will it take to build the walls of a house 30 feet wide, 45 feet long, and 20 feet high the wall to be one foot thick? There are 10 windows each 2½ ft. wide and 7 ft. high, and 4 doors each 4 ft. wide and 8 ft. high.

3. If 7 men dig a ditch 28 ft. long in 2 days of eight hours each, how many days of 10 hours each will it take 5 men to dig a similar ditch 25 ft. long.

4. The retail cost of a book is $7.50. If I get a discount of 10 per cent and 10 per cent off for cash, what does the book cost me?

5. What is the smallest tank that can be filled from a 4-qt., 6-qt. 8-qt. or 10-qt., measure.

6. Find value of these:

$\frac{7 \times 3\frac{5}{8}}{2\frac{1}{4} \times \frac{2}{3}}$	$\frac{8\frac{1}{4} - 3\frac{3}{4}}{1\frac{1}{8} \times 2\frac{2}{3}}$	$\frac{12\frac{1}{2}}{100}$	$\frac{8\frac{1}{4}}{3\frac{1}{4}}$	$\frac{66\frac{2}{3}}{100}$

7. What will it cost to plaster a room 18x16x12 ft. at 37½ cents per sq. yd. allowing for 3 windows 2½x8 ft. and 2 doors 3x8 ft.?

8. How many spoons each weighing 16 pwt. 11 gr. can be made from 5lb. 1pwt 11 gr. of silver.

9. Face of note $1.000 Date July 20, 1884, Interest 8 per cent. Installments: Mar. 5, 1885, $50.00, July 5, 1885, $450.00. What was still due?

10. Find sq. root of 1866.24
Find cube root of 166.375

GRAMMAR.

1. (a) Write a declarative sentence with phrase used as attribute complement.
(b) Write an interrogative sentence with word object.
(c) Write an imperative sentence with clause object.

2. (a) Name 2 kinds of phrases.
(b) Name 3 kinds of clauses.

3. Write the possessive singular and possessive plural of lady, man, mouse, chimney, who, me, deer, fox, piano, hero.

4. Write the feminine of Czar, executor, wizard, earl, actor.

5. What are regular, irregular and defective verbs? Give examples.

6. Give a synopsis of "go" in second person, singular.

7. Correct and give reasons: Who have they employed? Sit the sofa near the fire and lay down. It is John, him to whom you wrote. Let each esteem others better than themselves.

8. Mention 7 kinds of adverbs according to meaning.

9. What tenses are found in the Potential mode? Subjective mode? What modifications have verbs?

10. Diagram:
Saint Augustine, well hast thou said,
That of our vices we can frame
A ladder, if we will but tread
Beneath our feet each deed of shame.

GEOGRAPHY.

1. Locate, Cape Farewell, Sitka. Biscay, Athens, Danube, Baikal.

2. Define: isotherm, tropic, zone, meridian, equator, zenith, trade winds, glacier, moraine, erosion.

3. Bound California. Name the coast Counties and their County Seats.

4. Name all the States on the Northern boundary of the United States.

5. Name 10 countries of Europe in the order of their importance and give capital of each.

6. (a) Describe the form of Government of each of the 5 great powers.
(b) From which countries of Europe are each of the following obtained. Tin, salt, grain, olives, carpets.

7. Name 5 countries of Asia; give capitols and describe governments.

8. Where is the grain country of Africa? The date country? Ivory? Gold? What part of Africa does England control?

9. Give production of Australia, New Zealand, Hawaiian Islands, Philippine Islands, Sumatra, Borneo.

10. Name the countries of South America.

UNITED STATES HISTORY.

1. Name ten men who took part in the discovery and settlement of the New World, and tell what each did.

2. Name the 13 colonies and tell by what nationality each was settled.

3. Before the French and Indian War; how was N. America divided among the leading nations of Europe? Give the causes and results of that war.

4. Give the causes of the Revolutionary War and tell what you can about the 5 most important engagements.

5. (a) Tell something about 5 American inventors.
(b) Tell something about 5 great authors of the U. S.

6. What was the principal cause of the Civil War? Give first and last action of civil war, and tell who was President during the War.

7. What caused the Mexican War? What treaty closed it? What were the terms of the treaty?

8. What do you know of: Charter Oak? Bear Flag? Milan Decree? Monroe Doctrine? When was California admitted into the Union?

9. What is Protective Tariff? Revenue Tariff?

10. Tell what you know of the following: 13th Amendment? Specie Circular? Wilmot proviso? Missouri Compromise? Lexow Investigation?

ORTHOGRAPHY.

insolvents	fricasse
separate	lacerate
chaotic	conscientious
initial	commercial chenille	infectious
oriental	Asiatic
abstemious	synonymous
specialty	halcyon
homogeneous	exhalation
excerpt	obeisance
remittance	exaggerate
anodyne	apothegm
miscellaneous	intercessor
tyrannize	effervesce
comparative	vertical cuticle	indelible
chloroform	strychnine
amethyst	reconnoiter
sophistry	emulate
ecstatic	effulgence
docility	secession
excrescence	scurrilous
irretrievable	practicable
cyanogen	paregoric
fuchsia	pique

WORD ANALYSIS.

1. Define root, prefix, suffix and give examples of each.

2. Analyze: post script, manufacture, pronoun, subscribe, transgress.

3. Analyze: diameter, hemisphere, amphibious, delude, retrograde.

4. Give three suffixes meaning "one who."

5. Analyze: biography, astronomy, phonograph, contribute, telescope.

6. Give 2 derivatives from plectere.
" " " " haerere.
" " " " polis.
" " " " bodos

7. Give 2 synonyms each of hard, blind, bad, sharp, deep.

8. Define, hyper, apo, epi, ana, eu.

9. Write 3 nouns and 2 adjectives with the suffix "er."

10. Give three suffixes meaning diminutive.

COMPOSITION

1. Give 3 rules for use of comma, 3 for period, and 2 each for dash and hyphen.

2. (a) Punctuate the following: Let us sing said the preacher that familiar hymn When I can read my title clear found on page 94.
(b) Give 3 rules for the use of capitals.

3. Define sentence, paragraph, discourse, redundancy, simile.

4. Combine the following statements into a simple sentence, a compound sentence and a complex sentence: We came to a spacious mansion of free stone. 2. The mansion was built in the Grecian style. 3. We did so after riding a short distance.

5. Write a composition on one of the following: Favorite Flowers, Mid-winter Fair, Christopher Columbus, The Blacksmith, George Washington, Birds' Nests.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT.

1. Who holds the highest office in the U. S.? in California?
(b) for what term?

2. Of what houses or branches is Congress composed?
(b) Of what branches is the Legislature composed?

3. Who are the U. S. Senators from Cal. at present?

4. How many amendments have been added to the U. S. Constitution?
(b) Import of the last one?

5. Who established the Constitution of U. S.? For what purpose?

6. Name the legal Holidays of Cal.

7. Government is divided into what 3 branches?

8. How many kinds of taxes are there?

9. How may a foreigner become a citizen of U. S. (b) can he ever become president of U. S.?

10. How may a bill become a law without the signature of the President?

PHYSIOLOGY.

1. Give proof that bones contain animal matter. (b) mineral matter.

2. What juices aid in digestion?
(b) Where is each secreted?

3. Do veins ever carry pure blood?
(b) How can you determine from the flow of blood whether a vein or artery has been severed?

4. Name the special senses and nerve of each.

5. Define narcotic. (b) Name two kinds
(c) What is the vital element of air?

6. Describe the course of the blood through the body.

7. Name two kinds of nerve material: Which carry messages? Which receive impressions?

8. Give the technical names of the following: Collar bone, knee pan, breast bone, gullet.

9. Which one of the four cavities of the heart is enclosed in the thickest wall? Account for this.

10. Name the parts of the eyeball.

BOOK-KEEPING.

1. 40 credits. Either by single or double entry. Drygoods business.

Independence, April 1, 1895.

Began business with cash capital, $1,000
Apr. 3 paid for repairing store, $75.
4 Bought mdse. of G. A. Crocker on acct $2 517.
5, Sold mdse to C. S. Troy on acct. $175.
8, Sold mdse to Jas. McCook, cash $210.50
10, Sold mdse to Ed. Folsom, note 30 days, $412.75.
10 Paid one mo's rent of store, cash, $100
13, Paid clerk for services, $50.
15, Sold mdse to Jas. Brower on acct., $317.75.
16, Rec'd of C. S. Troy, goods, not as ordered, for which we credit him $25.
20, Rec'd of Jas. Brower 75 percent. of his acct. $—, in cash, lost balance of his acct., $ —.
25, Paid cash for expenses, $17.50.
26, Paid G. A. Crocker, cash on acct. $500
29, Sold mdse for cash, $375.
Mdse on hand per Inv. $1584.72.

Double entry—Journalize, post and make out full statement.

Single entry—Cash book, ledger and make out full statement.

2. 5 credits. Write note of 10th inst. payable to yourself.

3. 5 credits. Write a receipt for cash on acct., 26th inst.

The newest Style

OF

Fashionable Clothing

Dry Goods, Ladies'

Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOD

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain

Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,

PEANUTS

WALNUTS,

TOYS!

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get the

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, "DRESDEN" WARE.

THOMAS & HILL,

—DEALERS IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.

D. A. BENDER. General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1	To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House	10:50 a. m	5:20 p. m
Dayton	11:25 a. m.	4:45 p. m
Wabuska	1:40 p. m	2:30 p. m
Hawthorne	Ar. 5:00 p. m	Lv. 11:00 a. m
	No. 3.	No. 4.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Hawthorne	6:00 a. m.	7:25 p. m
Luning	7:10 a. m.	6:15 p. m
Sodа Springs	7:50 a. m.	5:35 p. m
Belleville	8:50 a. m.	4:35 p. m
Candelaria	9:40 a. m	3:50 p. m
Benton	1:30 p. m	11:50 a. m
Bishop Creek	3:10 p. m.	9:50 a. m
Alvord	:05 p. m	8:55 a. m
Independence	4:35 p. m.	7:25 a. m
Lone Pine	5:20 p. m.	6:40 a. m
Keeler	Ar 7:00 p. m.	Lv. 6:00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (3 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's tri-weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville-Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Allda Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (9 miles), Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles)

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRI. with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
88 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

RESTORE YOUR EYESIGHT

Cataracts, scars or films can be absorbed and paralyzed nerves restored, without the knife or risk. Diseased eyes or lids can be cured by our home treatment. "We prove it." Hundreds convinced. Our illustrated pamphlet "Home Treatment for Eyes," free. Inquire if everybody wants it. "THE EYE," Glens Falls, N.Y.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave,
WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS
at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeler,
MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS
at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER, Propr.

JOHN B. CLARKE,

Successor to John Clarke,

—PROPRIETOR—

John Clarke's Bishop Stables,

BISHOP, CAL.

First-class Turnouts of Every Kind

Fine horses and Carriages.

horses Boarded for any Time

Best of Care and Attention

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal

New House
New Furniture.
Low Rates.

Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.

O. P. MAINS Pro

feb12tf

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS. WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

0-m RENO, NEVADA

BIG 10P ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, on the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

INDEPENDENCE

MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROSSI, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

Orders supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.

j19-tf

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere

E. CHENOT.

Inde, Cal., March 9, 1895.

j16tf

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO Co. Cal.

Dealer in GENERAL MERCHANDISE, GROCERIES MINERS Supplies

PROVISIONS

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

BELL'S Flouring Mills

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

Accept None of the Pretended Substitutes for

Royal Baking Powder

BECAUSE inferior and cheaper made baking preparations are bought at wholesale at a price so much lower than ROYAL, some grocers are urging consumers to use them in place of the ROYAL at the same retail price.

If you desire to try any of the pretended substitutes for ROYAL BAKING POWDER bear in mind that they are all made from cheaper and inferior ingredients, and are not so great in leavening strength nor of equal money value. Pay the price of the ROYAL BAKING POWDER for the ROYAL only.

It is still more important, however, that ROYAL BAKING POWDER is purer and more wholesome, and makes better, finer, and more healthful food than any other baking powder or preparation.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL ST., NEW-YORK.

MISCELLANEOUS SQUIBS.

America contains 12,000,000 houses.

Lawyers were known in Babylon 2300 B. C.

The raw silk from Kansas cocoons is said to be the best in the world.

A Belleville boy starts out in life handicapped by the name of Turnipseed.

Perhaps the Japs might head the Johnnies off if they should take around this way.

Atchison, Kan., has a girl 22 years of age who claims to have had ten offers of marriage.

A good many English sparrows were frozen to death during the blizzard even as far south as Kentucky.

Afghanistan has an area of 279,000 miles, or about the combined area of Idaho, Colorado and Florida.

The Miller boys killed another huge wildcat in the timber in the bluffs, north of town of Troy, last week.

Massachusetts may claim great credit to herself over the fact that of her 353 towns and cities, 321 contain free libraries.

Oldtime Friend—Now that you are married are you happy, Mrs. Newlywed? Mrs. Newlywed—Well, yes, I am very happy compared with some people. Oldtime Friend—Compared with whom? Mrs. Newlywed—Well, with my husband, for instance.

"Your Honor!" shouted the attorney, in most impassioned tones, "we move that this suit be dismissed. My fair client is charged with wearing a high hat at a dramatic entertainment on the night of February 18. As your Honor well knows, there was no dramatic entertainment in town on the night of February 18. The only thing going on was an Uncle Tom exhibition."

City Editor—Mr. Penman, write up a description of how Mlle. Skreechowl, the cantatrice, learned to walk. Penman—Why, how do I know any thing about it? I suppose she learned to walk the same as everybody else does. City Editor—That makes no difference. So much easier to write it out. I tell you it will take like wildfire. The true secret of newspaper success is to be timely, sir; yes, sir, timely.

The Georgia Womens' Press Club will withdraw from membership in the General Federation of Women's clubs because three clubs of negro women have been admitted in Northern cities.

Charlie—What's the "strong-arm," pa? Ward McHeeler (prominent in the convention)—A form of parliamentary procedure, my son.

Colds Coughs Croup.

Sore Throat and Diphtheria have for over 50 years yielded to and they always will.

Pain Killer

Scalds, Sprains, Bruises, Burns and Cuts are also promptly cured by its use. Popular for 50 years—most popular to-day. Made only by Perry Davis & Son, Providence, R. I.

Buy a bottle All druggists sell it NOW

Ely's Cream Balm QUICKLY CURES COLD IN HEAD

Price 50 Cents.

Apply Balm into each nostril. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N.Y.

THE SPENT BALL.

By H. S. KNEEDLER.

(Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association.)

CHAPTER I.

"Have I forgotten something?"

"Did I ever tell you that story about Jason Brigham, the man without a past? Ah, I thought not! Well, if you care to spend the fag end of the night listening to an uncommon incident I'll spin the yarn. Our train don't start until seven, and it isn't worth while to go to bed at four."

The speaker was the major. For the purposes of this story that is all that need be said of him, perhaps. However, a better all around newspaper man one would not find anywhere; a more companionable fellow one would not care to meet. We were the last ones left in the major's den in The Tribune office, for the paper had gone to press and the night gang had deserted the rooms. That we remained was due to the fact that our annual outing was at hand, and at seven a. m. we were to cut away for two weeks—the major making a flying trip south, I going for a little fishing up near the Sault Ste. Marie.

"Light a fresh cigar," said the major, handing one of his favorite black weeds over. "It will help keep you awake if the story don't. Tough work this, telling stories, but it's better than missing a train for the sake of catching a nap that at best would make a fellow feel stupid, so here goes.

"I guess you know that in seventy I was on the Memphis Avalanche. There was no end of good fellows in town then, and the papers were holding up a long string of bright men who were doing 'space work.' It was a kind of haven for the fellows who were drifting north or south—a half way house where they staid awhile to recruit. As a matter of fact I was doing a little recruiting myself, and had a sort of brevet place on the city staff, which enabled me to pay the rent of a room and cherish a faith that I might eventually liquidate my board bill if no unforeseen bad luck befell me. I came into the office one night, and the city editor said to me:

"Gilman, we have a new man on the police work tonight—just arrived from St. Louis—and looks a little the worse for wear. Jones is on a spree and I put him on. Hadn't you better take him home and look after him?"

"Well," I replied, "I'm used to almost all kinds of bedfellows, and I guess I can stand it if he isn't too bad."

"There is something about him I fancy," replied the city editor, "rather something that appeals to me. I'm not usually susceptible to that sort of thing, but this new man looks to me as though he would stand some care, and I knew I could ask you without your feeling offended."

"In other words, you knew I wouldn't be particular who I roomed with," I retorted laughingly.

And so the matter was settled. Really the man dropped out of thought until the nub of the night was passed and the work well out of the way. I was vaguely conscious when he came in and sat down at his desk, though the boys kept dropping in and going out all evening, but along about two o'clock I finished my assignment, turned in the last page of copy and lit my pipe. Then I thought of the new arrival, and looked over to where he was sitting. His head rested on his arms as they lay folded on the desk in front of him. I thought him asleep. He was of middle height, slender in build, with a full head of dark hair, and hands that had been tanned by the wind and sun. After watching him awhile I went over and laid a hand on his shoulder to waken him, but he looked up instantly, and said in a wonderfully sweet voice, "Have I forgotten something?"

"No, I guess not," I replied; "what makes you ask?"

"I don't know," and he stammered a little in confusion, "but sometimes I have a feeling that I have forgotten what I set out to do. Are you the gentleman the city editor spoke to me about?"

"He said you would share my lodgings," I replied. "Shall we go now?"

Now it was plain to me what the city editor meant when he said this man appealed to him. I could not define the cause, but I experienced the sensation.

The stranger's features were regular, clean cut. His forehead was of medium height, broad and intellectual, his nose was straight and fine, his eye a trifle too large, perhaps, but with a wonderful light in it which gave it a mysterious hold upon one's thoughts. A brown mustache drooped over his mouth. It was a good face, but there was absent from it that firmness which is the expression of virile manhood. It was wanting in resolution, in purpose, and yet it was such a face as inspired confidence and gave assurance of fast friendship. It called forth sympathy even when one sought to elude it. In other words, it was a face that a Christ might wear, or such a mask as a devil might assume to trap the unwary. In my time I have thought it was both—but I am getting ahead of my story.

In those days, when we were "meeting up," as we used to say, with so many good fellows, we sometimes overlooked the little formalities of conventional association with our fellow men, so I did not even ask the new man his name until the next evening. We chatted in a desultory way about a score of commonplace things connected with our work. He said he had just arrived from "up country," and I took it for granted that he had drifted down from Chicago or St. Louis, on the regular fall campaign, which always wound up in New Orleans. It was plain enough that he was not an "old rounder;" but he did not appear a novice, for he did his work very well, as things went in those days. No very heavy assignments fell to him at first. In fact, I think he was kept among the cotton factors, looking up the new crop, which was just beginning to move.

I was home before him the second night, for having shown him the way and given him a nightkey, which the landlady relinquished with more or less reluctance, I took it for granted he could find his way in himself. Feeling in a reminiscent mood, I was sitting by the open window taking a good night smoke and looking out on the magnolia trees in the garden opposite, where the moonlight shone so brightly that one could see the red and waxlike berries that succeed the perishable blossoms. I was wrapped pretty deeply in thought and nodding a bit, maybe, when my new chum came in, and, throwing off his hat, stretched himself wearily in a big arm chair near by.

"We have been in the thick of the work," I said, "and that must be my excuse for not formally introducing myself to you. Then we haven't seen much of each other and are not likely to, except as we meet at turning in time. My name is Gilman, and yours is"——

"Brigham, Jason Brigham," he replied.

"Well, now that we know each other we will get along better," I said. "I suppose that, like the rest of us, you are merely drifting through."

"Yes, merely drifting," was his answer. I looked at him. His face was in the moonlight, and it wore a curious expression of unutterable sadness, such as I have never seen since on any man's face. Yet there was not the shadow of an emotion about it. It was a negative sadness—a mere deepening of its normal expression. We sat silent for some time, he looking out in the peaceful moonlight scene, I furtively studying his countenance. Then he said:

"I wish the city editor had assigned some one else to do the Sufferer's ball tomorrow night."

"Oh, you are booked for that, are you? Lucky fellow. There will be fair maids galore, gallant men, plenty of dancing and no mean spread in the supper room. Brigham, you are to be congratulated. I'll stay up to hear you go into ecstacies over it when you get back here."

"It is not exactly in my line," responded Brigham, "and I am not prepared to present myself in evening dress."

"Give yourself no uneasiness on that score. Wiley has a dress suit, and it will just about fit you. He will be delighted to loan it to you—if for nothing else, to let you know he has it."

"Well, I'd rather stick to the cotton. It has been a long time since I moved in feminine society, and I fear I have lost the fine art of making myself agreeable."

"I'll trust you for that. Where was your home originally? I take it you are an eastern man—a New Yorker, perhaps?"

As I asked the question he looked at me quickly, as though seeking to divine my purpose—as a man might who had some reason for not caring to have his past probed into too rudely. Then he passed his hand across his forehead in a vacant way, and said slowly and with evident effort:

"You must excuse me, but—but somehow my memory is strangely treacherous, and—I—do not remember—I cannot tell you."

"I beg your pardon," I replied. "Let me assure you I had no intention of presuming upon our short acquaintance to seek to know anything of your affairs which you would rather should not be known. The question was asked thoughtlessly enough."

"And it was a natural one," he said. "I wish I could answer it, but I cannot."

"Say no more about it," I replied, knocking the ashes out of my pipe. "The morning stars—that is, the vegetable and fish venders—will soon be singing together under our window. Let us go to bed and get well to sleep before the chorus begins."

Deuced strange, I thought, that this man should be so manifestly reluctant to tell me of his past. What secret did it hold that he was so chary about? He did not look like a criminal—like a man who had done something which made him a fugitive or an Ishmael. But there was the hard fact of his evident embarrassment when the question was asked. It aroused my curiosity, but it did not make me shun him. I had nothing to lose—perhaps that was the reason I only felt piqued at my guest's disinclination to talk about what men most glibly talk of under such circumstances. But that was his affair, not mine.

CHAPTER II.

Memphis was not a large place in seventy, but it was lively and bursting with the new energy of an awakened commercial life. It combined in a remarkable degree the two social extremes of the south—the delightful, luxuriant culture of the old "before the war" days and the energetic, aggressive spirit of the new cult which was to plant a victor's banner on the soil. The town was the gateway of the Yazoo delta, that garden spot of Mississippi whose twin portals are Memphis and Vicksburg, and on which the benison of plenty seems to have been poured. We men of the press were too cosmopolitan to feel or be susceptible to any restraint which others might have experienced. Hail fellows well met, we expected and received the courteous treatment we accorded all men.

He was too thoroughly master of the situation.

As for the ruffian and the braggert, we were familiar enough with him in the cities of the north to meet him on his own ground—by a ready resort to the pistol when necessary. Into the gay social life of the place we entered with a pleasureable abandon all the more sincere because the relaxation from work came so seldom. Thus it was with a good deal of satisfaction that I learned early in the evening that I might attend the Sufferer's ball, Jones for a wonder being sober and the rest of the gang all on hand. But it was close to midnight when, having donned a clawhammer coat, I presented myself at the door, and looked around for Brigham. I did not see him at once, and wandered about looking for an acquaintance upon whom I might bestow myself.

I had been in the city long enough to make some friends, but I couldn't help thinking that it would be tiresome work for my associate on the paper who was doing that most unenviable of all assignments—reporting an affair where he knew no one, and would likely be treated with indifferent grace as a reporter by the people he did meet. Imagine then my surprise when I caught sight of the object of my solicitude the center of a bevy of fair girls, who were listening to something he was saying with the most evident interest. An occasional peal of laughter showed that his powers as a rencounter had a humorous subject. There was no disguising the fact that Brigham was feeling perfectly at home, and that he was covering himself and The Avalanche with glory.

What was Wiley as a society reporter compared with this brilliant cavalier who could hold the attention of half a dozen belles and who looked every inch the gentleman in a borrowed evening suit? He was too thoroughly master of the situation for me to encroach upon the ground, and I waited until the little group was broken up by an irruption of evidently envious cavaliers, when Brigham strolled off with the sweetest little bit of femininity imaginable upon his arm. It was the daughter of the wealthy cotton factor, Jerome Percival, and Emily Percival was one of the belles of the town. Not that kind of a beauty who overawes one, not the girl who would be the season's belle at Saratoga or Old Point Comfort.

(To be Continued.)

Sugar-beets that were not mature enough to work up into sugar at the Chino factory before the season closed are now being dug for cattle and horse feed. They sell at $4.50 per ton, and are said to be not only nutritious but a cheap food at that price.

Bobbie—What are descendants, father? Father—Why, the people who come after you. (Presently) Who is that young man in the passage? Bobbie—That's one of sisters descendants come to take her for a drive.

RIPE FOR A HARVEST.

"It's the worst season for dampness I ever saw," said a traveler on a train. "Yes," answered a man of big words, "it's the supersaturation of the atmosphere from fogs and vapors; these cause too much moisture, and sickness follows." "Maybe 'tis, but, as I said, it is the worst season for wet and for such complaints as rheumatism, neuralgia, faceache, headache, toothache and the like." "Well, you've struck a combination I can break," said a third party. "How?" "With St. Jacobs Oil." If it's the worst season, St. Jacobs Oil is the best thing to use for the troubles which it brings. It will cure in no time anything in the shape of ache or pain.

"I should have you know, sir, that I am a Londoner, and was born in London."

"But I, sir, was born in Cork, and I am a Corker!"

SELF PRAISE.

Self praise is no recommendation, but there are times when one must permit a person to tell the truth about himself. When what he says is supported by the testimony of others no reasonable man will doubt his word. Now, to say that ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS are the only genuine and reliable porous plasters made is not self praise in the slightest degree. They have stood the test for over thirty years, and in proof of their merits it is only necessary to call attention to the cures they have effected and to the voluntary testimonials of those who have used them.

Beware of imitations. Ask for ALLCOCK'S, and let no solicitation induce you to accept a substitute.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS arrest the progress of decay.

A devotee of solitaire at Abilene has quit the game until after the Grand Jury meets.

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss.
LUCAS COUNTY.

FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

SEAL. A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

☞ Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Unless your piano is stationed with its back to the center of the room you are not socially in it.

I can recommend Piso's Cure for Consumption to sufferers from Asthma.—E. D. TOWNSEND, Ft. Howard, Wis., May 4, 1894.

The man who blows his own horn sometimes pays well for his whistle.

Wolfe's Worm Powders. The Great Remedy for worms. When your children are ailing, try them. At druggists, or send 25c. to JNO. WOLFE, San Rafael, Cal., and you will get them by mail.

MICHIGAN'S BENEFACTOR.

AN OFT REPEATED STORY OF TRUE PHILANTHROPY.

What Chas. H. Hackley has Done for Western Michigan.

(From Grand Rapids, Mich., Evening Press.)

The most beautiful spot in all this city is inseparably associated with the name of Hackley. Chas. H. Hackley, has been in the lumber business here continuously since 1856 and in that time has amassed a fortune which gives him a rating among the wealthy men of the nation. But with wealth there did not come that tightening of the purse strings which is generally a marked characteristic of wealthy men.

It is no wonder then that the name of Charles H. Hackley is known at home and abroad. His munificence to Muskegon alone represents an outlay of nearly half a million. For the past twenty years he has been a constant sufferer from neuralgia and rheumatism, also numbness of the lower limbs, so much so that it has seriously interfered with his pleasure in life. For some time past his friends have noticed that he has seemed to grow young again and to have recovered the health which he had in youth.

To a reporter for the Press Mr. Hackley explained the secret of this transformation. "I have suffered for over 20 years," he said "with pains in my lower limbs so severely that the only relief I could get at night was by putting cold water compresses on my limbs. I was bothered more at night than in the day time. The neuralgic and rheumatic pains in my limbs, which had been growing in intensity for years, finally became chronic. I made three trips to the Hot Springs with only partial relief and then fell back to my original state. I couldn't sit still and my sufferings began to make life look very blue. Two years ago last September I noticed an account of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and what they had done for others, and some cases so nearly resembled mine that I was interested, so I wrote to one who had given a testimonial, an eminent professor of music in Canada. The reply I received was even stronger than the printed testimonial and it gave me faith in the medicine.

"I began taking the pills and found them to be all that the professor had told me they would be. It was two or three months before I experienced any perceptible betterment of my condition. My disease was of such long standing that I did not expect speedy recovery and was thankful even to be relieved. I progressed rapidly, however, towards recovery and for the last six months have felt myself a perfectly well man. I have recommended the pills to many people and am only too glad to assist others to health through the medium of this wonderful medicine. I cannot say too much for what it has done for me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

"Senator Sorghum had his good points," remarked the charitable man.

"Yes," replied the man who speculates; "and his good pointers."

AN EAGER AND A NIPPING WIND.

A continuous down pour of rain, inclement weather, generally in winter and spring, are unfavorable to all classes of invalids. But warmth and activity infused into the circulation counteracts these influences and interpose a defense against them. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, most thorough and effective of stomachics and tonics, not only enriches the blood, but accelerates its circulation. For a chill, or premonitory symptoms of rheumatism and kidney complaint, particularly prevalent at these seasons, it is the best possible remedy. It is also invaluable for dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation and nervousness. Never set out on a winter or spring journey without it. Elderly persons and the delicate and convalescent are greatly aided by it.

"Have you had much experience as a cook?" "Oi hev, ma'am. Oi had seventeen places lasht year, ma'am."

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

WE GIVE AWAY

Absolutely free of cost, for a LIMITED TIME ONLY,

COUPON No. 114

The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, By R.V. Pierce, M. D., Chief Consulting Physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, a book of over 1,000 large pages and 300 colored and other illustrations, in strong paper covers to any one sending 21 cents in one-cent stamps for packing and postage only. Over 680,000 copies of this complete Family Doctor Book already sold in cloth binding at regular price of $1.50. Address (with stamps and this Coupon) WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

KARL'S CLOVER ROOT PURIFIES THE BLOOD. IT GIVES FRESHNESS AND CLEAR SKIN. CURES CONSTIPATION INDIGESTION DIZZINESS ERUPTIONS ON THE SKIN BEAUTIFIES THE COMPLEXION. $1.00 FOR A CASE IT WILL NOT CURE.

Anagreeable Laxative and NERVE TONIC. Sold by Druggists or sent by mail. 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per package. Samples free.

KO NO The Favorite TOOTH POWDER for the Teeth and Breath, 25c.

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY, which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

Mrs. Dr. Wegener, PRIVATE HOME for all Female Diseases; separate rooms for ladies before and during confinement; have enlarged and arranged my home to suit rich and poor; irregularities cured in one day; guaranteed; regular physician of long and successful practice; travelers attended; no delay; all business strictly confidential. 419 EDDY ST., San Francisco, Cal.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

Rich Red Blood

In the body of an adult person there are about 18 pounds of blood.

The blood has as its most important elements, small round corpuscles, red and white, in proportion of about 300 red to 10 white ones.

If the number of red corpuscles becomes diminished and the white ones increased the blood is impure, thin, lacking in the nutrition necessary to sustain the health and nerve strength of the body.

Then That Tired Feeling, Nervousness, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, or others of the long train of ills, according to the temperament and disposition, attack the victim.

The only permanent remedy is found in a reliable blood medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts upon the red corpuscles, enriching them and increasing their number. It thus restores the vital fluid to healthy condition, expels all impurity, cures Nervousness, That Tired Feeling, Scrofula and all other diseases arising from or promoted by low state of the blood.

That these statements are true we prove not by our own statements, but by what thousands of perfectly reliable people say about Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read the testimonial in the next column from a beloved clergyman. Then take

"In view of the benefit I have had from Hood's Sarsaparilla, I wish to give the following testimonial: I have several times been badly

Poisoned with Creeping Ivy.

As the old school of medicine simply tried to remove the symptoms instead of the sources of them, much of the poison was left in my system to appear in an itching humor on my body with very violent exertion in warm weather. At all times there were more or less indications of poison in my blood, up to a year ago last winter, when

Large Sores Broke Out on my body. I then purchased a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after using that and a half of another bottle, the sores and humor disappeared. I attended the Christian Endeavor Convention in Montreal and also visited the World's Fair in the hottest weather of the summer. Was on the go all the time, but of the burning and itching sensation which had marred every previous summer's outing. I have reason, therefore, to be enthusiastic in my praises of Hood's Sarsaparilla."—SAMUEL S. SCHNELL, Pastor of Free Baptist Church, Apalachin, N. Y.

Had No Recurrence

Hood's Sarsaparilla

The Blood Purifier and True Nerve Tonic.

Weinstock, Lubin & Co

400 to 412 K St., Sacramento, Cal.

Largest General Retail House on Coast.

Wearing Apparel of all kinds for men, women, and children; Dry Goods, Shoes, Hats, Millinery, Valises, Furniture, Carpets, Crockery, Notions, Stationery, Silverware, Toys, Household Supplies, etc.

Catalogue Free.

A handsome illustrated catalogue about our goods and prices sent free to any address. Tens of thousands of customers find it profitable and satisfactory to buy through this book.

TERMS CASH.

Enclose money for goods with order, and if to be sent by mail allow for postage. Any balance left over will be returned.

If interested in any of the items below, order promptly, giving item number.

A121. Black Silk, with small black brocade figures, for separate skirts or waists; excellent quality and 20 in. wide. Special value at 69c a yard.

A122. Fine white Japanese silk Handkerchiefs for men or ladies, 20 in. square, with 1½ in. hem; beautiful quality; at 25c each. Much below value.

A123. Fruit of the Loom or Lonsdale bleached muslin, a yard wide. Price, 15 yards for $1.00.

A124. Ladies' and misses' stylish dude hats, white manilla crowns, with band and brim in navy blue, brown, red or black; very becoming and stylish. Price, 25c.

A125. Children's dress button Shoes, black kid, patent leather tips, spring heels. Price, sizes 8½ to 11, $1.25; 11½ to 2, $1.50; postage, 11c.

A126. New Spring Suitings in fine grey or tan mixtures: charming effects. Price, 25c a yard. Nine yards for full suit.

Send for our beautiful Catalogue (lilac and gold cover), and with hundreds of illustrations of new spring goods. Sent free to any address.

A127. Broad Belts, blue, white or black, with handsome silver metal buckles. Price, 40c.; postage, 2c. All the go.

A128. Nottingham Lace Curtains, 40 in. wide, 3 yards long; pretty patterns, and special value at 69c pair; postage, 16c.

A129. Ladies' fast black sateen Corsets, long waisted; sizes, 18 to 30. Price, $1.00. Can be had anywhere at this price, but no such quality or perfection of fit as these.

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN & CO., Sacramento, Cal.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. WOODS & Co's.
"CASTLEWOOD" KENTUCKY BOURBON
CARTAN, MCCARTHY & CO.
SOLE AGENTS, AND DISTRIBUTORS
SAN FRANCISCO

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

MEN Dr. LIEBIG & CO. Special Doctors for Chronic, Private and Wasting Diseases.

Dr. Liebig's Invigorator, the greatest remedy for Seminal Weakness, Loss of Manhood and Private Diseases, overcomes Prematureness and prepares all for marriage life's duties, pleasures and responsibilities; $1 trial bottle given or sent free to any one describing symptoms; call or address 400 Geary St., private entrance 405 Mason St., San Francisco.

WALTER BAKER & CO.

The Largest Manufacturers of PURE, HIGH GRADE COCOAS AND CHOCOLATES On this Continent, have received HIGHEST AWARDS from the great Industrial and Food EXPOSITIONS In Europe and America.

Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or other Chemicals or Dyes are used in any of their preparations. Their delicious BREAKFAST COCOA is absolutely pure and soluble, and costs less than one cent a cup.

SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE.

WALTER BAKER & CO. DORCHESTER, MASS.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. For sale by all Druggists. 25 Cents a bottle.

INCUBATORS Send for Catalogue. W. C. Beach, Ripon, Cal.

Grain and Straw Carriers L. Ph. Bolander, 115-117 Main St., S. F. 14 yrs. of experience has resulted in producing the BEST and the CHEAPEST. Correspondence solicited.

SAVE SHOE LEATHER. HEELS NEVER RUN OVER. Half Sole Your Shoes for...35c. Ask for Dyke's Diamond or Oval Soles and Revolving Heels. Imitations are worthless. For sale by leading shoe dealers. Eureka Sole Co., Donohoe Bldg., S. F.

If you want work or can organize a lodge, write to the order of Fraternal Argonaut, Rooms 87 and 88 Donohoe Building, San Francisco, Cal.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE BEST IN THE WORLD. Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE. FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

BEAUTY, WEALTH, HEALTH AND HAPPINESS. LADIES, IF YOU WOULD POSSESS ALL these blessings, consult with stamp for reply. THE C. C. & H. CLUB STOCKTON, : : : CALIFORNIA. (Mention this paper.)

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE IS THE BEST. FIT FOR A KING.

$5. CORDOVAN, FRENCH & ENAMELLED CALF.
$4. $3.50 FINE CALF & KANGAROO.
$3.50 POLICE, 3 SOLES.
$2.50 $2. WORKINGMEN'S. EXTRA FINE.
$2. $1.75 BOYS' SCHOOL SHOES.
LADIES. $3. $2.50 $2. $1.75 BEST DONGOLA.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE. W. L. DOUGLAS, BROCKTON, MASS.

Over One Million People wear the W. L. Douglas $3 & $4 Shoes. All our shoes are equally satisfactory. They give the best value for the money. They equal custom shoes in style and fit. Their wearing qualities are unsurpassed. The prices are uniform,—stamped on sole. From $1 to $3 saved over other makes. If your dealer cannot supply you we can.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc. AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S. Main St., Los Angeles.

We would not have expended HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS doing galvanizing, for which we made no extra charge, had there not been merit in it. Galvanizing consists in coating the strong but most perishable (in thin sheets) metal, steel, with the almost indestructible (even when very thin) metals, zinc and aluminum. If there were not great merit in galvanizing, no one would pay ¼ more for galvanized barbed wire or sheet iron than ungalvanized costs. If we were making painted windmills to-day, we should furnish an

8 Ft. for $15

That is a good price for an 8 foot painted windmill.

WE BUILD FOR THE AGES. WE WOULD NOT SELL YOU A POOR, PAINTED WHEEL, FOR ONE MADE OF METAL GALVANIZED BEFORE BEING PUT TOGETHER, IF YOU WOULD PAY US DOUBLE PRICE FOR IT. We build the best we know, and knowing that painted thin sheets are practically worthless, we have nothing to do with them. The enormous cost of preparing to do galvanizing, and of doing it well on a large scale, deters others. SOME BUY GALVANIZED SHEETS AND PUNCH AND SHEAR AND MAKE THEM UP AFTERWARD. WHEELS OR VANES MADE OF GALVANIZED SHEETS RUST OUT FIRST AROUND THE RIVETS, JOINTS, AND EDGES, AND ARE, THEREFORE, NOT SO GOOD AS PAINTED ONES. How any concern can get our prices for painted windmills and painted towers, or those made up of galvanized material, cut, sheared and punched after the galvanizing is done, can only be explained by the fact that people who buy them are ignorant of the value of galvanizing. We now galvanize everything after it is completed, even bolts and nuts. We galvanize with the most improved processes and in the most perfect known and attainable manner.

The process: When a section of an Aermotor Wheel is all riveted up, completed and cleaned of rust and impurities, it is immersed in melted zinc and aluminum and left there until it becomes as hot as that metal, and until every crack, crevice, pore and opening of every kind is filled, closed up and saturated with the molten metal, and the whole of the section becomes soldered and welded together as one piece, then you have something that is strong, and, as durable and reliable. It is so inexpensive to do it, and small enough that it can afford to do it. We keep 60 tons of zinc and aluminum melted from one year's end to another. The silvery white coating which fills every pore and covers every portion of the Aermotor Wheel, Vane and Tower, as it is first put on, has after a chemical combination or alloy, which cannot be melted and is practically indestructible. In our previous ad. we talked of prices of windmills, illustration of what we could do in the way of REDESIGNING AN OLD ARTICLE AND PUTTING IT IN INFINITELY SUPERIOR SHAPE AT A RIDICULOUSLY SMALL PRICE, ANNOUNCED THE OFFER OF AN ALL-STEEL VERY SUPERIOR FEED CUTTER, WORTH $40 AS PRICES GO, AT $10. IN OUR NEXT AD. WE SHALL OFFER YOU SOMETHING OF STILL GREATER INTEREST. Aermotor Co., Chicago.

S. F. N. U. No. 667. New Series No. 14.

"IT IS IGNORANCE THAT WASTES EFFORT." TRAINED SERVANTS USE

SAPOLIO

MALARIA! Three doses only. Try it. DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY.

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, MAY 10, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVI. NO. 47. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., MAY 10, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1280.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.
One Year (post paid).....$1 00
Six Months.....2 00
Three Months.....125
One Month.....50
Single Copies.....10

JAPAN'S PRISONERS.

How the Chinese are Treated by their Captors.

UTILIZING CUES AS MANACLES.

J. W. Davidson on His Tour of Investigation—Why the Chinese Have Been so Often Defeated.

From without, as I viewed the massive gateway, and ran my eye along the high stone wall which incloses the grounds of the Kannon Temple at Asakusa, it recalled to me the tales of other days, when Japan was subject to petty feuds and revolutions, and all property of value had to be fortified. Again these walls are alive with watchmen, and guarding the ancient gates are warriors, not clothed in armor and with bow and arrow, but regular up-to date soldiers, equipped as well, if not better, than the soldiers of larger military nations. They look a little out of place beside these antiquated old buildings, but travelers in Japan are used to that, for the old mingles with the new everywhere, and with striking contrast.

As we wander through old Japan, with its temples of many centuries, we cannot help but be impressed with it; influenced by their surroundings, we are charmed, and carried back to olden times; then we are suddenly awakened from our spell by the shrill whistle of the locomotive, as she flies along with her modern train, filled with modern people, of modern ideas; and looking about us we see, hanging down from the old wood-carved ceiling of the temple, an electric light, brightening up the weird old faces of the wooden idols who grin down upon us more horrible than ever. Yes, old and new Japan, and the extremes of both, all in the same building.

After taking a snap shot of the guard at the entrance gates, for which he seems truly grateful, our credentials are presented, and we are admitted, much to the envy of a crowd of curious Japs, who surge about the gateway, all anxious to catch a glimpse of a Chinese prisoner, but without show of success, for the prison quarters, as well as the drill ground, are surrounded by the temple and auxiliary buildings. As my intention was to interview the Chinese, and the War Department had provided me with the necesary credentials, I was in need of a good, honest interpreter, whom I secured through the kindness of the officials at the prison; but, while a fluent conversationalist in Chinese and Japanese, he could not speak a word in English, so Mr. Sakai, my regular Japanese interpreter, accompanied me, and Mr. Goepfert, an Austrian friend, helped me with my pictures. As our little squad appeared on the drill ground we were courteously received by several officers, who were extremely kind and accommodating and aided me in getting such information as I desired. When we arrived, about 9:30 a. m., the prisoners were out, taking their morning drill. All were dressed alike, in a blue "kimino," or native Japanese overcoat, flannel drawers, and a great variety of footgear. On the left arm was sewed a white tag, with the name, squad, and number, written in Japanese. The drill they were executing, which takes place for an hour twice a day, was to us a decidedly ludicrous affair, giving the impression of a corps of harlequins training for a pantomime, rather than that of soldiers taking their morning drill.

With their bland, impressionless faces, and their unmilitary bearing, it was evident that they were not intended for soldiers, and rather substantiated the remark made by a prominent Chinaman in Yokohama, in respponse to my accusing him of being "very poor fight," "Chinaman blissness (business) man, no fightee man." Three Chinese officers, recognizable by their native dress, which they alone were permitted to wear, were in charge of the drill, and were running about shouting their orders, in about as unofficer-like a manner as could be imagined.

The 179 soldiers and three officers here confined were captured at Kinshu, where they had escaped from Port Arthur. They were brought on with others to Japan, arriving in Tokio December 25. On their arrival, as there were no regular accommodations prepared for them, they were divided and sent to six different districts, at present there being confined, altogether, in Japan, 828 men, but the colonel informed me with characteristic confidence that he expects 1,000 more men from Wei-Hai-Wei, as though the Japanese were as sure of capturing them as if they were cattle on a ranch, and only had to be corralled and driven to market.

It was the usual custom to cut off the cues of all Chinese prisoners, but the Japanese government had given strict orders not to inflict this penalty, which to the Chinaman is most humiliating, and, as it is an "ill wind that blows nobody any good," their cues are turned to great advantage by tying them all together.

After their capture, and for some time after reaching their Japanese prison, the Chinese were greatly frightened, but now seem perfectly contented and happy, and from what I have learned from several interviews I am led to believe that they consider this a regular bona fide "snap." As one replied, in answer to my question, "Which would you prefer, a Japanese prison like this, with Japanese protection, or a Chinese army, with Chinese protection?" "Me takee this jail,' he answered.

At my request Chow-Hung-Lee, a bright-looking Chinese officer, was called, and accompanied me during my tour of the buildings, providing me with the information I desired, with the exception that I was not allowed to ask him any questions touching the "Port Arthur massacre," as another correspondent sees fit to term it.

Captain Chw-Hung-Lee was in command of a company of 125 men, originally farmers, and who had had only three month's drill before going into battle, and some of the companies, he informs me, were made up of men with scarcely a month's drill.

The marching movements and company drills were limited to single file, a column of fours, and falling into line, and as to a manual of arms they had none whatever; in fact, the variety of weapons would not admit it. This company—and it was a fair sample of the Chinese army—was equipped either with swords, bows and arrows, spears, pistols, or a few guns of every size and shape—anything from a flint-lock blunderbuss, which no one dared to use, to a modern rifle without suitable cartridges; so many styles of arms, requiring so many different forms of ammunition, that even a good percentage of them were useless.

The battalion commanders were gathered in from all parts—the only necessary qualification being that they have sufficient funds to buy their commissions.

Each soldier received, or was expected to receive, two taels ($1.50 at present rate of exchange for United States currency), and from this amount, with the exception of two pounds of rice per day issued as rations, he was expected to provide the rest of his food. Under ordinary conditions, the Chinaman could have purchased an abundance with this amount, but in time of war and battle, pushing into unfamiliar country, through districts hostile, or, if friendly, where there was scarcely enough food for the inhabitants, it is not surprising that many of them had to resort to stealing in order to satisfy the cravings of hunger; and again, the two taels—monthly wages—sometimes did not put in an appearance, and then the soldiers were obliged to forage, one and all. That they had no regular commissary department, and that soldiers were obliged to secure their own food as best they might, could not result otherwise than in general demoralization in the ranks, making proper organization impossible. Marching to the front with banners, drums, and that vast assortment of weapons (some carrying bird cages), must have had every appearance of masqueraders at a mardi gras, and not resembling an army marching to the front, in modern days. How then can we blame the Chinese soldier, half starved, improperly clothed, undisciplined, undrilled, and almost unarmed, without commanders, and, above all, degraded and scorned by friends and countrymen, from turning and fleeing in confusion upon meeting the magnificent forces of the enemy, provided with elaborate accoutrements, armed with the deadliest implements of modern warfare, and inspired by the cheers of the whole Japanese nation.

Ah! Give the Chinese the equipment, drill, discipline, and command provided the Japanese, and the encouragement of their own people, and the tale of Port Arthur would have had a different sequel, and the capture of Wei-Hai-Wei would never have been written.

When the prisoners first arrived at their present quarters they were covered with dirt and vermin, and it took some time to get rid of both, especially the latter. The Chinese aversion to a hot bath is proverbial in the East.

The prison quarters consist of several well lighted and well ventilated buildings, the prisoners occupying the largest, which contains one large room, divided into eight sections, but unpartitioned.

Each section is provided with one charcoal stove, and the floors are nicely carpeted with clean straw matting, making it warm and comfortable. One section, 36 feet long by 15 feet wide and 12 feet high, contained twenty prisoners, which, according to the latest hygienic rules, is more than sufficient breathing space. Of course, there are no beds, the men sleeping on the floor, wrapped up in heavy quilts furnished them.

At the forward end of the room, in a niche in the wall, were three small photographs of a favorite Chinese idol, and in front were two cheap vases containing sticks of incense burning. This was the temple of these poor people, and here twice a day they assembled to prostrate themselves before the shrine and pray to their Buda (god). Chow-Hung-Lee informs me that their first prayer every morning is for the Japanese Emperor. Mr. Loomis, an American missionary, as a representative of the United Bible Societies, has presented each prisoner with a Bible printed in Chinese, which I am glad to say is read by fifty-one out of the 179 that are able to read. I am informed that this society is also providing every soldier in Japan with a Bible, 60,000 having already been delivered.

In the kitchen I found everything neat and clean. The cooking is done by Chinese on the native "shebatchee" or stove, one of the mementoes of old Japan, that could well be abolished in favor of the modern stove, but which, I find, is in universal use all over the empire. It is a kettle-shaped affair, made in one piece, with the cooking basin extending about half way through. Below and on the side is a small door wherein the fuel is placed. A draught is obtained by constantly fanning at the opening, and the smoke escapes anywhere the best way it can, making it necessary to have an opening in the roof to let it out of the building.

All the kitchen work is done by Chinese, under the superintendence of a Japanese officer, but it is slight compared with the work in European kitchens. The rice, likewise the potatoes and vegetables, have to be b[illegible] minced pork stewed, and the cooking is through.

The Chinese prisoner has the same allowance of money to purchase food as the Japanese soldier, but, as with the exception of rice, their tastes differ, they are provided with a different bill of fare.

At 7:30 a. m., the morning mess is served, which consists of vegetable soup and rice; at 12 m. rice, a vegetable stew, containing potatoes, carrots, Japanese turnips, and minced pork. At 5 p. m. the evening mess consists of rice, boiled fish, and boiled vegetables.

Rice is the principal food with both Chinese and Japanese. When the Chinese first arrived they were provided with the same quantity of rice as the Japanese soldiers, but of a superior quality. But as soon as they were informed that they could have such food as their allowance of money would purchase they requested that a greater quantity of second-grade rice be furnished them. Their requests were complied with, and they were perfectly contented, receiving six pounds of rice a day, served each meal in little wooden boxes, holding forty-two cubic inches.

My Chinese informant tells me that at home the most of his men were satisfied with a day ration of a couple of bowls of rice, with scraps of vegetables or pieces of fish added, and are now receiving better food in prison than they ever received outside.

I next viewed the hospital, which I found in charge of an expert surgeon, who informed me that he at present had no cases of importance, the health of the men being excellent. Three weeks before he and his assistants had finished quite an undertaking in vaccinating every prisoner.

The bath-house near by is a roomy building, containing a number of large wooden bath tubs, all kept scrupulously clean, every prisoner being obliged to bathe twice a week.

Chinese New Year's Day a special ration of chicken, rice, vegetables, and fish was issued to each man and all were allowed the freedom of the temple court, also to pray at the Japanese shrine, which they all did, praying first for the Japanese Emperor and then the Empress. During the day they presented New Year's cards to their favorite Japanese officers, and a large banner with the following inscription, written in Chinese, to the commandant: "When we were hungry you gave us food; when we were thirsty you gave us drink. You are all kindness to us, and we care not to return to China." As the prisoners have no occupation during the day they are at present being examined and divided into classes for the purpose of setting them to work manufacturing such articles as they seem best adapted to make, the profit to go to themselves, which will give them money to purchase papers, send letters, and keep them provided with tobacco, which they seem to miss more than their freedom.

And as I take a last look at their childlike features I have a doubt if one could find in the whole Chinese army as happy and contented a lot of men as these captives of war.—James W. Davidson, in Inter-Ocean.

CLOTHING THE FAMILY.

"My dear," said Mrs. Bloobumper to her husband, "I really need a new street gown. I am ashamed to go out any more with the only one I have."

"Very well," replied Mr. Bloobumper. "Get yourself a street gown."

"By good rights I ought to have a bonnet, too. I haven't had a new one for three months and it's getting real shabby, to say nothing of its being utterly unsuited to this weather."

"Get a bonnet, too, darling."

"Then Annie needs a few more things. She can't possibly put off getting a new dress and a new hat any longer. A young lady of her age is absolutely required to dress well. You know that yourself, Harry."

"It is true, dear! Get whatever is necessary and proper for Annie, and make her look as sweet as a peach."

"Baby Bess will have to have some new dresses, Harry. It is a wonder what a lot of clothes a little girl of eight requires. You wouldn't believe t if you didn't have to provide them and keep them looking at least semi-respectable."

"That is true, little wifey. Baby Bess deserves all the nice clothes she gets, and it is quite right for you to take a proper pride in dressing your daughter neatly."

"Then, Harry, dear, you need an entire new suit yourself, and a new hat. I don't think you can have noticed how shiny your coat is in the back, while your trousers have commenced to fray a little at the ends as well as bag at the knees. Won't you get a new suit, love?"

"I don't know about an entire suit, dear, but I was thinking that after you and Annie and Baby Bess were provided for, I'd get myself a three-dollar pair of pants if I had that much money left."—Truth.

Sacramento capitalists have organized a telephone exchange in opposition to the Bell. Arrangements are already made for lines through El Dorado and Amador counties and in other directions. Already, it is said, half the Bell subscribers have gone over to the new project.

Mother—I gave you a penny to be good yesterday, and today you are just trying to show how bad you can be. Willie—Yes, but I am just trying to show you today that you got the worth of your money yesterday.—Pearson's Weekly.

First Family Man—Why, Jones! do you carry home your own purchases? That doesn't seem very well-bred. Second Family Man—It isn't; its' loafer bred.—Judge.

OUR WAR VESSELS.

A New World in Ordnance Shipbuilding Revealed.

A COMMERCE DESTROYER AT WORK.

An Imaginary Chase by the Columbia of a Swift Cunarder—A Very Exciting Race.

As yet our new and slowly growing navy has fought John Bull only in magazine and newspaper articles. Even these non-destructive engagements have their thrill for the spectator, for they are written by marine experts, and they reveal a new world in ordnance shipbuilding and steamship to the untutored layman. Suppose, as an article in the Boston Herald, allows us to suppose, we are at war with Great Britain, and our famous cruiser the Columbia, first named the Pirate, is scouting on the high seas. She sees a Cunarder, steering for Halifax, and armed to the degree that the new Atlantic passenger craft are designed to be armed in case of war.

At the first glimpse of another steamer the Columbia will spread the banked fires under all the reserve boilers, will put on the forced draught, and start all three engines at work. By the time the Campania takes alarm and changes her course in flight, the Columbia's three screws will be revolving at their highest speed, the ship will be stripped for action, and the long, stern chase will have begun. Let us assume that ten miles separate the two ships, and that each is in a condition capable of doing her best.

On board the Columbia there is no excitement, save such as naturally accompanies the exertion to its full capacity of enormous power. Furnaces are at white heat, while half naked firemen methodically shovel in additional fuel, and the great fans whirr incessantly as the air is driven into the fireroom and is sucked up through the glowing grate bars. As the steam pressure touches 170 pounds in one set of boilers the safety valve lifts, and on deck a roar is heard like the rage of an imprisoned and tortured giant. From end to end the mighty hull rattles and quivers with the throbs of the propellers, sharper and more staccato-like as the bow plunges and the stern lifts to the moderate surface-swell. It matters not what may be the direction of the breeze, the ship makes her own wind as her speed rises above twenty-two knots, and showers of hot cinders sweep the decks abaft and smoke stacks.

Every eye on deck is leveled at the distant steamer, now in full flight, dead ahead. There is no question as to her identity, for no other craft likely to be in that neighborhood could hold such tremendous speed. Far distant though she be, the Columbia's officers on lookout aloft have been able to recognize her distinguishing features of rig, hull, and smokestacks. The occasional gleam of foam glancing from her bow as she plunges into a wave, shows that she, too, is going at no ordinary seed.

Steadily the registers on the Columbia's engines click off the revolutions. A weird voice is heard in the engine-rooms, "What number of revolutions are you making?" And the replies presently explode in the silence of the coming tower: "One hundred and thirty-six a minute, starboard engines, sir;" "135, port enignes, sir;" "132, midship engines, sir."

"That means 23 knots," says the captain, with an anxious look ahead. "If we can hold this gait six hours we shall have her within easy range."

"What do you give the Campania?" asks the executive officer.

"Well, she is probably making between 21 and 21.4," replies the captain. "She has a start of 10 knots. It is now 10 o'clock, and if we can gain a knot and a-half an hour we shall be within a mile of her at 4 o'clock, and can take her before dark, but if we gain less than that it will be an even chance that she gets away after nightfall."

Thence forward there is no change until noon, except that the revolutions fall off five or six turns per minute, and then pick up again a little. But there is evidently an equal decrease in the Campania's speed, for the gain apparently increases slightly, and the steamers are now little more than six miles apart. The Campania's people are aware that they must do something if they wish to escape, and presently they drop overboard their boats and all unnecessary gear about decks.

"They are breaking cargo out of their after hatches, sir," says the keen-eyed cadet at the Columbia's masthead.

About 1 o'clock he reports that the Campania has jettisoned her life raft.

"That's odd," says the Columbia's captain. "I should have thought that would have gone before the boats." As he levelled his glasses on the float ing mass tossing in the Campania's wake.

Presently he shrugs his shoulders and orders the helm a-starboard. As the bow swings a half-point to port every one looks with astonishment at the captain, but he paces the bridge without appearing to notice the blank looks. The change of course is trifling, but it is an evident loss to the pursuer for which no one can account. Five miles from where the course was changed the helm is ported, and the direct chase is resumed. Meanwhile the catamaran dropped from the Campania's quarter is just abeam; but in stead of passing it close aboard, as was the case with the Campania's boats, it is half a mile away. Then the Columbia's crew get a sudden proof of their captain's shrewdness. There is a great puff of smoke and flash of flame on the surface of the water, a bursting of shells in the air, and a scattering of wreckage and luggage all around the spot where the catamaran recently tossed so peacefully.

"I thought so," says the captain. "When they saw how close we passed to their boats they whipped up a couple of tons of powder and ammunition, loaded them on the catamaran, and set going a time fuse to explode them just as we were due to pass. I don't think it would have hurt us, but I didn't want to take the chances of the effect of a nearby explosion on our boilers."

Having failed in this little ruse, the Campania now begins to jettison her cargo in real earnest, hoping to gain speed by dropping weight. But it is too late to effect the result. The Columbia maintains her speed magnificently, while the Campania is not holding her own as well as at the beginning of the chase.

By 2 o'clock the distance between them is less than three miles, and the captains of the Columbia's forward six-inch guns keep their eyes on the sights and dally with their primer landyards suggestively in the hope of getting an order to try a long shot. But the captain only smiles, shakes his head, and continues to pace the bridge.

Soon, however, the Campania's crew stop whipping cargo overboard.

"They're training her after six-inch gun on us, I think, sir," reports the Columbia's cadet at the masthead.

He hardly finishes speaking when a flash of flame from the Campania shows that she intends to cripple her pursuer if possible. The shell flies wide, striking the water far off on the Columbia's starboard quarter. This firing is repeated four or five times in the next five minutes, with some resulting improvement in range, but very uncertain train, shells striking first on one side and then on the other.

"Mr. Holystone," says the Columbia's captain presently, to the lieutenant commanding the forward guns, "you may open fire on the chase."

"Aim, carefully, men, and fire when you're ready," says the lieutenant. Both six-inch guns are already trained, and, taking the distance from the officer at the range finder, the gun captains fire almost simultaneously. They are the crack shots of the navy, having been chosen for these two guns from the prize marksmen of the whole service. As the guns explode the crews automatically reload them in a few seconds, so that each is ready for another shot before the flight of the first has ended.

"Well done," says the captain, "you winged him the first time."

One shell has struck the Campania's after smokestack, and, exploding immediately, has plainly left her in trouble. She yaws from her course and on resuming it is evidently not holding her former speed. The two guns again belch forth, and this time both strike the Campania. The latter has but two alternatives—immediate surrender or battle. The Columbia is now coming up fast. The shell that exploded in the Campania's smokestack drove the flames and ashes back through the furnace door and ash pits in one fire-room, killing every man in it and depriving the ship of that much boiler power. It is a question of only a few minutes when the Columbia's whole battery will be brought to bear. Already her forward four-inch guns are nearly effective. The Campania, by a quick change of course eight points, can bring three six-inch rapid fire guns to bear on her pursuer, and for several minutes will have a slight advantage over her in the weight of metal thrown. If she can even temporarily cripple the Columbia, she may yet escape.

Her captain takes the chance. Putting his helm hard a-port, he swings across the Columbia's bows and rattles away a half dozen shots from his three six-inch guns thus brought to bear. But it is hopeless effort, for the Columbia's bow guns—two six-inch and two four-inch rapid firers—quicker worked and better aimed, are hulling the Campania at every shot, and just as the former starboards her helm to bring her whole starboard battery to bear, the Campania's flag comes down and the chase is over.

COULD NOT DANCE.

Canrobert's first meeting with his wife was interesting. It was at a ball in the Tuileries, where the lady, seeing the Marshal enter, went up to him and playfully asked him to consider her a Russian and take her out for the first dance. Though fond of the ladies Canrobert did not dance, and he answered: "Impossible, mademoiselle! I do not dance, and we are at peace with the Russians now." Then, turning to a Lieutenant of the Guards, he said: "Here, young man, take mademoiselle for your partner, and remember that a Marshal of France has this night envied the good fortune of a sub-Lieutenant." A few months later the Marshal and the lady, Flora de Macdonald, were married.—N. Y. World.

Most insects, says a scientific observer, seem to be deaf to the sounds which are heard by human beings. At the same time there is no question that they produce sounds and hear sounds that are entirely beyond our own range of auditory perception. Sir John Lubbock has said that we can no more form an idea of these sounds than we should have been able to conceive a notion of red or green if the human race had been blind. The air is doubtless often vocal with the sounds made by insects of so high a pitch as to be entirely out of range of man's power to hear.

The mean depth of the Altantic Ocean or the average of many soundings is 13,200 feet.

IN AN ENGINEER'S CAB.

James Covington's Experience on the Rails.

NARROW ESCAPES OF DISASTER.

Tells How He Once Ran into an Open Switch and Saved His Life by Jumping.

The life of a railroad engineer is one of hazard. There are a continual change and a certain excitement in the work, however, which lend it a charm. The man who has handled a lever and swept over the rails with a ponderous train swirling along behind him obedient to his slightest finger pressure enjoys the work and learns to love his big iron horse as the mother loves the child of her tender care.

Many are the tales of wrecks and disasters, of thrilling escapes and peril barely averted that the engineers could tell were their experiences reduced to words.

When the big engine pulling the Monon vestibuled train from Cincinnati to Chicago came to a standstill in the Polk street depot at 5:30 o'clock Saturday evening, few of the hurrying crowd of passengers turned their heads to glance at the stalwart but begrimed man in blue check suit who, with light in hand, was busy examining the monster motor that stood panting after its rapid run. They did not pause to think that for hours their lives had been lying as in the hollow of his hand, and that a single signal overlooked, or one moment of forgetfulness upon his post at a critical moment, might have landed them into eternity as a breath of air quenches the flickering flame. Nor did "Jim Covington allow any sentiment to enter his mind.

It was his regular daily routine, and he went about it with the methodical care that has become habit from long years of work in the same line. When he had satisfied himself that all was right and his work for the day ended he hurried away to his happy South Side home, where wife and children were waiting for him to join them at the family meal. He was found later by a reporter for the Inter-Ocean and talked pleasantly and freely regarding his life on the rail.

James M. Covington is a man of strong figure and pleasant feature. Forty-one years of age, he has spent over half his life on the railroad. Lafayette, Ind., was his birthplace, and when 20 years old he accepted a fireman's position on the short line running from Lafayette to Kankakee which is now a part of the "Big Four system. He remained there about two years. He was shifted to different lines but finally went to firing on the Lafayette Muncie and Bloomington which is now a portion of the Lake Erie Western.

After working there for two years he was promoted to the position of engineer in 1880. After two and a-half years in that position he gave up the road temporarily, and for nine months had charge of the steam fire engine at Lafayette. He engaged with the Monon people Dec. 15, 1883, first taking a freight, which he kept for two years, and then a passenger run which he has retained ever since.

Covington has one of the most desirable runs on the road, pulling what is called the Cincinnati vestibule express. He leaves Chicago at 10:15 o'clock each morning, going as far as Monon, at which point he is due at 1 o'clock. On the return trip he leaves Monon at 2:45 o'clock and is due at the Polk street depot at 5:30 in the evening. The run is eighty-eight miles, schedule time, while two hours and forty-five minutes is, in reality, much faster. It takes fifty minutes to run the twenty miles through the city and beyond the Indiana line, which leaves sixty-eight miles to be made in one hour and fifty-five minutes, including stops..

"I have made the run in two hours and twenty minutes from Monon to Chicago when it happened that I was delayed on the start," he said. "Out of that time must be figured the fifteen stops required for crossings that will average from two and a-half to three minutes each. Many times I have run fifty miles an hour.

"In the twelve years that I have been with this road," said the engineer, "I have never pulled off a day or had a wreck through my own carelessness.

Such a record, I believe, can only be secured by the most careful watching. Have I ever killed a man? Well, yes; one, but that was not held to be my fault, and when you remember how many years I have taken the fast trains in and out of the city, with all the grade crossings, my record is one for which I feel I need not make apologies.

"The one fatal accident that I had was in 1888 during the time of the Chicago Burlington and Quincy strike. When I approached the crossing at Thirty-first street I saw a man standing on the track looking down with his head on one side as if examining something. I set the whistle going but did not slacken speed as I presumed, of course, he would step aside as the train approached. But he never budged from his tracks, the pilot struck him on the head, knocking him twenty feet and killing him instantly. It was my belief at the time, and will always be the same, that he deliberately committed suicide. His relatives, of course, sued the company, but the facts were all the wrong way and they failed to secure anything.

"I will never forget a funny accident that occurred one night when I had No. 3 and eleven coaches behind me during the World's Fair. Alderman Gahan and a warehouseman, whose name I have forgotten, were driving a buggy and attempted to make a crossing in front of the train. I heard the fireman yell 'Whoa!' and put on the air brakes just in time to make a perceptible stop. Otherwise we would have hit them square and they would have been killed sure. As it was we just caught the hind wheels, and the way that buggy, horse, and men were mixed up would have passed for a fair sample of a Chinese puzzle. Luckily both men escaped with a few scratches on their shins.

"I struck a big cooper wagon one time out at the Forty-fifth street crossing," continued the engineer, with a little chuckle, as he recalled the circumstance. "There were a pair of mules hitched to the wagon, which was piled high in the air with new empty barrels. With usual perverseness the mules balked right on the track and stayed there, despite the whip and muscle of the driver, who finally jumped and left them to their fate. The brakes worked well, but the train could not be entirely checked, and the mules got the wosrt of the matter, while the barrels went rolling in every direction.

"I remember one night striking an old woman who was picking up coal. She evidently thought she was far enough out from the track, but the pilot struck her on the hip, and I thought she was gone sure. As I leaned out of the cab window, however, and looked back she was upon her feet again, shaking her fist at me. If I did not put on the air-brakes and slacken speed very often when people and teams were crossing the track I would hit any number of them."

When asked about the wrecks he had been in Mr. Covington said that he had been in a good many rear-end collisions and such when he was firing, and many times had to jump.

"Perhaps the worst accident that I experienced was a little over four years ago," he said. "I got out of it pretty well at that, better than one in a thousand might have done. My time had not come, I suppose. It was on the night, or rather early morning, of October 2, 1890. We had been laid out an hour at Rensselaer, and were about that much behind time.

"Mr. Barker, the general passenger agent at that time, and Frank Reed, who now holds the position, were with me on that trip, and it was their intention when we left Monon to come forward and ride in the cab. They got to talking with some men at the station, and when the signal came to start they got on the sleeper. To that lucky change of plan they probably owe their lives. It was about 2 o'clock in the morning, as we approached the station of Battle Ground, made famous by the battle of Tippecanoe. As I said, we were an hour late and running to make up at a forty-mile rate or more. Suddenly as I peered through the light sent forward by the engine I saw the switch target and it was thrown for the side track. I'll never forget how that target looked. It seemed as big as a building. Frank Miller, who was firing for me, was my brother-in-law, and was at the moment bending over putting coal in the fire. 'Frank the switch is open,' was my cry to him, as I mechanically threw the engineer's valve which supplied the air brakes for the emergency. Instead of jumping from the steps I got through the cab window, and using the window ledge as a boy about to make a long dive would use a log I sprang upward and outward, driving myself forward with all the strength of my legs. You see I knew the ground and remembered that right there we were in a small cut, so that if I did not make the top of the bank I would be liable to fall back under the wheels or have some of the coaches fall on me.

"The fireman had no time to jump before the engine was out of the open switch and had turned a double somersault. It was just as well, perhaps, for him. The tank, fortunately, was empty, and as it fell forward he tumbled into the pit and after it was all over crawled out of the wreck with hardly a scratch. He found me for dead forty feet away, where I had rolled after striking on my hip and shoulder, such was the velocity of the train. Blood was pouring from mouth, nose, and ears, and when the town doctors examined me they said I could not live until morning. The telegrams giving the news of the wreck stated that the engineer was killed. But with morphine and brandy for a stimulant I was taken home and in a week was out of bed and in six weeks at work again. I have had to jump from the cab window on three different occasions, and as I have always got off pretty well I am beginning to believe it is a good way."

The number of fowls, dogs, and cattle that an engineer will kill in the course of a year would reach large figures were they footed up.

"I killed thirteen head of cattle one night," said Covington. "The drove got on the track some way and instead of getting off when I came along they started to run down the line. If ever one of them had gone under the wheels it would have been all over with me, but as they were all running I punted them over into the ditch and went through them like a big ball through a bunch of ninepins. It seemed to me there were a million of them."—Inter-Ocean.

Thomas Blanck, the murderer and jail-breaker of Seattle, is dead. Robert Crow and John Shepich, two of the men who have been hunting for the murderer ever since his escape, killed him in a personal encounter on the North Pacific Railroad track, about a mile north of Kent station. Blanck died fighting, and seriously wounded Shepich.

Dean Hole is the authority for the opinion given in his latest book that for one silly young woman there are fifty silly young men.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, MAY 10.....1895

As nobody ever seems able to foretell how seasons of depression come upon the world, so nobody is able to foretell when, why or where prosperity is to revive. According to the Rural Press there seems really no reason why next year should be better than last year, nevertheless there are many signs that it is to be so. Wheat, though still very low, is a little steadier in price of late; cotton, it is noted, has advanced a little; silver is making a little gain; clearing-house statements all the country over show a bigger volume of business. In California there is manifestly a better feeling. Real estate sales are more frequent; railroad enterprise is stirring; the value of beef cattle is advanced; people are beginning to really hope for the Nicaragua canal; there is a general hopefulness of better times ahead. All this is well, for if we really expect good times, it will go far towards bringing them,

People who are working themselves up into a state of violent perspiration because England has taken steps to enforce the payment of an indemnity by Nicaragua for injuries done to her subjects and are denouncing our Government for not declaring war against England to enforce a false notion of what the Monroe Doctrine is, have their attention called by Senator White to the circumstance that American citizens have claims pending before the State Department for damages against Nicaragua. Should it be determined that Nicaragua should pay these claims how would our government collect them? It seems that those who are doing the loudest talking in this matter know, or care, the least about it, but simply desire to become conspicuous.

Senator Jones of Arkansas, one of the member of the United States delegation to the proposed international monetary conference, has returned to Washington. He says he knows of no progress making toward the holding of such a conference, and in an interview expressed the opinion that the next Democratic platform would declare unequivocally for free silver and independent of action by other nations, and that the Republican platform would declare in favor of bimetallism and an international agreement.

Senator White has felt it proper to say in reference to a telegram sent out from the East, that he would not consent to become candidate for Vice-President in 1896. No one who is well acquainted with Senator White's abilities and popularity among the Democrats of the East would be surprised, however, to see his name figuring prominently among those mentioned for the first place, before the National Democratic Convention meets. Senator White ranks up alongside the best of them at Washington, and all California recognizes his devotion to her interests.

There is no money in the general fund in San Francisco and the inmates of the almshouse, hospitals and jails are on the verge of starvation. The city is in debt to the contractors and there seems to be no way to pay the bills, and no further supplies will be delivered unless the money for the same is forthcoming immediately. The finance committee of the board of Supervisors are holding sessions and are trying to devise ways and means to keep the city government on its feet.

The London Chronicle thinks and says that Russia might as well try to invade the moon as to invade Japan, because for every Russian soldier sent there would be ten Japanese to meet him. The recognition of a fact like this is a healthy sign in England, and probably accounts for the indisposition of that country to interfere with the treaty arrangements between Japan and China.

Lord Sholto Duglas says he will not marry the variety actress, a statement that is corroborative of what the young lady said a few days ago. The cruelty of poverty is plainly shown in this case. Here is a coronet ready to pluck, but the poor girl who is willing to do the picking is too poor to keep its owner

EW ADVERTISEMENTS.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. Location of works, near Lone Pine, Inyo County, California

Notice is hereby given, that at a meeting of the Board of Directors, held on the 27th day of April, 1895, an assessment (No. 8,) of fifteen cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin to the Secretary, at the office of the company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 1st day of June, 1895, will be delinquent and advertised for sale, at public auction, and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, June 22, 1895, at 2 o'clock p. m. to pay the delinquent assessment, together with costs of advertising and expense of sale.

D. HOLLAND,
Secretary.

Office, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. May 2, 1895.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
April 29, 18 5.

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Halliday of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal. has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert land claim No. 645, for the N½ of N½ sec. 15, Tp. 15 S. R. 36 E. M. D. M. before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal. on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co. Cal. William F. Halliday of Oakland Cal. Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, both of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND,
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Independence, Cal.
April 29, 1895.

Notice is hereby given that William F. Halliday of Oakland, Cal. has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert land claim No. 641, for the NW ¼ of SW ¼ sec. 12. Tp. 15S. R. 36 E M. D. M. before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal. on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co, Cal. Joseph Halliday, Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, all of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND,
Register.

FOR SALE.
THE WHITNEY HOUSE

——The only hotel in——

LONE PINE INYOO CUNTY CAL

Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address

MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. I. MOORE, Proprietor

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modoc Cal.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

H. E. Wilkinson Plaintiff, vs. Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

The people of the State of California send greeting to Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now and heretofore existing between plain tiff and defendant upon the ground of the defendant's wilful desertion of plaintiff, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein, which complaint is hereby made a part of this summons.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to Court for the relief demanded in said complaint, viz: For a judgment dissolving said bonds of matrimony.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 10th day of April, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

BIG PINE HOTEL.

BIG PINE · CAL

New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates

Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING
EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.
FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

(Official.)

Treasurer's Report.

To the Hon. Board of Supervisors, Inyo County State of Caliornia.

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith submit my report of the receipts and disbursements of this office for the Quarter ending March 31st, 1895. Respectfully submitted.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer.

RECEIPTS—

Jan. 1, 1895. Cash on hand		$20,494 93
J. S. Gorman, Tax-Collector	721 00
J. S. Gorman, Tax-Collector	12 50
P A Chaifant, Assessor	73 95
J. S. Gorman, Sheriff fees	31 00
J. S. Gorman, Tax-Collector fees	27 40
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees	74 80
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees	49 50
D. M. Geiger Int S Schl fd	22 40
Wm Roan "	42 00
J. H. Shannon "	33 60
Nathan Gilbert "	11 20
Sarah C. F. Wrinkle "	4 80
" "	13 32
" Int lake fd	20 87
P. C. Grant "	40 91
Samuel T. Black, State School	4,904 55
	26,585 23
Feb. A. M. Given, Tax-Collector	376 33
A. M. Given, Tax-Collectr fees	5 00
A. M. Given, Sheriff fees	83 60
D. J Hession, Recorder fees	66 15
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees	55 80
	27,172 11
Mar. A. M. Given, Tax Collector	555 50
A. M. Given, Tax-Collector fees	29 00
A. M. Given, Sheriff fees	44 60
A. M. Given, Sheriff fine	50 00
D J. Hession, Clerk fees	55 75
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees	176 35
A. W. Carroll, Int State land	2 80
" "	89 22
J. G. Birchim "	32 00
" " Swamp land	25 68
Thos. W. Perry, Int State land	51 96
S. W. Austin, Schl Supt fees	4 00
J. S. Gorman, bal. Tax Col.	25 88
D. J. Hession, bal. Clerk & Rec.	7 75
A. A. Cashbaugh, Int State land	11 20
	28,323 80

DISBURSEMENTS—

Jan. Salary Fund	1,224 18
Hospital Fund	416 00
Bishop School Bond	5 40
Bridge	121 46
Sundry Road Districts	1,190 60
General Expense	3,053 96
Bishop School	362 25
Union School	94 00
Milton School	41 75
Big Pine School	160 20
Riverside School	125 03
Lone Pine School	144 00
Station School	160 37
Round Valley School	75 00
Warm Springs School	70 00
Independence School	82 63
Fish Springs School Dist.	76 35
Independence Special	2 37
Fish Spring, Special	4 05
Irving Library	41 95
Big Pine Library	12 72
Round Valley Library	25 00
Milton Library	3 00
	7,427 27
Feb. General Expense	593 00
Independence Bond	605 00
Salary	1,424 98
Hospital Fund	41 00
Lone Pine School	215 15
Union School	85 00
Independence School	85 00
Bishop School	261 11
Milton School	240 00
Fish Springs School	85 00
Station School	129 97
Warm Springs School	123 60
Irving School	90 00
Big Pine School	4 60
Unapportioned County School	12 60
Warm Spring Library	25 00
Big Pine Library	3 60
Fish Spring Library	22 82
Lone Pine Library	40 11
	11,118 11
Mar. Fish Spring School Bond	234 00
County Bond	1,575 00
Unapportioned Property tax	1 22
Salary	1,083 78
Hospital	20 00
Fish Spring School	75 00
Big Pine School	103 00
Station School	65 25
Independence School	109 00
Round Valley School	101 00
Milton	80 00
Bishop School	253 65
Irving School	111 00
Lone Pine School	180 00
Riverside School	125 00
Station Library	30 38
Big Pine Library	14 50
Lone Pine Library	3 10
General Expense	656 70
Apr. Cash on hand	12,075 31
	28,323 80

Treasurer's Trial Balance, Apr. 1, 1895.

To the Salary Fund	$	927 10
General Expense "		295 37
State General "	738 26
Hospital "	587 74
Bond "	1,074 40
Bishop Special Fund	5 13
General Road	133 45
To the various Road District Funds.
No 1	337 22
No 2	275 39
No 3	582 25
No 4	140 54
No 5	194 61
Unapportioned County	58 12
Road Poll Tax	113 05
Bridge Fund	410 03
Swamp and overflowed Land	1,639 33
Institute	80 00
Teachers Library Fund	43 50
Big Pine Special School	56 00
Coroner's	88 25
Unapportioned Property Tax	429 83
County School		948 33
To the various School Dist. Funds:
Riverside	88 16
Round Valley	138 34
Irving	164 37
Bishop	412 49
Station	127 83
Warm Springs	339 27
Big Pine	833 23
Milton	113 56
Independence	247 80
Fish spring	157 13
Union	391 49
Lone Pine	446 83
To the various School Dist. Library Funds:
Milton	$ 68 52
Round Valley	3 76
Irving	26 82
Bishop	129 67
Station	87 28
Warm Springs	7 41
Big Pine	35 05
Independence	31 21
Union	46 44
Riverside	20 32
Lone Pine	80 30
Fish Springs		4
Independence Bldg Fund	5 00
Fish Springs " "	19 84
Lone Pine " "	10 84
Independence Schl. Special	26 49
Independence Bond Fund		13 0
Bishop (old) " "	73 02
Bishop (new) " "	930 59
Union " "	364 60
Big Pine " "	626 49
Fish Springs " "	5 49
Lone Pine " "	1,362 98
Cash Balance
	$12,075 3.
	$14,2 0 65	$14 260 65

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 1st day of Apr., 1895.

D. J. HESSION,
Clerk.

Examined, accepted and approved by the Board of Supervisors the 24 day of January, 1895

FRANK FITZGERALD
Chairman.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—

The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.

All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc, given careful and promt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR
AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY--AT--LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases.

Brown & Wills,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery.
All kinds of dental work done according to latest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING
IN ANY STYLE.
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Administrator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix, at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ALLIE R. BROWN.
Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased.

Dated February 15 1895.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administratrix.
aug3 5

NOTICE.

Wherens, the consent in writing of the holders of two thirds of the capital stock of the Lone Pine Canal Company, a corporation, to change the principal place of business of said corporation from the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, to the town of Lone Pine, in said county and state, is on file herein. Notice is hereby given that the principal place of business of said Lone Pine Canal Company, will be at the town of Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on and after January 26th 1895.

By order of the Board of Directors.

DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

[Official.]

Notice To Tax-Payers.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT I have received from the Auditor of the County of Inyo, State of California, the Assessment Roll for the year A. D. 1894-5, that the taxes on all personal property secured by real property, and one-half the taxes on all real property, will be due and payable on the first Monday in October and will be delinquent on the last Monday in November next thereafter, at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto fifteen per cent will be added to the amount thereof; and that if said one-half be not paid before the last Monday in April next at six o'clock p. m. an additional five per cent. will be added thereto; that the remaining one-half of the taxes on all real property will be payable on and after the first Monday in January next and will be delinquent on the last Monday in April next thereafter at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto five per cent. will be added to the amount thereof; that all taxes may be paid at the time the first installment as herein provided is due and payable.

A. M. GIVEN,
oct5 1d Tax Collector.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The co-partnership heretofore existing between R. W. Thomas of the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, and T. W. Hill of the same place under the firm name and style of "Thomas and Hill" heretofore conducting a general merchandising business at the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, is this day dissolved by the mutual consent of the said R. W. Thomas and the said T. W. Hill.

Witness our hands and the seals this 6th day of February, 1895.

R. W. Thomas
Thomas W. Hill

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK

Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.

A. J. DAVIS,
30-tf Independence.

The JOCKEY Saloon.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
MARSH. NAYLOR
PROPRIETORS
WINES, LIQUORS,
CIGARS.
HEADQUARTERS FOR SPORTING EVENTS.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.
First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

FARROW'S
MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA.
This is the Standard Military Encyclopedia of the world and the only work of its kind in the English language. It has the endorsement of the War Department and the leading military commanders of America and Europe. It is issued in three large octavo volumes of about 1000 pages each, printed on fine paper, from new electrotype plates, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. It is a complete library of military information both for military and non-military people. Every library should have it. Circulars sent on application. Good agents wanted.
MILITARY AND NAVAL BOOKS.
All the leading, up-to-date military and naval books. Price list furnished on application.
MILITARY-NAVAL PUBLISHING CO.,
611-621 Broadway, New York City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.

REDLANDS GOLD MINING COMPANY

Location of principle place of Business: Redlands, California.

Location of works, Panamint Mining District, Inyo County, California.

NOTICE—There are delinquent upon the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 1, levied on the 11th day of January, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders as follows;

Name.	No. Cert.	No Sh's	Am't
G W Osbun	194	100	$ 83
R C Avery	274	2,500	21 25
J H Allen	305	3,000	25 50
J H Allen	334	5,000	42 50
Emma Bingham	33	200	1 70
A J Boyer	169	200	1 70
J Bun	248	400	3 40
E Bedford	342	625	5 25
Mrs. R B Clute	69	25,000	212 50
M F Clute	70	40,000	340 00
M F Clute	335	1,430	12 15
M F Clute	356	50	40
M F Clute	367	4,650	39 50
Geo. J Caldwell	104	40,000	340 00
Geo. J Caldwell	111	5,000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	112	9,000	76 50
Geo. J Caldwell	242	5,000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	243	5,000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	245	5,000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	247	1,000	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	248	1,0	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	249	1,0	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	250	2,0	17 00
Geo. J Caldwell	314	5,000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	331	10,000	85 00
Geo. J Caldwell	360	550	4 70
Geo. J Caldwell	368	7,000	59 50
Geo. J Caldwell	369	600	5 10
W Coggeshall	201	100	85
Davis Donoll	94	300	2 55
Wm. Fussell	63	500	4 25
T E N Eaton	152	300	2 55
T E N Eaton	170	2,000	17 00
T E N Eaton	211	400	3 45
J M R Eaton	157	100	85
J M R Eaton	163	1,900	16 15
J M R Eaton	209	3,500	29 75
Mrs. T E N Eaton	198	500	2 55
Miss Grace Eaton	199	200	1 70
Geo. M Eaton	210	300	2 55
Chas. E French	223	4,000	34 00
Chas. E French	320	5,000	42 50
Chas. E French	324	10,000	85 00
Chas. E French	325	10,000	85 00
Abbie R French	230	1,000	8 50
J R Griffith	312	250	2 15
I M Hough	85	1,000	8 50
I M Hough	319	6,000	51 00
G L Houlton	125	1,200	10 20
G L Houlton	144	400	3 40
Hattie M Huffman	200	700	5 95
Maggie High	216	300	2 55
Horan & Parker	363	5,000	42 50
E J Inwood	255	1,000	8 50
H W Comp. (trustee)	292	500	4 25
J W Jansen	80	600	5 10
W T Johnson	82	600	5 10
W T Johnson	140	300	2 55
W T Johnsen	212	350	2 95
W T Johnson	230	300	2 55
E S Jacoby	161	100	85
Mrs. T Luther	231	100	85
A M Mitchell	25	300	2 55
W T Mitchell	185	100	85
W T Mitchell	299	400	3 40
R W McIntyre	165	30,000	255 00
R W McIntyre	283	5,000	42 55
R W McIntyre	285	19,000	161 50
R W McIntyre	286	250	2 15
R W McIntyre	354	300	2 55
G E Nelly	145	1,000	8 50
H S Newlove	184	200	1 70
H S Newlove	190	300	2 55
H S Newlove	191	500	4 25
H S Newlove	300	1,900	16 15
Mamie M Norris	202	2,050	17 40
Mamie M Norris	203	1,250	10 65
Susie A Otto	117	1,000	8 50
Susie A Otto	118	1,000	8 50
Susie A Otto	119	2,000	17 00
John S Phelps	180	100	85
A L Park	43	10,000	85 00
A L Park	44	10,000	85 00
A L Park	45	2,000	17 00
A L Park	47	5,000	42 50
A L Park	48	4,000	34 00
A L Park	49	500	4 25
A L Park	122	1,000	8 50
A L Park	141	2,000	17 00
A L Park	153	1,000	8 50
A L Park	164	1,500	12 75
A L Park	188	500	4 25
A L Park	189	10,000	85 00
A L Park	207	3,400	28 90
A L Park	208	4,000	34 00
A L Park	231	10,000	85 00
A L Park	235	10,000	85 00
A L Park	236	3,000	25 50
A L Park	285	12,000	102 00
Ralph G Rohrer	321	300	2 55
O W Shafer	221	30,000	255 00
O W Shafer	222	20,000	170 00
O W Shafer	223	10,000	85 00
O W Shafer	225	10,000	85 00
O W Shafer	226	5,000	42 50
O W Shafer	227	5,000	42 50
O W Shafer	374	5,000	42 50
O W Shafer	375	950	8 05
McIntyre Clute & Co.	376	1,530	13 50
S H Wheeler	50	4,000	34 00
J N Wilson	53	1,000	8 50
F H Wilson	57	1,000	8 50
M Holmes Wilson	58	1,000	8 50
Grant Wright	86	500	4 25
J J Suess	296	750	6 40
J J Suess	326	700	5 95

And in accordance with law and an order of the Board of Directors made on the 14th day of January, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary will be sold at Public Auction at Room 4, Chittenden Building, Redlands, California, on the 6th day of April, 1895, at the hour of 3 o'clock p. m. of said day, to pay said delinquent assessment thereon, together with cost of advertising and expense of the sale.

A. C. CHITTENDEN,
Secretary.

Office, Room 4 Chittenden Building, Redlands California. March 6th 1895.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Carpet Weaving.
MRS. J. R. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL,
PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER

We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kinds of carpet and rug weaving.

Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished, at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.

Feather work guaranteed at low prices.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.

Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.

All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone

FRED BURCKHARDT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY, the 8th day of March, 1892, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 10 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit Commencing at the South-east corner of the south-east quarter of North east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 68 100; thence North-east following the meanderings of the bed of the Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence, thence following said Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, six and 80-100 acres; also lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29, in the town of Independence, the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hallhah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead, or lode, situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gorde Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "La Dispitcada Lode."

That certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura State of California, commencing at a point twelve and nine-twentieth (12 9-20) rods south of the general corner of the North west quarter and the North-east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South-west quarter and the South-east quarter of Section No. one (1), in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and eleven-twentieth (68 11-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North westerly along a small branch or swale to a point twenty four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North East quarter and the South-east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North east quarter of the North-west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West; running thence North forty-four and eleven twentieth (44 11-20) rods thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres; Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney, at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice, and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and alls bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament John Allen Hannah deceased.

Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th 1892.

SAVE YOUR SHOES
AMES' SHOE PRO-
tector is warranted to make the sole wear as long as the remainder of any ordinary shoe, and to save from 20 to 60 times its cost in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.
PAT. APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK.....PROP'R.
Horseshoeing.....$2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1894, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday.....January 20th
" .....February 17th
" .....March 9th
" .....April 14th
" .....May 19th
" .....June 16th
" .....July 14th
" .....August 11th
" .....September 8th
" .....October 13th
" .....November 10th
" .....December 8th

THOMAS C. ROLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND EHINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, MAY 10.....1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman ..... GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman.....CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge.....GEO. M. GILL.
Sheriff.....ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk .....DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney..... ...P. W. FORBES.
Assessor.. .....P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer ..... W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner.....I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed) .....JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools.....S. W. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist.....FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist.....A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist .....J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist.....JOHN WILSON.
5th Supervisor Dist..FRANK FITZGERALD.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

WEDNESDAY, May 8, 1895.

Estate of August Matschka, deceased—Filed inventory and appraisment.

THURSDAY, May 9, 1895.

H. J. Robinson, Insolvent—Filed order setting apart personal property.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

A lecture will be given at Lone Pine next Thursday evening at 7:30; at the Georges Creek School House next Friday evening at 7:30; and at Independence, the 16th. Subject, "The Tower of London."

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz.....	$ .67⅛
Antimony.....	10
Borax, refined, in car lots.....	5¼
Pig lead.....	3.90

MARRIED.

INMAN—LINSCOTT—Near Bishop, April 28, 1895, by Rev. A. Clark, Mr. Claude C. Inman and Miss Carrie A. Linscott.

Supervisor Stewart was at Independence on Wednesday.

J. A. McKenzie shipped a carload of ore on Tuesday last.

Tom Williams of Round Valley was in town yesterday.

Miss Elsie Eibeshutz is expected to arrive from New York about two weeks hence.

A. Cohn came down from Bishop last Monday and remained in town a day or two.

H. C. Bellows and Henry Dyke came up from Olancha last Monday, returning Wednesday.

Mrs. W. M. Richards of Keeler spent the week at Camp Independence, the guest of Miss Lena Thompson.

John McSweeny has completed the foundations for County Treasurer Bunney's new house on Edwards St.

Wilfred Watterson was in Independence yesterday, his band of sheep passing west of town on its way to Bishop.

Henry Levy arrived home yesterday morning from a visit of a month's duration Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Judge Davidson has had a steady run of legal business lately, the sheep cases making matters especially interesting.

Supervisor Eldred came down from Big Pine on Wednesday and spent several days in town. Mrs. Eldred accompanied him.

Mr. and Mrs. C S. Meroney came up from Keeler last Saturday. Charley is employed by Sheriff Given to make up the delinquent tax-list.

R. J. Whittaker of Big Pine made final proof on his desert claim on Monday. J. C. Miller and Henry McMurry came down with him as witnesses.

M. W. Trask and N. L. Apple returned to Lone Pine at the end of last week. Each of them having been on a prospecting trip to Death Valley.

His Honor, Judge Robinson—Upon the proper petition being presented to the Board of Supervisors this afternoon, E. Robinson was duly appointed Justice of the Peace for the Third Township.

Arlie Mairs arrived home yesterday after a months absence, during which time he visited Los Angeles and other points of interest in Southern California.

The Tax-Collector states that there will be about two hundred names on the delinquent tax-list, though the aggregate amount of delinquent taxes will be small.

Pasted a dime on a sheet of paper and send to Crocker & Ames, 619 Montgomery St., San Francisco, for Ame's Shoe Protector, the wonderful saver of shoes.

Another Spring fight occurred in front of the postoffice on Wednesday, in which some blood, and considerable bad language was spilled. No arrests were made, and a little fellow visiting here from Los Angeles wanted to know if there were no "cops" here.

Fighting The Sheep License.

What promises to be one of the hardest fought law suits ever begun in this County is now under way. The sheepmen who for many years past have paid the sheep license tax, claim that they are not subject to such tax this year for the reason that they are simply passing through Inyo County to Mono County, their destination. The Tax-Collector has directed suit to be brought and many bands of sheep have been attached. The sheepmen immediately give bonds and release the attachment. The officers are also proceeding against them for violating the ordinance and three have been arrested and admitted to bail. District Attorney Forbes is attending to the County's interests and P. H. Mack is attorney for the sheepmen. It is said that about forty civil and forty criminal prosecutions will follow. The District Attorney is making a vigorous fight, just what the people of the county want, and will make every possible effort to secure the rights of the people in this matter.

The Supervisors Meet.

All the members of the Board of Supervisors were in town yesterday and an informal meeting was held last evening for the purpose of discussing ways and means of enforcing Ordinance No. 51, relative to the collection of sheep license. The Board again met this morning. It is intended to engage special counsel to assist District Attorney Forbes in the prosecution of the cases. The main fight will of course be made before the Supreme Court. It is reported that a telegram was sent to R. S. Miner Esq. this morning relative to securing his services. A definite course of action will undoubtedly be decided upon today. The Board is unanimously of the opinion that a determined effort to enforce the law will meet with the approval of the majority of the people. Sheriff Given has several deputies actively employed in carrying out the law.

Meteorological Summary for Month of April 1895, Independence, Cal.

Mean barometer, 29 98
Highest barometer, 30 36 date 6th
Lowest barometer, 29 76 date 27th
Mean temperature, 57.
Highest temperature, 80 date 19th
Lowest temperature, 28 date 5th
Greatest daily range of temperature, 34 date 5th Least 11, date 4th
Total excess in Temp. during month, 1
Total excess in Temp. since January 1st, 44
Prevailing direction of wind, NW
Total movement of wind, 6830 miles
Maximum velocity of wind, direction, and date, 35 miles Northwest on 4th.
Total precipitation, T
Number of days on which .01 inch or more of precipitation fell, 0
Number of cloudless days 17; partly cloudy days 7; cloudy days 6.
Dates of frost, 5th

H. E. WILKINSON,
Observer Weather Bureau.

Held For Trial.

Last Tuesday Frank W. Howe was examined in Judge Davidsans court on a charge of burglary. District Attorney Forbes appeared for the people and Attorneys Yandell and Lamar for Howe. Quite a number of witnesses were examined and the fact that Howe stole a number of articles is proven by his own confession. The defense will endeavor to prove that the stolen goods were taken in small lots, in the day time, and that the crime amounts at most to petit larceny. He was held by Judge Davidson to answer to the crime charged in the complaint before the Superior Court, and bail was fixed in the sum of $500, which has not yet been given. It is said that the fellow has well-to-do relatives residing at or near Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Austin, Miss Frankie Shannon and A. W. D. Carroll, of Lone Pine, spent several days at Mazourka canyon last week. Mr. Carroll had his photographic outfit along and took a large number of views, including several of the Piute monument. The trip was full of interest, and the ladies became the proud possessors of a placer mine, the first "colors" being found bythemselves.

A new game has made its appearance in Hawthorne and is going to be the rage. It s called "Cheese," and is played as follows: Six young ladies stand in a row and one of them bites a piece of limburger cheese, and the young men guess who bit it. The successful guessers kiss the other five girls, while the unsuccessful kiss the girl who bit the cheese.

C. A. Walter of Camp Independence presented this office with several boxes of delicious strawberries on Wednesday. Mr. Walter uses great care in handling his fruit and is prepared to supply the market with an abundance of fine berries.

P. H. Mack Esq. starts for San Francisco to-day to attend the Grand Lodge I. O. O. F. which meets next week. He will go south by the Keeler and Mojave stage, returning via Reno and will be gone about ten days.

Meads, Schober and Spratt arrived at Independence last Sunday with three big teams, all loaded with merchandise for various points in the valley. The two former had eight animals each and the latter drove eighteen. The combined outfit had on about thirty tons of freight.

Last Monday evening Sheriff Given arrested an old Mexican, who has been an inmate of the County Hospital for many years, on a charge of insanity. He is known as "Oil Poleto." He has not yet been examined.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Moffett arrived from Los Angeles last week and have taken up their residence in Independence. They were accompanied by Harold Eaton, son of Fred Eaton, of Los Angeles.

H. E. Wilkinson will occupy the building formerly used as a postoffice and will fit it up as a jewelers store. Mr. Wilkinson has a first class watchmaker's outfit and does all kinds of fine repairing.

A new postoffice has been fitted up adjoining the store of L. Wood, and all the furniture from the old office was moved on Wednesday. It is a central location and a neat office.

Judge Gould of Darwin has become totally blind, and, as he is in indigent circumstances an effort will be made to secure his admission to the State asylum for the blind.

The special two month's term of the Independence school will close next Friday.

Al Staudinger came up from Inyo yesterday, returning to-day.

FARM FIELD AND GARDEN

GARDENING BY HORSEPOWER.

It Pays When Prices Are High For Labor and Low For Produce.

To grow garden stuff in sufficient quantity is a difficult task if wrong methods are practiced. If correct methods are adopted, it is a comparatively easy matter. In this day of progress a garden so small it cannot be worked by horsepower is inexcusable on a farm where land is plenty. It requires about one whole day for a man to work over one of the little square gardens and put everything in good shape. With a horse and cultivator he can work over a half acre plot in less than two hours and do the work better. Besides following the cultivator is easy compared with the back breaking process of hand hoeing.

In these times of high prices for farm labor and low prices for farm produce certainly no one can afford to spend much time hoeing in the garden when the work can be done better and ten times as fast with the help of a horse which would otherwise be idle. Most garden crops can be successfully cultivated by horsepower and by Plant, Jr., horse hoe better than with the hand hoe, writes a correspondent of Practical Farmer, who says: Of course there are some crops that in order to save ground should be planted too close to be tended with a horse, but even then can be cultivated almost entirely without the old fashioned hoeing. If you are able to afford it, there are a number of most excellent wheel hoes now on the market, and nearly all of them will do splendid work, and do it very rapidly. If you are not greatly overburdened with wealth, you can get along without going to this expense. If you will watch the columns of the farm papers, you will probably soon see a drawing of a home-made device that will do grand work, and the cost will be trifling.

But the main point is that nearly all the cultivation in the garden ought to be done by horsepower and as little as possible by hand. Lay off a small plat to be used for close planted crops and tend them with some kind of wheel hoe. But plant the main crops wide enough to be cultivated with the horse hoe. And let the plat of ground devoted to garden vegetables be liberal. Thus home gardening will become a pleasure rather than an irksome task. The health of the family will be the better for the supply of wholesome, nutritious food.

The Buff Plymouth Rock.

The popularity of buff plumage is doubtless responsible for the Buff Plymouth Rock. This popularity is in itself something remarkable. For years and years the Buff Cochin had the honor of being the sole representative of this color. Then the Pekin Bantam appeared, which was but a diamond edition of the Buff Cochin. This was followed by the Buff Leghorn and the Argonaut, and then appeared simultaneously the Buff Wyandotte and Buff Plymouth Rock. In some cases these two varieties were bred from the same yard of fowls, those with rose combs being called Wyandottes and those with single combs Plymouth Rocks.

In the Buff Plymouth Rock, when fully perfected, we have a medium sized fowl of great practical value and of remarkable beauty. The color is a soft, rich, even buff, a color that cannot be surpassed among solid colors for beauty, and a color that is as useful as it is beautiful, for it harmonizes with the desired rich yellow of the skin and legs, produces pinfeathers that are inconspicuous on the dressed poultry, and does not readily show stains and marks of soiling. It is a color therefore that adapts the fowl to all sections of the country and makes it of value to the practical poultry raiser, according to H. S. Babcock, who writes the foregoing to American Agriculturist.

The Best Part of Cornstalks.

It used to be thought that the tops of cornstalks made the best feed. This idea was wholly based on the fact that they were fine and easily chewed. By the test of sweetness the lower part of the stalk is much the richest, only near the butt the stalk is apt to be hard. The cow test of the best part of the stalk is easily made. She will invariably grasp the stalk in the middle, double it up and then chew until she has left outside her mouth only the butt and a little piece of stalk attached to the tassel. This will be rejected, and another stalk will be taken up, to have repeated on it the same process.—American Cultivator.

Corn or Oats For Horses.

From the Utah station comes a report concerning a test to determine the comparative feeding value of oats and corn for horses. It was found that the weight of the animals was more easily maintained on the corn ration. A summary of three experiments shows that during the summer a ration of corn and timothy was not as good as one consisting of wheat, oats and clover. During the winter corn and timothy did as well as oats, clover and timothy in maintaining the weight. During the spring and summer corn, wheat or bran and mixed hay produced more gain than oats, wheat or bran and mixed hay.

Bees as Fertilizers.

According to information sent out from the United States department of pomology, bees, instead of destroying fruit, as they are sometimes accused, are the only agents through which certain orchards ever bear fruit. Pears are given special attention in a recent bulletin, and among others the Bartlett is pointed out as nonfecundating and must be fertilized by pollen carried from other trees by insects. The remedy suggested for nonbearing orchards is grafting other varieties into occasional trees.

Shipping Fruit In Gas.

An experiment is in process with shipping California fruit in carbonic acid gas. An ordinary car is made airtight, with a zinc lining. When filled with fruit, the gas is introduced. A condenser filled with the liquefied gas will be placed in the car to supply any possible leakage. Growers who have made the test assert that if fruit is surrounded with this gas all decay and deterioration are arrested and the flavor of the fruit not impaired. The object is to save the expense of refrigerator cars.

FEEDING VALUE OF ROOTS.

The Addition of Roots to Ordinary Fodders Is Attended With Profitable Results.

The great majority of farmers in the northwest have yet to learn of the real value of roots as a factor in winter feeding. Many farmers have been deterred from using roots because they do not possess convenient and proper barns for storing and feeding them. Others have been misled by assuming that a material made up so largely of water, and consequently so small a proportion of dry matter, was an expensive food to handle, and the results obtained did not justify the expense incurred in growing and handling the crop. Any one conversant with English agriculture knows how important a place roots hold in the estimation of English farmers. Roots form a very large proportion of the food fed to all classes of live stock, and the excellence of their animals is a good indication of their skill in feeding. It is true that our Indian corn crop in this country to a large extent fills the place of roots in England, but a great many feeders in this country have recognized the importance of roots as a useful adjunct in the winter feeding of stock. F. B. Mumford of the Michigan Agricultural college writes to Prairie Farmer that roots may be grown and placed in the root cellar for from 3 to 5 cents per bushel. The above figures are submitted after several years' experience, and he believes any one who will become thoroughly familiar with the best and most economical methods of production can easily duplicate these estimates.

Several experiments at the Michigan station have clearly indicated that an addition of roots to our ordinary fodders has invariably been attended with satisfactory results. In bulletin 84, Michigan Agricultural college, are recorded the results of feeding roots to fattening lambs. In this experiment one lot of lambs received a constant grain ration of oats and bran mixed in the proportion of two pounds of oats to one of bran and were fed at the rate of one pound per day and head. In addition to this grain ration, they were supplied with all the clover, hay and sugar beets they would eat. The lambs were fed for 12 weeks and gained at the rate of three pounds per head a week during the entire period. The average weekly consumption of food was as follows: Roots, 30 pounds; grain, 7 pounds, and hay 7 pounds. The animals were at all times in the best of health, and gained steadily from the first. This experiment indicates that by a liberal use of sugar beets lambs can be fattened without the use of a heavy grain ration.

Other experiments, under different conditions, have seemed to point to the conclusion that the dry matter in roots was of more value for feeding purposes than the dry matter in our common grains. These and other feeding trials with roots make it apparent that every farmer ought to grow some roots at least, and by so doing add a cheap and efficient food to his present limited variety of materials.

Corn Harvesters In the Northwest.

A Minnesota correspondent of Rural New Yorker writes that it is difficult in the northwest to get men who can cut corn at all. Most farmhands here have had no experience, and few can cut and shock a half acre per day. He writes: Farmers here need to grow more hoed crops, and would grow more corn but for the bugbear of cutting and shocking, and would welcome a machine which would cut and bind corn well at $1.25 per acre, if not too costly. The successful corn harvester will not elevate, but will cut, gather, bind and drop it in a standing position. All schemes for elevating it are a waste of power. When a machine is devised which will do this, two rows can be cut and bound as well as one by a two horse team, as the power required is not great. There seems to be no difficulty in cutting the corn with a sliding knife such as is used on the sled cutters. Most of the machines brought out to cut and bind corn seem too complicated and costly and are evidently an attempt to adapt the plan of grain harvesters to the cornfield, instead of being original inventions.

The heavier soils as a rule contain more potash than the lighter ones, and in a general way it is safe to assume that potash is not needed on such soils so long as they produce fair crops.

The newest Style

OF

Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOD

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get the

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, "DRESDEN" WARE.

THOMAS & HILL

—DEALERS IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE,

BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.

D. A. BENDER. General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.		From Mound House. No. 1		To Mound House. No. 2.
		Leave—		Arrives—
Mound House.....		10.50 a. m.		5.20 p. m
Dayton		11.25 a. m.		4.15 p. m
Wabuska		1.40 p. m		2.35 p. m
Hawthorne	Ar.	5.00 p. m.	Lv.	11.00 a. m
		No. 3.		No. 4.
		Leave—		Arrives—
Hawthorne,.....		6.00 a. m.		7.25 p. m
Luning		7.10 a. m.		6.15 p. m
Sodа Springs.....		7.50 a. m.		5.35 p. m
Belleville.....		8.00 a. m.		4.35 p. m
Candelaria		9.40 a. m		3.50 p. m
Benton		1.30 p. m		11.50 a. m
Bishop Creek		3.10 p. m.		9.50 a. m
Alvord		4.05 p. m		8.58 a. m
Independence.....		4.35 p. m.		7.25 a. m
Lone Pine.....		5.20 p. m.		6.40 a. m
Keeler.....	Ar	7.00 p. m.	Lv.	6.00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. & R. R. while connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (38 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salsbury & Co's tri weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Dowieyville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Adla Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (7 miles), Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles)

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine. Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
86 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

RESTORE YOUR EYESIGHT

Cataracts, films or specks can be absorbed and permanently removed, without the knife, by the Graefenberg Method. This can be proven by the testimonial, "We proved it." Hundreds convinced. Our illustrated pamphlet (in sealed envelope) free. Inquire of Graefenberg Medical Institute, San Francisco.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL

MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH
FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave, WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeler, MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER, Propr.

JOHN B. CLARKE,

Successor to John Clarke,

—PROPRIETOR—

John Clarke's Bishop Stables,

BISHOP, CAL.

First-class Turnouts of Every Kind
Fine horses and Carriages.
horses Boarded for any Time
Best of Care and Attention

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal

New House. New Furniture. Low Rates.

Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.

D. I. MAIRS Prop

feb12tf

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

0-m RENO, NEVADA

BUSINESS ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, and the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

INDEPENDENCE

MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROEFER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

Parties supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.

j19-tf

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9 1884.

j164fm

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE, INYO Co. Cal.

Dealer In GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies

PROVISIONS

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

BELL'S
Flouring Mills

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER is the purest and strongest baking powder made. It has received the highest award at the U. S. Gov't official investigation, and at all the Great International Expositions and World's Fairs wherever exhibited in competition with others.

It makes the finest, lightest, sweetest, most wholesome bread, cake and pastry. More economical than any other leavening agent.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL ST., NEW-YORK.

"When on Sinai's top I see" is from the pen of Montgomery. It was originally called the "Three Mountains."

Weinstock, Lubin & Co

400 to 412 K St.,

Sacramento, Cal.

Largest General Retail House on Coast.

Wearing Apparel of all kinds for men, women, and children; Dry Goods, Shoes, Hats, Millinery, Valises, Furniture, Carpets, Crockery, Notions, Stationery, Silverware, Toys, Household Supplies, etc.

Catalogue Free.

A handsome illustrated catalogue about our goods and prices sent free to any address. Tens of thousands of customers find it profitable and satisfactory to buy through this book.

TERMS CASH.

Enclose money for goods with order, and if to be sent by mail allow for postage. Any balance left over will be returned.

If interested in any of the items below, order promptly, giving item number.

A130. Ladies' cotton Waists, large sleeves, belt and ruffled front, navy blue, with small white figures, or red, with black figures. Fast colors and great value at 25c, the material alone being worth nearly that money. Postage, 5c. 25c

A131. At a price below value we offer ladies' good quality muslin Drawers, with yoke bands, tucks and 2-inch embroidery ruffle. Price, 38c; postage, 4c. 38c

A132. All linen crash Toweling, 15 inches wide. Price, 5c yard. 5c

A133. Ladies' low cut Oxford Ties, in either tan leather or black kid; medium heels and toes, with toe caps. Price, $1.50; postage, 15c. $1.50

A134. Fine quality seamless stockinet Dress Shields, full size, and special value at 6c pair. We ought to sell thousands of them at this price. 6c

A135. You can buy men's unlaundried white shirts for 50c, but no such quality as we offer. Ours are of heavy muslin, pure linen and absolutely first-class in every respect. Postage, 5c. 50c

Our beautiful Catalogue, with over 1000 illustrations and prices lower than ever, sent free to any address. Do not make the mistake of buying spring goods without first seeing this book.

Send for samples of our Men's Suits at $10, $15 and $18.50. Hundreds of out-of-town customers save money by buying all their clothing of us.

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN & CO.,
Sacramento, Cal.

OVER THE RIVER.

On a pleasant day last autumn a little tot of a boy was standing on the dock looking out over the water toward the Canadian shore. He was so quiet and sad eyed that a good-natured policeman, who saw him there, came up to speak to him. Before he had a chance for that, however, the boy had spoken to him.

"Is that heaven over there, sir?" he asked with a faint tremor in his voice.

"Well, I should say not, my little man," laughed the policeman. "That's Windsor."

"Well, that's the river isn't it?" asked the boy, with a stubborn kind of persistence which the policeman's laugh had not affected in the least.

"Yes, that's the river. There ain't any mistake about that."

"Then," said the boy, firmly, "that's heaven over there."

The policeman looked at him seriously.

"What makes you say that?" inquired the policeman, with a smile of encouragement.

"Because," and the boy's lip trembled and his eyes grew moist, "mamma went to heaven last week and she told me she would meet her little boy there and yesterday when I asked papa where heaven was he told me it was over the river. Now, sir," and he was very earnest and serious, "they wouldn't tell me stories, would they?"

Then the big policeman sat down and taking the boy on his knee, they talked together a long time.—Detroit Free Press.

Lord Acton, who was recently appointed religious professor of history at Cambridge, in succession to Sir J. R. Seeley, has had a strange education for an Englishman. He is a Catholic, was brought up by the Jesuits, and afterward studied with Dr. Dollinger at Munich, but he never studied or passed an examination at either an English or a foreign university. He is the first Catholic who has been appointed to a history professorship in England since the Reformation. He has the reputation of being a very learned man, but his writings have been chiefly theological, in defense of the old Catholic movement.

THE SPENT BALL.

By H. S. KNEEDLER.

Hers was not the luxuriant southern beauty you read about, but of the sweeter, less obtrusive sort, which is associated with home belongings, a tete-a-tete in the conservatory—a presence such as would make almost any sort of place the dearest spot on earth—brown hair, blue eyes, red lips, and cheeks that kept their color all the time. You see I'm not much of a hand to analyze or describe feminine beauty, but Emily Percival had the kind that lasts, that don't wither after a ball-room season; the kind that comes from good health, good spirits, innocence and affection.

"Ah, you here, Gilman?" Brigham said gayly. "You have met Miss Percival? Then help me to thank her for the aid she has rendered me tonight. I should have been moping about as a pitiable example of the most dejected wall flower if she had not come to my assistance, told me where to get the names of the guests, found me a messenger, and raised me from a most forlorn condition of loneliness into a state bordering on ecstasy."

"I have reason to know what a good Samaritan Miss Percival is," I rejoined, "and I also know that it sometimes requires as high an order of courage to succor the wayfarer in these latter days as it did of old in Judea."

"Don't you think it depends a good deal on the wayfarer?" asked Miss Percival.

"I am becoming inordinately vain," said Brigham sententiously.

"You needn't be a bit," responded the charming woman on his arm. "I meant that there are some depths of distress so heartrending that even the Pharisees would relent and take pity on them."

"Consider me the embodiment of woe then," said Brigham, as the orchestra began to play a waltz quadrille, "and as a further evidence of your gifts as a ministering angel give this dance to me."

"He will do very well," I thought, as I stepped back out of the way of the dancers and watched the couple float by me in the graceful movement of the quadrille. "He will do very well, but it's deucedly strange that a fellow like that should be so manifestly anxious to conceal his identity."

CHAPTER III.

I didn't see much of Brigham for a week or two. A change in the force moved me up to the post of editorial writer, though the staff was so flexible that the editor of one day was apt to be the police reporter of the next. It was a kind of free-for-all born of the transition state of things about us. And as a matter of fact it lent spice to the life we were leading. It was a lottery in which all had an equal chance. It might be a little disappointing for the man at the top to be asked to step down, but then there was always a great incentive to the fellow at the bottom before whom was held out the promise of stepping up.

Brigham and I roomed together still. It was mutually agreeable, I take it, and neither one suggested a change. But though I saw less of him I noticed a marked change in my roommate. He was manifestly shaking off the gloom that seemed to be about him when he had first come to town. He was not putting off an old nature and taking on a new, but rather was coming into his rightful possession of gay good humor and debonair fellowship. I guessed at the reason for this when I heard of him leaving an order with Zimmerman, the florist, for roses for Miss Percival. My suspicion was confirmed when on passing the cotton factor's home one evening on my way to the office I saw him just ringing the bell.

It was all very pleasant and quite romantic, I thought cynically, but then what in the deuce did this young Bohemian, with not even expectations, mean by paying attentions to the daughter of a man whose fortune was away up in G; who owned half a dozen cotton places and held mortgages on a score of others; who shipped his cotton to New Orleans on his own boats and could afford to gratify every taste of a luxurious life. Brigham was not a fortune hunter. I felt sure of that. He was only doing what any other young fellow of parts would have done if placed in the same position—cultivating the acquaintance of a delightful woman. But then—was it right for a man who was afraid of his past, who did not dare tell where his home had been or who were his associates, to do that?

That was a question I had it in mind to ask Brigham half a dozen times. But then it is an awkward thing to do, particularly when you have no occasion to meddle. It was a matter for Brigham to settle with his conscience and Miss Percival's father. And, too, perhaps Miss Percival was very well able to take care of her own affairs, and needed no help from one who would only court the accusation that he was prompted by jealousy or spleen if he did interfere. It was really nothing to me if a man of indefinite and presumably doubtful antecedents paid marked attention to a young lady of exceptional beauty and undoubted social prominence.

"What's that?" I asked. "An old wound?"

Still, I'll confess that the thing preyed on my mind, and as I got to know Brigham better my solicitude intensified, for I came to like him the more. He was frank and generous and chivalrous. His morals were above reproach. No appeal was made to him by the needy or the suffering that was not granted, though often it left his purse empty or took him on many a weary tramp into the quarters where the destitute huddled.

I remember that one night while I sat by the window I heard him come up the street, and just in front of the house some one accosted him. It was a man who was begging for assistance "for a sick wife and young un."

"Where are they that you should leave them at this hour of the night?" I heard Brigham ask.

"They uns is up in the boat nigh the mouth of Wolf river," responded the mendicant. "We uns jest pulled in there through the chute nigh about sundown, an' I cum up town lookin' fer soutin' to do, but I couldn't find nothin', an' I didn't hev the heart to go back to they uns with nothin', fer there bein' airy thing to eat in the boat."

"I have half a notion to go up with you and see," I heard Brigham say, "for if what you say is true help must be needed pretty badly, and if it isn't true it would be worth the trouble going up there to thrash you for the lie."

"Don't take my word fur it, mister, but give me some meal and taters an' meat to tote, and cum long an' see that I don't tell you no lie."

"I'll do it," responded Brigham.

"Well, then, I'll go along," I said, leaning out of the window. "You would be a fool to go up in that thieves' den alone at this hour. How do you know this man is not trying to decoy you?"

"I read it in his honest countenance," responded my roommate with a laugh as he struck a match and held it up in the dirty vacant face of the typical Johnny—boat tenant of the Mississippi—one of those uneasy vagrants who are always restlessly moving up and down the great stream, tramps upon the highway of a nation's internal commerce.

And nothing could persuade Brigham not to make the trip. He was set upon verifying the fellow's story, he said, for if a woman and child were sick and without food in a Christian land it was high time some one went to their rescue.

"I may be that way myself some day," he said, "and I should like to know I had not been wholly callous to such appeals in my days of good fortune."

So having offered to accompany him, and really fearing for his safety in a region where murder was done almost nightly, and where the assassin could find ready means to hide his crime and escape, I perforce had to do what I had said I would, and with a good deal of grumbling went with him and verified what the river rat had said.

But if I have digressed from the thread of my narrative it has only been to give you an insight into this man's character, so that you may know something of the conflicting emotions I felt when the wholly contradictory facts of his career were presented to me. For here was one who was prompted apparently by the kindliest sentiments, who was brave and generous and tender and trustful. If at times he was despondent and seemed melancholy it would have escaped observation, or at least not occasioned solicitude on my part, were it not for the enigmatical past of which he seemed jealous. As time went on I grew strangely fond of him and he of me. As I look back upon those old days I can see how he clung to me as though he found a certain support in my stronger nature, as though he hoped that I might somehow stand between him and his fate.

One sunny afternoon in the late autumn we were strolling along the bluffs below the town, looking out over the river and talking of the naval fight when the fleets met and decided the fate of the beleaguered city.

Brigham was carrying his hat in his hand, and as the wind tossed back his hair I noticed above his ear and well back from his forehead what looked like a deep scar.

"What's that?" I asked, "an old wound—a relic of a boyhood raid on some innocent neighbor's orchard, or memento of a more perilous expedition?"

He put up his hand and ran his fingers along the white scar, and then said with a puzzled expression:

"I'd give a good deal to know how that came there, but I don't. It makes me dizzy when I touch it, but it gives me no pain."

"Come, come, Brigham, a man don't get a crease like that along the side of his cranium without retaining a vivid recollection of the event."

"But I have no recollection of it. If I had I should tell you. But that is of less importance than what I walked out here to say. I must jump right into the middle of it, too, or my courage will fail. Gilman, I love Emily Percival."

"If you had expected to surprise me, let me assure you you did nothing of the sort. I have eyes."

"You suspected it?"

"Oh, no; I knew it."

"Well?"

"I have no advice to offer. Are congratulations in order or have you declared yourself to the young lady yet?"

"No, I have not. I believe she likes me—I will not say she loves me. But I have not felt at liberty to speak to her upon the subject. As you know, I am scarcely in a position to ask the daughter of a millionaire to be my wife."

"That is a weighty consideration," I replied steadily and with a purpose gradually taking shape in my mind.

"But I infer it would not be the most important one to Miss Percival or to her father. It would be very natural and highly proper, however, for them to know something of your past. Are you prepared to tell them?"

It was a cruel thing to say, but I did not mean it should be cruel, nor did it seem so at the time. But if this man could not tell me of the life he had led in the days and years before I knew him, how much less could he reveal it to the sweet, trustful woman he professed to love. What right had he to love such a woman if he did not dare confide in her? What thing could he invite her to more barren and cheerless than a heart where some skeleton was in keeping?

But what seemed unkind in the repeating did not appear to either anger or hurt Brigham. The joyousness went out of his face as the sunshine is blotted by a passing cloud, and into his eyes there crept a far away look as of one who was seeking to peer into the beyond. It was an eerie expression of unutterable sadness, a look such as I fancy must sometimes come into the eyes of the dying who are reluctant to leave that which they have knowledge of for that they know not of. The lines about his mouth deepened, the pallor of his cheeks became more apparent, and dark circles crept up under his eyes. The man seemed to age ten years as I looked at him. Then he passed his hand over his head in the old, irresolute way, and slowly there came from his lips these words, spoken in pitiable anguish:

"I have no past."

I grew suddenly impatient, and laying my hand rudely upon his shoulder spoke sharply: "My God, man, what do you mean by this imposture? What is there in your life you fear that men may find out? Not for my sake tell it, but for the sake of the woman you profess to love."

"I have told you the truth," he said slowly, and then with gathering force went on: "I have no past. There is a tradition of one who spurned the Saviour and who was bidden to go on forever. Perhaps I am he, but if so, that early sin is mercifully hidden from my knowledge. I live only in the present—in today—this moment. It is with wonder that I see children about me in the streets, for I never was a child. The faces of the people I meet are strange to me, yet I never knew any others. Sometimes at night I look into the windows of homes as I pass and see pleasant groups gathered under the lamplight. But I never knew such a home of my own. You talk about your kindred and your friends to whom you will some time return, but I have neither kindred nor friends. You keep always asking me about my past, my past, but I tell you I have no past. And then I feel that you doubt me, and that you suspect that perhaps I have committed some grave crime for which I fear the knowledge may come to you. You have read the story of the man without a country. I am a man without a past."

"But surely"——

(To be Continued.)

The medical advisors of the Prince of Wales make queer distinctions when their royal patient is under the weather. The Prince recently had a severe cold. His doctors allowed him to attend a meeting of the Aged Poor Commission of the House of Lords in the morning, forbade his going to the Queen's drawing-room in the afternoon, but permitted him to join her dinner party in the evening.

HOW IT IS DONE.

The simple reason why the hurts of prize fighters show no sign and disappear so quickly is because in the treatment of training the flesh is hardened. They can stand a blow like the kick of a horse and not show a bruise. Other men's bruises heal slowly, but if they would use St. Jacobs Oil they would find there's nothing in the world like it to heal and restore. It acts like magic. All athletes should use it. It's the great renovator. The same with cuts and wounds, if used according to directions, it will heal surely and make the parts sound again.

Party men are organized to support political principles, but what do non-partisans get together for?

Piso's Cure for Consumption has no equal as a Cough medicine.—F. M. Abbott, 383 Seneca St., Buffalo, N. Y., May 9, 1894.

Mrs. Murphy—Yes, sonny, I've had a fruit stand on this block for thirty years. Tim Ryan—If you'd have advertised you might have owned the block by this time.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

Wolfe's Worm Powders. The Great Remedy for worms. When your children are ailing, try them. At druggists, or send 25c. to Jno. Wolfe, San Rafael, Cal., and you will get them by mail.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, without less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

He—That's Mrs. Grimshaw, who lectures on bimetalism. I've heard her. How exasperatingly clever she seems to be! She—Yes, but how consolingly ugly!

ATHLETES.

One and all bear witness to Allcock's Porous Plasters as invaluable for their purposes.

James Robinson, the athletic trainer at Princeton College, Princeton, N. J., says:

"I have found it imperative to have pure and simple remedies on hand in case of cuts, bruises, strains, sprains, colds, rheumatism, etc. Shortly after entering upon my profession I discovered such a remedy in Allcock's Porous Plasters. I tried other plasters, but found them too harsh and irritating. Allcock's Porous Plasters give almost instantaneous relief, and their strengthening power is remarkable. In cases of weak back put two plasters on the small of the back, and in a short time you will be capable of quite severe exercise. In 'sprint' and 'distance' races and jumping the muscles or tendons in the legs and feet sometimes weaken. This can invariably be relieved by cutting the plaster in narrow strips, so as to give free motion, and applying on muscles affected."

Brandreth's Pills rectify the secretions.

That Iowa bank robbery was almost exciting enough to be bound up in yellow covers.

POOR INDEED!

The prospect of relief from drastic cathartics for persons troubled with constipation is poor indeed. True they act upon the bowels, but this they do with violence, and their operation tends to weaken the intestines, and is prejudicial to the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is an effectual laxative, but it neither gripes nor enfeebles. Furthermore, it promotes digestion and a regular action of the liver and the kidneys. It is an efficient barrier against and remedy for malarial complaints and rheumatism, and is of great benefit to the weak, nervous and aged. As a medicinal stimulant it cannot be surpassed. Physicians cordially recommend it, and its professional indorsement is fully borne out by popular experience. Appetite and sleep are both improved by this agreeable invigorant and alterative.

The word Turk is said to signify wanderer, but the Ottoman repudiates this with disdain.

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss.
LUCAS COUNTY.

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of Hall's Catarrh Cure.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

SEAL. A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Women have a nice way of being mean that men cannot hope to equal.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Like an open book, our faces tell the tale of health or disease. Hollow cheeks and sunken eyes, listless steps and languorous looks tell of wasting debilitating disease some place in the body. It may be one place or another, the cause is generally traceable to a common source—impure blood, and impure blood starts in the digestive organs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood, stimulates digestive action, searches out disease-germs wherever they exist and puts the whole body into a vigorous, strong and healthy condition. It builds up solid, useful flesh, rubs out wrinkles, brightens the eyes and makes life really worth living.

CURE THAT COUGH WITH SHILOH'S CURE. TAKE THE BEST. 25cts., 50cts. and $1.00 Bottle. One cent a dose.

It is sold on a guarantee by all druggists. It cures Incipient Consumption and is the best Cough and Croup Cure.

Ely's Cream Balm has completely cured me of catarrh when everything else failed. Many acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Alfred W. Stevens, Caldwell, Ohio.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from Colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING For sale by all Druggists. 25 Cents a bottle.

INCUBATORS Send for Catalogue. W. C. Beach, Ripon, Cal.

Grain and Straw Carriers L. Ph. Bolander, 115-117 Main St., S. F. 14 yrs. of experience has resulted in producing the BEST and the CHEAPEST. Correspondence solicited.

PLEASANT Profitable Employment AT HOME. No experience or capital required. a month and expenses to the right parties. Address for particulars $50 M. A. THOMPSON, Stockton, Cal. (Mention this paper.)

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. Woods & Co's. "Castlewood" Kentucky Bourbon Cartan, McCarthy & Co. Sole Agents, and Distributors San Francisco

PALESTINE CORN Is hard to beat. Can be planted till June. Yields about 2,000 lbs. corn and 1½ tons excellent fodder per acre on dry land. Can be harvested with combined harvester. Send $1 per acre for seed desired. Address: Sacramento River Nursery Co., Walnut Grove, Calif.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

S. F. N. U. No. 668. New Series No. 15.

Weak Nerves

Indicate as surely as any physical symptom shows anything, that the organs and tissues of the body are not satisfied with their nourishment.

They draw their sustenance from the blood, and if the blood is thin, impure or insufficient, they are in a state of revolt. Their complaints are made to the brain, the king of the body, through the nervous system, and the result of the general dissatisfaction is what we call Nervousness.

This is a concise, reasonable explanation of the whole matter.

The cure for Nervousness, then, is simple. Purify and enrich your blood by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the nerves, tissues and organs will have the healthful nourishment they crave. Nervousness and Weakness will then give way to strength and health.

That this is not theory but fact is proven by the voluntary statements of thousands cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read the next column.

"With pleasure I will state that Hood's Sarsaparilla has helped me wonderfully. For several months I could not lie down to sleep on account of heart trouble and also Prostration of the Nerves.

For three years I have been doctoring, but could not get cured. I received relief for a while, but not permanent. Soon after beginning to take Hood's Sarsaparilla there was a change for the better. In a short time I was feeling splendidly. I now rest well and am able to do work of whatever kind. If I had not tried Hood's Sarsaparilla I do not know what would have become of me. I keep it in my house all the time, and other members of the family take it, and all say there is

Nothing Like Hood's

Sarsaparilla. I have highly recommended it, and one of my neighbors has commenced taking it. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla at every opportunity."—Mrs. S. Braddock, 404 Erie Avenue, Williamsport, Pennsylvania. Be sure to get

Hood's Sarsaparilla Is the Only True Blood Purifier

PURE ARM AND HAMMER

BEWARE of imitation trade marks and labels. is the whole story about in packages. Costs no more than other package soda—never spoils flour—universally acknowledged purest in the world.

ARM AND HAMMER SODA

Made only by CHURCH & CO., New York. Sold by grocers everywhere.

Write for Arm and Hammer Book of valuable Recipes—FREE.

CABLED POULTRY, GARDEN AND RABBIT FENCE the best in the market; also CABLED FIELD AND HOG FENCING, STEEL WEB PICKET LAWN FENCE, STEEL WIRE FENCE BOARD; a full line of steel gates, steel posts and rail, steel web picket tree, flower and tomato guards. Catalogue Free.

De Kalb Fence Co., 100 High St., De Kalb, Ill.

JNO. WOODLOCK, PACIFIC COAST AGENT, 26 Beale St., San Francisco, Cal.

Webster's International Dictionary

Invaluable in Office, School, or Home. New from cover to cover.

It is the Standard of the U. S. Supreme Court, of the U. S. Government Printing Office, and of nearly all of the Schoolbooks. It is warmly commended by every State Superintendent of Schools.

A College President writes: "For ease with which the eye finds the word sought, for accuracy of definition, for effective methods in indicating pronunciation, for terse yet comprehensive statements of facts, and for practical use as a working dictionary, 'Webster's International' excels any other single volume."

G. & C. Merriam Co., Publishers, Springfield, Mass., U. S. A.

Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages, illustrations, etc.

Do not buy cheap photographic reprints of the Webster of 1847.

"HE THAT WORKS EASILY, WORKS SUCCESSFULLY." CLEAN HOUSE WITH SAPOLIO

MALARIA! DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY. Three doses only. Try it.

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY, which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail, Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

MOWERS! RAKES! REPEAPERS! NOTHING BEATS THE BEST!

Write us for a Catalogue quick!

D. M. OSBORNE & CO., 27 MAIN STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc. AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. Branch House, 231 S. Main St., Los Angeles.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE. FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

SAVE SHOE LEATHER

HEELS NEVER RUN OVER. Half Sole Your Own Shoes for 35c.

Ask for Dyke's Diamond of Oval Soles and Revolving Heels. Imitations are worthless. For sale by leading shoe dealers. Eureka Sole Co., Donohoe Bldg., S. F.

If you want work or can organize a lodge, write to the order of Fraternal Argonaut, Rooms 87 and 88 Donohoe Building, San Francisco, Cal.

In our adv. two weeks ago we told of our very superior all-steel hand and power feed cutter to be offered at $10 worth $40

Last week we told of the process of galvanizing and its indispensable preservative qualities. Next week we will give you the experience of two representative business firms of Illinois, one of whom has sold 400 and the other 500 Aermotors. The week following we will quote a price on the best pumps made (hand, wind mill and irrigating) lower than was ever before dreamed of, and the week following that we shall talk to you of steel galvanized tanks, with covers, at the unheard of price of 2½ cents per gallon. This is cheaper than wood. They do not shrink, leak, rot, rust or give taste to water.

The Aermotor Company treats the public generously. While state legislatures are passing laws to secure repairs for farm machinery at reasonable prices, IT IS A FACT THAT THE AERMOTOR COMPANY HAS FOR THE YEAR 1895 BEEN COMPELLED TO RAISE ITS PRICES ON REPAIRS BECAUSE SOME OF ITS CUSTOMERS HAVE BEEN ORDERING INDIVIDUAL PARTS TO MAKE UP COMPLETE MACHINES, SINCE IN THAT WAY THEY COULD GET A MACHINE CHEAPER THAN BY ORDERING IT ASSEMBLED. People are not compelled to buy machinery; they are compelled to buy repairs. The Aermotor Company was in this respect generous to a fault. It sold so low that customers could buy the repairs and assemble a machine at less than the assembled machine would cost. But since it was not certain that they would get the machine assembled in good shape, for the protection of its own reputation, the Aermotor Company has raised the price of certain repairs just enough to prevent this in future. Not only has the Aermotor Company always given the best goods at the lowest price and refused to sell at any price but inferior goods, it has now ESTABLISHED TWENTY BRANCH HOUSES IN VARIOUS PARTS OF THE COUNTRY IN ORDER TO HAVE NOT ONLY ITS GOODS EASILY ACCESSIBLE, BUT TO HAVE ITS REPAIRS WITHIN EASY REACH. It expects soon to greatly increase this number of houses. This is a matter of the greatest importance to those who are purchasing machinery. Accidents will happen, and a wise man will look to it when he is buying an article that repairs can quickly be had at reasonable cost. Our very low prices and high standards in everything connected with water supply and power production by wind, together with the accessibility of a full line of our goods and repairs, will be appreciated. Aermotor Co., Chicago.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE IS THE BEST. FIT FOR A KING.

$5. CORDOVAN, FRENCH & ENAMELLED CALF. $4. $3.50 FINE CALF & KANGAROO. $3.50 POLICE, 3 SOLES. $2.50 $2. WORKINGMEN'S, EXTRA FINE. $2. $1.75 BOYS' SCHOOL SHOES. LADIES. $3. $2.50 $2. $1.75 BEST DONGOLA. SEND FOR CATALOGUE. W. L. DOUGLAS, BROCKTON, MASS.

Over One Million People wear the W. L. Douglas $3 & $4 Shoes

All our shoes are equally satisfactory. They give the best value for the money. They equal custom shoes in style and fit. Their wearing qualities are unsurpassed. The prices are uniform,---stamped on sole. From $1 to $3 saved over other makes. If your dealer cannot supply you we can.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, MAY 17, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVI. NO. 48. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., MAY 17, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1281.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4 00
Six Months	2 00
Three Months	125
One Month	50
Single Copies	10

MAKING CURRIES.

A System of Spicing Applied by Oriental Cooks.

ITS ORIGIN IN SOUTHERN INDIA.

Delicious Messes Compounded Out of Simple Ingredients by the Deft Cooks of the East.

They were sitting in one of those delightful French restaurants which abound near Broadway and had just finished a meal so satisfactory that the party was in a condition of perfect peace with all mankind. The artist knocked the ashes from the end of his cigar and said:

"Your highness, we have had many growls among ourselves in regard to curries and curry powders, curry paste and curry making, and, to be candid, we have not a particle of knowledge on the subject."

The Rajah, who is not a Rajah at all, but only a genial man of the world, who has traveled and lived in every clime, smiled and replied: "Of curry paste the name is legion and of curry powders there is no end. Both of them are snares and delusions and their priests belong to false gods. "Curry is simpler than baked beans, but far more palatable. To understand it completely put yourself in position to follow Charles Reade's valuable suggestion of the Oriental cook who makes it. No matter whether he be a Hindoo, a Persian, a Parsee, a Cinghalese, a Malay, a Siamese or a Chinaman he is a poor man himself and his employer is not over rich. Meats in all these countries are comparatively dear, vegetables are inexpensive, while fruits and spices are very cheap. Human nature is the same in those lands as it is in our own; they believe in the old principle of tonjours perdix and desire variety in their daily fare as much as possible.

"The cook conforms to their wishes under the conditions described. Maybe all the food in the house consists of eggs and rice. These he prepares with fruit and one set of spices for one meal, and with different fruits and a different set of spices for a second. He and his ancestors have been doing this for three or four thousand years, and in the course of that period have learned hundreds of combinations which are as agreeable to the stomach as they are to the taste. Armed with this knowledge they prepare even eggs and rice three times a day for 365 days of the year and produce a different dish every time.

"Curry simply means a school of cooking in which the main flavor comes from the use of Oriental fruits and Oriental spices. The very word curry almost conveys these facts upon its face. It is derived from the Tamil word karri, which means a grinding or grating stone. These are coarse grained stones which correspond exactly to our graters. On their surface the native cook rubs the cardemons, the poppy seed, the nutmeg, the clove, the turneric root, the coriander seed, ginger and other aromatic substances until they are converted into powder or into fibers or slivers. So much for the name which it seems to me explains the general character of curry better than any description.

"The first great principle in curry making is to use such spices in such proportions as will produce an agreeable flavor. This depends upon the food ingredients and upon the season of the year. Many spices are magnificent when fresh, but lose their virtue as they grow old. No one, for example, can ever realize the delicacy and exquisite pleasure of nutmeg and mace until he has eaten them from the parent stem. The difference between fresh spices and the same when they have grown stale is very well exemplified by the difference between green ginger root and the powder abominations sold in tin cans.

"A native cook buys his spices fresh every morning, or every week in the market, just as an American housekeeper buys the vegetables which are served at dinner the same day. It is on this account that all curries made from dry and ancient curry powders give a very poor idea of the dish as it ought to be. It may be safely said that no perfect curry is made in the United States. Even in London, with all its facilities, for communication with the Orient, there are not more than five restaurants where curry can be provided the same as in your own home in Far East. The curry system is applied by the Asiatics to nearly every class of food.

"It makes a large and very appetizing sub class of soups, of which we have adopted only one and incorrectly styled Mulligatawny. It is applied to birds, domestic and wild, baked fishes, and even to small roasted animals such as the kid, hare, suckling pig and squirrel. These, for lack of a better name, are known as dry roasts, curried or curried dry roasts. It is applied to meats re-warmed. Of this class the ordinary 'devil' is a good illustration, and the 'East Indian devil' is nothing more or less than a curried rechauffee.

"What we call curry in our restaurants and hotels is the cheapest and commonest class employed in the East, and is nothing more than a curried stew, ragout, fricassee or pot roast. Curried vegetables we never have, but they are very popular in tropical Asia, and might be added with very great benefit to our daily bill of fare. Fruits can also be curried, one variety, chutney having long had a world-wide reputation as a delicious, wholesome and even hygienic food.

"It will be noticed that in every case and class the food article is curried, that is to say it loses in whole or in part its original flavor and takes up that of the spices or rather spice combination with which it is concocted. Still greater variety is produced by the Eastern chef in currying either one or both of a pair of ingredients of a dish. Take for instance roast chicken and boiled rice.

"An American cook, who, with his British cousin, is the very worst in the world, will serve the luckless bird wet and steaming on a platter, and the rice bunglingly boiled in a vegetable dish. The Frenchman neatly dissects the chicken, arranges it in the middle of the rice on a platter and pours over it some agreeable sauce. The Italian serves it the same way, but prepares the rice with tomatoes and other pleasing ingredients and lo, you have the rizotto of chicken.

"The Orientalist goes much further. He may curry the chicken and serve it on plain rice, like the Frenchman; he may curry the rice and serve the chicken plain with it, like the Italian; or, best of all, he may, and generally does, curry the chicken with one set of flavors, and the rice with a different but complimentary one. Upon this basis the rice may be white, pink, red, orange, yellow, gray, brown, light green, emerald, or even dark grass green. It may be uniform in color, striped like American flag, or variegated as a Scotch tartan.

"In curry making the Eastern chef uses a judgment and common sense that comes close to scientific knowledge. He instinctively knows that all food, either animal or vegetable, should contain a certain amount of oil. Where this is not supplied by the food itself he adds it in the curry. The best substance for the purpose is ghee or clarified butter and cream. Next to that, but seldom used in that part of the world, is olive oil. The very poor use peanut oil, bean oil and other cheap compounds.

"Of the fruits employed the prime favorite is the cocoanut. This should be young and full of milk. For thickening purposes she employs rice flour and rice starch. Of these there are many varieties known to the Oriental dealer, the chief difference between any two varieties being in the amount of gluten contained.

"A very hard, glutenous rice makes a thickening with a firm body and white color, while on the other hand a fine rice starch, when properly cooked, is as clear and colorless as pure water.

"Of the spices used I would not intrench upon your patience to recite the long list in English and a dozen Asiatic tongues. I have already named the seven most important and might add to the number white, black and Chili pepper, fenugrek, cinnamon, nutmeg, mace, allspice, sesame seed, sorrel, cherrypit, plumpit, peachpit, lemon and orange peel, anise seed, soy beans, bay, laurel, mint leaves, camphor leaves, onion, shallot and leek.

"In all the wet curries the general practice is first to select the spices which you propose to employ. In the pounding or in the grating throw into them one tenth of their weight in salt, which is said to extract their flavors more fully. When this is done you are ready for the most serious work.

"In our own country, where you cannot buy the ingredients from the markets, you must depend on the curry powders put up by the wholesale grocers, all of which are equally good or equally bad, according to how you look at them. Worse than that, they are all much alike. You can, however, by taking thought, modify them or change them to any extent. To make them hoter, add cayenne, chili or cloves; to make them milder and smoother, add pulverized slippery elm, nutmeg, almond flour, grated peachpits or grated lemon peel.

"Now for the serious work: Slice a large onion fine and put in a saucepan with a large piece of butter. Cook until the pieces are a pale yellow. Add half a cup of milk, a tablespoonful of curry powder and a tablespoonful of pulverized cocoanut, or, better still, a cupful of cocoanut milk if it can be procured. Boil down slowly for an hour and be careful not to burn. It will then be a thick and smooth sauce. Take two sweetbreads, slice, wash and drain; then fry them in butter until brown. Transfer them to the sauce pan.

"Instead of sweetbreads you may use slices of cold chicken or any poultry or game, or hard-boiled eggs quartered, or slices of lamb or veal. Allow them to simmer a half hour, adding a cup of milk. Toward the close of cooking add several slices of green ginger, a pinch of cayenne, a dash of lime or lemon juice and one or two ribbons an inch long cut from green or red chilis.

"The long immersion and boiling of the meat causes the fibers to absorb a much larger amount of the liquid than might be expected. A very delightful way of demonstrating this is to take the pieces of meat from the pan, bread them and fry over a quick fire. This makes a curried fry and is extremely toothsome. If you desire to make your own curry powder, you can do so by purchasing the raw materials from a trustworthy druggist and grocer. The formula is as follows:

"Turmeric, eight parts; coriander seed, sixteen parts; cummin seed, four parts; fenugrek, four parts; poppy seed, two parts; ginger, two parts; dried chilis, two parts; black pepper, two parts; mustard, one part; salt, four parts; pulverize, mix, bottle in small bottles, cork and wax the corks to prevent evaporation of the essential oils.

"White curries, or Cinghalese curries, are so called on account of their color. When made properly their ingredients are cream, grated cocoanut, cocoanut milk, white pepper, white mace, ginger root juice, coriander and cardmom oil, almond flour, salt, anise seed, poppy seed and cummin seed. When well made it is a thick white, velvety fluid.

"So far as can be learned the birthplace of curry was southern India; but long before the Christian era the system had spread through nearly all of the southern Asia. Each place has its own methods and formulas. Experts discriminate between the various methods and have divided them into the following classes: Bagdad, Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Tamil, Celyon, Batavian, Siamese and Canton. The mildest of all is the Bagdad and the hottest is probably the Batavian."

The Rajah stopped at this point, because the last of his auditors had fallen off asleep.—Mail and Express.

CARLYLE AND QUEEN VICTORIA.

In the Athenæum has appeared a very interesting letter written by Carlyle to his sister Jean, to give an account of his interview with the Queen at Dean Stanley's: "The Stanlays and we (he wrote) were all in a flow of talk, and some flunkeys had done setting coffee pots and tea cups of a sublime pattern, when her Majesty punctual to the minute, glided in, escorted by her dame-in-waiting (a duchess dowger of Athol) and by the Princess Louise, decidedly a very pretty young lady, and clever, too, as I found out in talking to her afterward. The Queen came softly forward, a kindly little smile on her face, gently shook hands with all the three women, gently acknowledged with a nod the silent bows of us male monsters, and directly in her presence every one was at ease again. She is a comely little lady, with a pair of kind, clear and intelligent gray eyes; still looks almost young (in spite of one broad wrinkle which shows on each cheek occasionally); is still plump; has a fine, low voice, soft; indeed, her whole manner is melodiously perfect. It is impossible to imagine a politer little woman; nothing the least imperious; all gentle, all sincere; looking unembarrassing—rather attractive even—makes you feel, too (if you have any sense in you), that she is Queen. . . . Coffee fairly done, Lady Agusta called me gently to come and speak to her Majesty. I obeyed, first asking, as an old, infirmish man, her Majesty's permission to sit, which was graciously conceded. Nothing of the least significance was said, nor needed; however, my bit of dialogue went very well. What part of Scotland I came from?" Dumfries (where Majesty might as well go sometimes). Carlisle, Caer Lewel, a place of about the antiquity of King Solomon (according to Milton),' whereat Majesty smiled. Border Ballads and old James Pool slightly alluded to, not by name. Glasgow, and grandfather's ride thither, ending in more psalms, and streets vacant at 9½ p. m.—hard sound Presbyterian root of what has now shot up to such a monstrously ugly cabbage tree and hemlock tree! all which Majesty seemed to take rather well. . . . Majesty herself (and I think apropos of some question about my shaky hand) said something about her own difficulty in writing to dictation, which brought forward Lady Lyell and husband, mutually used to the operation; after which, talk becoming quite trivial, Majesty gracefully retired with Lady Augustus, and, in ten minutes more returned, to receive our farwell bows, which, too, she did very prettily, and sailed out as if moving on skates, and bending her head to us with a smile."—Westminster Budget.

WONDERS OF NATURE.

Human hair varies in thickness from two hundred and fiftieth to the six hundredth part of an inch.

The fibre of the coarsest wool is about the five hundredth part of an inch in diameter.

The thread of silk spun by the common silkworm is only the fifteenth hundredth part of an inch in thickness.

Some of the common garden spiders spin webs so fine that 30,000 of them laid side and side would not cover the space of an inch.

The very finest of sheep's wool is three times the diameter of the coarsest mentioned above, or only fifteen hundredth part of an inch thick.

Lenenhock and Humboldt both say that a single pound of the finest spider webs would reach around the world.

The pores of the skin are so fine that it is estimated that there are thousands of them to every inch of square surface.

Miss Henrietta Rohdes says that there is silk enough in a single cocoon to extend a distance of 535 miles.

The diatoms, single celled plants of the seaweed family, are so small that 3,000 of them laid end to end scarcely suffice to cover an inch of space on the rule.

The microscopists say that in the milt of a codfish, or in water in which decaying vegetables have been infused, animalculæ to the number of 10,000 can be found in every drop as large as a wheat grain.

The smallest known species of hog is the pigmy swine of Australia. They are exactly like their larger brethren in every particular except size, being not larger than a good-sized house rat.

The sting of a bee, when compared with the point of a fine needle, under a powerful microscope, is hardly discernible. The point of the needle appears to be about an inch in diameter.

Woods, the naturalist, says that when young spiders begin to spin 400 of their threads are not equal in size to one of the full grown insect.—St. Louis Republican.

Those swimming wild hogs of America are doubtless of the razor-back variety seen in the pine forests of the eastern shore of Maryland. They are fleet beasts, the razor-back hogs of Maryland, and good swimmers, as are all lean swine. Fat swine float admirably, but when they swim their sharp fore hoofs dig cruelly into the hanging flesh of the breast and neck, and the swimmers are sometimes exhausted from loss of blood.

MAKING PERFUMERY.

How Nearly all Ordinary Perfumes are Made.

LARD USED TO EXTRACT THE OIL.

Why Don't Some Enterprising Californian Open up a Factory?—Fashions in Perfume Vary.

It seems a strange place for a perfume manufactory. On one side the Chicago river stagnates, redolent of the combined odors of a thousand sewers, and on the other switch engines clang back and forth, busily violating the city's smoke ordinance.

And yet on a bright spring morning, when the dingy windows of the factory are agape, it is no unusual sight to see a group of men and boys standing on the sidewalk with their hands in their pockets and snifling the odors which the breeze brings down to them. They can have apple-blossoms, attar of roses, eau de cologne—anything, just as if they were attending a charity ball. And the red brick building goes on in its own sweet way, making a little oasis of fragrance in a Sahara of vile odors.

Inside of the factory the scent is still more intense. It is a bouquet of hundreds of different perfumes. In the main room there stands a number of brass distilling tanks about the size of small barrels, and stretched out at one side of them are coils and loops of iron pipes. Below them stand closed pails into the funnels of which drips the perfumery. Around the sides of the wall of this and adjoining rooms stand almost endless rows of bottles of all sizes and shapes, each filled with some oil or essence out of which the scents are made. Most of these are imported from foreign countries by the Chicago factory, where they are mixed, distilled and bottled for the market. Practically no perfumery is made in its original form in Chicago.

One of the largest rooms in the corner of the building is devoted to the packing and bottling of the product of the distillery. Here rows of girls sit at long tables with big canisters of the perfumery in front of them. Out of these the small, delicate shaped bottles are filled. Then the glass stoppers are put in and colored cotton is wrapped around them. Over the tops little hoods of lambskin are drawn and tied with colored ribbons. Then the labels are pasted on and the bottles are aranged in neat boxes ready for shipment. It is all rather slow work, and the girls who do it have to be skilled as well as artistic. Much of the perfume manufactured is used in making toilet soaps in the adjoining factory, but a large quantity is sold for general use.

Attar of roses is an oil made from rose leaves and it comes largely from India and Constantinople. Of late years the Balkan provinces in Bulgaria have also been a great source of the supply. Nearly all the blossoms used are taken from a bushy variety of the damask rose, and the rest come from the white musk rose. Beginning in the last of May troops of boys and girls with baskets on their arms climb the long mountain slopes before sunrise in the morning to gather the roses. It is important that they be picked while the dew is yet on them, so that they will remain fresh until they reach the distillery. The still houses are mostly placed in the center of the great rose gardens, and as fast as the loads of blossoms are brought in they are placed in big, cool cellars. The stills are of tinned copper, with a miniature furnace underneath. About twenty-five pounds of fragrant blossoms are put into each of them, then water is added and the fires started. When about one-fifth of the contents has been drawn over through a water-cooled worm the still is emptied and rechaged and the process is repeated until all morning's harvest of roses has been used up.

The first product is simply rosewater like that the old-time housewife used to make in much the same way. This rosewater is now returned to the still and about one-third its bulk of "second rosewater" is drawn over. Through out this liquid there are scattered little globules of a precious oily attar very sweet to smell. The distillate is now put into bottles, and the oil gradually comes to the top and is dipped out with a spoon. The attar costs about $6 an ounce, but this will not seem unreasonable when it is known that 60,000 roses have been used for every ounce.

Nearly all the ordinary perfumes are made by a process known as enfleurage. This consists in placing freshly-gathered flowers in a glass case, the lid of which has been daubed with lard to the depth of half an inch. In the course of a day the lard absorbs all the essential oils in the flowers and they are replaced by fresh ones. Sometimes it takes as many as eighty charges to fully impregnate the lard, and sometimes, where the scent is very strong, it requires only half a dozen charges. When fully charged the lard is scraped off, melted and combined with alcohol, wihch brings the volatile oil to the surface. It is then skimmed off and filtered ready to be bottled and shipped. The waste leaves from the process are used as fertilizers for the flower gardens from which they originally came.

The oil of lavender is procured in a similar way. The growers of Surrey, England, carry their harvest to one of the many distilleries which dot the country. The oil is contained in glands situated chiefly in parts of the flower, but also extending down into the stalk. The first run takes two hours and the result is a fine, clear and almost colorless oil. The second run requires four hours, and the oil is of an amber color and poorer in quality.

A few perfumes, like oil of bergamot, are obtained by pressure. The rasped layers of the unripe fruit are placed in hydraulic presses and squeezed until the oil runs out.

Combined perfumes are known as bouquet odors, and upon his skill in making such mixtures hangs the perfumer's success.

Some time ago a well known scientist named Dr. Septimus Piesse tried to establish a rule for mixing odors by showing that a certain scale or gamut existed among odors as among sounds, taking sharp smells to correspond with high notes and heavy smells with low. He classified fifty odors on a music scale just like notes, asserting that in order to make a perfect bouquet the odors must correspond with the notes of a musical chord. For instance, on his odophone, as he called his system, santal, geranium, acacia, orange flower, camphor, corresponding with C bass second line below, C bass second space, E treble first line, G treble second line, C treble third space, constitute the bouquet of chord C.

Fashions in perfumes vary greatly. Fifty years ago lavender was much thought of; later, musk came into favor, and since that time fashion has run the whole gamut of rose perfumes—violet, apple blossoms, lily of the valley and half a hundred more. For a time sachet powders were very popular. They were made by grinding together vanilla, musk and tonquin beans in various proportions. Violet sachets are also much used.

GYMNASTICS FOR THE HORSE.

"I have invented ways and means to introduce the horse to a series of gymnastics which will shorten the time many seconds on trotting records, and there is no reason why a well-bred horse subjected to my gymnastic exercises cannot make a mile in two minutes," said Prof. Bartholomew, the horse educator, to a writer for the Kansas City Journal.

"Wonderful advancement has been made in breeding and training horses during the past forty years, but with scientific gymnastics added to a horse's training it is sure to cause yet greater surprises in record breaking. The human body has been wonderfully developed by gymnastic exercises, as every one knows, and had the idea of gymnastics been introduced in the training of horses years ago," Prof. Bartholomew continued, "greater advancement would have been made along the lines of speed and endurance.

"A horse can trot a quarter of a mile now in thirty seconds, and it stands to reason that if a horse can make a record of a quarter of a mile in thirty seconds, and it has been done, he can be put in condition to go a mile at the same rate of speed. Crack drivers have failed to put their horses in the proper condition so far, and it is doubtful if the present system of training trotting horses will ever bring about a two-minute record or less. Some will ask: How can a horse work in gymnastics? But if the principle had been grasped by horsemen years ago it would have undoubtedly been put in use. I have the principle, without mistake, and winter is the time to do the work. In winter, horses as a rule, are losing speed instead of gaining.

"The exercise I subject my horse to will result in activity and long reach and will cause running horses to make better records, as well as produce more speed in trotters. I refuse to tell how these results can be brought about, simply for the reason that some man would undertake to practice my theory without judgment and knowledge of application, and he would fail to produce the desired result. The public would condemn the principle, which I have demonstrated to my own satisfaction. I have never undertaken to prove my theory to the trotting fraternity, but the theory can be demonstrated in the course of a series of gymnastic strainings, say in four or five months. With horse gymnastics the fleetest horse can improve as much as the slower ones that undergo the same drill. Every muscle and fiber of the horse is brought into play until, in prize-ring parlance, he is in the pink of condition.

"The exercise on a race track won't do it. The animal must have gymnastics and be brought to the 'pink of condition' before he can break a record. He must be taught to walk on his hind legs, to strengthen the muscles of the back. He must be taught to lie down, roll over, reach out and gather quickly. In short, he must be put through scientific course of gymnastics until every muscle shall be brought into play, toughened and strengthened. To do this he must be a trick horse, after being trained in gymnastics. Great results will follow in the way of speed and endurance.

Prof. Bartholomew is a veteran horse trainer, and has enjoyed a national reputation. He formerly owned one of the greatest walking horses in the world. The animal could cover a mile in a square heel-and toe walk in ten minutes, and go the gait day in and day out.—Kansas City Journal.

BUSINESS PREVENTED TROUBLE.

Two passengers on a western train became involved in a controversy which waxed so hot that one of them called the other a liar.

"What's that—a liar?" and he was on his feet in an instant.

"Yes, a liar," was the emphatic response, "or my name ain't John Smith, of Smithville."

"What, the hardware merchant?"

"The same."

"Mr. Smith, I am delighted to meet you. I represent Mr. Sharpedge & Co., of New York, and can show you a line of samples that will make your hair curl."—Texas Siftings.

William I. Thomas, Postmaster at Jacksonville, O., has been indicted for robbing the mails.

THE PLAYERS.

Life of a Circus Performer Not Easy.

A CIRCUS FROM WITHIN THE RING.

Gymnasts Require Less Time and More Nerve than Do Either Riders or Acrobats.

It was probably a newspaper story pure and simple, but doubtless some thought it true—that tale of the man who bought a circus for his health. As the story ran, the man needed to travel but had not the wherewithal to do it in style, so he sold his business and put the proceeds into a circus. He found that love of horses and a desire for novelty and change of air did not make a showman. Moreover, when one wants to buy even a ten-cent circus the cost is away up into the thousands of dollars, but when that same circus must be sold nobody wants it at any price.

To get ready for a circus season is no easy work. Out in Frankford, Pennsylvania, and up in Bridgeport, Connecticut, are the great practice-barns of two of the largest shows ever put on the road. Very soon now these enormous buildings will be the scenes of daily performances which differ from the regular thing chiefly in the absence of band-music and peanuts.

One must be very supple, and therefore usually quite young, to be able to acquire the necessary dexterity for any of the gymnastic and athletic feats which make the circus so fascinating even to the timid woman who shudders while she looks. It is for this reason that the ranks of circus performers are so largely recruited from the children of professionals. The average parent cannot quite bring himself as yet to feel, in a child who turns up damaged from a fall in the first attempts at trapeze-work, the same pride that he seems to feel in the son who dislocates his collar-bone in a foot-ball match.

The truth of the matter is that the foot-ball match is far more dangerous to life and limb than the most athletic circus performance. There was a time, to be sure, when the gymnast had to rely solely upon a sinewy arm, quick eye and a marvelous nerve to save himself from a terrible fall. In these days, however, there are strong nets always ready, and when the performer has learned how to alight he should have courage for anything.

When little Lena Jordan is tossed from hand to hand over the heads of the audience, there is a perceptible thrill all over the house and a deep-drawn sigh of relief when the number is finished. I never heard of a recall. And yet, I venture to say that there is not a father in any audience where that feat has been performed who has not tossed up into the air his own son or daughter, running proportionately greater risk through lack of skill, strength, practice, the machinery which invariably assists in sensational gymnastics, and the safeguards which surround the modern public performer even when rehearsing. It was only the other day that I read of a man who found it difficult to obtain sufficient healthful exercise, so he took it lying on his back upon the floor, throwing his little child up in the air and catching it in his hands. So far Mr. Gerry has not disturbed this gentle pastime.

As for healthfulness, both physical and moral, circus life seems exceptionally good. I have hunted hard for a single proven scandal that has involved a circus actor, and have found none. Indeed, I cannot remember even any direct charge of a scandalous character Naturally the innuendoes of people who think circuses disreputable without ever having seen one, or known an actor, do not count. Moreover, a circus performer must be temperate both in eating and drinking; he must let tobacco entirely alone unless his temperament be acutely nervous. He must not indulge in dissipation of any kind or he will lose his nerve. He has no time to satisfy any inclination he may have toward vices, small or large, since he must breakfast at eight, go to rehearsal, take a light luncheon, give an afternoon performance, dine, perform again and be in bed within an hour and a half after the close of the evening show. Any circus performer who is not in bed by twelve o'clock at night must pay a heavy fine. A star performer usually lasts twenty-five years as a star, without counting the years of early training and indifferent performing.

Gymnasts require less time and more nerve in gaining proficiency than do either riders or acrobats. There is a great difference between exercising on a horizontal bar near the ground, and performing the same feat away up next to the roof. To learn to ride or to do trapeze-work well requires years and years of practice. The trapeze performer usually starts in by turning somersaults and leaping from bar to bar, at first near the ground and then higher up; then, as courage comes and strength and dexterity increases, new tricks are attempted. In practising new feats, there may be a thousand falls for every ten successes, but before an audience is permitted a view, this proportion must be reversed, and the failures reduced to ten out of a thousand successes.

In gymnastics and trapeze-work the performer is his own teacher to a great extent, but the circus rider in has a teacher. In former times, the pupil was kept in a slight degree from injuring himself through falls by a "lunge belt" with a cord attached. The cord was held in the teacher's hand, and by it the pupil was assisted to a soft bed of sawdust when a fall was inevitable. Now, however, the pupil does not fall at all. The lunge belt is fastened by a cord over a pulley to the revolving arm of a pole placed perpendicularly in the middle of the ring, and when the pupil and the horse fail to make the desired connection, the horse passes on and the rider remains suspended in air.

Perhaps the most dangerous feat, and the one most seldom attempted, is the triple somersault in the air from a spring-board. I am referring to the full triple somersault in which the performer finally stands upright after three complete revolutions. Nine out of ten performers who attempt it break their necks, while two-thirds of the remainder succeed in saving their lives by stopping at something a little over the double. John Armor, who traveled with Dan Rice for so many years, and who was the first American circus-actor to turn a double somersault over four horses, tried to turn a triple somersault in 1859, but landed on his forehead and broke his neck. Out of twelve other performers skilled in the double somersault whose records are at hand, eight were killed in attempting the triple leap; three claim to have done it successfully, although there seems to have been no witnesses; while the twelfth actually did it in rehearsal, but nothing is said of his having accomplished the feat in public.—Kate Field's Washington.

FIRELESS PEOPLE.

If the eating of flesh food be instanced as a distinction that separates man from anthropoids, it can be urged, on the other side that the latter feed on insects, and when in captivity by no means despise flesh food. The first man, too, was probably a "vegetarian," but necessity and the absence of sufficient vegetable food for his augmenting species may have driven him to flesh diet.

The cooking or roasting of meat must be regarded as an acquisition of a later epoch, because in the earlier stages of man's development there was undoubtedly a very long fireless period, and because there are said to be fireless people even in the present day, such as the Dokos, in Abyssinia. The Australians, too, knew nothing of boiling and roasting food until the advent of the Europeans. For the rest, all the savages know how to kindle a fire by the well-known method of friction of two sticks, or, what is simpler, they take a torch along with them on their wanderings that never goes out. The Andamanites preserve their fire by consuming the interiors of hollow trees.

Since the Andamanites have come in contact with Europeans, they have superseded this method of preserving fire by the use of matches, which are very favorite objects with them. They eat their food either raw or roasted, less frequently boiled, as they have no cooking utensils. Moreover, according to the latest accounts from Otto Luders of these savages, great mortality prevails among them, and they withdraw themsleves into the woods more and more at the approach of the Europeans. They go completely or almost naked, live in holes in the earth or under overhanging rocks, or build themselves a sort of rough hut with branches and leaves. Their weapons are spears, bows and arrows, tipped with iron, which they seize as booty from the wrecks of stranded ships. Their hatchets and axes, formerly made of stone, are now made of iron, and are bound to the handle with thongs. They only count up to three, and have no conception of immortality; they believe in a good and bad spirit only, hide their dead in the ground or throw them into the sea, or lay them on wooden scaffolds; dance to the tune of a sounding board, have a very keen sense of vision—with their arrows they shoot fish that no Europeans can see—are of a fierce, suspicious disposition, and, according to Luders, they probably constitute the transition of primitive nations of Indians to Australians, a remnant of an extinct people. They are of nearest kin to the Negriton of the Philippines. Their body height is fifty-six to fifty-nine inches.—Fortnightly Review.

SOUTHDOWNS.

The breed stands at the head of all others as a strictly mutton sheep, and reach a tremendous size when full grown. Some time ago some specimen wethers exhibited at the London Fat Stock show weighed 250 pounds; but, of course, these sheep were gotten up for exhibition purposes and their mutton was certain to be of inferior quality. We would not advise breeding them to any size over 160 pounds when well fattened. The mutton from the average-sized ones is of the best, and it will, in most cases, command the highest price and sells very easily on account of the large percentage of lean meat on so large a carcass. They are an old and well-known breed, and have held their own alongside of the different new breeds that are classed as mutton sheep. They are very docile and their beauty is an attractive feature. They are also very hardy, having a tight fleece which enables them to stand hardships and exposure to weather that would be almost impossible for the breeds with less wool to endure.—N. Y. Witness.

It is well known, says the American Microscopical Journal, that light reflected from white clouds is one of the very best for illuminating the microscope. George Rust writes that when white clouds are wanting he moistens the fingesr with watch oil and spreads an even but very thin coat over the face of the mirror, which produces much the same results.

Mrs. U. S. Grant has joined her daughter, Mrs. Sartoris, in Washington, and expects to remain until the latter sails for Europe some time in April. Mrs. Grant will then go out to California to spend the summer.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, MAY 17 1895

The number of hogs slaughtered in the United States for the year ending May 1, 1895, was 21,610,000, for which the packers paid $232,000,000. There is money in hogs. Of course nearly all of this vast amount of pork was produced east of the Rocky mountains. And if hog raising will pay in a region afflicted with so many disadvantages, it certainly should be an exceptionally profitable industry in Southern California. In our corn and alfalfa we have the most healthful and nutritious of foods for swine, while the climatic conditions are so favorable here that the poker reaches a degree of development astounding to the eastern farmer. The prices that rule here—5 to 6 cents per pound, in the carcass, would seem to offer ample inducements for enterprise in this direction. It is stated on competent authority that hogs can be raised and sold at 4 cents per pound, and leave the grower a handsome profit. Let some of our agriculturalists who are dissatisfied with their profits in other lines enter the pig pen business for a while.

Those who have predicted that fruit growing in California may be easily overdone should read what E. L. Goodsell, the best American authority on fruit, has to say on the subject. He declares that the growing of fruit in the Eastern states is dying out, and he cites as proof of this assertion the remarkable fact that Delaware, which only five years ago produced 6,000,000 baskets of peaches yielded last year not over 10,000 baskets. The yellows, that fatal disease, has ruined thousands of acres of the finest orchards in the State, and New York now looks to California for her supply of this luscious fruit. All this State needs is cheap and rapid transportation of her perishable fruits. Given this and California can beat any rival.

The simple announcement that the Rev. J. George Gibson would preach in a certain church in San Francisco last Sunday was sufficient to pack the house. Yet this is the man whose queer conduct in Emmanuel church on the day when the baby of Minnie Williams was found murdered and whose utterances to the reporters in subsequent interviews showed him to be a person of unclean mind and afflicted with a pruriency that is disgusting to any person of manly or healthy moral instincts. But the people went to see him and hear him, just as they go to see Durrant, to satisfy their morbid curiosity rather than to gain any spiritual enlightenment or comfort. People are queer animals, after all.

Business never was in a condition to suit everybody. Legislation can't help the man who won't work, or the man who prefers to growl at every one else rather than make an honest industrious effort himself. Legislation cannot prevent the daily demand for bread and butter, and the first duty of every man is to earn that. The times always improve when all hands go to work with a will, drop grumbling, hunting for the bright things of life rather than its unpleasant features.

What a pity it is that the foreign policy of our government could not be directed by some of these "idiotorial" writers who have been criticising the Government for its course in the Nicaragua affair! They must feel extremely disappointed to know that the influence of the Administration with England brought about a peaceful settlement without loss of dignity to any one. War, bloody war, would have been so much better!

If the administration had followed the advise of the Jingoes we would now be in the midst of a war with Spain and just entering on a war whth England, yet the troubles with both countries are amicably settled without loss of dignity or material advantage on the part of any government. The Jingoes are the Pharisees of the political world.

Lord Douglass says that he was hazy when he proposed marriage to Lauretta Addis. Douglass is the only English Lord who didn't get near a golden haze when he proposed marriage in this country.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING
EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.
FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

BY ADVERTISEMENTS.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. Location of works, near Lone Pine, Inyo County, California.

Notice is hereby given, that at a meeting of the Board of Directors, held on the 27th day of April, 1895, an assessment (No. 8.) of fifteen cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin to the Secretary, at the office of the company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 1st day of June, 1895, will be delinquent and advertised for sale, at public auction, and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, June 22, 1895, at 2 o'clock p. m. to pay the delinquent assessment, together with costs of advertising and expense of sale.

D. HOLLAND,
Secretary.

Office, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. May 2, 1895.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
April 29, 18.5.

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Halliday of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal. has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert land claim No. 645, for the N½ of N½ sec. 15, Tp. 15 S. R. 36 E. M. D. M. before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal. on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co. Cal. William F. Halliday of Oakland Cal. Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, both of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND,
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Independence, Cal.
April 29, 1895.

Notice is hereby given that William F. Halliday of Oakland, Cal. has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert land claim No. 641, for the NW ¼ of SW ¼ sec. 12. Tp. 15S. R. 36 E. M. D. M. before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal. on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co. Cal. Joseph Halliday, Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, all of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND,
Register.

FOR SALE.

THE WHITNEY HOUSE

—The only hotel in—

LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL

Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address

MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. T. MOORE, Proprietor.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modoc Cal.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

H. E. Wilkinson Plaintiff, vs. Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now and heretofore existing between plaintiff and defendant upon the ground of the defendant's wilful desertion of plaintiff, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein, which complaint is hereby made a part of this summons.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to Court for the relief demanded in said complaint, viz: For a judgment dissolving said bonds of matrimony.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 10th day of April, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

BIG PINE HOTEL.

BIG PINE - CAL

New House.

New Furniture.

Low Rates

Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

(Official.)

Treasurer's Report.

To the Hon. Board of Supervisors, Inyo County State of California.

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith submit my report of the receipts and disbursements of this office for the Quarter ending March 31st, 1895. Respectfully submitted,

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer.

RECEIPTS—

Jan. 1, 1895, Cash on hand		$20 490 93
J. S. Gorman, Tax Collector		721 00
J. S. Gorman, Tax Collector		12 50
P. A. Chaffant, Assessor		73 95
J. S. Gorman, Sheriff fees		33 00
J. S. Gorman, Tax-Collector fees		27 40
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees		74 80
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees		49 50
D. M. Geiger	Int S Schl fd	52 40
Wm Roan	"	42 10
J. H. Shannon	"	33 60
Nathan Gilbert	"	11 20
Sarah C. F. Wrinkle	"	4 80
"	"	13 32
"	Int lake fd	20 87
P. C. Grant	"	40 91
Samuel T. Black, State School		4,904 55
		26,585 23
Feb. A. M. Given, Tax Collector		875 33
A. M. Given, Tax Collectr fees		5 00
A. M. Given, Sheriff fees		83 60
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees		66 15
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees		55 80
		27,172 11
Mar. A. M. Given, Tax Collector		555 50
A. M. Given, Tax Collector fees		29 00
A. M. Given, Sheriff fees		44 60
A. M. Given, Sheriff fine		5 00
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees		55 75
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees		176 35
A. W. Carroll, Int State land		2 80
" "		89 22
J. G. Birchim "		32 00
" " Swamp land		15 68
Thos. W. Perry, Int State land		51 96
S. W. Austin, Schl Supt fees		4 00
J. S. Gorman, bal. Tax Col.		25 88
D. J. Hession, bal. Clerk & Rec.		7 75
A. A. Cashbaugh, Int State land		11 20
		28,325 80

DISBURSEMENTS—

Jan. Salary Fund	1,224 18
Hospital Fund	416 00
Bishop School Bond	5 40
Bridge	121 46
Sundry Road districts	1,190 60
General Expense	3,053 96
Bishop School	352 25
Union School	94 00
Milton School	41 75
Big Pine School	160 20
Riverside School	125 03
Lone Pine School	144 00
Station School	100 37
Round Valley School	70 00
Warm Springs School	79 00
Independence School	82 63
Fish Springs School Dist.	76 35
Independence Special	2 37
Fish Spring, Special	4 05
Irving Library	41 95
Big Pine Library	12 72
Round Valley Library	25 00
Milton Library	3 00
	7,427 27
Feb. General Expense	595 00
Independence Bond	605 00
Salary	1,024 98
Hospital Fund	41 00
Lone Pine School	215 15
Union School	85 00
Independence School	85 00
Bishop School	261 11
Milton School	240 00
Fish Springs School	83 00
Station School	129 87
Warm Springs School	123 00
Irving School	90 00
Big Pine School	4 00
Unapportioned County School	12 00
Warm Spring Library	2 00
Big Pine Library	3 00
Fish Spring Library	22 82
Lone Pine Library	40 11
	11,118 11
Mar. Fish Spring School Bond	234 00
County Bond	1,575 00
Unapportioned Property tax	1 22
Salary	1,083 78
Hospital	20 00
Fish Spring School	75 00
Big Pine School	103 00
Station School	65 25
Independence School	109 00
Round Valley School	101 00
Milton	80 00
Bishop School	253 65
Irving School	111 00
Lone Pine School	180 00
Riverside School	125 00
Station Library	34 38
Big Pine Library	14 50
Lone Pine Library	3 10
General Exponse	956 50
Apr. Cash on hand	12,073 31
	28,328 80

Treasurer's Trial Balance, Apr. 1, 1895.

To the Salary Fund		$	927 10
General Expense "			295 37
State General, "		738 26
Hospital "		587 74
Bond "		1,074 40
Bishop Special Fund		5 13
General Road		133 49
To the various Road District Funds:
No 1		337 22
No 2		275 39
No 3		282 25
No 4		140 54
No 5		394 61
Unapportioned County		58 12
Road Poll Tax		113 05
Bridge Fund		470 03
Swamp and overflowed Land		1,639 53
Institute		80 00
Teachers Library Fund		43 50
Big Pine Special School		56 00
Coroner's		88 25
Unapportioned Property Tax		429 83
County School			948 33
To the various School Dist. Funds:
Riverside		88 16
Round Valley		158 14
Irving		164 37
Bishop		412 49
Station		127 13
Warm Springs		336 27
Big Pine		833 23
Milton		113 56
Independence		247 80
Fish Spring		157 17
Union		391 49
Lone Pine		446 83
To the various School Dist. Library Funds:
Milton		$ 63 52
Round Valley		3 76
Irving		26 82
Bishop		129 67
Station		87 28
Warm Springs		7 41
Big Pine		35 05
Independence		31 21
Union		46 44
Riverside		20 31
Lone Pine		50 30
Fish Springs
Independence Bldg Fund		3 00
Fish Springs " "		19 84
Lone Pine " "		10 84
Independence Schl. Special		26 49
Independence Bond Fund			13 0
Bishop (old) " "		71 02
Bishop (new) " "		950 59
Union " "		364 60
Big Pine " "		626 49
Fish Springs " "		5 49
Lone Pine " "		1,562 98
Cash Balance			$12 075 3
		$14,2 0 65	$14 260 65

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 1st day of Apr., 1895.

D. J. HESSION,
Clerk.

Examined, accepted and approved by the Board of Supervisors the 3d day of January, 1895.

FRANK FITZGERALD,
Chairman.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK.
—AND—
Ex officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc. given careful and prompt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases.

Brown & Wills,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery.
All kinds of dental work done according to latest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING
IN ANY STYLE,
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Administrator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix, at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ALLIE R. BROWN.
Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased.

Dated February 15 1895.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administratrix.
aug 3 5

NOTICE.

Whereas, the consent in writing of the holders of two thirds of the capital stock of the Lone Pine Canal Company, a corporation, to change the principal place of business of said corporation from the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, to the town of Lone Pine, in said county and state, is on file herein. Notice is hereby given that the principal place of business of said Lone Pine Canal Company, will be at the town of Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on and after January 26th 1895.

By order of the Board of Directors.

DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

(Official.)

Notice To Tax-Payers.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT I have received from the Auditor of the County of Inyo, State of California, the Assessment Roll for the year A. D. 1894-5, that the taxes on all personal property secured by real property, and one-half the taxes on all real property, will be due and payable on the first Monday in October and will be delinquent on the last Monday in November next thereafter, at six o'clock p. m., and that unless said prior thereto fifteen per cent will be added to the amount thereof; and that if said one-half be not paid before the last Monday in April next at six o'clock p. m. an additional five per cent will be added thereto; that the remaining one-half of the taxes on all real property will be payable on and after the first Monday in January next and will be delinquent on the last Monday in April next thereafter at six o'clock p. m.; and that unless paid prior thereto five per cent will be added to the amount thereof; that all taxes may be paid at the time the first installment as herein provided is due and payable.

A. M. GIVEN,
Tax Collector.
oct5 1d

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The co-partnership heretofore existing between R. W. Thomas of the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, and T. W. Hill of the same place under the firm name and style of "Thomas and Hill" heretofore conducting a general merchandising business at the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, is this day dissolved by the mutual consent of the said R. W. Thomas and the said T. W. Hill.

Witness our hands and the seals this 6th day of February, 1895.

R. W. Thomas
Thomas W. Hill

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK
Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.
36-47 A. J. DAVIS, Independence.

The JOCKEY Saloon.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
MARSH. NAYLOR
PROPRIETORS
WINES, LIQUORS, CIGARS.
HEADQUARTERS FOR SPORTING EVENTS.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.
First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.
THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

FARROW'S MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA.
This is the Standard Military Encyclopedia of the world and the only work of its kind in the English language. It has the endorsement of the War Department and the leading military commanders of America and Europe. It is issued in three large octavo volumes of about 1000 pages each, printed on fine paper, from new electrotype plates, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. It is a complete library of military information both for military and non-military people. Every library should have it. Circulars sent on application. Good agents wanted.
MILITARY AND NAVAL BOOKS.
All the leading, up-to-date military and naval books. Price list furnished on application.
MILITARY-NAVAL PUBLISHING CO.,
611-621 Broadway, New York City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.

REDLANDS GOLD MINING COMPANY

Location of principle place of Business: Redlands, California.

Location of works, Panamint Mining District, Inyo County, California.

NOTICE—There are delinquent upon the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 1, levied on the 14th day of January, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders as follows:

Name.	No. Cert.	No Sh's	Am't
G. W. Olson	194	100	$ 85
R. C. Avery	274	250	21 25
J. H. Allen	305	300	25 50
J. H. Allen	334	5,000	42 50
Emma Bingham	33	200	1 70
A. J. Boyer	169	200	1 70
J. Bum	238	400	3 40
E. Bedford	322	620	5 25
Mrs. R. R. Cate	69	25,000	212 50
M. F. Cate	70	40,000	340 00
M. F. Cate	235	1,430	12 15
M. F. Cate	256	50	40
M. F. Cate	307	4,650	39 50
Geo. J. Caldwell	104	40,000	340 00
Geo. J. Caldwell	111	5,000	42 50
Geo. J. Caldwell	112	9,000	76 50
Geo. J. Caldwell	242	5,000	42 50
Geo. J. Caldwell	243	5,000	42 50
Geo. J. Caldwell	245	5,000	42 50
Geo. J. Caldwell	247	1,000	8 50
Geo. J. Caldwell	248	100	8 50
Geo. J. Caldwell	249	100	8 50
Geo. J. Caldwell	250	200	17 00
Geo. J. Caldwell	314	5,000	42 50
Geo. J. Caldwell	331	10,000	85 00
Geo. J. Caldwell	335	550	4 70
Geo. J. Caldwell	368	700	5 50
Geo. J. Caldwell	369	600	5 10
W. Coggeshall	201	100	85
Davis Dowell	94	300	2 55
Wm. Fossell	63	500	4 25
T. E. N. Eaton	152	300	2 55
T. E. N. Eaton	170	2,000	17 00
T. E. N. Eaton	211	500	4 25
T. E. N. Eaton	157	100	85
J. M. R. Eaton	163	1,900	16 15
J. M. R. Eaton	200	3,500	29 75
Mrs. T. E. N. Eaton	198	300	2 55
Miss G. Lyde Eaton	199	300	2 55
Geo. M. Eaton	219	200	1 70
Chas. E. French	221	4,000	34 00
Chas. E. French	320	5,000	42 50
Chas. E. French	324	10,000	85 00
Chas. E. French	325	10,000	85 00
Abby R. French	210	1,000	8 50
J. B. Griffith	311	250	2 15
J. M. Hough	85	1,000	8 50
J. M. Hough	319	600	5 10
G. L. Hopkins	125	1,000	8 50
G. L. Hopkins	134	400	3 40
Hattie M. Huffman	200	700	5 95
Mrs. E. H.	216	300	2 55
Hogan & Parker	383	5,000	42 50
E. J. Inwood	233	1,000	8 50
H. Clough (trustee)	91	500	4 25
J. W. Johnson	83	600	5 10
W. T. Johnson	82	600	5 10
W. T. Johnson	150	300	2 55
W. T. Johnson	212	300	2 55
W. T. Johnson	231	300	2 55
E. S. Jacoby	131	100	85
Mrs. T. Latham	131	100	85
A. M. Mitchell	25	300	2 55
W. T. Mitchell	183	100	85
W. T. Mitchell	299	400	3 40
R. W. M. Intyre	163	29,000	246 50
R. W. McIntyre	283	5,000	42 50
R. W. McIntyre	285	10,000	85 00
R. W. McIntyre	86	250	2 15
R. W. McIntyre	254	700	5 95
T. W. Nelles	145	1,000	8 50
H. S. Newlove	191	200	1 70
H. S. Newlove	190	300	2 55
H. S. Newlove	191	500	4 25
H. S. Newlove	330	1,000	8 50
Minnie M. Norris	201	2,750	23 37
Maude M. Norris	203	1,250	10 62
Susie A. Otto	117	1,000	8 50
Susie A. Otto	119	2,000	17 00
John S. Pine pa	150	100	85
A. L. Park	43	10,000	85 00
A. L. Park	44	10,000	85 00
A. L. Park	45	2,000	17 00
A. L. Park	47	5,000	42 50
A. L. Park	48	4,000	34 00
A. L. Park	49	500	4 25
A. L. Park	122	1,000	8 50
A. L. Park	111	3,000	25 50
A. L. Park	153	1,000	8 50
A. L. Park	154	1,000	8 50
A. L. Park	188	500	4 25
A. L. Park	189	10,000	85 00
A. L. Park	207	3,400	28 90
A. L. Park	208	4,000	34 00
A. L. Park	209	10,000	85 00
A. L. Park	23	1,000	8 50
A. L. Park	26	3,000	25 50
A. L. Park	25	12,000	102 00
Ralph C. Rohrer	321	300	2 55
O. W. Shafer	21	30,000	255 00
O. W. Shafer	222	20,000	170 00
O. W. Shafer	224	10,000	85 00
O. W. Shafer	225	10,000	85 00
O. W. Shafer	226	5,000	42 50
O. W. Shafer	227	5,000	42 50
O. W. Shafer	371	5,000	42 50
O. W. Shafer	375	900	8 00
Schlueter Onto & Co.	356	1,300	11 50
S. H. Vheel er	50	4,000	34 00
J. N. Wilson	56	1,000	8 50
J. H. Wilson	57	1,000	8 50
M. Holmes Wilson	58	1,000	8 50
C. C. Wright	86	500	4 25
J. J. Suess	294	750	6 40
J. J. Suess	336	700	5 95

And in accordance with law and an order of the Board of Directors made on the 14th day of January, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary will be sold at Public Auction at Room 4, Chittenden Building, Redlands, California, on the 6th day of April, 1895 at the hour of 3 o'clock p. m. of said day, to pay said delinquent assessment thereon, together with cost of advertising and expense of the sale.

A. C. CHITTENDEN,
Secretary.

Office, Room 4 Chittenden Building, Redlands California, March 6th 1895.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of a First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Carpet Weaving.
MRS. J. F. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.
PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER
We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kinds of carpet and rug weaving.
Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.
Loom work guaranteed at low prices.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and repaired satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Fire arms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone
FRED BURCKHARDT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY, the 8th day of March, 1892, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death, in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 10 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the South east corner of the south-east quarter of North east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 58-100; thence North-east following the meanderings of the bank of the Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence, thence following said Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, six and 80-100 acres; also lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29, in the town of Independence, the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hallnah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lot Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead, or lode, situate lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, and designated as the "La Dispriada lode."

That certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura State of California, commencing at a point twelve and nine-twentieth (12 9-20) rods south of the general corner of the North-west quarter and the North-east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South-west quarter and the South-east quarter of Section No. one (1), in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardine base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and eleven-twentieth (68 11-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North-westerly along a small branch or swale to a point twenty-four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North East quarter and the South east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North east quarter of the North-west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West; running thence North forty-four and eleven twentieth (44 11-20) rods thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres: Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice, and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah deceased.

Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th 1892.

SAVE YOUR SHOES
AMES' SHOE PROTECTOR is warranted to make the sole wear as long as the remainder of any ordinary shoe, and to save from 20 to 60 times its cost in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.
PAT. APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROP'R.
Horseshoeing ..... $2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1894, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday	January 20th
"	February 17th
"	March 9th
"	April 14th
"	May 19th
"	June 16th
"	July 14th
"	August 11th
"	September 8th
"	October 13th

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, MAY 17.....189

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman ..... GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman ..... CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge ..... GEO. M. GILL.
Sheriff ..... ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk ..... DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney ..... W. W. FORBES.
Assessor ..... P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer ..... W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner ..... I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed) ..... JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools ..... S. N. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist ..... FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist ..... A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist ..... J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist ..... JOHN WILSON.
5th Supervisor Dist ..... FRANK FITZGERALD.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

MONDAY, May 13, 1895

Inyo County vs. Pedro Eero—Filed Summons and writ of attachment.

Inyo County vs. Jaun Inda—Filed Summons and writ of attachment.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .67¼
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5¼
Pig lead	3.90

BORN.

WAY—At Bishop, Cal., May 6, 1895, to Mr. and Mrs. R. Way, a daughter.

DIED.

ROBERTSON—A Samuel, Santa Cruz County May 10, 1895, Mrs. Rachel M. Robertson, aged 80 years.

Dave Holland came up from Keeler last Saturday morning and remained in town a couple of days.

Miss Agnes Ford and Miss Emma Yandell of Bishop, are visiting friends and relatives in Independence.

A. H. Greenhalgh of Junction, Nye county, Nevada, has been visiting at Independence for several days past.

Tom Taylor and John Hughes started for Silver Peak last Monday, and will try their luck in that promising camp.

There were showers along the mountains yesterday and considerable rain fell in the Valley between Big Pine and Fibbets.

O. C. Harper of San Francisco has accepted a position as saleman at Raine's. He arrived at Independence last Friday.

The cattlemen of the vicinity expect to start for Long Valley next Monday. Charley Summers and his vaqueras came down from Bishop to-day.

John McSweeny and Neil McLean have gone to Cerro Gordo to haul ore for Pat Chuton, who has in the neighborhood of fifty tons ready for shipment.

The various mountain streams are running bank full. A considerable stream is flowing through the Symmes ditch, a thing that has not occurred so early as this for many years past.

The Independence Water Company intend putting in six-inch mains in place of the four-inch now in use. This will be a great improvement, as the present arrangement is to small to carry an adequate water supply.

A social dance will be given at Mair's Hall to-morrow evening to which all are cordially invited to attend. Excellent music will be provided and special features will be added that will make the occasion doubly attractive. Come and see for yourself.

George Mead and Rudolph Schober went south to-day with twenty animals and two wagons to haul borax from Salt Wells Valley to Mojave. There are about fourteen tons ready for shipment. At Mojave they will load with merchandise for Owens Valley.

School Superintendent Austin was up from Lone Pine on Wednesday. He states that a special meeting of the Board of Education will be held about the first week in June for the purpose of examining the papers presented by various pupils of the public schools for graduating diplomas.

Everybody in this vicinity abided by the ordinance of the Board of Supervisors and forebore the pleasures of trout fishing until Wednesday. That evening the Independent force ate speckled beauties, being indebted to the kindness of Johnny Moore for the pleasure.

Landlord Mairs is making a few changes in the arrangement of the Norman House. The apartment formerly used as a reading room has been newly painted and will be fitted up as a bar-room. The former bar and club rooms will be newly furnished and used for private parlors.

The Peak

At Silver Peak work has commenced on the ore grade and woodcutting also. Tony Sais, of Bishop, has a contract to furnish both mills with all the wood they want, which will take some twenty men all told. There is no lumber here for building, and several parties have returned to their respective camps to tear down buildings and move them in. Candelaria, Belmont, Montezuma and another place are on the list. The old saying, "the early bird catches the worm" must be so. The first move was to to take up lots; the next is to build. It will probably be overdone on the start, as several paydays must elapse before the camp becomes substantial.

Notice.

All parties wishing wheat ground will please bring it in before the 1st of June as I wish to close down for repairs of mill.

A. N. BELL.

Wm. Arcinaiius came in from Darwin yesterday with his big team for a couple of weeks lay-off. He received a letter from D. C. Lane yesterday saying that the new shaft in the Sorba mine was completed and that sufficient ore would now be taken out to keep the team running steadily.

County Clerk Hession left Charley Maroney at the helm of local clerical affairs and started for Bridgeport last Tuesday morning. It is understood that the object of his mission is to secure the co-operation of Mono county relative to sheep license matters. He is expected home Wednesday evening.

C. A. Walter left a sample of cheese manufactured by the Fairview creamery at this office a few days ago. It a very good article and all such home industries should be encouraged.

SUBSOILING AND IRRIGATION.

Let Deep Subsoiling Precede Irrigation Wherever the Subsoil Is Hard.

One of the great questions of the day, and one which is enlisting the thoughts of many of our wise philosophers, is the question, "How shall we avoid the damaging effects of a drought, such as this otherwise favored country of ours passed through last summer?" While facts and figures apparently prove that irrigation must play an important part in the solution of this question in many sections, Kansas Farmer thinks it will be wise not to ignore the fact that deep subsoiling should precede irrigation wherever the subsoil is hard. Then the facts and figures would be simply asounding for the satisfactory settlement of this question.

As a rule, says the authority referred to, the subsoil immediately underlying the cultivated top soil has become exceedingly hard, rendered thus by action of rain carrying fine sediment into it, and being so short a distance from the surface the moisture has all been evaporated from it time and again, so that finally it has become cemented together, every pore effectually stopped and rendered practically waterproof, except where cracked open by shrinkage. This is largely the condition of the subsoil everywhere, and to irrigate such ground without first subsoiling would be a failure, and worse than a failure if done in a hot, dry spell, with no clouds to protect from the blazing sunshine. It would evaporate so quickly that the top soil would be baked so hard that cultivation would be a most difficult operation, and the soil would be left in a worse condition than before.

But how reasonable and evident is the fact, to every one who will take the time to consider the question to any extent, that deep subsoiling would furnish a storehouse for water, by irrigation or rainfall, in the right place to protect the crops from all damage by drought. The advice is therefore given to buy a good subsoil plow which will tickle old Mother Earth so deeply that she will respond with a bountiful harvest when irrigation follows.

In the Poultry House.

A few lice in the henhouse now mean thousands later. Poor hens and few if any eggs will be the result. Do you think it will pay to feed wheat to lice? That is what many do without a murmur—at the lice. The hens are only the go betweens and get all the curses. Clean out everything—nests, roosts, partitions—and scrub them with kerosene. Paint everything with strong lye made of wood ashes, convert the pests into soap and then scrub the building with them. Cut new poles for roosts and hang them with wires fastened to the roof. Dig out the floor with a hoe and wash it. When dry, whitewash every part. It will pay to do a good job while about it. It will be too cold by and by, and then those pullets must begin laying before cold weather, or they will hold off till spring. To succeed you must give them meat, not make meat of them for parasites.

The pullets may, with care and comfort, pay a profit on their cost before spring. They will not if they are animated vermin factories. A supply of leaves packed away for use on the floors will make a cheerful sound as the hens "rustle" for wheat among them on cold days. Several loads of buckwheat hulls will be a profitable investment. The white dust will choke lice when the hens roll in it, says Rural New Yorker, authority for the foregoing. Of course you have barrels of road dust put away. That and plaster when thrown violently against the roosts will make a smudge and destroy many of the red mites. It is likely that hens would take care of the louse question themselves if always provided with suitable dust material. When their roosts become too bad or the nests too hot, they will abandon them for a tree and starve out the midnight marauders.

Some Causes of Poultry Diseases.

High roosts—bumble foot.
Filthy houses—lice.
Drafts in the hennery—roup.
Impure water—cholera.
Damp quarters—diarrhea.
Musty food—canker.
Breeding in and in—consumption.
Overfeeding—apoplexy.
Unwholesome diet—indigestion.
Wet weather—pip.
Close confinement—debility.
Want of exercise—black rot.
Exposure to cold—rheumatism.
High feeding—leg weakness.

Secretary F. D. Coburn of the Kansas state board of agriculture has issued a pamphlet on "Feeding Wheat to Farm Animals," which gives the best information now obtainable. It is a collection of all the important articles on feeding wheat that have appeared in agricultural papers and bulletins.

Iowa farmers claim to have escaped the ravages of hog cholera this year. They have been feeding wheat.

Reports make it appear that through central and southern Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and northern Kentucky the crop of turkeys is very large, the largest this country has ever seen.

There is one thing sure—manure that has been thoroughly fined and rotted in a compost heap will be far more effective when worked in with a harrow than the coarse, hard lumps right out of the barnyard. It needs a plow to get the latter under cover.

A short crop in hickory nuts is reported.

FARM·FIELD AND GARDEN

HANDLING LIQUID MANURE.

How It Is Done at the Ellerslie Stock Farm—Another Plan Recommended.

The importance of saving every drop of liquid manure is generally conceded, but how to handle it with profit remains a question. Farmers who have built tanks experience trouble because the pumps clog with the thick sediment. H. M. Cottrell, writing to Rural New Yorker from the celebrated Ellerslie stock farm, tells that he has had the best experts in this line looking for a pump that will prove satisfactory for more than two years, and they cannot find one. Large steam pumps will do the work, but they are too expensive. He writes as follows: We absorb most of the liquids. What is not absorbed passes through a thick bed of shavings, and then through a brass screen before it runs into the cistern. We pump it into the sprinkler with a common brass lined pump. We use a brass lined pump because the other kinds soon rust and then will not work. We use a Studebaker sprinkler for distributing the liquid manure. This is the only kind we could find that would not clog.

I do not favor this method of handling manure, and the arrangement I have just spoken of is the only thing in our Ellerslie barn that is not satisfactory. The pipes carrying the liquid manure to the cistern are always getting clogged, and it requires too much labor to pump the manure out of the cistern.

The plan I would recommend is this: I would make the gutters behind the cows with a very slight grade, not over one inch in 100 feet run. I would then keep the gutters well filled with a good absorbent, shavings, sawdust, chaff or cut straw. Any of these will absorb nearly the whole of the urine and will retain it so that the ammonia does not escape and taint the air. Our cattle are kept in the stable most of the time, and we find it necessary to remove this material from the gutters once a week. For the small amount of urine that will not be absorbed in the gutters I would continue the gutters to the outside of the barn and have it empty into a shallow tank. I would half fill this tank with absorbents, and as fast as they became saturated haul them to the field. The gutter leading from the cows to the outside tank should have a hinged cover so that it may easily be cleaned and washed.

Bee Diseases.

A new bee disease has made its appearance in California and some of the other states. The brood dies in the cells in all stages of growth. The black or discolored larvæ of all sizes and the dead pupæ are found scattered, often thickly, throughout the maturing brood. Professor A. J. Cook, at a California farmers' institute, told that his observations and experiments led him to conclude that scant stores, too meager nourishment and consequently imperfect nutrition caused the mortality. The obvious suggestions are more care and attention, more honey left in the hives at the close of the season, and careful attention and if necessary feeding in years of honey dearth.

Bee paralysis, also called nameless disease, is attracting attention. In this disease the imago, or immature bees, are the ones that die. The dead or enfeebled bees are carried by other bees outside, and thus the ground in front of the hives has constantly a mound of dead bees. Usually the colony does not wholly succumb, but it is so weakened that it produces little or no honey. Generally the colony recovers after a time, usually after the bees have replaced the queen with a young one.

Professor Cook thinks this last disease comes from some constitutional weakness of the queen which shows itself in debility of her progeny, the worker bees. He has known in several cases the disease to soon disappear after the queen was superseded, and in other cases, where the bees replaced their queen with a young, healthy one, the the disease soon vanished.

The best advice which can be given in case the old bees die off too rapidly is to see that the bees have abundance of food, and in case that fails to bring relief try requeening of all affected colonies.

The newest Style

of

Fashionable Clothing

Dry Goods, Ladies'

Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOD

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain

Flour, etc., constantly

on hand.

CANDIES,

PEANUTS

WALNUTS,

TOYS!

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get the

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, DRESSED WARE.

THOMAS & HILL,

—DEALERS IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First Class and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.

D. A. BENDER. General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.	From Mound House No. 1		To Mound House No. 2.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Mound House	10:30 a. m.		5:20 p. m
Dayton	11:25 a. m.		4:15 p. m
Wabuska	1:40 p. m		2:38 p. m
Hawthorne	Ar. 5:00 p. m	Lv.	11:00 a. m
	No. 3.		N. 4
	Leave—		Arrives—
Hawthorne	6:00 a. m.		7:25 p. m
Luning	7:15 a. m.		6:15 p. m
Sodа Springs	7:50 a. m.		5:35 p. m
Belleville	8:10 a. m.		4:35 p. m
Candelaria	9:40 a. m		3:50 p. m
Benton	1:30 p. m		11:50 a. m
Bishop Creek	3:10 p. m.		9:50 a. m
Alvord	05 p. m		8:65 a. m
Independence	4:35 p. m.		7:25 a. m
Lone Pine	5:20 p. m.		6:10 a. m
Keeler	Ar 7:00 p. m.	Lv.	6:30 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (33 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's tri weekly stages (leaving Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stag for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Adda Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (9 miles), Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles)

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer without cost of repairs than any other machine, has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

ASTHMA FOR EVERYONE

Cigarettes, snuff, or fumes can be absorbed and relief have received without the Dutch treatment. Dissolve or fumigate with Dr. Piffard's Asthma Remedy. Can be had of druggists everywhere, or sent direct on receipt of price, $1 per package. Circulars free.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave,
WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS
at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeer,
MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS
at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER, Propr.

JOHN B. CLARKE,

Successor to John Clarke,

—PROPRIETOR—

John Clarke's Bishop Stables,

BISHOP, CAL.

First-class Turnouts of Every Kind

Fine horses and Carriages.

horses Boarded for any Time

Best of Care and Attention

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal

New House
New Furniture.
Low Rates.

Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.

O. F. MAIRS Pro
feb12tf

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS. WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

0-m RENO, NEVADA

BIG POP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, om the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

INDEPENDENCE

MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

Articles supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.

j19-tf

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1894.
j164fm

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE, INYO Co. Cal.

Dealer In GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies

PROVISIONS

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

BELL'S Flouring Mills

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

ROYAL Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

Highest of all in Leavening Strength. —U. S. Govt. Food Report.

The official report shows ROYAL BAKING POWDER chemically pure, yielding 160 cubic inches of leavening gas per ounce, which was greatly in excess of that shown by any other, and more than 40 per cent. above the average.

Hence Royal Baking Powder makes the lightest, sweetest and most wholesome food.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL ST., NEW-YORK.

It is officially learned that whatever Canada may desire the decision of the Paris Behring sea arbitration will be strictly adhered to during the ensuing season, and no side issue will be allowed to affect that decision.

Weinstock, Lubin & Co

400 to 412 K St., Sacramento, Cal.

Largest General Retail House on Coast.

Wearing Apparel of all kinds for men, women, and children; Dry Goods, Shoes, Hats, Millinery, Valises, Furniture, Carpets, Crockery, Notions, Stationery, Silverware, Toys, Household Supplies, etc.

Catalogue Free.

A handsome illustrated catalogue about our goods and prices sent free to any address. Tens of thousands of customers find it profitable and satisfactory to buy through this book.

TERMS CASH.

Enclose money for goods with order, and if to be sent by mail allow for postage. Any balance left over will be returned.

If interested in any of the items below, order promptly, giving item number.

APRIL NEWS.

A136. Ladies' triple cloth Capes, in cardinal, black, navy blue or tan; ruffle at neck and pinked edges. Price, $1.50; postage, 13c. AT 50c.

A137. The Kayser black silk Gloves, with double finger tips that will out wear the rest of the glove. Price, 50c. AT 25c.

A138. Children's checked gingham or white cambric Sun Bonnets. Price, 25c. AT 20c.

A139. A little device that will make any pair of scissors sharp in ten seconds. Price, 20c; postage, 2c. AT $2.00.

A140. Men's neat leather Shoes for every day or dress wear, elastic sides or hook and lace, stout soles. Price, $2.00; postage, 30c. AT 20c.

A141. Infallible Corn Cure, simple and guaranteed to cure. Price, 20c; postage, 2c. AT 75c.

A142. Ladies' pure white chamoise Kid Gloves, long, loose wrists and very stylish. Price, 75c. AT 3c.

A143. A tablet of good cream ruled Note Paper for letter writing. Price, 3c. AT $2.00.

A144. Ladies' black kid button Shoes, with black cloth tops and patent leather tips, medium heels and toes. Price, $2.00; postage, 15c.

CARPETS REDUCED.

A145. Smith's Tapestry Carpets sewed to fit any room, 45c yd; Roxbury Carpets, 70c; best Moquettes, sewed, 95c yd; all choice patterns.

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN & CO., Sacramento, Cal.

The Bell, a large clothing store on State street, Chicago, was burned recently. The loss is $75,000. J. H. Smith, a salesman, was fatally hurt, dropping from the second story. Two firemen were probably fatally hurt.

The great thing in observation is not to be influenced by our preconceived notions, or what we want to be true, or by our fears, hopes or any personal element, and to see the thing just as it is.—John Burroughs.

RHEUMATISM

has been cured in a multitude of cases during the past fifty years by Pain-Killer.

This potent remedy rubbed vigorously in and around the suffering parts, three times a day, will relieve all stiffness, reduce the swelling, prevent inflammation and kill all pain. The most stubborn cases yield to this treatment when persevered in. Use it freely. The quantity has been doubled but the price remains the same.

PERRY DAVIS & SON PROVIDENCE, R. I.

THE SPENT BALL.

By H. S. KNEEDLER.

"Say, you fellows!" broke in a familiar voice, and Jones hurried up the hill toward us. "I've been looking for you all over town, and just met Hannon, who said he saw you come out this way. You're wanted at the office instanter. The stockholders held a meeting last night and raised old Ned about the expenses of the paper, roasted the business manager for calling for assessments on the stock so often and ordered a general cutting down. I've just been let out and the 'old man' wants to see you for the same agreeable purpose, doubtless. It's getting cool up this way anyhow, and I'm off tonight for New Orleans. Ta, ta, I'll see you this evening."

Brigham and I walked back to the office in silence. I was too busy trying to reconcile my companion's strange confession with my reason to think much of the "old man" or my fate at the office. I had no chick to care for and was heart free, so the possibility of discharge gave me no uneasiness. A bird of passage anyway, I had no care for the morrow. The old Bohemianism asserted itself at the very possibility of change. But it was different with Brigham. He was certainly not so well equipped as I was to look out for number one—and besides he was in love. The chances of his marrying Emily Percival might be infinitesimal—perhaps were—but I could understand what his emotions must be at the possibility of being driven away at this time. In fact I remembered how—but that has nothing to do with this story.

When we reached the office the managing editor was waiting for us, and he said with an abruptness which was perhaps assumed for the occasion:

"Boys, there has been a general order for the doubling up of work. Three men are to be let out, and the choice has fallen on Jones, Brigham and Hallam. I'm sorry, but you know how it is, and that will save me making a long story of it."

"But, Mr. Blake," I said, "you must take into account another thing. I am going to resign—intended to mention it to you last night, but got wind of this, and thought probably my resignation would be called for anyhow, so I waited. The fact is I am getting tired of Memphis, and had decided to go on down toward New Orleans, with the probability of visiting some friends in Vicksburg on the way. So as that will solve the question for one man, I want to ask you to book Brigham for my place. He likes the town, and can do the work better than I could."

"I will not take your place," said Brigham, rising. "I see your intent, Gilman, and I thank you for it, but I could not stay under those circumstances."

"But you must, my dear boy," I said. "The thing is no new resolve with me. Was decided on last night, I assure you. I want you to stay. All towns are alike to me and I am at home anywhere. Memphis has really become a great bore to me, and I long for the Bayou Cook oysters and the pompano of Farbacher's on Royal street."

He was stubborn, and for a long time held to his purpose to go too. It was like handling a shy horse with a hard mouth and a straight bit, but at last he consented to do as I had proposed.

That evening he called on Emily Percival and came back in high spirits. I was in bed and asleep when he entered the room, but woke up when he lighted the lamp and sat down on the edge of the couch.

"I couldn't help waking you, Gilman," he said; "I wanted to tell you Emily loves me."

I took his hand. "I do congratulate you, old fellow, with all my heart. She is a woman who would make any man happy—a woman with a heart that wealth has never hardened. Life is all before you, and it will be your own fault if it disappoints you."

"Yes," he said joyously; "I have no past, but the future is mine. It is a glorious night, and I think I should smother if I staid cooped up here. I'll go down on the bluffs and take a little stroll before turning in."

When I awoke the next morning, with the sun streaming into my room, I found that Brigham had not yet come in. I strolled down to The Avalanche office, but he had not been there. He was not at dinner, nor was he seen during the day. My train was to go out at ten p. m., but up to the hour of its departure Brigham had not returned from his walk. Then I grew alarmed and decided to wait over a day. In the morning I called on Miss Percival to inquire if he had been summoned away suddenly. She had not seen him since Sunday night, she said, with evident disappointment. The police were set to work, the town was searched, telegrams were sent abroad—but all to no avail. I waited a week, but Jason Brigham had disappeared as mysteriously as though the great and sullen river, which swept by the city's rampart of hills, had swallowed him. And that was what we sadly accepted as the explanation of his fate.

CHAPTER IV.

"See if you discover such a scar as the gentleman mentions."

It was spring again—not the spring of the north which May ushers in with violets and the return of the song birds, but the spring which comes creeping over the landscape of the south, the vernal season that follows the floods of February rains, which clothes the brown fields with green almost before one knows it, and brings swiftly in its train the summer's promise of fertility. I was still in New Orleans, where I had come from Memphis, though my thoughts were turning northward again. I had been doing space work on The Picayune, where Jones held a desk in the city editor's room. Some correspondence for northern papers had fallen to me and furnished a pretty decent sort of livelihood.

Since leaving Memphis not a word had reached me of Jason Brigham. If the river had swallowed him, as we conjectured, then it had not given up its dead, or else had cast its prey upon some forsaken shore, perhaps in a treacherous eddy on the rim of some great desolate sandbar, or among the twisted roots and broken tree trunks in a cove upon some wooded stretch where human eye would never see it. The affairs had ceased to be a present memory to me. I thought with pity of Brigham, and of the lonely woman whose heart had been well nigh broken, but then there are so many tragedies in a newspaper man's life that his nature hardens insensibly and he comes to pessimistically accept the cruel reprisals of fate with a fair share of stoicism.

From the effects left by Brigham I had the photograph of Emily Percival. She had told me to keep it as a memento when I offered to return it to her. There were few things beside that, and such as there were were left in The Avalanche office in the hope that he might yet return to claim them.

The winter had been a gay one in the Crescent City—the season at the French opera had never been better, the Mardi Gras a brilliant success, the town was full of gay life, which renewed and reflected the Latin graces among our Puritanical institutions. In the merry round I had had my share and borne my part as well of the brunt of the work incidental to the daily grind of journalism. So I found myself upon the eve of starting north in anything but a pleasant frame of mind, when the managing editor of The Picayune sent for me and said:

"I wish you would go up to Donaldsonville and do that Mme. Armand murder case for us. You know I have no man here to send, and it is too big a thing for the indifferent local correspondent we have at that point to handle."

Of course I couldn't refuse—to have done so under the circumstances would have been unpardonable. But criminal affairs always nauseated me, and I hated the stuffy atmosphere of court rooms, where ignoramuses make pretense of knowledge to befuddle stupid jurors, and where the whole performance is a mockery of the solemnity of justice.

The case was famous or infamous enough, as such things go. Mme. Armand, who owned a plantation down on the Bayou Lafouche, had been murdered in her bed, presumably for money which she was popularly supposed to keep concealed in the house. The criminal had escaped detection for several months, and then had been apprehended while employed in a timber camp where he was one of a gang of loggers. Just what evidence there was against him the officers of the state declined to make public, and the poor wretch, having no money to tempt a cormorant of the law to undertake his defense, and no friends to intercede for him, had been kept in jail to await trial at the spring term. It was understood in a general way that the evidence against the accused was incontrovertible, and it was further understood that as he was a stranger and the law needed a victim, he was to be hanged in due season.

I went up to Donaldsonville the day before the one set for the trial, and landing at the miserable and forlorn place in the evening, hunted up the prosecuting attorney. That worthy was fully imbued with the heinousness of the crime, the necessity of some one's being punished for it, with the conviction that the prisoner was the guilty man, and with the assurance that he would be hanged. Further than that he had nothing to communicate. If I wanted information I must seek the counsel for the prisoner, the judge having recently appointed a member of the bar to defend him.

This advice was good, and I took it. I found the counsel for the defense a mild mannered young man who was evidently just breaking into the profession. But if his legal acumen was not overpowering he was to be commended for his modesty. He had not yet acquired the insolence or the vanity of the prosecuting attorney, and, what was in his favor, he took some interest in his unfortunate client.

"I do not believe him guilty," he said, "and yet I scarcely know why I believe in his innocence. The state, I understand, will bring witnesses to prove that he was seen in the vicinity of the murder, that he carries jewelry inconsistent with his occupation as a lumberman, and, what is more effective in the eyes of an ignorant and prejudiced jury, that he is not what he seems to be. This, I think, will be the most effective weapon they will use. The man is evidently of considerable refinement, of good education, and is not accustomed to the life he has lately been living. Yet he stubbornly refuses to say anything about himself beyond declaring his innocence. The inconsistency of his character and associations is so great that once demonstrated to a jury it will be ready to hang him without a qualm of conscience, if for nothing else, to show that it has the right to inflict the extreme penalty of the law."

"Perhaps he will weaken when he finds himself confronted by the stern necessity of making an effort to save his life."

"If he were guilty I might believe so, but I am convinced the man is innocent, but that for some unknown reason he would sooner die than talk."

"May he not be shielding some one else—a relative, perhaps?"

"I do not think so, for we have been unable to find any one who knows him. He seems to be a total stranger."

"What do his associates in the logging camp have to say?"

"That he walked into camp from the woods one day, applied for work, was given it and took his place. He was evidently inexperienced as an axman, and was put on duty as an assistant to the cook."

"How long ago was this?"

"Only a month. It is supposed that he had been in hiding in the woods or perhaps concealed in the cabin of some friendly negro between the time of the commission of the crime and that day upon which he applied for work at the camp."

The next morning I accompanied Mr. Briggs, the counsel for the defendant, over to the court house—a dilapidated old frame building which had once been whitewashed, as an observer might conclude from the mottled appearance of its exterior. About the door was the customary crowd of idlers; inside, the benches full of gaping curiosity seekers. Within the bar a few men sat with their feet on a long table, copying the attitude of the judge, whose dignity of station was marked by the small raised platform on which his chair was placed back of a smaller table. To be tried in such a place would give an unwonted horror to crime, and would technically make the infliction of punishment an unusual and barbarous distortion of justice. I was still studying the faces of the auditors when the case of the "State versus Ansil Berner" was called, and the sheriff entered with his prisoner—the murderer of Mme. Armand.

As he came up the aisle I looked at him, and, my God! it was Jason Brigham who was led forward, handcuffed and disheveled, to take his seat in the prisoner's box. I could scarcely believe that sight was not playing some trick with sense, that I was not the victim of an absurd and ludicrous hallucination. But there could be no mistake. Under the pinched and drawn face, sallow from exposure in the miasmatic swamps, under the long disheveled hair, the ragged, unkept beard of three months' growth, the rough, uncouth clothes, the slothful, dogged air—beneath all these I saw the face and features and the unmistakable personality of Jason Brigham—the man without a past.

In the tumult of my feelings I was blind to everything else, unconscious of everything else, and, rising to my feet, went forward to meet him with hands extended and his name upon my lips. "Jason—Jason Brigham."

His eye met mine, but there was no recognition in it. His face took on a curious expression of surprise—surprise not at seeing in an unexpected place one he had known, but astonishment that he should be mistaken for any one else than Ansil Berner.

"But don't you know me, Jason?" I persisted. "You have not forgotten Gilman, have you?"

"You evidently mistake me for some one you have known," said the man, raising his manacled hands and then letting them fall again as the steel chains smote sharply on each other. "I never saw you before."

"Never saw me before! Why, man, what new folly is this? You do not mean to tell me you have forgotten the life we led together in Memphis?"

"Some chance resemblance leads you into error," was the reply. "I was never in Memphis, tho' I know of the town very well."

"Yes, I should think you would," I retorted; "but, sir, since you do not choose to recall the past, I will not take measures to revive it."

"Did you know this man?" asked the judge.

"I knew him very well, your honor," I replied. "We were for several months associated together upon the editorial staff of the Memphis Avalanche; we roomed together and were inseparable friends."

"How long ago was this?"

"Last fall."

"And when did he leave there?"

"In November."

"That was impossible, for Mme. Armand was murdered in October."

"Then this man did not kill her, for I will take my oath that he was in Memphis at that time."

"What interest have you in this trial?" and as he asked the question the judge looked at me sharply.

"I have no interest except in seeing an innocent man preserved from a humiliating death. I came here as the representative of the New Orleans Picayune, without any knowledge of the parties in interest. Up to the time the prisoner entered the door I had no idea I had ever seen him, but I recognize in him an old friend, and one who in the nature of things could not have committed this crime of which he is accused."

"But the prisoner appears to deny the acquaintance," said the judge, somewhat cynically.

(To be continued.)

ST. PATRICK'S

Two St. Patrick's days in succession—that of 1894 and 1895—have been remarkable for being clear and cloudless. Nevertheless, there were typical wind flurries, and while the old Saint is supposed to have driven out serpents, he has never succeeded in driving out rheumatism and like pains and aches, which hold their own at this time of the year. No, it has been left to another Saint to accomplish this—St. Jacobs Oil—and whenever used for rheumatism it cures promptly. Don't trust the weather, but have a bottle handy all the time.

Customer—There's a chicken in this egg. Waiter—Of course there is; what did you expect—a duck?

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss.
LUCAS COUNTY.

FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

SEAL. A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Flowers in bloom late in autumn indicate a bad winter.—Old Proverb.

A WOMAN'S NERVES.

The Story of a Woman to Wh[illegible] Noise was Torture.

Prostrated by the Least Excitement—[illegible]sicians Baffled by Her Case.

(From the Gate City, Keokuk, Iowa.)

Mrs. Helen Meyers, whose home [illegible] 3515 Vernon avenue, Chicago, and w[illegible] visit to Keokuk, Ia., will long b[illegible] membered, was at one time affli[illegible] with a nervous malady which at t[illegible] drove her nearly to distraction. "T[illegible] terrible headaches are a thing of [illegible] past," she said the other day to a [illegible] City representative, "and there is [illegible] a story in connection with it, too.

"My nervous system sustained a [illegible] shock some fifteen years ago, bro[illegible] on, I believe, through too much w[illegible] ing over family matters, and then a[illegible] ing my love for my books to get the[illegible] ter of my discretion where my h[illegible] was concerned. Why, whenever m[illegible] fairs at home did not go along just [illegible] expected, I would invariably bec[illegible] prostrated from the excitement, a[illegible] would consider myself fortunate[illegible] deed, if the effects of the attack w[illegible] not remain for a week. I was ob[illegible] to give up our pleasant home no[illegible] from the Lake Shore drive, becau[illegible] could not stand the noise in that [illegible] ity. I could find no place in the[illegible] which I deemed suitable to one [illegible] nervous system was always on the [illegible] of explosion. To add to my misfo[illegible] my complexion underwent a c[illegible] and I looked so yellow and sallo[illegible] I was ashamed to venture fro[illegible] house at all.

"'Madam,' said my doctor t[illegible] soon after an unusually severe at[illegible] the malady, 'unless you leave t[illegible] and seek some place of quiet, yo[illegible] never recover.' So I concluded I [illegible] visit my uncle, who lives in [illegible] county, Iowa, and whose farm [illegible] surely be a good place for one [illegible] pitiable condition. I picked u[illegible] Gate City one day and happened t[illegible] across an interesting recital of t[illegible] covery of some woman in New [illegible] State who was afflicted as I had [illegible] This woman had been cured by D[illegible] liams' Pink Pills for Pale Peo[illegible] thought that if Pink Pills cure[illegible] woman they might do the same f[illegible] I began to take the pills accord[illegible] directions, and I began to feel [illegible] from the start. After I had take[illegible] eral boxes of them I was ready [illegible] back to Chicago. My nervousnes[illegible] gone and my complexion was as [illegible] as that of any sixteen-year-old [illegible] Iowa, and Pink Pills is what p[illegible] color in my cheeks. No wonder [illegible] in such high spirits and feel like [illegible] fighter. And no wonder I like t[illegible] to Keokuk, for if it had not be[illegible] Pink Pills, bought from a Keokuk [illegible] I would not have been alive [illegible] laughingly concluded the lady.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills conta[illegible] the elements necessary to give ne[illegible] and richness to the blood and [illegible] shattered nerves. They are for s[illegible] all druggists, or may be had b[illegible] from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co[illegible] Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c. per b[illegible] six boxes for $2.50.

"Don't you have a great deal of trou[illegible] ting a seat in the street cars?" Flunk—"[illegible] "How do you manage?" Flunk—"Alway[illegible] up."

SYMPATHETIC PAINS.

The different organs of the body a[illegible] sympathetic. One is very apt to [illegible] pain of another, and it is not alwa[illegible] to locate the trouble exactly. A we[illegible] not infrequently occasions a pain [illegible] side, and one limb often aches out [illegible] pathy for another.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS are [illegible] remedy in such cases. They are [illegible] in their effect, and draw out the [illegible] that the back or side or limbs are [illegible] instead of stiff, and free to perform [illegible] functions.

They have been tried by thousan[illegible] millions of people in every land, a[illegible] one uniform result, entire satisfactio[illegible]

BRANDRETH'S PILLS will relieve r[illegible] tism.

A Harlem youth refused to study ar[illegible] for fear he would be disfigured for life.

POOR INDEED!

The prospect of relief from drastic ca[illegible] for persons troubled with constipation [illegible] indeed. True they act upon the bow[illegible] this they do with violence, and their o[illegible] tends to weaken the intestines, and i[illegible] dicial to the stomach. Hostetter's S[illegible] Bitters is an effectual laxative, but it [illegible] gripes nor enfeebles. Furthermore, it p[illegible] digestion and a regular action of the li[illegible] the kidneys. It is an efficient barrier [illegible] and remedy for malarial complaints a[illegible] matism, and is of great benefit to the [illegible] nervous and aged. As a medicinal stim[illegible] cannot be surpassed. Physicians cordi[illegible] commend it, and its professional indo[illegible] is fully borne out by popular experienc[illegible] petite and sleep are both improved [illegible] agreeable invigorant and alterative.

What is love? It is a feeling that y[illegible] want another fellow following around h[illegible]

Piso's Cure for Consumption is an [illegible] 1 Asthma medicine.—W. R. Wi[illegible] Antioch, Ills., April 11, 1894.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itchin[illegible] One box has cured the worst cases of ter[illegible] standing. No one need suffer ten minut[illegible] using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It [illegible] tumors, allays the itching, acts as a po[illegible] gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Oi[illegible] is prepared only for Piles and itching [illegible] private parts, and nothing else. Every [illegible] warranted.....

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on [illegible] of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., [illegible] sale Agents, San Francisco.

Wolfe's Worm Powders. The [illegible] Remedy for worms. When your ch[illegible] are ailing, try them. At druggis[illegible] send 25c. to JNO. WOLFE, San F[illegible] Cal., and you will get them by ma[illegible]

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrica[illegible] querade costumes, wigs and play-books. [illegible] masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market S[illegible]

Try Germea for Breakfast.

The Door of [illegible]

The fear of [illegible] and the da[illegible] of parturiti[illegible] many a wo[illegible] breast wit[illegible] may. The[illegible] no reason [illegible] childbirth s[illegible] be fraught [illegible] danger and di[illegible]

It is a natural function, and shou[illegible] performed in a natural way without un[illegible] due suffering. Nature never intended that women should be tortured in this way.

Taken during gestation Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its dangers to both mother and child, by preparing the system for delivery, thereby shortening labor, lessening pain and abbreviating the period of confinement.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Per sale by all Druggists. 25 Cents a bottle.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

MEDICINE

"My little girl has always had a poor appetite. I have given her Hood's Sarsaparilla, and since I have given it to her she has had a good appetite and she looks well. I have been a great sufferer with headache and rheumatism. I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla. I am now well and have gained in strength. My husband was very sick and all run down. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla and he began to gain, and now he has got so he works every day."—MRS. ANNIE DUNLAP, 385 E. 4th St., S. Boston, Mass.

[illegible]arsaparilla [illegible]e Only [illegible]od Purifier

INCUBATORS

Send for Catalogue. W. C. Beach, Ripon, Cal.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS

A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

SAVE SHOE LEATHER

HEELS NEVER RUN OVER. Half Soles WITHOUT SEWING. 25c.

Ask for Dyke's Diamond or Oval Soles and Revolving Heels. Imitations are worthless. For sale by leading shoe dealers. Eureka Sole Co., Donohoe Bldg., S. F.

Agents wanted. Territory for sale.

If you want work or can organize a lodge, write to the order of Fraternal Argonauts, Rooms 87 and 88, Donohoe Building, San Francisco, Cal.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalogue tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc. AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. BRANCH HOUSE, 2313 Main St., Los Angeles.

WALTER BAKER & CO.

The Largest Manufacturers of PURE, HIGH GRADE COCOAS AND CHOCOLATES On this Continent, have received HIGHEST AWARDS from the great Industrial and Food EXPOSITIONS In Europe and America.

Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or other Chemicals or Dyes are used in any of their preparations. Their delicious BREAKFAST COCOA is absolutely pure and soluble, and costs less than one cent a cup.

SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE.

WALTER BAKER & CO. DORCHESTER, MASS.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE IS THE BEST.

FIT FOR A KING.

$5. CORDOVAN, FRENCH & ENAMELLED CALF.
$4. $3.50 FINE CALF & KANGAROO.
$3.50 POLICE, 3 SOLES.
$2.50 $2. WORKINGMEN'S. EXTRA FINE.
$2. $1.75 BOYS' SCHOOL SHOES.
LADIES.
$3. $2.50 $2. $1.75 BEST DONGOLA.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE. W. L. DOUGLAS, BROCKTON, MASS.

Over One Million People wear the W. L. Douglas $3 & $4 Shoes

All our shoes are equally satisfactory. They give the best value for the money. They equal custom shoes in style and fit. Their wearing qualities are unsurpassed. The prices are uniform,---stamped on sole. From $1 to $3 saved over other makes. If your dealer cannot supply you we can.

"GENTLEMEN: Regarding prospects for the coming year, would say, we hope to double our last year's output of Aermotors, or, at least, as we have done in the past, sell twenty-four out of every twenty-five windmills that are sold. Since commencing the sale in 1889, WE HAVE SOLD ABOUT

500 AERMOTORS

We do not attribute this fairly good record entirely to our efforts, but to the superiority of the goods which you make. BURNIE & DAVIS, Urbana, Ill., February 19, 1895."

GENTLEMEN: We bought and put up Aermotor No. 2, and out of the first fifty which you made we had thirteen. Since that time we have sold about

400 AERMOTORS

In our small territory is represented the history of the Aermotor and the Aermotor Company from the beginning to the present hour. That history is one of unbroken triumph. Aside from the Aermotor there have been but few other windmills put up in our territory—just enough with which to compare and show the infinite superiority of the Aermotor in design, workmanship, finish (all galvanized after completion), and ability to run and do effective work when all others stand idle for want of wind. We should have sold more, but this region was well supplied with wind power when the Aermotor appeared, it being only 66 miles to Chicago, and had for years been the battle ground for ten or twelve of the largest, best known and strongest windmill companies, all being located within 50 miles of us. MUCH OF OUR BUSINESS HAS COME FROM REPLACING WOODEN AND OTHER UNSATISFACTORY WHEELS WITH AERMOTORS. You say you have during the past year's record by which you expect to double your year surpassed any previous coming year. Count on us about one-half, and that for our portion of it, for last year's output the Aermotor never stood farther above all competitors in reputation and in fact than to-day. SAITH & BAUER, Marengo, Ill., February 25, 1895."

The next Aermotor ad. will be of pumps. We shall offer for three way force pump. All dealers should have it or can get it to sell at that price. All Aermotor men will have it. The week following will appear our advertisement of galvanized steel tanks at 2½ cents per gallon. They neither shrink, leak, rust, nor make water taste bad. Aermotor Co., Chicago.

$7.50 A $15

MEN Dr. LIEBIG & CO.

Special Doctors for Chronic, Private and Wasting Diseases.

Dr. Liebig's Invigorator, the greatest remedy for Sexual Weakness, Loss of Manhood and Private Diseases, overcomes Prematureness and prepares all for marriage life's duties, pleasures and responsibilities; $1 trial bottle given or sent free to any one describing symptoms; call or address 400 Geary St., private entrance 405 Mason St., San Francisco.

S. F. N. U. No. 669. New Series No. 16.

THE IMPERIAL GRANUM IS SOLD BY DRUGGISTS. JOHN CARLE & SONS, NEW YORK.

"A FAIR FACE MAY PROVE A FOUL BARGAIN." MARRY A PLAIN GIRL IF SHE USES

SAPOLIO

MALARIA! Three doses only. Try it.

DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY.

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, MAY 24, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVI. NO. 49. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., MAY 24, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1282.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.00
Three Months	1.25
One Month	50
Single Copies	10

ABE LINCOLN.

Greatful but not Elated at His Re-election.

A GLOOMY AND RAINY NOVEMBER.

If He Knew His Heart, He Said, it Was Free From any Taint of Personal Triump.

Mr. Noah Brook's reminiscences of Lincoln are continued in the April number of the Century. Mr. Brooks gives the following picture of Lincoln's reception of the news of his re-election:

The day of the Presidential election in November, 1864, was gloomy and rainy. About noon I called on President Lincoln, and to my surprise found him entirely alone, as if by common consent everybody had avoided the White House. It was "cabinet day," and at the meeting which had been held earlier only two members of the cabinet were present. Stanton was at his home, sick with chills and fever; Seward, Usher, and Dennison, had returned to their own States to vote; and Fessenden was closeted with New York financiers in conference over ways and means to place the new loan. So Secretary Welles and Attorney-General Bates were left to "run the machine," and very little time had been occupied by them at their session with the President. Lincoln took no pains to conceal his anxious interest in the result of the election then going on all over the country, and said: "I am just enough of a politician to know that there was not much doubt about the result of the Baltimore convention; but about this thing I am very far from being certain." I spent nearly all the afternoon with the President, who apparently found it difficult to put his mind on any of the routine work of his office, and entreated me to stay with him. . . . Later in the evening I returned to the White House and found that the only returns then received were from Indiana, which showed that a gain of 1,500 had been made in Indianapolis for the Republican ticket. Later on we went over to the War Department, and there heard good news from Baltimore, that city having sent in a majority of more than 10,000. Other reports soon came in, but not very rapidly, as a rain-storm had interfered with the transmission of news over the telegraph wires. There was a long lull about ten o'clock in the evening, during which the Prseident amused the little company in the War Office with entertaining reminiscences and anecdotes naturally suggested by the political intelligence that dropped in from time to time.

For instance, when New Jersey broke the calm by announcing a gain of one Congressman for the Union, but with a fair prospect of the State going for McClellan, Lincoln had an amusing story to tell about that particular Congressman, Dr. Newell, who had long been a family friend of the Lincolns. A dispatch from New York city, claiming the State by 10,000, was received by the chief magistrate with much incredulity; and when Greely telegraphed that the State would probably give 4,000 majority for Lincoln, he said that that was much more reasonable than the absurd statement of a bigger majority.

By midnight Pennsylvania, the New England States, Marlyand, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, and Wisconsin were tolerably certain for Lincoln; but the President was greatly disappointed that neither Illinois nor Iowa was heard from. The wires continued to work badly on account of the long storm, and it was not until two days later that satisfactory returns were had from Illinois or any of the States beyond the Mississippi.

About midnight of the day of the election it was certain that Lincoln had been re-elected, and the few gentlemen left in the office congratulated him very warmly on the result. Lincoln took the matter very calmly, showing not the least elation or excitement, but said that he would admit that he was glad to be relieved of all suspense, and that he was grateful that the verdict of the pepole was likely to be so full, clear, and unmistakable that there could be no dispute.

About two o'clock in the morning a messenger came over from the White House with the news that a crowd of Pennslyvanians were serenading his empty chamber, whereupon he went home; and, in answer to repeated calls, made a happy little speech full of good feeling and cheerfulness. He wound up his remarks by saying, "If I know my heart, my gratitude is free from any taint of personal triumph. I do not impugn the motives of any one opposed to me. It is no pleasure to me to triumph over any one, but I give thanks to the Almighty for this evidence of the people's resolution to stand by free government and the rights of humanity."

Next day, in private conversation, he said: "Being only mortal, after all, I should have been a little mortified if I had been beaten in this canvass before the people; but the sting would have been more than compensated by the thought that the people had notified me that my official responsibilities were soon to be lifted off my back." Dr. A. G. Henry of Washington Territory, whose name has frequently been mentioned in these papers as an old friend of the President, had been promised that he should receive a dispatch from Mr. Lincoln when the result of the Presidential election of that year should be definitely ascertained. Accordingly, on this day, which was November 9, President Lincoln dictated a dispatch, the terms of which were as follows: "With returns and States of which we are confident, the re-election of the President is considered certain, while it is not certain that McClellan has carried any State, though the chances are that he has carried New Jersey and Kentucky."

When I had written the dispatch at the President's dictation, I passed it to him for his signature; but he declined to "blow his own horn," as he expressed it, and said: "You sign the message, and I will send it." A day or two later, when Delaware, whose vote had been uncertain, declared for McClellan, Lincoln sent a second dispatch in order to give his friend on the far-off Pacific coast a clear and exact idea of what had happened, explaining that he took it for granted that Dr. Henry would hear all the news, but might think it odd that the President should leave him without clearing up the situation thus left somewhat undecided in the uncertainties of the election returns.

One day Lincoln narrated an incident the particulars of which I wrote out and printed directly after. These are his own words, as nearly as they could then be recalled:

"It was just after my election in 1860, when the news had been coming in thick and fast all day and there had been a great 'hurrah, boys,' so that I was well tired out, and went home to rest, throwing myself down on a lounge in my chamber. Opposite where I lay was a bureau with a swinging glass upon it" (and here he got up and placed furniture to illustrate the position,) "and looking in that glass I saw myself reflected nearly at full length; but my face, I noticed, had two separate and distinct images, the tip of the nose of one being about three inches from the tip of the other. I was a little bothered, perhaps startled, and got up and looked in the glass, but the illusion vanished. On lying down again, I saw it a second time, plainer, if possible, than before; and then I noticed that one of the faces was a little paler—say five shades—than the other. I got up, and the thing melted away, and I went off, and in the excitement of the hour forgot all about it—nearly, but not quite, for the thing would once in a while come up, and give me a little pang as if something uncomfortable had happened.

"When I went home that night I told my wife about it, and a few days afterwards I made the experiment again, when" (with a laugh,) "sure enough! the thing came again; but I never succeeded in bringing the ghost back after that, though I once tried very industriously to show it to my wife, who was somewhat worried about it. She thought it was a 'sign' that I was to be elected to a second term of office, and that the paleness of one of the faces was an omen that I should not see life through the last term."

This is a very remarkable story—a coincidence, we may say, to which some significance was given by the cruel death of the President soon after the beginning of his second term. I told Mrs. Lincoln the story, and asked her if she remembered its details. She expressed surprise that Mr. Lincoln was willing to say anything about it, as he had up to that time refrained from mentioning the incident to any body; and as she was firm in her belief that the optical illusion (which it certainly was) was a warning, I never again referred to the subject to either the President or his wife.

Subsequently, Lincoln's version of the story was confirmed by Private Secretary John Hay, who, however, was of the opinion that the illusion had been seen on the day of Lincoln's first nomination, and not, as I have said, on the day of his first election.

JAPAN A RICH NATION.

There is a general belief that Japan is a poor country; that a long war would exhaust her more than many other countires—China, for example. Probably the idea originated in the extreme lowness of prices in Japan; but that is no criterion. Living is cheaper in London than in Hong Kong, but nobody calls London a poorer place on that account.

As a matter of fact, Japan is now rapidly becoming self-supporting, and therefore need have little fear of exhaustion. She has money enough for all requirements; her taxation is very high, yet her revenue leaves a surplus over expenditures every year, her imports almost balance her exports, and both are increasing yearly, and are not suffering in the least from the war. When the accumulated surplus (about 40,000,000 yen) had all been voted away in war expenses, a war loan of 30,000,000 yen, and now another of 150,000,000, have been readily raised without causing any appreciable dislocation. Government bonds were about six per cent. premium in the beginning of the year, when there was a distinct boom in the market; now, when the war has gone on three months, the surplus been spent and the loans been raised, they are still at two per cent. premium, with an upward tendency.

The country is not poor in any sense of the word. The land, though of hardly larger extent than England, and in some parts too mountainous for cultivation, supports a population of 40,000,000, and produces a rice crop which is usually larger than the whole grain crop of Russia.—London Times

A battalion of infantry has 150 picks, 150 shovels, 10 spades, 25 axes, 50 bill-hooks, and 4 crowbars. An engineer company has 130 picks, 130 shovels, 6 spades, 81 axes, 13 handsaws, 4 cross-cut saws, 40 billhooks, 13 crowbars, and 20 heavy hammers.

It is now possible for a traveller to go direct by rail from the City of Mexico to British Columbia, a distance of 6,000 miles. This has been made feasible by the recent completion of the California and Oregon Railway.

TO THE NORTH POLE.

A Two Thousand Mile Ride in a Balloon.

ABOUT SIX DAYS AND SIX NIGHTS.

Andree's Novel Airship Will be Operated on a New Plan Which Other Aeronauts Indorse.

S. A. Andree, the distiguished Swedish civil engineer and scientific aeronaut, will start next year on a balloon journey to the North Pole, under the auspices of the Royal Swedish Academy of Science and with the financial support of a number of Swedish gentlemen.

Chimerical as such an undertaking seems to be, its projectors believe it will be a success, with most important results.

In a lecture before the Royal Swedish Academy recently Mr. Andree outlined his plans. He declared that the science of balloon construction and of steering a balloon during the last four years has advanced so far as almost to solve the practicability of aerial navigation.

His plan is to establish headquarters at the Norwegian Islands on the northwest coast of Spitzenbergen. Here a house or shed of sufficient size to cover a balloon of 22 metres, or 72.6 feet, in diameter when filled with gas, will be erected, and from this point the ballon journey to the North Pole will commence. The greatest expert in the world on balloon construction and aerial voyages, the celebrated balloon manufacturer, the late L. Gabriel Yon, of Paris, in a letter to Mr. Andree indorsed the plan as entirely practicable, and advised him to use a balloon of 22 meters in diameter, to be constructed of two-fold silk covers, and said that a balloon of this size and construction would float for thirty days without refilling. As an indorsement of M. Yon's statement, Henri Giffard, Poisneilles and Graham, who are well-known aeronauts, computed that the balloon would lose comparatively a small amount of gas in a month.

The gas used for balloons is now manufactured and for sale, and can be transported any distance in cylinders; 1,700 to 1,800 cylinders are sufficient to fill a polar balloon such as Mr. Andree will use and can without any difficulty be transported to Spitzbergen. As it might be somewhat dangerous to fill a balloon in the open air, Mr. Andree will erect a portable shed to cover the balloon when being filled.

The balloon under construction will be of such carrying power as to support a large, strongly built gondola. The gondola will contain a dark room for photographic purposes, a sleeping room for three persons, and will be provided with a system of sails for steering. The gondola will be suspended from the balloon in such a way that in case of disaster it can be instantly detached.

An interesting feature of the projected trip is that the balloon will not rise higher over the earth on an average than 825 feet. This will be accomplished by means of drag-lines, constructed of cocoa fibre, thus permitting them to float on water. The balloon can therefore be kept at the same distance from the earth in passing either over ice or water.

The balloon will also be provided with a great number of free hanging ballast lines. The object of these is that in case the balloon from some cause or other suddenly sinks to a great depth as soon as the balast line touches the ground the balloon will be relieved of a corresponding weight and the sinking will stop before the gondola touches the ground.

The journey, as now planned, will be in a direct line from Spitzenbergen over the Nort Pole to Behring Sound, a distance of about 2,294 miles, and will not, it is expected, occupy more than six days, which is a fifth part of the time the balloon can float without refilling.

Geographical and meteoroloigcal observations en route will be made by a competent scientist. Photographs will be taken of the country as the balloon floats forward, and these will be taken in double sets. One set will be developed on board the balloon in case the traveler meet with accident and have to take to the gondola. The balloon will also be provided with Davy's safety lamps, and an electric storage battery for cooking, etc.

In the polar regions during the month of July, the sun, both by night and day, is above the horizon, so that the Arctic regions are peculiarly fitted for a long aerial voyage. The lowest temperature at Spitzbregen in July, 1883, was a few degrees above the zero point.

Another advantage of ballooning in the Arctic regions is the absence of vegetation, and thus the drag-lines will pass along evenly and without obstruction. Still another advantage is the absence of electrical storms: no record has ever been made of lightning or thunder in this part of the globe. It has been suggested that a heavy snow fall would destroy the balloon, and this would certainly be a misfortune. But from records made in July at Spitzbergen this danger is not to be feared.

The total cost of the expedition will be about $40,000, and this amount has already been subscribed. King Oscar of Sweden takes a great interest in the proposed balloon journey, and will no doubt materially aid Mr. Andree.

Baron Nordenskjold, the famous polar traveller and discoverer of the Northwest Passage, has strongly recommended the expedition to the Royal Academy, and has stated the only practical way of reaching the North Pole is by means of a balloon. From his large experience of polar and arctic meteorological conditions, he is satisfied that Andree's plan will be successful. As the distance from Spitzenbergen to the North Pole is only about seven hundred miles, with a south wind, the expedition should in a few hours see more of the polar regions than would be discovered in several centuries by old methods of exploration.

Dr. Nils Ekholm, probably the best informed meteorologist in Europe and one of the members of the Swedish Spitzenbergen expedition in 1882, '83, says that the wind currents are favorable during the summer months, for a balloon voyage. The only danger he fears is that on reaching the North Pole, or the centre of the polar regions, a perfect calm may be found to prevail but experience has proved that such a centre is usually surrounded by wind currents blowing outward.

Mr. Andree has a European reputation as a scientific aerial traveler. He is not an enthusiast, but a practical, cool-headed man of science, who has made many experimental tests besides many balloon journeys. In his balloon Svea last November he traveled from Gothenburg on the west coast of Sweden to the Island of Gotland, in the Baltic, a distance of over 245 English miles, covering the distance in five hours.

PEOPLE AND EVENTS.

The Atlanta Constitution will be represented in Japan this summer by its Washington man, Mr. E. W. Barrett.

James Kemp, who has just died in Boston, is said to have been the first man converted by the Salvation Army in the United States. A member of the army picked him out of an ash barrel while he was drunk. The next day he joined the army, and soon rose to be a captain, an office which he held until his death.

The Japanese Mikado is a man of much energy and endurance in spite of the fact that he is a great cigarette-smoker. He is fond of outdoor sports, and has warmly encouraged the introduction of football into Japan. He is a hunter and fisherman, and is quite a good shot with a rifle. His devotion to lawn tennis is marked, and he wields a very clever racquet.

Mr. Gladstone is a believer in the theory that a man can do better mental work every year to extreme old age if he takes care of his body. He claims that the mind grows stronger and clearer as the body loses vitality, and that it is only disease of the latter that can prevent an intellectual progress that will go on to the end. He is certainly a good illustration of his working theory.

The Sultan of Turkey is more interested in Americans who visit his palace at Constantinople than in guests of other nationalities and frequently extends to them special courtesies. A party of them recently received with the Sutlan's compliments bouquets of fresh flowers that he had cut for their benefit. He is said to consider American women the best dressed of those who invade his palace.

Oscar Wilde is a walking epigram factory. When an idea comes into his head that seems available as a disguise for truth he writes it down at once. It doesn't matter whether he is at a stately dinner party or in conversation at a club. His pad and pencil are always with him and the pockets of his clothes are never free from slips of paper containing startling paradoxes clothed in crisp language.

Rev. Dr. John Broadus, the eminent Baptist preacher, scholar, and author, who died in Louisville last week, attained eminence as an author by the publication of the famous book "Preparation and Delivery of Sermons." This has been republished in all civilized countries and it is used as a text book in the theological seminaries of all denominations in Europe and America and in the missionary schools of Asia and Africa. As a Greek scholar he ranked high.

Kate Field says she thinks that Worth made for her the only dress that he ever made of American material. She took him a piece of American satin for the purpose and at first he refused point-blank to touch it. "The manufacturers at Lyons would never forgive me," he said. "They would accuse me of treachery." But eventually Miss Field's persuasion prevailed. Worth was exceedingly frank with his customers. "Choose that color if you like," he said one day to a rich American woman, "but you'll look like a fright and your husband will refuse to pay the bill."

There is some prospect that dueling in France will be checked by the most potent of French influences, ridicule. M. Rochefort, who himself has been principal in a good many affairs, characterizes dueling as "ignoble slaughtering." He adds: "To say of a poor man one has just run through, 'I am delighted to have killed him,' would be scandalous. On the other hand, to appear to be heartbroken about it would be absurd, as one only appears on the ground with that object, unless it be to get a little fresh air or to arrest a tendency to obesity." M. Dumas thinks one should not, as a rule, take any notice of an insult. If a gentleman is walking with a lady, however, and a passerby insults the lady it is impossible to let the matter pass. He recommends that the gentleman should not challenge the insulter, but should give him a sound thrashing] on the spot.

The amount of ash given by tea leaves when burned is said to be a measure of the quality of the tea. The difference is small amongst good samples, but the quantity of ash increases amongst the inferior and adulterated samples.

IMAGE MAKERS.

Italians Who Make and Sell Plaster Casts.

A FEW FACTORIES IN AMERICA.

How Images are Made, Painted and Prepared for Peddlers—The Work is Done Very Swiftly.

At last the Sicilian fisher-maiden with the red and green turban, who stood lifting one corner of her skirt so daintily, was gone. A woman in a brick cottage had bought her for 80 cents—when she learned that the regular price was $1—and Sig. Benacenti, the vender of images, saw her placed on a corner shelf by the side of a bouquet of artificial roses. Then he lifted the black wicker basket with a peculiar gentle swing to his shoulder and set off down the street jingling the silver in the pocket of his threadbare trousers.

It is true that the brindle cow with the ractured tail still remained hidden under the soiled piece of carpet at the bottom of the basket, but that did not discourage Sig. Benacenti. When he started out in the morning more than a dozen wonderfully painted images and vases with roses all over them peeped out from under the carpet, but they had all gone to ornament the little homes where the Italian had called. When business was so good Sig. Benacenti never cared how tired his throat grew from twanging "Emages, emages" all day long, and he even forgot about the rebuffs which he received from the scores of women who didn't want any of his wares. But often he went home through the little back alley which led to his basement with the fisher-maidens still peeping over the rim of the basket just as they did when he started out in the morning.

In such cases the three other members of the firm of imagemakers and venders were gloomy all the next day.

The factory —if it can be dignified by that name—is in a basement under a saloon conducted by an Irishman of political influence, who visits his neighbors just before each election, but who designates them by the name "dagos" all the rest of the year. Although there are only a few image factories of this kind in America its location and the names of Sig. Benacenti and his companions are not revealed by the city directory. About two years ago the four Italians left their wives and children in a little, narrow Roman street and came to America to see if they couldn't earn some money. That is how the factory in the basement came to be opened.

Two of the Italians busy themselves all the time in making the images and the other two in selling them on the streets. None of them has much English besides the word "emage" at his disposal, but it is wonderful how much expression they can put into that one call.

The models for the images, to the number of twenty or thirty, were brought by the Italians from across the water. Sig. Benacenti and his companions do not claim originality—in fact, the models which they follow are known all over the world and have been used for years.

The little shop is gloomy and foul-smelling. In one corner stands the cook stove used by the four imagemakers, which serves also for heating the glue and oils used in the processes. The mingled odors thus produced are almost unbearable to the uninitiated visitor. In another corner stands the bed, filled with soiled and tumbled clothing. It has apparently only room for two persons, and where the other two sleep is a mystery. Perhaps they take turns or possibly all four crowd into the bed.

In the front part of the shop stands a long bench covered with models, molds and half-completed images, and not far away are barrels containing plaster of paris and clay.

If the image of a fisher-maiden is to be made the model from the old country is taken and covered evenly to the thickness of about three-fourths of an inch with moist clay. Over this a coating of plaster of paris to the depth of an inch is applied with as shallow spoon. This double coating is now allowed to dry, after which the outside plaster is carefully cut away in four sections of such a shape that each will come off without cracking. The edges of the sections are fitted with small, button-like protuberances so arranged that the buttons of one piece will fit into notches of the same size in the next, thus preventing them from slipping sidewise.

Then the Italian who does the painting takes the plaster sections and treats them to a bath of linseed oil until they are literally soaked. After a long process of drying a coat of shellac is applied, and the mold is finished. It is no longer brittle, but as hard and tough as stone. The clay that formed the first coat over the original model is now taken off and thrown away, and the workmen are ready to make the glue face of the mold.

This is done by firmly fastening the model inside of the molds already described in such a way that the space intervening between the two will be just the thickness of the old clay covering.

The sections of the mold are held together by means of pieces of rope. By this time the glue, which has been simmering away on the stove and exhaling strong odors, is ready for use. It has been heated in a common wash-boiler placed within a larger one, with water between the two to prevent scorching.

With his sleeves rolled up, one of the Italians pours the glue from a dipper slowly, into a hole left in the upper part of the mold. When filled it is set outside to cool, after which the sections of the mold with the glue next under them are removed cautiously and placed to one side to dry and harden.

In two or three days the glue and plaster mold is ready for use, and the casting begins. It is the most important part of the whole work and it takes a good deal of skill. Plaster of paris has been mixed in a tub to the consistency of cream and is all ready for pouring.

The mold sections of the fisher-maiden are first oiled with kerosene, then fastened together with cords, and one of the Italians holds them upright in his hands. Then another pours a little stream of the liquid plaster into the hole at the top. Instantly the man who holds the mold shakes and rolls it about so that the plaster will not stick and dry all in one place. As soon as the first pouring has hardened—and it takes only a few minutes for the water to soak out of the plaster—the man with the dipper pours in some more, and this in turn is dashed about until it sticks and dries inside. As soon as the plaster has formed a thin, even shell all over the inside of the mold—and the latlian knows as if by instinct when the right moment has arrived—the sections of the mold are taken carefully away and the hollow, snowy-white image stands forth perfect.

When hollow images of this kind are not desired the liquid plaster is poured into the mold until it is filled and hardens there without any shaking.

Sometimes where there is danger of the legs of animals breaking off, pieces of wire are inserted in the glue part of the mold about the center of the feet, and they take the place of bones when the plaster has solidified around them.

The rough edges left on the image where the mold sections were divided are now cut or sand-papered away and the fisher-maiden goes to the drying cupboard, which stands back of the Italian's cook stove. Here she remains for four or five days until the plaster is as hard as it ever will be. Then the Italian who attends to the painting part dips the image into a vessel containing a thin solution of glue, which is allowed to dry on. This is for the purpose of making the decorating paints and varnishes stick easily.

At another corner of the room there is a long table covered with pots of paint and varnish, each provided with a brush. Here the images go through a transformation. The eyes of the fisher-maiden become brown like those of every pretty Italian girl and the turbans and skirts are painted in colors whose brightness would put to shame any fashion-plates ever issued. The grass on which some of the sheep and cattle recline is intensely green and the roses on the vases are all a deep crimson. The work is done very swiftly, the Italian apparently driving his brush by instinct.

After a few more days of drying the images are ready for the baskets of the peddlers. By hard work and long hours the four Italians hope soon to earn enough money to pay the passage-way of their wives and children across the water and then perhaps the factory may come out of the basement and seek more pretentious quarters.—Record.

OUR MISCELLANY.

Bermuda farms bear three successive crops in one year.

A demand has arisen in New England for the restoration of the half-cent to the national coinage.

A Chinese sect believes that women by embracing vegetarianism will become men on the judgment day.

Will somebody come around and tell a reason why a woman with a waterproof on always wears her best stockings?—Philadelphia Record.

A law in Norway prohibits any one from spending more than five cents for liquor at one visit to a public house, and alcoholic stimulants are supplied only to sober persons.

The tobacco raised in Beloochistan is exceedingly strong, and cannot be smoked by any but the most vigorous white men. The natives do not appear to be affected by it, and children of ten and twelve years puff away all day without any discomfort.

Dr. Delbruch, of the Berlin brewers' school, declares, after a study of American breweries, that their product is excellent and their methods worthy of like praise. He found American beer brewed of Indian corn to be very good, though inferior to that made from barley. He thought it worth while to experiment in Germany with malt made from corn, and he thinks the industry worth attention.

By the time Alaska is ready for settlement, its resources will probably be much improved, which is far better than to have a great wave of immigration to destroy them. The Siberian reindeer taken to Alaska are increasing rapidly, and this domesticated animal will be an invaluable help to settlers. If the waste of fish and game along the coast could be stopped, the big territory would be in excellent shape.

It is now possible to send an express package to almost any place in the United States above the dignity of a cross-roads hamlet, and such is the comity prevailing among the companies that almost any one of them will accept packages to be sent to places within the exclusive territory of another. The business has grown enormously within twenty years, and it is no more a mystery to the bulk of the people.

If you suppress the exorbitant love of pleasure and money, idle curiosity, iniquitous purpose and wanton mirth, what a stillness would there be in the greatest cities.—Bruyere.

The proposed Ladies Club in Boston came to grief very suddenly. The original six members blackballed the applicants as fast as they applied.

LAST YEAR'S GOLD INCREASE.

Colorado did not distance California and become the first of the gold-producing States as was predicted during the latter part of 1894. The Denver Republican canvassed the gold-mining districts and footed up the returns for the year at $11,235,506, an increase of three and three-quarter million dollars over the yield of 1893. Wells, Fargo & Co. the bankers and expressmen who carry practically all the gold and silver out of all the mining camps of the West published a larger estimate in their forecast of the official figures in a circular dated December 31, 1894. They put Colorado's yield at $12,175,007 and California's at $10,090,646. From the United States Mint at Denver I have just obtained the official figures that have been sent to the Director of the Mint at Washington D. C. They are as follows: Gold $10,616,463; silver (estimated at 63 cents an ounce the average price in 1894), $14,961,525; lead, $3,199,175; copper, $761,575.

These figures are disappointing to those who believe that they know Colorado to have uncovered the richest gold mines in America, but to those who have no other information than the figures give them the increase in gold production from four millions in 1890 and seven and a half millions in 1893 to nearly ten and three-quarters millions in 1894 is sufficiently great to seem almost marvellous. So, too, is the lightning like change the State has made from a silver to a gold camp.

California is still the leading gold State. It has been credited with an advance from twelve and a half millions in 1893 to more than fourteen millions in 1894. The gain during the last year was due to the new working of old mines, and also to the operation of placer mines, idle for a dozen years, but now worked again under the new hydraulic mining law. But in California, as everywhere else in this country, it is the quartz-mining that yields the heaviest returns. This needs so great an original outlay that there are said to be hundreds of mines in California, unproductive, undeveloped, or altogether idle, that are the property of men and companies without the means to work them. The improved modern machinery used in quartz-mining is what makes this more profitable than ever before, and it is investment in these mines that has increased, and will in years to come increase, the gold output of the State. The Utica Mine, which turned out $1,309,987.51 in 1893; the Kennedy Mine, in Amador county, which yielded $662,729.63; and the North Star Mine, at Grass Valley, which produced $335,756.94—were all old mines that had been reopened or worked by perfected methods. According to the San Farncisco Chronicle, "the State mineralogist says that more attention is being paid to mining than for twenty years past. Men from the East are looking over the gold-fields, and there have been more inquires for mining properties during the past year than at any time during the preceding two decades."—Harper's Weekly.

SHE SOLD HER DIARY.

There seems to be no limit to a woman's self-sacrifice when she once takes a charitable object to her heart. This is the story of a girl who sold her dairy—and you have to be a woman to realize all that that means, says the New York Herald:

It was on shipboard, and it happened on the way over from Liverpool last summer. The girl was a millionaire's daughter, and in addition to devoting her pocket money to the east side mission, of which she was a patroness, she spent most of her leisure time crocheting wonderful and altogether useless nothings, which she persuaded her rich admirers to buy at fabulous prices for the benefit for the poor. She had devoted the entire trip to this pretty work—except for an hour a day, which she spent in filling out her diary with such sentimental observations as misses of 20 or thereabout are apt to find expression for on the innocent white pages of their diaries.

The friends she had victimized on the way over, by luring dollars from their pockets in exchange for crocheted things, made much sport of her diary, and at last conspired against her peace of mind.

"Now, say, Miss Blank," said one of them, in pursuance of the plot, "we have decided to strike. We are not going to help your tenement house heathen a cent's worth more unless you sell us your diary. How much will you take for it?"

"How much will you give?" asked the girl, after a little thought.

Five dollars was the bid and refused. Miss Blank then playfully put the precious volume up at auction, and the men in the party, never dreaming that she could be in earnest, piled bid upon bid until the price stood at $65.

"The diary is yours, Mr. Jones," said the girl to the successful bidder," but remember my terms are spot cash, with the further condition that you leave it with me until I can make a copy for myself."

The laugh was on Jones, and his companions forced him to pay down the money on the spot. Miss Blank delivered the diary, and of course all that the unlucky joker could do was to return it unopened with his compliments.

Uncle Gabe walked around the stalwart football-player with an air of critical curiosity; he looked up and down as he would have done a horse he was about to purchase. "Amandy!" "What is it, Gabe?" "He's nigh onto six foot, ain't he?" "Every inch of it." "Weighs about 190 odd?" "I reckon." "Well, football certainly does develop 'em most powerful!" "Certainly, a fine young man." "'Man'? Mandy, Professor Bunter told me hisself 't that feller's in his fourth year! Talk about your oatmeal porridge!"

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, MAY 24 1895

There is a deal of misunderstanding and dense ignorance concerning the importance of money. It is a common thing to hear people talk about money as if it were the ultimate object for which men are striving. But it is not. Nobody really works for money. The thing called money is simply a medium of exchange, a convenience, of course, especially in small transactions. People could live without money, but they could not live without the things for which money is exchanged. Money is a measure of value; but money itself has no value, except as a means for the accomplishment of an end. Gold and silver coins have intrinsic value only in the metal, which is a value independent of their money value, and which would exist without the legal tender quality imparted by legislation. Merely as money no dollar can benefit a man except by his parting with it It is not wealth, but is simply the representative of wealth Which is the more important, a measure of value or value itself? A representative of wealth, or wealth itself? A yardstick, or the cloth which the yardstick measures? While a judicious system of finance should be the aim of a civil government it is of minor importance compared with the question of squelching gigantic monopolies and giving labor the benefit of unrestricted opportunities.

Chile's Currency Conversion law will create a market for some of the surplus silver that has kept the market prices down. The Chile law provides for a return to specie payment on a gold and silver basis. All the proceeds from the sale of nitrate beds are to be devoted to the purchase of silver The silver coin will not be legal tender above $50, but the Government will receive silver as the equivalent of gold. At the mint the coin of the two metals will be interchangeable. The fact that the Government receives silver for all dues will prevent depreciation as a result of its legal-tender power. In fact this limit may have been designed to prevent the inconvenience of payment of large debts in silver coin. Chile is the most progressive of South American countries and is quite likely to establish the financial standard that will eventually be adopted as a specie basis is reached.

The condition of the state Treasury is a disgrace to California, but it is one of the natural penalties, for electing to the high office of Governor a man like H. H. Markham, who, himself and through his appointees inaugurated an era of profligacy and mismanagement of public affairs that leaves no money to pay the current expenses of State government, until new taxes are levied and collected. But the people elected Markham after his true character was known, and they are now paying for their poor judgement.

The Standard Oil Company is reported to have made a combine with the owners of the Baku wells of Russia, which will enable the combine to fix the price of light for the civilized world. It is admitted, however, that the consent of the Russian Emperor is necessary to the arrangement. The inference is that the consent of the American Government is either secured or not considered essential to the success the combine.

The circumstance that the gold reserve continues to increase must be a severe disappointment to curbstone financiers and critics of the Administration, but with the Government's credit kept stable and industry in all its branches reviving, it is going to be exceedingly difficult to make any new party strong enough to hope for success in 1896.

Now the startling information comes that the Carnegie steel company has elevated the wages of its 25,000 employees 10 per cent. And the "Gorman-Wilson free trade" tariff measure is still in full force and effect. Who ever heard of the Carnegie company raising wages during the McKinley era? Truly, Andy, this is "the most unkindest cut of all," for your friends o. the g. o. p.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING
EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.
FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

AS WE SEE THINGS.

INFLUENCE OF THE INNER LIFE ON THE EXTERNAL WORLD.

How an Individual or a Scene May Have an Entirely Different Appearance to Two Persons—Happiness and Sorrow Made by Ourselves.

There have been philosophers who declared that the earth on which we stand and the stars on which we gaze have no real existence, but are merely the outcomes of our inner selves. Perhaps the best answer to this is that the mind itself, at least that of most people, refuses to receive the idea. The difference between the me and the not me is too sharply defined in the inner consciousness to permit Bishop Berkeley's notion from taking root within us.

Yet we cannot afford to overlook the germ of truth which this idea contains. Though not literally the creation of our thought, the outer world is to each one of us largely that which we make it. Nature herself, in all her varied scenes, whatever she may be in reality, shows herself to us in the light which we throw upon her. One man looks at a landscape and sees land and water, grass and trees, hills and plains, and nothing more. Another, a farmer, sees the growing crops, the fallow land, the noxious weeds, the prospect for future tillage and the obstacles to be overcome. Another, with a painter's eye, sees every variety of form and color, proportion and perspective, harmony and contrast, beauty and sublimity. To the melancholy man all is tinctured with gloom—a leaden pall covers even the gayest scenes—while to the joyous everything seems bright and glad, and even the dreariest of November days only suggests the radiant sunlight that is sure later on to struggle through the clouds.

So with the sights of a city. For each of us as they take on the aspect of our own mental condition. How differently they impress the citizen who has spent his life among them from the foreigner who views them for the first time! What a different message the stately and magnificent buildings bear to the absorbed man of business and to the architect who appreciates every detail of their construction!

If there is so wide a divergence in the aspect which inanimate things have for us, the difference is still greater in the way we regard the men and women by whom we are surrounded. Character is a complex thing, difficult to detect, impossible to fathom, yet we presumptuously venture to gauge and pronounce upon it with the smallest modicum of knowledge. It is curious to notice how differently the same person will impress various individuals. His friend will perhaps see no fault in him, his enemy no virtue. One will put faith in him; another will suspect his every action. One will deem him cold hearted; another will think him affectionate and kind. It must be that their own personalities are reflected in him, and that to a certain extent he does thus become for a time, while under their influence, what they suppose him to be always. It is certainly true that the good and gentle find far more goodness and gentleness in the world than those who are deficient in such qualities. It is the selfish man who is the keenest to detect selfishness in others; it is the overbearing who complain most of the arrogance and pride with which they are met, and the unjust who murmur at the injustice they receive. On the other hand, the loving and sympathetic discover love and sympathy everywhere; the noble and true bring to light nobility and truth which might otherwise be hidden. Thus to a large extent we develop the character of those we meet. By a subtle magnetism we draw like to like and evolve out of other personalities the characteristics of our own.

Even the outward circumstances of life are largely what we ourselves make them. We are accustomed to consider prosperity a blessing and adversity a curse, but quite frequently they change places. It is the spirit in which they are received that determines their result. The rich and self indulgent man, surrounded by luxury and opportunity, may be far less happy than his poorer neighbor who brings industry, fidelity and generosity into constant exercise. The same privileges that raise one young man to honor and usefulness are a snare and temptation to another. The same recreation that invigorates one enfeebles another. The same sorrow that softens one and leads him out of self to works of kindness and helpfulness prostrates another and renders him valueless. It is that which is within a man that so acts upon the externals of life as to decide their results to him, and through him to others.

If this be so, then happiness or wretchedness is largely in our power, and most of our complaints only bear witness to our own remissness. We may rightly recognize the futility of struggling against outward events which we cannot control, but we can always bring to bear upon them such a spirit and influence as shall turn evil into good and bitter into sweet.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Startling Announcement.

An English literary man who was on the verge of bringing out a book at the Pitt Press ordered his proofs to be sent to him at a house where he was engaged to dine out, intending to look them over in the half hour after dinner. The printer's boy however, was late in bringing them, and the gentlemen had already rejoined the ladies in the drawing room when the company was electrified by hearing the sonorous voice of the butler announcing, "The devil from the Pitt has come for Mr. Jones!"—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Value of a Hyphen.

I recall an advertisement which actually appeared, sans hyphen, recently in a London daily, to wit: "Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Levi, having cast off clothing of every description, invite an early inspection."—Chap Book.

MAY MARRIAGES UNLUCKY.

Old Superstition Which Has Powerful Influence With European Bridal Couples.

The municipal statistics of the city of Marseilles show the observer that on the 28th of April, 1894, there were registered at the mayor's office in that town no less than 94 marriages. Why this enormous number? Because, according to an ancient tradition, couples that marry in the month of May expose themselves to great danger—death will soon smite the unfortunates, or, at the very least, their union will not be blessed with children. Therefore a large number of Marseillaise lovers availed themselves of the last days of April to join themselves in wedlock.

This curious superstition is by no means confined to Marseilles. M. le Blant, a French investigator, ascribes to it an origin in Roman antiquity. The Roman poet Ovid said that May was no time for widows to marry or for young girls, and adds that the imprudent woman who braves fate by so doing will die early. Plutarch agrees to the truth of this.

It may be because of this ancient principle that the Roman Catholic church has made the month of May sacred to the Virgin. However this may be, the idea has certainly perpetuated itself with singular persistence. Tassoni, writing about the middle of the seventeenth century, relates that among the inhabitants of Ferraras many young nobles and princes who were married in May died only a few days afterward. "It is the observation of this strange fact," he observes, "that induced the Ferrarese, so it is said, to follow the ancient custom."

At the present day the superstition has not ceased to show itself in certain regions of Italy, in Roumania, in south Germany, Bohemia, Westphalia, England and France, notably in Saintonge and in the Cevennes, where every one acknowledges the truth of the proverb, "The month of flowers is a month of tears."

"Perhaps," said Plutarch, "the month of May is regarded as unlucky because it comes between April and June, the months respectively of Venus and Juno, the tutelary goddesses of marriage, or perhaps it is because May is the month of the feast of the Lemures, the souls of the dead."—Paris Letter.

TREE PLANTING IN FRANCE.

Useless Sand Dunes Converted Into Valuable Land With Pines.

The French thoroughly appreciate the advantages to be derived from systematic tree planting. Tracts of sand have been covered with pine forests, and the word lande, borrowed, as it is thought, from the German, is losing its meaning of "waste." Till a century ago a large portion of the forest of Fontainebleau consisted of bare sand hills, but the planting of pines was begun. A variety capable of standing the severest winters was evidently found, and millions of trees now diffuse healthy and agreeable odors, besides furnishing timber for fuel.

The decomposed fir needles, moreover, gradually form a crust of vegetable mold, permitting the growth of trees and shrubs less able than the pine to live on air. The department of the Landes, once a barren region, with sand so loose that people had to walk on stilts, is covered with pines, and the problem of draining the subsoil has been solved, as described in Edmond About's story of "Maitre Pierre."

The losses by fire and anxiety to produce something more remunerative than pine are now, however, inducing schemes of artificial fertilization. In many French watering places dunes have been transformed into woods, thus holding out to seaside visitors the attraction of agreeable shade and a change from monotonous beach. Shifting sands have been prevented from extending inland. In some cases dunes have been acquired by companies, which, after planting them, have cut them up into building lots and have seen them dotted with villas.

Elsewhere municipalities have taken up the matter, and in large operations the district or the department has provided the funds.—London Times.

He Loves to Work.

The foreman of a bootblacking shop in Madison square is a continual surprise to the customers. His employer is a padrone, and he is left in complete control. His conduct justifies his employer's confidence. He is the hardest worker among the half dozen employees and frequently takes the brushes from one of his subordinates when there are not enough customers to keep all busy. He never allows a customer to go away unless he is satisfied that his boots have been polished in the best manner possible. He is ever full of enthusiasm and works with as much energy at the end of a busy day as at the beginning. His humor never lags, and his muscles never tire.

"It is as good as a bracer to watch that fellow," said a rounder. "He is the only man I ever saw who always seems to love to work."—New York Sun.

Dutch Toast.

Dutch toast is a simple dish for using up scraps of bread. Crumble the bread and place in a frying pan with a slice of butter or drippings. Add salt, pepper and sage if liked. It should be seasoned quite well. Add a small quantity of boiling water, cover closely so the steam will soften the bread, stir several times and serve hot. What with cream toast, codfish and fruit toast, we may have this turco cooked bread frequently without its becoming monotonous.—Philadelphia Ledger.

In the house of a Pompeiian sculptor were found 32 mallets, 15 compasses, 3 levers, several chisels, together with jacks for raising blocks, and nearly 30 statues and busts, in every stage of manufacture.

The grains of cornstarch are only about one-fourth the size of those of the starch made from the potato.

An "inch of rain" means a gallon of water spread over a surface of nearly two square feet or a fall of about 100 tons upon an acre.

Artichokes For Swine.

The tame artichoke is highly esteemed as a healthy crop for hogs. Artichoke may be planted either in the fall or spring, the same as potatoes, and cultivated the first season, and then enough tubers will be left in the ground to grow next year's crop without cultivation.

SAVED HER SLIPPERS.

A Bit of Hitherto Unpublished History of the War of 1812.

This is a chapter of semiofficial, semidomestic history, and it is vouched for by a granddaughter of the hero's family line, a Chicagoan who now lives on Dearborn avenue.

Prominent in Mr. Madison's cabinet sat, fourscore years ago, Secretary of the Navy Jones, the son of a famous shipbuilder, a man gallant not only in spirit, but in dress and manner. His fitness for his office is attested by the naval histories of the war of 1812. But the successful secretary had more wit than hair, and a wig was a sine qua non of his political and social life. All went well with this adornment until the luckless August day in 1814 when the British marched from Bladensburg upon Washington.

It will be remembered that President Madison and his cabinet stood not upon the order of their going on that occasion, but went at once—to a very retired summer resort. Every one knows how Lady "Dolly" remained behind long enough to save some valuable White House portraits from having their eyes put out by English bayonets, but few have heard how collected Mrs. Secretary Jones was in this national crisis.

Presence of mind is said to be promoted by absence of body. This lady displayed in the face of danger presence of both mind and body. As the secretary emerged from his doorway, his hands full of such family valuables as his agitated condition had allowed him to collect, Mrs. Jones confronted him with the appalling words:

"My dear, you have forgotten my slippers. You must go back and get them."

General Ross was almost at his door bringing imprisonment or death, but the unhappy man turned back to hunt the slippers, which, it is only fair to Mrs. Jones to add, were adorned with diamond buckles. In his headlong quest for these treasures—which he secured—his wig dropped off in a dark corner, and he did not dare to take time to hunt for it nor to attempt the purchase of another. The shorn appearance of the secretary, hitherto faultless in all appointments of dress, is said to have very much lessened the melancholy of the cabinet journey. It is further asserted that during the time of retirement, no matter how depressed any member of the presidential party felt over public and private woes, if he but glanced at Secretary Jones peal upon peal of irresistible laughter was sure to follow and that the despoiled Adonis cordially joined in these bursts of merriment.—Chicago Tribune.

A Malay Water Slide.

In Perak, a state in the Straits Settlements, the Malays have one form of amusement which is probably not to be enjoyed anywhere else in the wide world.

There is a huge granite slope in the course of a mountain river, down which the water trickles about two inches deep, the main stream having carved out a bed by the side of the bowlder. This rock, the face of which has been rendered as smooth as glass by the constant flow of water during hundreds of years, the Malays—men, women and children—have turned into a toboggan. Climbing to the top of the rock, they sit in the shallow water with their feet straight out and a hand on each side for steering and then slide down the 60 feet into a pool of water.

This is a favorite sport on sunny mornings, as many as 200 folks being engaged at a time and sliding so quickly one after another or forming rows of two, four or even eight persons that they tumble into the pool a confused mass of screaming creatures. There is little danger in the game, and, though some choose to sit on a piece of plantain, most of the tobogganers are content to squat on their haunches.—London Little Folks.

The lamp used by Epictetus, the philosopher, sold for 3,000 drachmas soon after his death, in the year 161 A. D.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix, at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ADELIE R. BROWN.
Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased.
Dated February 15 1895.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administratrix.
aug3-5t

NOTICE.

Whereas, the consent in writing of the holders of two thirds of the capital stock of the Lone Pine Canal Company, a corporation, to change the principal place of business of said corporation from the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, to the town of Lone Pine, in said county and state, is on file herein. Notice is hereby give that the principal place of business of said Lone Pine Canal Company, will be at the town of Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on and after January 26th 1895.
By order of the Board of Directors.

DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The copartnership heretofore existing between R. W. Thomas of the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, and T. W. Hill of the same place under the firm name and style of Thomas and Hill heretofore conducting a general merchandising business at the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, is this day dissolved by the mutual consent of the said R. W. Thomas and the said T. W. Hill.

Witness our hands and the seals this 6th day of February, 1895.

R. W. Thomas
Thomas W. Hill

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc. given careful and prompt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases

Brown & Wills,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery
All kinds of dental work done according to atest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING
IN ANY STYLE.
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.
Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administrator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE

REDLANDS GOLD MINING COMPANY

Location of principle place of Business: Redlands, California.

Location of works, Panamint Mining District, Inyo County, California.

NOTICE There are delinquent upon the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 1, levied on the 14th day of January, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders as follows:

Name.	No. Cert.	No Sh's	Am't
G W Osborn	194	100	$ 85
B C Avery	274	2 5 0	21 25
J H Allen	305	3 0 0	25 50
J H Allen	334	5 0 0	42 50
Emma Bingham	33	200	1 70
A J Boyer	169	200	1 70
J Bun	298	400	3 40
F Bedford	322	620	5 25
Mrs R B Cute	69	25 000	212 50
M F Clute	70	40 000	340 00
M F Clute	335	1,430	12 15
M F Clute	356	50	40
M F Clute	367	4 250	36 50
Geo. J Caldwell	104	40 000	340 00
Geo. J Caldwell	111	5 000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	112	9,000	76 50
Geo. J Caldwell	242	5 000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	243	5 000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	245	5,000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	247	1,000	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	248	1 0	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	249	1 0	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	2 0	2,0	17 00
Geo. J Caldwell	314	5 000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	331	10 000	85 00
Geo. J Caldwell	360	50	4 70
Geo. J Caldwell	363	7 000	59 50
Geo. J Caldwell	365	600	5 10
W Coggeshall	201	100	85
Doris Duvall	94	300	2 55
Wm. Fussell	63	500	4 25
T E N Eaton	152	300	2 55
T E N Eaton	170	2,000	17 00
T E N Eaton	211	400	3 45
J M R Eaton	157	100	85
J M R Eaton	163	1,900	16 15
J M R Eaton	200	3,000	25 50
Mrs T E N Eaton	198	300	2 55
Miss Grace Eaton	199	200	1 70
Geo. M Eaton	270	300	2 55
Chas. E French	221	4,000	34 00
Chas. E French	320	5,000	42 50
Chas. E French	324	10,000	85 00
Chas. E French	325	10,000	85 00
Abbie R French	210	1,000	8 50
J R Griffith	311	250	2 15
J M Hough	85	1,000	8 50
J M Hough	319	6,000	51 00
G L Heighton	125	1,200	10 20
G L Heighton	144	400	3 40
Hattie M Huffman	260	700	5 95
Maggie Hsh	216	300	2 55
Horan & Parker	363	5,000	42 50
E J Ingersoll	255	1,000	8 50
H W Comp. (trustee)	292	500	4 25
J W Jansen	80	600	5 10
W T Johnson	82	600	5 10
W T Johnson	140	300	2 55
W T Johnson	212	300	2 55
W T Johnson	230	300	2 55
E S Jacoby	161	100	85
Mrs T Luther	234	100	85
A M Mitchell	25	300	2 55
W T Mitchell	183	100	85
W T Mitchell	299	400	3 40
R W McIntyre	165	30 000	255 00
R W McIntyre	283	5 000	42 55
R W McIntyre	285	19 000	161 50
R W McIntyre	286	250	2 15
R W McIntyre	351	300	2 55
G E Neely	145	1,000	8 50
H S Newlove	184	200	1 70
H S Newlove	190	300	2 55
H S Newlove	191	500	4 25
H S Newlove	300	1,900	16 15
Minnie M Norris	203	2 250	19 10
Mamie M Norris	2 3	1,250	10 65
Susie A Otto	117	1,000	8 50
Susie A Otto	118	1,000	8 50
Susie A Otto	119	2 000	17 00
John S Phelps	180	100	85
A L Park	43	10,000	85 00
A L Park	44	10,000	85 00
A L Park	45	2 000	17 00
A L Park	47	500	4 25
A L Park	48	4,000	34 00
A L Park	49	700	5 95
A L Park	122	1,000	8 50
A L Park	141	2,000	17 00
A L Park	153	1,500	12 75
A L Park	164	1,000	8 50
A L Park	188	500	4 25
A L Park	189	10,000	85 00
A L Park	207	3,400	28 90
A L Park	208	4,000	34 00
A L Park	221	10,000	85 00
A L Park	231	10,000	85 00
A L Park	2 6	3 00	25 50
A L Park	2 5	12,000	102 00
Ralph G Rohrer	321	3 0	2 55
O W Shafer	2 1	30,000	255 00
O W Shafer	222	20,000	170 00
O W Shafer	224	10,000	85 00
O W Shafer	225	10,000	85 00
O W Shafer	226	5,000	42 50
O W Shafer	227	5,000	42 50
O W Shafer	374	5,000	42 50
O W Shafer	375	950	8 07
McIntyre Clute & Co	376	1,550	13 20
S H Wheeler	50	4,000	34 00
J N Wilson	55	1,000	8 50
E H Wilson	57	1 000	8 50
M Holmes Wilson	58	1,000	8 50
George Wright	86	500	4 25
I J Suess	293	750	6 40
J J Suess	336	700	5 95

And in accordance with law and an order of the Board of Directors made on the 14th day of January, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary will be sold at Public Auction at Room 4, Chittenden Building, Redlands, California, on the 6th day of April, 1895 at the hour of 3 o'clock p. m. of said day, to pay said delinquent assessment thereon, together with cost of advertising and expense of the sale.

A. C. CHITTENDEN,
Secretary.
Office, Room 4 Chittenden Building, Redlands California. March 6th 1895.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for outdoor parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Carpet Weaving.
MRS. J. R. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.
PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER
We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kind of carpet and rug weaving.
Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.
1 class work guaranteed at low prices

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone
FRED BURCKHARDT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY the 8th day of March 1895, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 10 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the South east corner of the south east quarter of North east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 98-100; thence North-east following the meanderings of the bed of the Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence, thence following said Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, six and 80-100 acres; also lot No. 2 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29, in the town of Independence, the said County of Inyo as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lot Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead, or lode, situate lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "La Dispricada Lode."

That certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura State of California, commencing at a point twelve and nine-twentieth (12 9-20) rods south of the general corner of the North west quarter and the North-east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South-west quarter and the South-east quarter of Section No. one (1), in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and eleven-twentieth (68 11-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North-westerly along a small branch or swale to a point twenty four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North East quarter and the South east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North east quarter of the North-west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West; running thence North forty-four and eleven-twentieth (44 11-20) rods thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres; Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at that place, or at the office of the Inyo Attorney at Independence, Cal., or delivered to an Executor personally or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament John Allen Hannah deceased.
Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th 1895.

SAVE YOUR SHOES
AMES' SHOE PROTECTOR is warranted to make the sole wear as long as the remainder of any ordinary shoe, and to save from 20 to 60 times its cost in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.
PAY APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROP'R.
Horseshoeing ..... $2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1894, will be held at the lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday	January 20th
"	February 17th
"	March 9th
"	April 14th
"	May 19th
"	June 16th
"	July 14th
"	August 11th
"	September 8th
"	October 13th
"	November 10th
"	December 8th

THOMAS C. BOLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND RHINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, MAY 24 1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman	GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman	CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge	GEO. M. GILL
Sheriff	ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk	DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney	P. W. FORBES.
Assessor	P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer	W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner	I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed)	JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools	S. N. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist	FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist	A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist	J. R ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist	JOHN WILSON.
5th Supervisor Dist	FRANK FITZGERALD.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .67⅜
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5½
Pig lead	3 90

DIED.

HAMILTON—At Georges Creek, Cal. May 20, 1895, Mrs. Thomas S. Hamilton, aged about 70 years.

ANGER—At Camp Independence, Cal., May 23, 1895, Mrs. Lottie May Anger, a native of Illinois, aged 34 years 8 months and 11 days.

S. F. papers please copy.

MIRANDA—At Lone Pine, May 21, 1895. Frank Miranda, aged about 50 years.

Next Thursday is Decoration day.

Hay cutting will commence in a couple of weeks.

Henry Rhine made a flying trip to Bishop and back yesterday.

The Georges Creek school closes to-day, A. E. Janvier, teacher.

Mrs. George R. Duncan is visiting with friends at Bishop.

A special train passed down the road last Saturday, returning Sunday.

J. W. Claussen came down from Bishop last Monday, returning next day.

George S. Wood was commissioned postmaster at Independence on May 17th.

Mrs. D. Holland of Keeler, spent the week visiting with friends at Independence.

Mrs. B. Rhine visited friends and relives at Big Pine and vicinity early in the week.

Mr. and Mrs L. F. J. Wrinkle came up from Keeler on Wednesday, returning yesterday.

A special meeting of the Board of Education will be held at Independence on June 4th.

The river is steadily rising and a large volume of water is flowing into the lake, a useless waste.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McKenzie came up from Lone Pine on Wednesday, returning the same day.

James Nevins of Round Valley was in town on Wednesday on his way to the Darwin country.

J. C. Irwin has built a new fence around his residence lot and otherwise added to the beauty of the place.

B. H. Yandell went to Snows Canyon last Tuesday on business connected with the Assessor's office.

Trout fishing is the principal source of amusement at present, though the creeks are most too high for successful sport.

Peter H. Burnett, the first Governor of the State of California, died at his home in San Francisco last Friday, aged 81½ years.

The south fork of Oak Creek was turned last week and about 800 fish killed. It is supposed to have been turned by sheepmen.

Don't forget that W. L. Zimmerman is located at Davis' shoe shop and any cobbling that you want done bring it around.

F. W. Holbert has gone to Los Angeles and expects to be away about two weeks. He assisted L. J. Rose in taking down his mules.

R. L. Paeler has been appointed Assistant Adjutant-general by Governor Budd. Bob is quite an important member of the N. G. C.

Charley Summers recently bought small bands of cattle in this vicinity for T. B. Rickey. The average price paid was $7.50 per head.

Miss Elsie Eibeshutz will arrive home next Monday evening from a residence of nearly two years in New York, where she has been studying music.

Obituary.

Mrs. Lottie May Anger died at her home after a short but painful illness last Thursday. She was born at Bloomfield Illinois, September 12, 1860. She moved with her parents to Augusta, Illinois in 1871 and remained there until March 1881, when she was married to Lorin Alexander Anger, a play-mate of her youth and came with him to California where she has since remained. She leaves a husband and six children, a mother who resides in New York, and other distant relatives in the East to mourn her loss.

Gentle hearted wife and mother
Over thy dear babes in spirit hover,
And into thy husbands' saddened life
Breath joy and peace. S

Mrs. Thomas S. Hamilton died at her residence at Georges Creek on Monday last and was buried at Lone Pine on Tuesday. She was nearly seventy years of age, the last twenty-three of which she had passed in Owens Valley. She was held in the highes esteem by al who knew her and her memory will long be held in affectionate remembrance. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. S. W. Albone and she laid away to her long rest surrounded by many sorrowing friends.

Frank Miranda died at Lone Pine on Tuesday. He had been afflicted with consumption for many yeats and his death was not unexpected. He had many friends, particularly among tha old timers, who deeply regret his death.

Coming To The Front

Neil McLean got in from Cerro Gordo yesterday, where he has been hauling ore for Pat Clinton, and he will go to Modock in a few days to haul ore for J. J. Gunn. He says there is an excellent prospect that Cerro Gordo will attain its old time greatness. Pat Clinton has completed the shaft in the Newtown mine and it was examined by H. M. Yerington last Saturday and accepted as being entirely satisfactory. He will now put on a force of men taking out ore, of which there is plenty in sight. Jack Dunphy has at last struck it rich, after four years of hard work without taking out a dollar. He has four feet of fine ore and undoubtedly has a rich stake in sight. T. C. Boland has eight men employed, and will work over all the old dumps. He is working steam jiggers, and will soon increase his plant. At the present time he is shipping two car-loads a week. There have been millions of dollars taken out of Cerro Gordo and there is an excellent prospect that it will yield as much more.

A Good Prospect

What at present promises to be a valuable mine, was discovered near Fish Springs a few weeks ago. The mine is owned by J. S. Gorman and George H. Lewis. Samples of the ore have been brought to town and free gold can be seen in every piece. No assays have yet been made. The owners have now been working their claim two weeks and have over ten tons of ore on the dump, the ore still holds out and is said to average a six-inch ledge. They will mine about a week longer when they will work their ore, and if the results come up to expectations they will put on a force of men. The claim is at present surrounded with locators, as naturally follows a discovery of that kind

Notice.

All parties wishing wheat ground will please bring it in before the 1st of June as I wish to close down for repairs of mill.

A. N. BELL.

John Hughes got back from Silver Peak yesterday. Tom Taylor succeeded in getting a job and remained there. John says that the camp is full of broke men, that no pay-day has yet been had and that it is a poor place for any person to go expecting to get work. There is no question, however, but that the peak will develop into a valuable property if properly managed. The ore body is said to be practically unlimited and of very fair grade.

The Stevens ditch broke last Sunday at a point a short distance above the bridge on the depot road and made a bad wash in the bank. A number of men and teams have since been at work repairing the damage, which is considerable. After the water subsided the flat below the ditch was covered with carp and afforded a snap for the Chinamen, who gathered them up in baskets and brought them to town.

L. J. Rose Jr. arrived here from Ventura early in the week. He bought about forty head of mules from John Shepherd and started below with them on Wednesday. Fifty dollars per head is the price reported to have been paid for the lot.

A number of the young people of the vicinity gathered at the residence of Dr. J. D. Blair last Monday evening, for the purpose of spending a pleasant evening, which they had the pleasure of doing, under the direction of Miss Maud Cook.

Pat Keys came in from Beveridge the first of the week, to engage a pack train for the conveyance of his ore to the McEvoy mill. He expects to commence working the ore to-morrow. W. L. Hunter will also make a run at the Keynot.

W. F. Matlack had a close call from a dangerous accident last Monday. He was kicked on the side of the head by a mule that he was shoeing, the blow having made him insensible for more than an hour. He is around again now.

The cattle men gathered up their stock in this vicinity early in the week and started for Long Valley last Monday. A. L. McGee has leased the Rawson range and took up quite a band of cattle to pasture during the summer months.

Two men named Gibson and McGuire from Ventura county were in town a couple of days this week. They came with the intention of buying about 500 head of cattle but when they left here yesterday they had failed to secure any. It is reported that they were offering ten dollars a head.

The Big Pine public school will close next Friday, at which time an extended programme of closing exercises will be given. Several Independence people express their intention of being present.

Sheriff Given has just received a new Densmore type-writer. It is a handsome machine. Uncle Sam has also treated the local Land Office to a new Remington No. 6.

J. D. Lewis Esq. and H. P. Nelligan came down from Bishop last Tuesday and remained in town several days. Mr. Nelligan has been doing some sign painting.

Clippings.

The following items are taken from last Wednesday's Walker Lake Bulletin:

H. M. Yerington and R. J. Laws went over the road to Keeler and returned last week.

George T. Rives, formerly of Eureka, was married in Reno last Monday night to Mrs. May Tally of Richmond, Virginia. Mr. Rives' home is now at Independence, Cal.

Mail clerk Mike Moriarity has been notified to report for duty at San Francisco on the 28inst. His run will be from San Francisco to Ogden. He will be succeeded on the C. & C. by John Considine of Virginia City, who is now mail clerk on the C. P.

Schoolmaster McCarty of Bishop, left Hawthorne last week on a bicycle for Bodie. The ride must have been a hard one, as the grades are very steep.

The C. & B. R. R. is doing a big business out of Inyo county this season; full trains every trip. Soda, marble, borax and ore are going out in car-load lots.

S. P. McKnight has been down from Bishop during the week, engaged in making surveys for the new owners of the Hirsch mine. It is said that the new mill will be operated by means of an electric plant, the power being furnished with water from the East Side canal. George T. Rives, the Superintendent, is here in charge of affairs.

G. B. Commetti of Fish Springs visited Independence early in the week. He had just cleaned up his arrastra from a run of ore taken out of his mine which yielded $1,000. Jim Rose and Tim Madden will soon make a clean up and it is said that they will get about $1,500. Scott Broder and others will also be in for a good divide.

County Clerk Hession arrived home last Monday night from Mono county, where he had a conference with the Supervisors of that county relative to the maintenance of the sheep license tax. He also visited Bodie on his trip.

County Treasurer Bunney arrived home from Sacramento on Monday, where he had been to settle with the State Treasurer. The amount turned over for the six months ending May 1, 1895, was $2,845.05.

P. H. Mack Esq. arrived home from San Francisco on Wednesday's train, where he had been attending the Grand Lodge I. O. O. F.

John Shepherd sold ten more mules to J. L. Rose on Wednesday and has indefinitely postponed his intended trip to the San Joaquin valley.

The market for horses in Chicago is steadily improving. Hundreds of head are sold every week for transportation to Europe.

Charley Green arrived home at Lone Pine last Friday from a months visit to points of interest in Southern California.

The entire Income Tax law has been declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. Location of works, near Lone Pine, Inyo County, California

Notice is hereby given, that at a meeting of the Board of Directors, held on the 27th day of April, 1895, an assessment (No. 8) of fifteen cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin to the Secretary, at the office of the company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 1st day of June, 1895, will be delinquent and advertised for sale, at public auction, and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, June 22, 1895, at 2 o'clock p. m. to pay the delinquent assessment, together with costs of advertising and expense of sale.

D. HOLLAND,
Secretary.

Office, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. May 2, 1895.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
April 29, 1895.

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Halliday of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal. has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert land claim No. 645, for the ½ of N½ sec. 15, Tp. 15 S. R. 36 E. M. D. M before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal. on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co. Cal. William F. Halliday of Oak and Cal. Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, both of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND,
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Independence, Cal.
April 29, 1895.

Notice is hereby given that William F. Halliday of Oakland, Cal. has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert land claim No. 641 for the NW ¼ of SW ¼ sec 12 Tp. 15S. R 36 E M. D. M. before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal. on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co. Cal. Joseph Halliday, Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, all of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND,
Register.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

H. E. Wilkinson Plaintiff, vs. Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now and heretofore existing between plaintiff and defendant upon the ground of the defendant's wilful desertion of plaintiff, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein, which complaint is hereby made a part of this summons.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to Court for the relief demanded in said complaint, viz: For a judgment dissolving said bonds of matrimony.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 10th day of April, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.

☞ First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

BIG PINE HOTEL.

BIG PINE - CAL

New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates

☞ Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modoc Cal.

FOR SALE.
THE WHITNEY HOUSE

—The only hotel in—

LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL

Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address

MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor

The newest Style
OF
Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies'
Wear, etc., etc
AT

L. WOOD
CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain
Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, "DRESDEN" WARE.

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get the

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

[Official.]

Notice To Tax-Payers.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT I have received from the Auditor of the County of Inyo, State of California the Assessment Roll for the year A. D. 1894-5, that the taxes on all personal property secured by real property, and one-half the taxes on all real property will be due and payable on the first Monday in October and will be delinquent on the last Monday in November next thereafter, at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto fifteen per cent will be added to the amount thereof; and that if said one-half be not paid before the last Monday in April next at six o'clock p. m. an additional five per cent. will be added thereto; that the remaining one-half of the taxes on all real property will be payable on and after the first Monday in January next and will be delinquent on the last Monday in April next thereafter at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto five per cent. will be added to the amount thereof; that all taxes may be paid at the time the first installment as herein provided is due and payable.

A. M. GIVEN,
Tax-Collector.

oct5-td

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER, General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.		From Mound House No. 1 Leave—	To Mound House No. 2 Arrives—
Mound House		10:50 a. m	5:20 p. m
Dayton		11:25 a. m.	4:45 p. m
Wabuska		1:40 p m	2:30 p m
Hawthorne	Ar.	5:00 p. m	Lv. 11:00 a. m
		No. 3. Leave—	No. 4. Arrives—
Hawthorne		6:00 a. m.	7:25 p. m
Luning		7:10 a. m.	6:15 p m
Sodа Springs		7:50 a. m.	5:35 p. m
Belleville		8:10 a. m.	4:35 p. m
Candelaria		9:40 a. m	2:50 p. m
Benton		1:30 p. m	11:50 a. m
Basalt Creek		3:10 p. m.	9:50 a. m
Alvord		05 p. m.	8:55 a. m
Independence		4:35 p. m.	7:25 a. m
Lone Pine		5:20 p. m.	6:40 a. m
Keeler	Ar	7:00 p. m.	Lv. 6:00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles), Bodie (3 miles), Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salsbury & Co's tri-weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Allda Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (9 miles), Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles)

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
86 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

RESTORE YOUR EYESIGHT

Cataracts, scars or films can be absorbed and stretched nerves restored, without the knife or risk. Diseased eyes or lids can be cured by home treatment. We prove it. Hundreds convinced. Our illustrated pamphlet Home Treatment for Eyes, free. Do cut it out everybody wants it. "The Eye," Glens Falls, N.Y.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH
FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave,
WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS
at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeer,
MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS
at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER,
Propr.

JOHN B. CLARKE,

Successor to John Clarke,

—PROPRIETOR—

John Clarke's Bishop Stables,

BISHOP, CAL.

First-class Turnouts of Every Kind
Fine horses and Carriages.
horses Boarded for Any Time
Best of Care and Attention

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal

New House
New Furniture.
Low Rates.

☞ Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.

O. I. MAIRS Prop
feb12tf

BIG TOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, on the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

INDEPENDENCE
MEAT MARKET,

J. C. BOZEMAN, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

☞ Orders supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.

j19-tf

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.
PROVISIONS
Tobacco, Cigars,
WINES AND LIQUORS
FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

☞ Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1894.
j16tfn

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL

Dealer in
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies

PROVISIONS
&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

BELL'S Flouring Mills

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS. WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

☞ All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

0-m RENO, NEVADA

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Jews are longer lived than members of other races.

Weinstock, Lubin & Co

400 to 412 K St., Sacramento, Cal.

Largest General Retail House on Coast.

Wearing Apparel of all kinds for men, women, and children; Dry Goods, Shoes, Hats, Millinery, Valises, Furniture, Carpets, Crockery, Notions, Stationery, Silverware, Toys, Household Supplies, etc.

Catalogue Free.

A handsome illustrated catalogue about our goods and prices sent free to any address. Tens of thousands of customers find it profitable and satisfactory to buy through this book.

TERMS CASH.

Enclose money for goods with order, and if to be sent by mail allow for postage. Any balance left over will be returned.

If interested in any of the items below, order promptly, giving item number.

10 CHANCES TO SAVE MONEY

A146. Summer Corsets, with open ventilated mesh; cool, light weight, perfect fitting and durable. Price, 50c.

A147. Ladies' percale Waists, stylish large sleeves, with laundried collar and cuffs; pink, blue or heliotrope. Price, 50.

A148. Black amber or shell Hairpins, 3 inches long. Price, 15c dozen.

A149. Cream satin Table Linen, 54 in. wide. Special value at 32c yard.

A150. White Nainsooks, in checks and satin stripes. Price, 6¼c yard.

A151. Children's black or white Hose Supporters, with original Lindsay clasps. Price, 7½c pair.

A152. Fancy Matting, 10c yard or $4.00 per roll of 40 yards. All good patterns.

A153. Ladies' low neck Corset Covers of fine muslin, with 1 inch lace edging. Price, 25c.

A154. Ladies' Muslin Chemise, open in front. Price, 25c.

A155. Ladies' low neck sleeveless cotton Vests, neck and arm holes run with a tape; cream color. Price, 15c.

SEND FOR SAMPLES.

Fancy silks for waists. Price, 90c yd.
Silk and wool suitings, 50c yd.
Figured duck suitings, 15c.
Handsome percales, 10c.
Crinkled Crepons, 15c.
Dress ginghams, 9c.

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN & CO.,
6 Sacramento, Cal.

ABOUT WOMEN.

Had Adam got out a patent on woman he might have died a millionaire.

Woman is not much of a philosopher, but she is proverbially a clothes observer.

A woman may be as true as steel, but then you know some steel is too highly tempered.

Yes, woman is the equal of man. A man can shoe a horse and a woman can shoo a hen.

It is said that short hair is becoming very fashionable for women. With men short hair becomes fashionable soon after they are married.

A widower in Kansas has been supplied with an iron jaw. It is supposed he is contemplating a second marriage. Experience is a man's best friend.

Prior to Adam going into the apple business his record was a stainless one. And yet he was one of the great army of model husbands who are never trusted with a latch key.

A New York widow has a monkey that gets drunk every night, and she says if the blamed thing would only snore in its sleep she would not miss her late husband a particle.

In Siam a wife who redeems her husband after he has sold himself, owns him thereafter as her slave. We are not informed what happens when she takes him back after he has given himself away.

It is not good for man to dwell alone, and he never knows what it is to need the help of a true and loving wife so much as when he is looking around for some one to settle his property upon in order to put it out of the reach of his creditors.

Wife—"William, I do think boys are the worst I ever saw. I'm sure they don't get it from me." Husband (snappishly)—"Well, they don't get it from me." Wife (reflectively)—"No, William, you seem to have all yours yet."

What an ordinary man eats and the way he eats it would be enough to give dyspepsia to an ostrich—unless the ostrich were wise enough to assist his digestion from time to time with an efficient combination of vegetable extracts. Such a preparation is Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are the pills par excellence for those who sometimes eat the wrong things and too much. They stimulate action in all of the digestive organs. They stop sour stomach, windy belchings, heartburn, flatulence and cure constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache and kindred derangements.

Once used they are always in favor.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

THE SPENT BALL.

By H. S. KNEEDLER.

"He does, sir, and what his purpose is in doing so I cannot even infer."

"But is their no possibility of your being mistaken?" persisted the judge, who in the lax procedure of his court was not greatly affected by the sacredness which was supposed to hedge him in. "You know how treacherous resemblances are. Though no two faces are cast exactly in the same mold, there are sometimes such counterfeits that we can scarcely tell the spurious from the genuine."

"If this man is the Jason Brigham I knew in Memphis he has a scar upon the right side of his head above the ear and well forward toward the temple," I said, with a sudden inspiration, as the memory of that indelible mark flashed on my mind.

"Sheriff," said the Judge, leaning forward over his desk, "examine the prisoner's head and see if you discover such a scar as the gentleman mentions."

The sheriff in a very matter of fact way separated the prisoner's hair, which was long and unkempt. My heart seemed to stand still while he did so, but when he stood to one side and with his fingers spread apart silently directed attention to a long white scar at the place I had designated, I felt the blood rush to my brain in a flood that threatened to unseat my reason.

"Your identification seems complete, sir," said the judge, "but you will, of course, pardon me if I point out to you how impossible it would be for us to admit your unsupported evidence in this case. You are a stranger to us all, and though I do not believe such a thing for a moment, still in the eyes of the law your motives would be susceptible to doubt. You should have corroborating testimony. But, weightier than all, the witness declares that he is not the man you say he is. You do not allege that he is insane?"

"He appears to be sane enough, but from what I know of him, in the light of present circumstances, I should be willing to believe he was insane."

"If what you know of him leaves you with such an impression, does it occur to you that he might be guilty of the crime with which he is charged?"

"Not for a moment; for though I cannot reconcile the phases of his career that have come under my observation, I have never seen any tendency toward crime in his disposition. I knew him as a generous, brave and truthful man. Besides, as I have said, I was with him at the very time Mme. Armand was murdered."

"My dear sir, you are treading on dangerous ground," remarked the judge smilingly.

"I am too confident that I could prove an alibi, your honor, to heed your warning, and I can prove one for this unfortunate man, if you will give me time."

At this point the prosecuting attorney, who held his peace as long as possible, sprang to his feet and said tragically and oratorically:

"Your honor, I must enter a protest against such an unwarrantable procedure as this stranger suggests. It seems to me, your honor, that this trial is proceeding in a very odd manner, a very odd manner indeed. But I do not need to call your honor's attention to the unprecedented liberties accorded this gentleman. I merely desire to direct your attention to the fact that what he says lacks confirmation even from the prisoner himself, even from that man, sir, who would be most likely to catch at any straw which offered a reasonable hope of enabling him to escape or even to postpone the fate he so richly deserves. I move you, sir, that the trial of the accused proceed."

"This trial has indeed taken a very unusual course," replied the judge deliberately. "But you will admit that this is a very remarkable interruption. I am impressed with the sincerity of the gentleman who has so unexpectedly and so peculiarly appeared as a voluntary witness for the defense, and I feel that in justice to the prisoner he should have an opportunity of presenting testimony to support his statements. Under the circumstances I shall entertain a motion for the postponement of the case."

It is unnecessary to say that the counsel for the accused was not slow in acting upon the suggestion, and the case was continued and ordered placed on the docket for trial at the next term of court.

With the dismissal of the case and the sheriff's leading out of the prisoner I was about to hurry away when the judge stopped me and, calling me to his desk, said: "Come around to my home this evening. I want to talk with you."

I promised him I would, and went out to walk about a little and gather my scattered thoughts. There was abundant need for reflection. It began to look as though this man who disclaimed ever having had a past was to be summarily robbed of a future.

CHAPTER V.

"She is a woman who was engaged to be married to a dear friend of mine."

I need not say how utterly confusing all this was. If there had been a possibility of my being mistaken in my man I should have seized it as an excuse to leave him to his fate. But the thing preyed upon my mind because I knew beyond all peradventure that this was Jason Brigham. His face had been stamped too clearly upon my recollection. I was too familiar with his personal characteristics, knew too well all those little trivialities which together go to form the individual personality of each one; and besides, there was the scar, which could not be counterfeited, and which it was stretching credulity too far to believe could be repeated by the mere chance of coincidence in any other person who so resembled Brigham in every physical detail. And yet what possible motive could he have for denying himself?

On the one hand, confession that he was who I said he was meant escape from the gallows. His present course preluded death. Was it the past which he had so persistently declined to explain that he feared more than death? Was it possible that there was that, to escape from which he welcomed the opportunity of dying unknown? I could find no other excuse. But if he was masquerading to deceive me and all men, he was doing it with a consummation of art which was magnificent in its likeness to truth. There was a something here which piqued me—which perhaps angered me. If the man was playing a part I resolved to unmask him; if he was the victim of some strange web of circumstances I would save him.

At any event I decided to put him to the supreme test, and going to the depot I telegraphed to Jones to break open my trunk, get the picture of Emily Percival, and come to me at once with it. I wanted Jones at hand to help me solve the riddle. He had lived in an atmosphere of crime in his work as a police reporter, and I trusted to his shrewdness of intuition to unravel this enigma.

In the evening I called at the home of the judge in the outskirts of the town. It was a big, imposing looking house, set down amid a small grove of pecan and orange trees. The judge was in his library—a cozy apartment, with big comfortable chairs to draw up in front of the inviting wood fire that smoldered on the hearth to keep at bay the chill still lingering in the night air of the springtime.

"I wanted to talk with you," the judge began, when we were seated and had our cigars lighted, "for I will confess that what you said today in court, and your evident sincerity, has somewhat shaken me. The evidence in the case is purely circumstantial, and there is very little even of that, as I happen to know. But that jury would have convicted anybody of anything. It would have been practically the same even had you proved that your man was in Memphis at the time. But if what you have said is true, and can be demonstrated, it will be easy enough to yet rescue Berner or Brigham, as you call him."

"But I am as utterly at sea as you are," I responded. "I knew this man once, associated with him daily, was his confidant, ate and slept with him. All this did not occur years ago, for then there would be a possibility that I might be in error. It happened only four months ago."

"Of course you would have no difficulty in finding plenty of people in Memphis who would substantiate what you say."

"I could have a hundred here in a few days, and have already telegraphed for one, an old newspaper associate and mutual friend."

"Then what is the man's object in keeping up this comedy, or rather tragedy?"

"That I know not, unless it is possible that he is insane."

"He talks too rationally for that, and I fear you could have little hope of convincing a medical jury that he was non compos mentis. Do you know of no reason why he should be unwilling that his real identity should be known?"

"None, though I have suspected that there was something in his life he wished to conceal."

Then I related my endeavors to probe Brigham's past, and his strange declaration that he had no past. We talked for an hour or more, and I returned to my hotel more perplexed than ever to try in vain to sleep, while I momentarily grew more gravely apprehensive that back of all this strange drama there was a dark spot which sooner or later would be revealed.

Jones arrived in the morning, as I expected he would. He was the same nonchalant, jovial, self assertive Jones. He had a way of saying that he always fell on his feet, and he had come to have a very creditable assurance that he always would fall on his feet. But in spite of that he was a clever fellow and had plenty of heart. You can imagine his surprise when I narrated all that had occurred—my discovery of our quondam comrade, his denial of his identity, the scene in the court and my interview with the judge.

"Whew!" said Jones, with a long whistle, "isn't he a hummer! But never mind, we'll bring him to his feed. The man has gone daft, that's what's the matter with him. We must have De Costa."

"Who is De Costa?"

"Dr. J. Sebrill De Costa is the great expert upon diseases of the brain. His testimony has sent more men to the insane asylum instead of the jail or the gallows, where they belonged, than any other man in the country. But no common criminal can fool De Costa for any length of time. Oh, he has it down fine."

"First I want to try this photograph," I said. "I have an idea that will move him, for I know he loved Emily Percival very dearly."

"Yes, that may fetch him if you spring it on him suddenly," said Jones. "Let's go and see the gay youth. It's barely possible he may have forgotten you, but it isn't likely that once having known the only original Jones the honor would slip his mind."

We were admitted to the jail readily enough. It was an awful place in which to keep a white man or any other human being. Like all the parish prisons at that time, it was horribly out of repair and reeking with filth. Its tenants were chiefly negroes, confined for petty misdemeanors or for alleged infractions of the law. The white keepers were opposed to doing any more for the comfort of their charges than the necessities of the case demanded, and the exigency that demanded an observance of sanitary conditions was not usually a pressing one in their eyes. It was a good deal cheaper to bury prisoners than to feed and house them properly.

Brigham occupied a cell a shade cleaner than the rest—reserved, doubtless, for guests who were distinguished for the enormity of their offenses. When we approached the grated door he was sitting on a small box, which served him for a stool, his arms folded over his knees, his head resting upon them. The abject misery of his position touched me to the quick. Jones felt it, too, or he would have been more abrupt in his greeting. As it was he went in when the turnkey threw open the door, and laying his hand upon the prisoner's shoulder said, "Brigham, old man, I have come all the way from Memphis to see you."

Brigham lifted his head, and with that contraction of the brows which expresses mental perplexity, said, "Why do you all persist in calling me by a name I do not know?"

"Because it was the name she knew you by," I replied, quickly drawing the photograph of Emily Percival from my pocket and holding it before him. He took it from my hand and turned it about curiously to get a better light upon it. Then he looked at it long and intently, and said slowly and almost in the tone of one who thinks rather than talks aloud: "A beautiful face. A beautiful face. That is the likeness of a good woman. Who is she?"

There was no mistaking either the candor or the intelligence of the inquiry. Jones drew in his breath quickly, like a man who has been under sudden and great mental pressure. I took the photograph and replied with as much composure as I could command:

"She is a woman who was engaged to be married to a very good friend of mine."

"And why didn't he marry her?" he asked.

"Because," I made answer, "some devil we know not of stole his brains away and made him forget her and his pledge."

"He was unworthy of her," said the prisoner thoughtfully. "She was too sweet a woman to merit such a fate."

CHAPTER VI.

"No use talking, Gilman," said Jones, when we were out in the air again, "you must wire for De Costa. If he cannot solve the riddle I'll give it up."

"It's the last hope," I responded. "Not that I will give it up, even if that fails. If necessary I shall stay here until I have secured a pardon for this man or seen him hanged. It would be absurd to even think of abandoning him now. We know that he could not have committed the murder charged to him, so there is nothing to do but rescue him."

"Yes, even in spite of himself," said Jones. "I'll confess this is a new experience for me. I've been called on to go bail for fellows in police court who insisted they knew me when I protested they were mistaken. But this thing of insisting I know a man who protests that he never saw me before is a new role. I thought sure that photograph would fetch him—would have wagered a stack of reds on it, but Lord, it didn't phase him."

"His mind is a blank—it is like a bed of sand over which a tide periodically flows, wiping out every vestige of the footprints of those who have trod it when it lay bare. He is a man who lives in today—in this present moment, as he said to me. Veritably a man without a past."

"And without a future," said Jones.

(To be continued.)

CALIFORNIA FRUIT RECOGNIZED EAST.

Fruit grown in California is more extensively used by residents of the Eastern States with each succeeding season, and many are the compliments paid it and the Western horticulturists. The latest public acknowledgment from a high authority is that made by the New York Journal of Commerce in a recent issue. In the course of an able review of the fruit interests in various parts of the world it says:

"California as a fruit-producing country has proved a wonder to the world, and when it comes to a question of hustling the people of that State take rank among the foremost of the land. From a modest beginning dating back only a dozen years, by push and enterprise and overcoming many obstacles, the State has forged steadily ahead; and when brought into competition with the once standard foreign varieties, the fruit products of that soil have demanded and received favorable recognition from the people of our country, until today the goods stand upon their merits and are given the preference by the majority of consumers in the competition with foreign products."

Two Spanish women named Regnalda Torres and Blanco Diaz met on Alvarado street, Monterey, and got into a terrible fight. The brothers afterward took the matter up, and Blanco Diaz was shot by Austin Torres, who is employed in the Del Monte Stables.

GENTLE ANNIE.

Gentle Annie was the girl who went forth when the spring-time came to gather wild flowers—daisies along the hillsides—and forgot her rubbers. She came back with wet feet, followed by the worst case of neuralgia she ever had. Fortunately she was told and had long known that for any kind of neuralgic affection, St. Jacobs Oil is the most remarkable remedy ever used. All the year round anyone subject to such attacks should not fail to have it in the house. For all aches and pains which at all times beset us, there is nothing to equal it. Nerve pains especially are brought on by sudden changes of temperature, but the great remedy, applied promptly, will surely cure.

It is estimated that $10,000,000 worth of German toys are annually sold in England.

POOR INDEED!

The prospect of relief from drastic cathartics for persons troubled with constipation is poor indeed. True they act upon the bowels, but this they do with violence, and their operation tends to weaken the intestines, and is prejudicial to the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is an effectual laxative, but it neither gripes nor enfeebles. Furthermore, it promotes digestion and a regular action of the liver and the kidneys. It is an efficient barrier against and remedy for malarial complaints and rheumatism, and is of great benefit to the weak, nervous and aged. As a medicinal stimulant it cannot be surpassed. Physicians cordially recommend it, and its professional indorsement is fully borne out by popular experience. Appetite and sleep are both improved by this agreeable invigorant and alterative.

A British commander-in-chief, when on active service, receives $375 a week.

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss.
LUCAS COUNTY.

FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.
FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

SEAL. A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
☞ Sold by Druggists, 75c.

The chance of two finger prints being alike is not one in 64,000,000,000.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

FAVORITE OF FORTUNE.

The Remarkable Record of Mr. B. L. Holt, of Maryville, Mo.

B. L. Holt of Maryville, Mo., is a favorite of fortune, for twice within twelve years he has on an investment of $1 each time, drawn $15,000 in the oldest and only reliable lottery in America. Mr. Holt held one-half of ticket No. 75,414 in the drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery Company held at New Orleans in March, 1883. This ticket drew the capital prize of $30,000. Whole tickets were at that time worth $2 each. Mr. Holt, who had purchased a one-half ticket for $1, received $15,000, the other half going to a gentleman in Savannah, Ga. At the drawing of the Honduras National Lottery Company, the successor to the Louisiana State Lottery Company, at Puerto Cortez, Honduras, C. A., on January 12, 1895, the capital prize was won by ticket No. 80,226, one-fifth of which was bought by Mr. Holt for $1. But let Mr. Holt tell his experience with the Louisiana State Lottery Company and its successor, the Honduras National Lottery Company, as he recited it to a Sporting News representative who visited him. Said he:

"A little over twelve years ago I bought my first ticket in the Louisiana State Lottery. I did not despair when I examined the list and found that I had not drawn anything, but persevered. On my third investment of $1 I drew $15,000. There was no delay in the collection of my ticket. It was paid promptly. I continued to buy tickets regularly each month with varying success, winning in small sums far more than I ever invested. But I did not again succeed in winning a part of the capital prize until last January. I found the Honduras National Lottery Company as fair and prompt in its dealings as the old Louisiana State Lottery, and on January 29 I received a draft for $15,000. Such a record is a guarantee that the Honduras National Lottery Company is all that it claims to be. I will continue to play the lottery as long as I live, and expect to win another capital prize before I die. I had $20 worth of tickets in the February drawing and drew $101. That's not bad, is it?"—St. Louis, Mo., Sporting News, March 30.

An actress appearing in Johnstown, Pa., recently, was referred to by the local press as a favorite in that city. The paper remarked, "She appeared here just before the flood." The actress has erased Johnstown from her map.

THE GENUINE AND THE SHAM.

Every good thing has its host of imitators; every genuine article its counterfeits. The imitators always choose the most valuable and popular article to counterfeit, so that when they claim their sham to be equal, or as good, or the same as "So-and-So's," the public may depend upon it that "So-and-So's" article is the best of the kind.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER is the standard of excellence the world over, and imitators in their ery that theirs is "as good as ALLCOCK'S" are only emphasizing this fact and admitting "ALLCOCK'S" to be the acme of perfection, which it is their highest ambition to imitate. The difference between the genuine and these imitations is as wide as that between copper and gold.

The only safe way for purchasers is to always insist upon having ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER. It is the only perfect plaster ever produced.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS stimulate the liver.

Warrensburg boys worked the nickel-in-the-slot machines with disks cut out of sheet lead.

I have found Piso's Cure for Consumption an unfailing medicine.—F. R. LOTZ, 1305 Scott St., Covington, Ky., Oct. 1, 1894.

It is not American meat that is diseased, but he Wilson bill.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

Wolfe's Worm Powders. The Great Remedy for worms. When your children are ailing, try them. At druggists, or send 25c. to JNO. WOLFE, San Rafael, Cal., and you will get them by mail.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

DIRECTIONS for using CREAM BALM.—Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostrils. After a moment draw strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from Colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents, at Druggists, or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

S. F. N. U. No. 670. New Series No. 17.

That Tired Feeling

Is a certain indication of impure and impoverished blood. If your blood could always be rich and pure, full of the red corpuscles upon which its vitality depends, you would never be weak, or Nervous! Boils, pimples, scrofula, salt rheum, would never trouble you. But our mode of living, shut in all winter in poorly ventilated homes and shops, depletes the blood and there is loss of appetite, and weakness. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the standard remedy for this condition. It purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood, overcomes that tired feeling, builds up the nerves and gives perfect health. Read this:

"Our daughter, Blanche, when four years of age, had a humor break out on her hands and face, which our physician pronounced eczema. If the cold air reached her face or hands they would swell up, look almost purple, and headed blisters would form and break, Discharging a watery fluid, and the burning and itching would drive her nearly wild. Unless we encased her little hands she would tear patches of skin from her face and hands. We tried many doctors and many remedies, and at last gave the case up as hopeless. But our daughter Cora tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, to cure a scrofulous lump near the left breast, which caused her much pain, and after taking 4 bottles it disappeared. Blanche, who is now eleven, had spent seven years of suffering, so I concluded to give her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She took 5 bottles, and her face is smooth and soft as a baby's, the color of a rose petal. Her hands are soft and white, where four months ago they were blue and red, and calloused nearly like leather. I cannot express my gratitude by pen or mouth. It seems a miracle, and our friends are surprised."—MRS. ANNA L. CLARK, 401 E. 4th St., Duluth, Minn.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Is the Only True Blood Purifier

Insist on ARM AND HAMMER SODA in packages

BEWARE of imitation trade marks and labels.

Costs no more than inferior package soda—never spoils the flour, keeps soft, and is universally acknowledged purest in the world.

Made only by CHURCH & CO., New York.
Sold by grocers everywhere.
Write for Arm and Hammer Book of valuable Recipes—FREE.

CABLED FIELD and HOG FENCE, 24 in. to 58 in. high; CABLED POULTRY FENCE, 24 in. to 63 in. high. STEEL WEB PICKET LAWN FENCE, 18 in. to 50 in. high. STEEL WIRE FENCE BOARD and ORNAMENTAL STRIP. Steel Posts, Steel Rail, Steel Gates and Steel Tree, Flower and Tomato Guards. We manufacture a full line of Wire Fencing, Gates and Posts, and solicit your patronage. Catalogue Free. De Kalb Fence Co., 100 High St., De Kalb, Ill.

JNO. WOODLOCK, PACIFIC COAST AGENT, 26 Beale St., San Francisco, Cal.

"DON'T BORROW TROUBLE." BUY

SAPOLIO

'TIS CHEAPER IN THE END.

MALARIA! DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY. Three doses only. Try it.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE. FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

PLEASANT Profitable Employment AT HOME. No experience or capital required. A month and expenses to the right parties. Address for particulars $50 M. A. THOMPSON, Stockton, Cal. (Mention this paper.)

LADIES Attention! Old Dr. Senavon's remedy for irregular, difficult and suppressed menstruation. Used twenty years; never fails. Recipe free. Address MRS. L. M. BOURNE, Post office Box 230, San Diego, Cal.

PALESTINE CORN
Is hard to beat. Can be planted till June. Yields about 2,000 lbs. corn and 12 tons excellent fodder per acre on dry land. Can be harvested with combined harvester. Send $1 per acre for seed desired. Address: SACRAMENTO RIVER NURSERY CO., WALNUT GROVE, CALIF.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. WOODS & Co's.
"CASTLEWOOD" KENTUCKY BOURBON
CARTAN, McCARTHY & Co.
SOLE AGENTS, AND DISTRIBUTORS
SAN FRANCISCO

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY, which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP - FOR CHILDREN TEETHING - For sale by all Druggists, 25 cents a bottle.

HERCULES
Gas or Gasoline Engine.
Your Wife can run it. It Cannot Explode. No Batteries or Electric Spark.
PALMER & REY, San Francisco, Cal. and Portland, Or.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE IS THE BEST. FIT FOR A KING.

$5. CORDOVAN, FRENCH & ENAMELLED CALF.
$4. $3.50 FINE CALF & KANGAROO.
$3.50 POLICE, 3 SOLES.
$2.50 $2. WORKINGMEN'S. EXTRA FINE.
$2. $1.75 BOYS' SCHOOL SHOES.
LADIES.
$3. $2.50 $2. $1.75 BEST DONGOLA.
SEND FOR CATALOGUE. W. L. DOUGLAS, BROCKTON, MASS.

Over One Million People wear the W. L. Douglas $3 & $4 Shoes
All our shoes are equally satisfactory. They give the best value for the money. They equal custom shoes in style and fit. Their wearing qualities are unsurpassed. The prices are uniform,—stamped on sole. From $1 to $3 saved over other makes. If your dealer cannot supply you we can.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc. AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

INCUBATORS Send for Catalogue. W. C. Beach, Ripon, Cal.

USUAL PRICE, $15.00 AERMOTOR Price $7.50

The AERMOTOR ANTI-FREEZING THREE-WAY FORCE PUMP has a few castings to break, has a very large air chamber, has a very large spout opening, has a windmill shut-off lever attached, and can be furnished by any dealer this side of the Rocky Mountains at the above price. Of course, it is better to go to an Aermotor agent for Aermotor. It is always better to go to an Aermotor agent for anything you may want which he handles. As a rule he is a first-class, live, reliable, wide-awake fellow; that is the reason he is an Aermotor agent. It is doubtful if, in our entire list of thousands of agents, you can find one slow, stupid, behind-the-times fellow. We furnish also a SPECIAL AERMOTOR FORCE PUMP AT $4.50, BETTER THAN USUALLY SOLD AT $8 OR $10. Send for our Pump Catalogue. Buy nothing but an Aermotor Pump, and do not pay more than Aermotor prices for it. We protect the public. We furnish it good goods at low prices. We have established twenty branch houses in order that it may get goods cheaply and promptly. You consult your own interests by insisting on not only Aermotor prices but Aermotor goods at Aermotor prices. Be sure and see our offer next week of a $40 Feed Cutter at $10. AERMOTOR CO., Chicago.

J M Horton

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, MAY 31, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVI. NO. 50. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., MAY 31, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1283.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$1.00
Six Months	2.00
Three Months	1.25
One Month	50
Single Copies	10

F. F. V. INDIANS.

Trying to Get Cherokee Wives and Husbands.

SAD PLIGHT OF THE PAMUNKEYS.

Great Excitement Among the Eligible Belles and Beaux of the Tribe Pocahontas Belonged to.

A modern instance of an entire nation in search of eligible wives and husbands by the wholesale is furnished by the interesting but little known tribe of Pamunkey Indians, living in Eastern Virginia, who are indeed literally the "first families" (F. F. V.'s) of the Old Dominion, being lineal descendants of the true aborigines.

So blue and exclusive is the Pamunkey blood, so unmixed through centuries with any other strain, that the tribe is dying out and now feels the urgent need of a matrimonial alliance with some outside stock in order to preserve the root. The detrimental effects of continued intermarriage between members of the tribe have become alarming, but inasmuch as they scorn a union with their white as well as with their colored neighbors they have decided upon heroic measures to restore their blood and save themselves from extinction.

It is a case somewhat like that of the primitive Romans and the Sabine women, except that they propose to capture their wives not as the Romans did, by force, but by the arts of diplomacy.

The Pamunkey diplomats, head men of the tribe, have opened negotiations with the Eastern band of Cherokee Indians in the adjacent States of North Carolina, Tennessee, Gerogia and Alabama to procure brides for their unmarried sons and husbands for their unmarried daughters. The male Pamunkeys understand that the Eastern Cherokee women are exceptionally pretty, modest and sensible, and the female Pamunkeys regard the Eastern Cherokee braves as handsome, loyal and industrious and calculated to make safe husbands. The prospective Pamunkey suitors of the belles of the Cherokee tribe and the hopeful young Pamunkey girls who dream o' nights of handsome and brave young Cherokee beaux are, as may be imagined, keyed up to a high pitch of pleasurable anticipation.

Correspondence was begun about a year ago with the chiefs of the Cherokees, after repeated conferences between representatives of the Pamunkeys and Commissioner of Indian Affairs Browning, at the Indian Bureau, in Washington, and inducements were offered by the matrimonial diplomats to the mountaineer Cherokees in North Carolina to send on a select sample consignment of legible girls and youths. Last week three emissaries of the Pamunkey tribe departed for North Carolina to visit Principal Chief Nimrod J. Smith and other head men of the Cherokees, at Bird Town, Wolf Town, Soco and Big Cove, and had full powers to bring the negotiations to a favorable conclusion. Whether the hardy Cherokee mountaineers will consent to ally themselves with the Pamunkey dwellers at tidewater without unreasonable inducements is doubtful, but the Pamunkeys are confident that a speedy infusion of new blood into their tribe will be insured without further delay.

This plight of the Pamunkeys and the peculiar conditions that give rise to it are the more noteworthy from the fact that the members of the tribe are the real lineal descendants of the old Powhatans of the days of Capt. John Smith and Pocahontas. They dwell on a part of their original hunting-grounds and represent all that is left of the once powerful aboriginal confederacy which gave the early Virginia colonist so much trouble, until expelled from the Jamestown region in 1644.

Their progenitors possessed the land when Capt. Newport, in 1607, founded Jamestown, the first permanent English settlement on the American continent. Consequently the present Pamunkeys are the veritable "blue-bloods" among all the Indians surviving today, and they form the largest remnant of the old Algonquin stock now to be found on the Atlantic coast. Only a few trifling offshoots and uncertain and feeble strains of blood remain of the other Powhatan tribes.

The Pamunkeys alone have withstood intact the encroachments of civilization for nearly three hundred years, and although their manners are now modified, their blood impoverished, their language lost and their prestige vanished, they still illustrate the law of the survival of the fittest. The bare fact of their existence is unknown even in many parts of Virginia, and almost wholly unknown elsewhere.

Naturally the Pamunkeys are proud of their lineage and of the prominent place occupied by their ancestors in history and literature. King Opechancanough, the successor of Powhatan, and the leader in the great massacre of the whites in 1622, is their tutelary hero. Next to him they revere the memory of Powhatan and his ill starred daughter, Pocahontas, who as a little girl saved Captain John Smith's life in 1608, and as a grown woman married John Rolfe, the English planter, in 1613.

They maintain among themselves a curious kind of savage aristocracy, and assume superiority over their surrounding Virginia neighbors, even as their old Pamunkey forbears considered themselves the leaders among all the allied Powhatan tribes. If put to the test, they might perhaps reluctantly acknowledge the best whites as their equals, but they account the blacks as infinitely beneath them in the social scale.

This precious tribe live in a queer settlement called "Indian Town," in King William County, Va., twenty-one miles due east of Richmond, and one mile east of the historic "White House" where George Washington was married to the beautiful Widow Custis. Their reservation, comprising 800 acres, ceded to the tribe by the ancient Colonial Assembly, of Virginia is an oddly shaped neck of land almost entirely surrounded by one of the serpentine curves of the Pamunkey River, not far from its junction with the York River. The place is connected with the mainland by a single narrow sand-spit, and the isolation and protection afforded by this peculiar situation have doubtless saved these Indians from destruction. About one-third of the reservation is good farming land, and the remainder consists of woods and low swamps, well-stocked with deer, raccoon, otter, muskrats, minks, reed-birds, wild geese, ducks and turkeys.

There are now ninety Pamunkey Indians actually present on the reservation proper, and thirty-five others residing on another small reservation twelve miles northward, on the Mattapony River, besides twenty more who are employed as boatmen on steamers plying the Virginia rivers, making a total of 145 Pamunkeys now living. In appearance they are distinguished by the usual copper-colored skin, straight, coarse hair and dark eyes. They are not particularly strong or robust, and their average longevity is less than that of their white and colored neighbors. There are few members of the tribe who are not closely related by consanguinity to every other person on the reservation, and this accounts for their waning vitality, to remedy which they are now exerting themselves. Most of the adults can read and write and are reasonably well informed. They are temperate, moral and peaceable. Ill feeling between them and their neighbors is almost unknown. Their homes are comfortable and well kept, and most of their houses are weather-boarded. As a rule they are a story and a half high, embracing from two to four rooms. Their church building, where Baptist services are held every Sabbath, is a creditable structure. The church receives the hearty support of the whole tribe.

The Pamunkeys wear ordinary citizens' dress, but affect an excessive use of gaudy colors. All talk English, and scarcely a vestige of their old tribal tongue is left among them. Following the habits and instincts of their forefathers, they spend their time largely in hunting and fishing, using dug-out canoes in their aquatic sports. They also do a little farming to supply their own tables, and make a litle earthenware for domestic uses.

Still, they cherish an inherent dislike for manual labor, and frequently hire impecunious negroes to work their truck patches for them. A few horses, cattle, sheep and hogs are raised. A general merchandise store is conducted by a joint stock company composed of members of the tribe. Their surplus fish, game, furs and farm products find market in Richmond and Baltimore.

The reservation belongs to the tribe as a whole, and there is no individual ownership of land. The houses are individual property, however, and can be bought and sold at pleasure. The land is allotted to families from time to time, and on the death of occupants it reverts back to the tribe for re-allotment. The tribe is not taxed by the State of Virginia, but voluntarily pays, from time-honored custom, an annual tribute to the Governor personally in the shape of a brace of wild ducks or other game.

The tribal government is conducted by an elected chief and council of four, who administer a code of laws framed by the Indians themselves. C. S. Bradby is the present chief, and J. T. Dennis, W. G. Sweat, R. L. Sampson and Terrill Bradby constitute the council, with R. W. Mile a town clerk, and James H. Johnson, W. T. Neal and Dr. B. Richard as trustees. The chief and council are the Judge and jury of all who break the law, and settle all disputes between members of the tribe. There is no such thing as corporal punishment under their laws, either by chastisement or imprisonment. Here are some specimens of their tribal laws, approved Feb. 18, 1886, and transcribed from official record verbatim et literatim:

"1. No Member of the Pamunkey Indian Tribe shall intermarry with anny Nation except White or Indian under penalty of forfeiting their rights in Town.

"2. No non-resident shall be allowed to be hired or sheltered more than three months—and if anny person are known to hire or shelter anny such persons, shall pay 50c. per day for every day over the above-mentioned time. Amendment. Should sutch person or persons be quiet and agreeable they may be hired 30 or 60 day under good behavior.

"3. Anny person slandering another without sufficient evidence shall be fined in the 1st offence $5, Second $10, and in the 3d they are to be removed from the place by the Trustees, chief and counclemen.

"5. Anny party or person found guilty of stealing anny thing belonging to anny one else they shall pay the party for the amt. that are stolen from them and also shall be fined from $1 to $5. 3rd. time they are to be removed from the place.

"10. Be it known that no preson be allowed to swear on the high way of Indian Town and if so they are to be fined from $1 to $2. Amendment—1st offence 25, 2d 75, 3rd 100.

"11. Be it known that anny person or persons seen or known to be fighting upon the highways or elsewhere of Indian Town, the one found guilty of first breaking the peace shall be fined not less than $3 nor more than $5.

"15. Anny person that becomes rude and corrupt and refuse to be submissive to the laws of Indian Town shall be removed by the Trustees, chief and counclemen."

The Eastern Cherokees, towards whom the Pamunkeys are casting such longing eyes, are a vigorous, thriving people, occupying territory of their own in the soutwestern part of North Carolina and contiguous parts of Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee. They number 2885 souls all told. There are 1520 of them in North Carolina, 936 in Georgia, 318 in Tennessee and 111 in Alabama. All are self-supporting citizens, industrious and comfortably fixed, and all wear citizens' clothing. The only aid they receive from the Federal Government is for their schools.

Last week the representatives of these Pamunkey "Coelebses-in-Search-of Wives" called on Gov. O'Ferrall at the State Capitol in Richmond before starting on their mission and received from him some useful suggestions as to the best manner of procedure in dealing with the Cherokee chiefs. At the close of the interview the Governor smilingly assured the delegation of his belief that the contemplated alliance would certainly restore the good Pamunkey breed again, and, although it might ruin its "blood," it would much improve its flesh.

SENTIMENT—HUMOR.

Mrs. Sniffwell—"Why, Bridget, you have been eating onions!" Bridget—"Shure, mum, you're a moind reader."

"Are you engaged?" inquired the lady of Bridget at the intelligence office. "No, mum, but—but I have regular company four nights o' the week.'

He—"I don't see what people keep diaries for. I can keep all my affairs in my head." She—"That's a good way, too; but not every one has the room."

Old Gentleman—"My, my! I don't like to see little boys cry. Boys who get hurt should act like men." Boy—"Boo, hoo! Then I'd get li-licked fer swearin'."

An absent-minded woman went to a bank the other day to have cashed a check her husband had sent her. She indorsed it thus: "Your loving wife, Mary Miller."

She—"If every atom of the human body is renewed every seven years, I cannot be the same woman that you married." He—"I've been suspecting that for some time."

Mrs. Turnbull—"It's too bad that your husband cut off his flowing beard." Mrs. Crimple—"Oh, but he had to do it; I gave him a diamond scarf-pin for a birthday present."

Madly she wept. "You have killed the last vestige of my affection for you," she sobbed. "Is that so?" he answered. "Maybe now you will find some time to attend to the cooking."

Mr. X.—"Good-bye, love! In case I am really prevented from coming home to dinner, I will send a telegram." Mrs. X.—"You need not trouble to send it, I have already taken it out of your pocket.

She—"You don't' think so much of me, Charlie, as you used to do before we were married." He—"Of course not, Carrie. You and I, you know are one now, and it would be egotistical to think too much of oneself."

Magistrate (to witness):—"I understand that you overheard the quarrel between the defendant and his wife?" Witness—"Yis, sor." Magistrate—"Tell the court, if you can, what he seemed to be doing." Witness—"He seemed to be doin' the listenin'.

THE LAWS OF TEMPESTS.

Suppose a railroad train at first stationary. A traveler fires a shot towards some exterior object; it will require say two seconds for the ball to reach the object. Imagine next the train moving at the rate of thirty feet a second. The traveler aims at the object the instant he is opposite it; but the ball, in addition to the impulsion which he has communicated to it, preserves the general movement of the train, which in two seconds makes it travel laterally sixty feet. It will strike then at some distance beyond the object.

The rotation of the earth produces an effect of the same kind upon movements which occur on its surface. All the points of the globe turn together from the west to the east in twenty-four hours; but they all have in reality different rates of velocity according to the position which they occupy. At the poles the velocity is nothing; it increases regularly to the equator, where it reaches the enormous rate of 1520 feet a second.

Let us take for consideration two places in our own country (France)—Paris and Dunkirk. While the Parisian, affected by the movement of the earth, passes through about 1000 feet, the inhabitant of Dunkirk travels only about 963 feet.

Let us imagine now at Paris a wind from the south that is blowing towards Dunkirk, which is almost directly north from Paris. As Paris moves from west to east at the rate of 37 feet a second faster than does Dunkirk, the wind from the south at Paris will be like the ball fired from the moving train; it will be deviated toward the east—that is, towards its right. From being a south wind, which it was at Paris, it will become a southwest wind; and it will reach Liege or Cologne instead of Dunkirk, which it would have reached had the earth been motionless. Thus all winds are turned from their first direction, and in the northern hemisphere this deviation is always towards the right, while in the southern hemisphere it is towards the left.—Chautauquan.

PAUL JONES.

The First to Hoist the American Flag.

MANNERS EASY AND DIGNIFIED.

His Peculiarly Fascinating Way with Sailors—A Tireless Letter-Writer—An Inditer of Verses to Women.

Miss Molly Elliot Seawell has a sketch of John Paul Jones in the Century for April, in which she brings out many new facts concerning the great American naval commander. Concerning his early career, before the capture of the Serapis, Miss Seawell writes:

On December 22, 1775, she made the beginning of the American navy; and from this point the true history of Paul Jones begins. He was then twenty-eight years old, of the middle height, his figure slight, but graceful, and of "a dashing and officer-like appearance." His complexion was dark and weather-beaten his black eyes very expressive, but melancholy. His manners were easy and dignified with the great, and he was without doubt fascinating to women. He often fancied himself in love, and, like Washington, sometimes even wrote bad verses to ladies; but it is unlikely that any woman ever had the real mastery of his heart. He was not deterred by the greatness of "the Fair," as he called them when they pleased him, and made love to very great ladies quite as boldly as when with the wretched Bon Homme Richard he laid aboard the stout Serapis. He had a peculiarly persuasive way with sailors as with women; and if he wished to enlist a sailor would walk up and down the pier with him by the hour, and he never failed to get his man. He was a tireless letter-writer, and when Paul Jones wrote as Paul Jones spoke, nothing could exceed the force and simplicity of his style. But he was subject to attacks of the literary devil, and his productions then were intolerably fine. He wrote and spoke French respectably, and his handwriting, grammar, and spelling are all much above the average of his day.

His first duty was as first lieutenant of the Alfred, Commodore Hopkins' flagship. On this vessel he hoisted for the first time the original flag of the revolution—the rattlesnake flag. In a letter to Robert Morris in 1783, Paul Jones says:

"It was my fortune, as the Senior of the First Lieutenants, to hoist, myself, the Flag of America (I Choose to do it with my own Hands) the first time it was displayed. Though this was but a light circumstance, yet, I feel for it's Honor more than I think I should have felt had it not so happened."

The services he was engaged in under Commodore Hopkins were far from brilliant. The commodore had a strong disinclination to go "in harn's way,"—to use a favorite expression of Paul Jones—and within a year was dismissed the navy. Paul Jone's first command was a little sloop of war, the Providence; and from a memorandum among his papers, in the handwriting of the secretary of the Congress, we learn that his uniform was: "Blue Cloth with Red Lappels, Slash Cuffs, Stand up Colar, flat yellow Buttons; Blue Britches, Red Waistcoat with Narrow Lace." The uniform for the junior officers was also prescribed, and all were commanded to wear "Blue Brichtes." The marine officers, however, were to wear "Britches edged with Green, Black Gaiters and Garters."

Paul Jones's conduct during the cruise he made in the Providence, and afterward in command of a small squadron in 1776, won him great credit, especially with Washington. His employment was the conveying of men and stores from Rhode Island to Washington at New York. Long Island Sound swarmed with the cruisers of Lord Howes' fleet, and Paul Jone's address in eluding them, especially the Cerberus frigate, which tracked him for weeks like a bloodhound, marked him as a man of great enterprise. His next cruise with a little squadorn maintained his reputation, and from that on the requests of officers who wished to serve under him were frequent. Paul Jones's replies to these are quaint reading. He always protests a disinclination to "entice" officers away from other commanders, but never fails to note the good points of his own ship, and to give a forecast of his daring schemes very captivating to an ambitious young officer.

There was great confusion in the tables of rank first adopted in the navy, and thence proceeded a grievance that Paul Jones never ceased to protest against bitterly, until in 1781, many years afterward, he became, by the unanimous election of Congress, the ranking officer of the American navy. By the personal carelessness of President Hancock, Paul Jone's original commission as captain—the first commission granted under "the United States"—was lost. When a new one was given him, he found, to his natural indignation, that thirteen of his juniors were ahead of him on the list of captains. How infuriating this was to a man as greedy of distinction as Paul Jones, may be imagined. He always spelled rank with a capital, and wrote of it as "Rank, which opens the door to Glory." He swore he would never serve under any of the men thus unjustly given precedence of him. Congress, while negligent in doing him justice, was wise enough, nevertheless, to give him always a separate command. It was determined to send him to Europe in the Ranger sloop of war, and in Europe to give him the finest command then at the disposal of the Congress. This was a splendid frigate—the Indien—building at Amsterdam.

NOTES OF MEN AND WOMEN.

Carroll D. Wright says: "Hunger has caused more men to commit petty crimes than anything else." Of 6,958 homicides in 1890 5,100 had no trades.

John Brisben Walker, the millionaire owner of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, is soon to start a weekly newspaper after the style of Harper's Weekly.

"I wish to be married as a woman, not as a queen," said Queen Victoria to the Archbishop of Canterbury when asked if she wished him to leave the word "obey" out of the ceremony.

Mrs. M. A. Jackson, the widow of Stonewall Jackson, who now lives at Charlotte, N. C., has recently undertaken the editorship of a prominent monthly magazine published at Richmond, Va.

The wife of Senator Cameron disposes of her husband's rather dim presidential prospects by saying: "Mr. Cameron is of a very nervous disposition, and he would not live a year in such a position."

Archbishop Corrigan received $3,000 as his fee for performing the Gould-Castellane wedding ceremony. The Archbishop received the money in the shape of a check, signed by George Gould.

David M. Stone, the venerable ex-editor of the New York Journal of Commerce, told a reporter the other day that he had been out of his pew at church on Sunday only three times in twenty-two years.

The wedding of Miss Wanamaker, one of the bridesmaids of Miss Robinson, and Barclay Warburton will be one of the events of the spring in Philadelphia, and will be attended by a large contingent of New Yorkers.

The Princess Belosselsky, formerly Miss Susan Whittier, daughter of General C. A. Whittier of Boston, is making a great sensation at Pau by her beauty and handsome gowns. Her sister, Miss "Polly" Whittier, is staying with her at present.

Sarah Bernhardt is beginning to show a slight indication that age is creeping upon her. She used to be fond of traveling, but it is hard now to get her to leave Paris, and she is said to shudder at the thought of again leaving France on a long tour.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer, wife of the wealthy sugar king, is a queen of extravance. She is fond of flowers. She buys lavishly and has spent as much as $600 for a great basket of orchids. She also shows great ingenuity in devising schemes for spending money.

Herbert Spencer, one of the world's greatest philosophers, bankrupted himself publishing charts to go with his books, and did not make enough on a lecture tour to pay expenses. On the other hand, a French high-kicking concert hall singer gets $3,000 a week in New York for amusing the public. Who says that this is not the age of advanced civilization?

Horace Chilton, the new Texas Senator, was born in Smith county, Texas, December 29, 1853. His father was killed in battle during the Civil War. After the war young Chilton entered a printer's office as "devil," worked up to the case and finally started a small newspaper, from the proceeds of which he supported his mother and educated his sister. He is the first native-born Texan to sit as a Senator in the United States.

Ben Franklin's morals and religious belief have been the subject of much discussion. A letter written by Franklin to his sister, Mrs. Macom, dated October 19, 1789, indicates the writer's firm belief in the goodness of God. It is one of the last letters written by the great philosopher, and the following extract will show the state of his mind at the time: "As to my Health it continues as usual, sometimes better, sometimes worse, and with respect to the Happiness of hereafter, which you mention, I have no doubts about it, confiding as I do in the Goodness of that Being who thro' so long a Life has conducted me with so many Instances of it."

President Cleveland was fifty-eight Monday. Secretary Gresham was born St. Patrick's day. He was sixty-three years old Sunday. He is the oldest member of the Cabinet. Secretary Morton was born April 27, 1832. Herbert was sixty-one last week. Olney was born in 1835, Bissell in 1847, Professor Wilson in 1843, and Dan Lamont was forty-four years old February 9th. Hoke Smith is the youngest member of the Cabinet, having been born in 1855.

George L. Shoup, who has just been re-elected as United States Senator from Idaho, was born in Armstrong county, Pa., in 1836. All the education that he received was that afforded at a village school. He served in the Territorial Legislature, was a delegate in Congress and was made Territorial Governor by President Harrison. He was elected the first Governor of the State of Idaho. He was next chosen United States Senator, and as Governor signed his own credentials for his new office.

Many queer experiences have been narrated by librarians anent the strange requests which they receive for books. The list can be lengthened by recording what recently happened in a small town in Massachusetts, where a visitor to the library, apparently in search of Miss Beatrice Harraden's popular little book, gravely asked for "Boats that Pass on the Water!"

It is officially denied that there is any quarrel between Argentine and Chile.

WATERMELONS.

Thousands of Carloads Shipped North Every Year.

A PROFITABLE CROP IN GEORGIA.

One Farmer Clears $40 an Acre on 500 Acres—Cost of Raising a Watermelon Crop.

This is the center of the watermelon district, which covers an area about 150 miles square, including the southwestern portion of this State and the northwestern portion of Florida, and when the season opens the freight departments of the railroads in this section move their headquarters to Thomasville, and the telegraph company sends down five extra operators to handle the increased business occasioned by the purchase and shipment of the crop. The season lasts about two months, beginning with July and ending with August, and last year between 7,000 and 8,000 carloads were shipped outside the State, carrying an average of 1,200 melons to a car, which makes a total of about 9,000,000 melons contributed to the northern and western appetite.

The Plant system alone handled over 3,500 carloads. Considerably more than half the total shipments went to the northwest, to Pennsylvania, New York and New England, where the freight charges are kept down by the competition of the coastwise steamers from Jacksonville, Savannah and Charleston.

The freight to New York will average $100 a car for the season, by either rail or boat. The charges to Chicago will average $125, and the wastage on shipment in that direction is greater because the fruit has so far to go.

The several lines of steamers between the south Atlantic ports and Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston and New York are fitted up especially for the watermelon trade, having compartments built on all their decks to divide the cargo and keep the melons of each shipper separate, as they do on the railroads.

That the crop of the approaching season will be even greater than that of last year is indicated by the amazing fact that 52,000 pounds of seeds have already been sold at the single town of Monticello, and as my informant remarked:

"That's a right smart lot of them, when you come to consider that a watermelon seed don't weigh nothing."

I can obtain no complete report of the sales of seeds from any other town, but the dealers here tell me that the demand is greater than ever before, and one grocer claims to have sold $1,500 worth this month.

The watermelon business has become systematized during the last three or four years, and the profits are so great and so certain that one would think everybody would go into it. But there is a curious conservatism among the older planters and a prejudice against all innovations in agriculture and everything else, so that the old-fashioned people stick to cotton even at 5 cents a pound and look upon watermelon-raising as a degraded Yankee trick. While it is true that a few enterprising Yankees taught these people the profits in watermelons, a great many of the younger native farmers have gone into the business and done equally well.

At first there was a great deal of swindling. Commission dealers in New York, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago and other northern cities would fill the columns of the local papers with flaming advertisements offering to pay "the highest market price" for watermelons, and through the postmaster and local banks would obtain the names of farmers to whom they sent stencil plates and shipping directions and blanks of different kinds, offering to act as agents for the sale of their crop upon remarkably advantageous terms, but many farmers who shipped melons to them never received any returns. Some of them would be advised that the proceeds were exhausted in freight charges, commissions and other expenses, while more received less than half the sum they expected. Then those who had been swindled held a convention and organized an association which sent out agents who made investigations and reported lists of reliable houses, while the disreputable ones were blacklisted.

The returns were afterward much more satisfactory, but competition has adjusted all the difficulties, and now the commission men place agents here at the beginning of the season, who have offices at the principal railway stations, where they accept and pay cash for melons that are delivered on board the cars. These agents, who by frequent visits have become well known, travel up and down the railways leaving orders and cash with the station agents to buy and ship certain quantities of melons every day.

The first ripe melons that come in bring prices that are comparatively enormous, often $200 a car, or from 15 to 20 cents each, but as they get more plenty the rates come down, and about Aug. 1, at the height of the season, farmers are lucky to get $25 a car, although there is a fair profit even at that rate. The average for the year is about $50 a car, and as an acre of good ground will produce several carloads it will be easily seen that there are few more profitable crops. No agent will buy melons weighing less than eighteen pounds. The smaller ones, called "culls," are sold in the local markets and fed to hogs and cattle, and hundreds of thousands of them are left to rot upon the ground.

The greatest item of expense in raising melons is to carry them to market. All the cultivation necessary is to plow the ground and plant the seeds and keep the weeds down by going over the soil two or three times during the season with a small plow or a harrow, and then "pull" the melons when they are ripe. Fifteen or twenty dollars an acre is ample to cover all possible expense, except the hauling, but they are so bulky and light that it takes several wagonloads to fill a car, and most of the farms are a considerable distance from a railway station. It is a curious fact that the soil absolutely refuses to furnish two crops of melons in succession and it never pays to plant the same field oftener than once in three or four years. The wisest farmers alternate between corn, cotton and watermelons, making the latter crop every three years.

For some reason that has not been satisfactorily explained the negroes do not participate in the profits of this product, although their appetites crave melons more than any other fruit. You will always find a few vines in the truck-gardens behind their cabins, but they very seldom send melons to market. I have asked a great many persons why, and the nearest I can get to a solution of the mystery is that they have no means of hauling their crop from the fields to the cars. Nearly every colored farmer owns a mule or a steer or two, or at least a heifer, which he drives with a pair of rope lines and a bit, before a rack-shackle cart; but such vehicles carry a very small load and move slowly, and as their fields are remote from the railway it would require a great many trips for them to haul enough melons to fill a car. During the shipping season the more enterprising white farmers monopolize every means of transportation for miles around. Every wagon and cart that can be hired is employed and in competition with them Sambo would stand a very poor show. The largest watermelon-planter in this neighborhood is a Yahnkee of the name of Judson L. Hand, who last year cultivated 500 acres and cleared an average of $40 an acre, or a total of $20,000 on one crop. This season Mr. Hand is not raising any melons at all. He is giving the soil a rest and letting his neighbors have a show, which illustrates his sagacity, because the indications are that there will be an over-production and the consumers can get all they want at their own prices this summer. It is said that Mr. Hand came to this conclusion after a recent visit to Florida, where he found the owners of frozen orange groves in that State planting melons in order to recoup themselves.

Every visitor to this part of the country is impressed with the sobriety of the negroes. While many desperate characters wear black skins, and 90 per cent. of the persons convicted of crime are of that race, drunkenness is rare, and, instead of spending his time and money around the saloons when he comes to town, the negro and his family indulge themselves in pink lemonade, sarsaparilla pop and other "soft drinks" that are freely offered him at every street corner on Saturday. The negro farmer works only five days in a week. Sunday is devoted to religion and Saturday to social recreation, and as often as the day comes around Sambo and all his family get up early in the morning, eat their breakfast of cornbread and bacon, harness the mule or the ster or the heifer into the old cart and start for town soon after daybreak to remain until sunset. They may have no business to transact or errands to do, but that makes no difference. They know that they will meet all their neighbors on the road, and have an opportunity to chat with their acquaintances from the whole township during the day. This habit was acquired shortly after emancipation, and it has become more and more general and arbitrary until planters now fix wages and lay out plans on a basis of only five working days a week for each negro. It is said that no emergency will induce the ordinary hand to forego his weekly holiday and remain in the field. The loss of fifty-two days' work and wages each year is a serious sacrifice for a little enjoyment, but the social qualities of the race are as deeply rooted and as thoroughly developed as their religious instincts.—Chicago Record.

THOSE ARTIFICIAL VIOLETS.

Of cautious thrift and cool business judgment the New York women have never before made so admirable display as in the winter's contest with and triumphs over one of the monopolies that threatened to crush their independence, says the New York Sun. In this instance the florists with violets for sale are the humbled foes. For several seasons they have been steadily raising the price of these flowers that New York women particularly have come to consider almost as necessary a part of dress as hats and handkerchiefs. Hitherto they cheerfully paid well for the little blossoms, until, during the winter, their value was raised by the avaricious florist to a point that aroused remonstrance. Finding argument of no avail, the women silently stretched forth the long arm of fashion to mete out vengeance to the obstinate dealers by proclaiming muslin, velvet or silk violets permissible substitutes for the natural flowers. Not only did the artificial ones become permissible, but they have grown to be ubiquitous adjuncts of feminine costume. They have even received Parisian sanction, and the florist now tears his hair with one hand while with the other he figures up the loss this drop in the natural violet market has brought. Through his window he can see that never before have violets been so popular. Not only do women pin them on their muffs and wear them in their hats, but the dressmakers and tailors now send home gowns, coats, capes and dress waists with big bunches of purple velvet blossoms sewed at throat and breast.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, MAY 31 1895

One of the jokes now being perpetrated by the Republican press is in ascribing the business revival to the victory achiev d by their partey last November. They seem to ignore the fact that as far as legislative results are concerned their success will be practically barren. With a Democratic president and a senate which can be controlled by a combination of Democrats and Populists—a combination certain to be formed if tariff legislation is attempted—they will be helpless. Their attempts to claim present benefits for laws impossible of enactment for at least two years yet, almost equals the logic that placed the responsibility of the late panic upon a tariff measure that up to the time had not even been drafted.

Ex Senator Blair of New Hampshire says: "The country is all worked up over the silver question. There is just one plain, sensible solution: Let Congress declare that on July 1 1898, this country shall begin the free coinage of silver. That will give all the world notice. If that should be done we would have no more trouble than we did in resuming specie payments, of which notice was given four years ahead. The other nations would fall into line gracefully, for they would be in a measure compelled to do so. The idea of securing international consent by any other method is a snare and delusion. The world needs silver and the United States can well afford to take the initiative in its rehabilitation.

The case of the United States against Jane L. Stanford, executrix of the Stanford estate, to recover $15,000,000, alleged to be due Uncle Sam, will begin in the United States Circuit Court on June 3. Ex Judge Eugene R. Garber has been added to the list of Mrs. Stanford's attorneys, and he in company with Russell J. Wilson will attend to the defence. Special attorney L. D. McKisick and United States District Attorney Foote will look after the Government's interests.

The first decision of the Supreme Court riddled the income tax law and left it in such shape that the people who ought to pay it escaped, and now the whole law is declared unconstitutional. This is a good thing and if Congress cannot pass a law to make the rich pay their share of the burdens of government, the constitution should be amended so the single tax could be put in operation. This would hit the nail on the head and compel every man to pay for what he received from the government.

In spite of all of Frederick's playing insane, which was more the act of a coward and craven than the shooting of Cashier Herrick, the court has announced that on the 26 of July Mr. Fredericks at San Quentin, will be called upon to stand on nothing and kick at the United State, and that is the best use the court could put him to.

A fact of significance is that at the recent convention of the Republican clubs of the state of Washington the delegates elected to the national conference were anti silver, receiving almost twice as many votes as the silver nominees. The cause of 16 to 1 free coinage is growing—into the ground.

Between Monday morning and Saturday evening of the same week recently, the wages of 250,000 employees in the New England states were advanced voluntarily. And, by the way, the "Gorman Wilson free trade tariff" measure is still the law of the land.

If two years of hard labor do not extinguish Oscar Wilde, they will, at least, give the recording angel a reason for an entry on the credit side of his account.

The trial of Oscar Wilde, which was held in London, has ended, Wilde having been found guilty and sentenced to two years imprisonment.

In a powder explosion at Pinole, near the bay of San Francisco, May 21 five white men and nine Chinese lost their lives.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

TRADE MARK

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING

EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.

FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

FARM AND FIELD AND GARDEN

ABOUT STORING ICE.

How to Build an Icehouse and How and When to Fill It.

The simplest kind of a structure will keep ice. A cheap board building with cracks battened will answer the purpose. For a permanent house it is well to build a brick or stone foundation and to bed the sills in mortar. The walls should be double and can be made so by using 2 by 8 lumber for studding. Line both sides with paper and board up tight, but do not fill in. Let the roof project on all sides or build under the shade of a tree or on the north side of a larger structure. Always leave plenty of ventilation at the gable ends. Have a drain at the bottom extending out a considerable distance. Cover the mouth of this drain in the house with a wire screen and then cover the whole bottom with a layer of sawdust a foot thick.

The keeping of ice depends quite as much on the packing as on the house in which it is stored. Sawdust or dry tan bark furnishes the best packing material. The next best is chaff or cut straw and after these uncut straw.

In a structure such as we have described ten inches of sawdust on the sides is sufficient or 12 or 15 inches of cut straw. Do not put a thick layer of sawdust on top of the ice—six or eight inches is enough.

Fill the house in freezing weather only for the best results. Have the cakes as nearly uniform in size as possible and pack closely, filling cracks with pounded ice to make the mass as solid as possible. The advice is often given to pour water on after filling, but The Farm Journal says this is unwise advice, so don't do it. Forty cubic feet of ice will make about a ton. The size of the house wanted can be figured on this basis.

In some directions given by American Cultivator on building and filling icehouses attention is called to a new material for packing known as mineral wool. It is mineral and of course is not wool at all, though it looks and feels like wool. It is the glass fibers made in refining iron ore by the action of heat on the particles of sand that it contains. The cost of mineral wool if near a factory will probably be near $17 per ton, but its bulk in proportion to weight is so great that it cannot be transported far. It is the cleanest and best nonconductor of heat. It contains a great amount of air, and when laid in walls is a nonconductor of heat and of sound also. No kind of insect or other vermin will live in walls where the filling is with this glass material. For this reason, as well as a nonconductor of heat, it is considerably used for sheathing dwelling houses. It also greatly retards destruction when houses are attacked by fire.

A Word About Corn Fodder.

Iowa farmers, it appears, are awaking to the importance of the value of corn fodder. At the last Iowa stock breeders' convention the subject of corn fodder excited much interest. Everybody present agreed as to its value and also that more than ever was saved this fall. There was disagreement in regard to the best way to save and feed it. Some advocated cutting or shredding, while others maintained that the cheapest cutters and shredders were the jaws of steers. This may be true if the fodder is to be fed outdoors, but cutting is advocated for barn feeding not because it helps the cattle in masticating, and will induce them to eat more of it, though this is probably true, but because, everything considered, it is a saving of labor.

Live Stock Points.

United States Consul General Lathrop at Bristol, England, has been investigating the street car horses of that town. There are 800 of them. When new ones are brought, the price for drafts ranges from $270 to $325; for common car horses from $170 to $220. This is better prices than such animals bring in the United States, but it must be said that these are exceptionally good horses. The average weekly price of a Bristol street car horse's keep is $1.70½. Each horse travels 15 1-6 miles a day in drawing the cars. In England a street car line is called a tramway.

All animal fats are a mixture of three substances—olein, stearine and palmatine. The fat of men and dogs contains most palmatine; that of horses and cows most stearine; fish, most olein.

When a cow dies suddenly from unknown causes, open her stomachs, and you will sometimes find therein not less than a pound of nails, tacks and bits of wire. She has swallowed them along with the ground feed, bran, grain, middlings, etc., that you have been giving her for several years. At last the mess has killed her. Rascally and careless millers and feed store men leave these articles in the stuff they sell, and of course the poor cow swallows them.

If a horse is bad tempered, he is apt to keep his ears thrown back. If he is a kicker, his legs will be scarred. If his skin is rough, his digestion is not good.

The bicycle has cut down the business of city livery stables fully half. This must be remembered in the breeding of common little scrub horses.

The Breeder's Gazette is of opinion that a great revival of draft horse breeding is inevitable.

When you buy a horse, take off his harness and let him walk by himself. If he runs into anything, you will know he is blind.

A sound horse stands firm and square and quiet upon his legs, and they are plump, muscular and without blemish or scars.

AN UNPROFITABLE ROAD.

A Railroad That Cannot Compete With Mexican Burros.

The recent report of the Sonora branch of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe system, a line extending from Benson, A. T., to Guaymas, Mexico, is not encouraging. The road runs along, at the foot of immense mountains, through a waste of sandy deserts and uncultivated prairies. There are few towns or villages of any importance situated near this road. It was constructed at an enormous cost, and it was the dream of the projectors to make Guaymas a dangerous rival of San Francisco.

The ocean route to Australia and the Central and South American ports is hundreds of miles nearer Guaymas than San Francisco, and the former port was intended as a depot and entrepot for all imports and exports from those countries. But the scheme met with a monstrous failure. The traffic between this Mexican port and the United States scarcely brings in sufficient revenue to pay the actual expenses of its train service. Indeed there has been some talk of abandoning that part of the road running between Nogales and Guaymas, a distance of nearly 300 miles.

A peculiarity of this road is the fact that no freight agent has ever yet been able to make a tariff that would compete with the burros that have a line of commercial travel running parallel with the Sonora railroad from Hermosillo to Nogales, Benson and Tucson. Two dozen burros are capable of carrying about as much freight as a box car. This mode is cheaper even if it is longer, but who in that country reckons time? Moreover, custom duties are regularly saved by the burro route in both directions.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE WEDDING FEE.

The Groom and the Justice Got Mixed Over It, but Both Are Now Wiser Men.

A few days since a couple from Burlington, Vt., visited Plattsburg in search of a magistrate who would tie the nuptial knot. When the marriage ceremony was over, the groom wanted the justice to kiss the bride, saying, "Squire, you kiss her first." The squire did as he was requested. The groom asked him how much his bill was. The squire, highly elated, said, "Well, young man, seeing as it is you, I will call it $5." "All right," said the groom, "you have had a kiss, haven't you?" "Yes," said the squire. "Well, then, you give me a receipt, and I will give you $2, and that will make it square."

The justice hesitated a moment and said, "How do you make that out?" "Well," said the groom, "you have married us, haven't you, and you have charged me $5?" "Yes." "And you have taken the first kiss from the bride?" "Yes." "Well, I have charged you $3 for it, and that leaves two due you." "Very well," said the squire, "if that is so, I will take the other two now," and as he was in the act of kissing the bride again the groom drew off and gave the justice a left hander that knocked him to the floor. The result was that the groom was arrested, and when arraigned pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs. Both the justice and the groom have concluded that they are better and wiser men than before this happened.—Albany Journal.

Queen of Old Clothes Dealers.

"La Reine du Temple" was elected in Paris and is to bear the scepter on Midlent day. The correspondent of the London News writes: "The title 'Queen of the Temple' is euphonious. Her kingdom, the Temple, is an old clothes market in an iron building on the site of the convent of the Order of the Knights Templars. The election took place in the Cafe des Enfants de Paris. The electorate was formed of the women dealing in old clothes. Of the 120 present, 101 voted for a Mlle. Clara Hecquet, she being thought the best looking and most amiable of the nine competitors for the ephemeral royalty. Clara Hecquet is 19, has a fine figure and is a blond with regular features and an oval face. She was declared good as she was lovely and devoted to her infirm mother. The maids of honor are of the number of the graces and were also elected."

A Dream Pointed the Way.

The Psychical society will investigate a remarkable incident that occurred in the Scottish mining district of Ben Har on New Year's day. A miner, Donald McFarlane, disappeared on Sunday. There was no trace of him after a two days' search. On Tuesday Robert Halbert, an old man who has the reputation of possessing second sight, and who is a brother-in-law of McFarlane, fell asleep and dreamed that he saw the missing man in a particular part of Almond water, which is some miles distant. Mentioning this to the neighbors, they went to the place, saw the foot prints of the missing man in the snow, and eventually found the man himself standing in the water, which is three feet deep, with ice frozen around him. He was dead.—London Standard.

More Curious Than Dangerous.

A few days ago Mrs. John Harriott went out on the prairie to look after some young stock, and on her return home was followed by seven wolves. When she saw them coming, she ran with all her might. Suddenly she stopped to see what they would do. She started on again, and they again followed. The wolves followed at just a certain distance behind until she reached home.—Inkster (N. D.) Tribune.

Hardships In the Goldfields.

Americans who are thinking to try their fortune in the new Eldorado of western Australia should consider some of the conditions of life in the new goldfields before starting on a fool's errand, says a correspondent. Recent letters are full of doleful tales of hardship. Not more than five men in a hundred are lucky enough to strike it rich, and the region is already vastly overpopulated. The lack of water is the greatest drawback. Water commands 25 cents a gallon at Coolgardie, 37 cents at Hannens and 50 cents elsewhere. In the gold district many horses have died of thirst by the roadside. Five hundred men at Coolgardie are anxious to get work at any wages.

Bettered.

"I would like to improve my opportunities," said the good boy.

"Get the firm to leave more money in the cash drawer," suggested the lad of evil propensities.—Detroit Tribune.

THE SACRED CODFISH.

The Proposal to Take It Out of the Statehouse In Boston Creates a Sensation.

The Worcester Gazette says:

Charles Francis Adams recounts "The Story of the Cod" in the Springfield Republican. In 1782 John Adams secured from Great Britain an eminent diplomatic victory after a wearisome contest—the right of fishery—and on March 17, 1784, John Rowe, a Boston member, asked and received permission to hang the historic codfish on the wall of the chamber of representatives in the statehouse. Thirty years later another war with Great Britain occurred. John Quincy Adams was called on this time as a diplomat, and he, too, saved the codfish once more from British encroachments. The statehouse cod, which the sacrilegious are now threatening to store in the garret, is emblematic of commerce, war and diplomacy and tells of Massachusetts victories in all three fields. After the peace of 1783 John Adams quartered the codfish in his coat of arms, and it is there now. This must have been the origin of the phrase "codfish aristocracy," once in common use. It was commonly spoken in derision, but the pride of the Adamses in the codfish would seem entirely worthy.

On this subject the New York Sun remarks:

There is a proud and beautiful building in Boston. Bulfinch did it. It is a Parthenon surmounted by a gilded gashouse, and to those who love it it is the supreme architectural achievement of the world. Even the limited or prejudiced persons who deny its charm cannot forget the joy of its associations. To go to Boston, to view that dome with an eager eye and to perspire with the pulchritude of it and the deeper thought that one doesn't have to live in Boston is not the least of pleasures in a world that persons of fair digestion regard with a certain amount of attachment. As a matter of fact, the dome is a hollow fraud. Mr. Bulfinch, who has had the distinction of having an eminently parochial street named after him, was not lucky enough to have his designs carried out, and the statehouse, with its feeling Dutch name, is not all that it might have been. But it has merits. There is or was in it the sacred codfish, a palladium that fell from heaven plash into the Frog pond in the days when Boston was an eminent seaport. This codfish was almost human and quite superhuman. It could wink. It had learned to say cultyur and literature and leftenant, besides the other things that are said in Boston. There was a silver bathtub in which it used to tipple when the Boston nine got a game. It used to leap into the air whenever Governor Greenhalge appeared with blue knit thinking cap on. It was sprinkled with champagne whenever the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company had a feast. All the thinkers in the legislature revered it. It would wag its tail at a good thing and drop dead whenever a bore was up.

They have been "fixing up" the statehouse. Evidently some idiot is in charge. The sacred codfish is not to be included among the treasures of the restored statehouse. The Law and Order people say it drinks too much. The A. P. A. says it has a Hibernian countenance. All the same, it was the best in the state. It was the most venerable institution there, except Harvard college and George Marden of Lowell. It is gone. It has been torn down. It is nil. So falls the codfish aristocracy. So fades a glory unmistakable.

NO FEED, NO TOOT.

Why the Marine Band Did Not Play at a Certain Holiday Reception.

Mrs. Calvin Brice has, vulgarly speaking, "put her foot in it," and not the dazzling Trilby foot, which subjugated all who saw it, but the foot which rich people are popularly supposed to reserve for the necks of their inferiors. Mrs. Brice, like Mrs. Tymmyns, of humorous memory, sent out cards for a New Year's reception to be held at her Washington residence. Her "social secretary" was sent to secure the Marine band for the occasion. But the Marine band had played at Mrs. Brice's last year, and after its hard work and enchanting strains was not even asked if it would have a glass of punch or a cup of tea. The Marine band has a tenacious memory.

Professor Fanciulli bowed to the social envoy of Mrs. Brice and asked if "after five hours of music will the musicians have some supper?"

The social envoy replied, "I would as soon ask the cook eat to supper as the band." So Professor Fanciulli said the members of the Marine band were not cooks, but musicians of the nation. The commandant waved his baton, and the social secretary retired in confusion!—Washington Gossip in New York Advertiser.

An Oral Will Probated.

A nuncupative will, the first filed in Pittsburg in 12 years, was accepted on Wednesday by the register. James Bresnan was injured on the railroad on Dec. 18 last and died a short time after on the operating table at the West Penn hospital. Before he died he stated to those around him that he wished his property to go to his younger children—John, James and Mary—excluding his oldest child because the latter was old enough to take care of himself. He also left $200 to the Rev. Thomas Bailey for masses.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Wholesale Elopement.

At Delnicze, near Flume, on the Adriatic, 26 girls were carried off on horseback in one night recently by lovers to whom their parents had refused to give them. It is not uncommon for Croatian girls to force consent to their marriage by an elopement, but an organized raid like this is unprecedented and has made a sensation even in Croatia.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

No Doubt About It.

Jack—Great crush at the De Myllions' ball last night.

Augustus (who had proposed there to Miss de Myllions and been rejected)—A tremendous crush.—New York Times.

He who unintelligently attempts what is beyond his power must leave undone his own proper work, and thus his time is wasted, be he ever so closely occupied.

Lake Huron was named from the Hurons, an Indian tribe on its shores.

Certain parts of the hippopotamus' hide attain a thickness of two inches.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL

ne obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.

All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County Cal

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc., given carefull and prompt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY--AT--LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases

Brown & Wills.
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge St.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery
All kinds of dental work done according to latest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING IN ANY STYLE.
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Administrator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.

REDLANDS GOLD MINING COMPANY

Location of principle place of Business: Redlands, California.

Location of works, Panamint Mining District, Inyo County, California.

NOTICE—There are delinquent upon the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 1, levied on the 14th day of January, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders as follows;

Name.	No. Cert.	No Sh's	Am't
G W Osbun	194	100	$ 85
R C Avery	274	250	21 25
J H Allen	305	3 000	25 50
J H Allen	334	5 000	42 50
Emma Bingham	33	200	1 70
A J Boyer	169	200	1 70
J Bun	248	400	3 40
F Bedford	342	620	5 25
Mrs R B Cute	69	25 000	212 50
M F Clute	70	40 000	340 00
M F Clute	335	1 450	12 15
M F Olute	356	50	40
M F Clute	367	4 250	36 50
Geo. J Caldwell	104	40 000	340 00
Geo. J Caldwell	111	5 000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	112	9 000	76 50
Geo J Caldwell	242	5 000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	243	5 000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	245	5 000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	247	1 000	8 50
Geo J Caldwell	248	100	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	249	100	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	250	2 000	17 00
Geo. J Caldwell	314	5 000	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	331	10 000	85 00
Geo. J Caldwell	359	500	4 70
Geo J Caldwell	368	7 000	59 50
Geo. J Caldwell	369	600	5 00
W Coggeshall	201	100	85
Davis Denoll	94	300	2 55
Wm Fossell	63	500	4 25
T F N Eaton	152	300	2 55
T F N Eaton	174	2 000	17 00
T F N Eaton	211	400	3 40
J M R Eaton	157	100	85
J M R Eaton	163	1,900	16 15
J M R Eaton	209	3,500	29 75
Mrs T F N Eaton	198	300	2 55
Miss Grace Eaton	199	200	1 70
Geo. M Eaton	210	300	2 55
Chas. E French	223	4 000	34 00
Chas. E French	320	5 000	42 50
Chas. E French	324	10 000	85 00
Chas. E French	325	10 000	85 00
Abbie R French	210	1 000	8 50
J R Griffith	311	250	2 15
I M Hough	83	1 000	8 50
I M Hough	319	600	5 10
G L Houlton	125	1 200	10 20
G L Houlton	144	400	3 40
Hattie M Huffman	200	700	5 95
Maggie H Ish	216	300	2 55
Hogan & Parker	328	5 000	42 50
E J Lewood	[illegible]	1 000	8 50
H W Comp. (trustee)	292	700	5 95
J W Jones	80	800	6 80
W T Johnson	83	600	5 10
W L Johnson	140	300	2 55
W T Johnson	212	350	2 95
W T Johnson	280	800	6 80
F S Jacoby	161	100	8
M T Luther	234	100
A M Mitchell	25	300	2 55
W T Mitchell	186	100	8
W T Mitchell	299	400	3 40
R W M Intyre	165	30 000	255 00
R W McIntyre	283	500	4 25
R W McIntyre	285	19 000	161 50
R W McIntyre	86	250	2 15
R W McIntyre	351	500	4 25
G E Noble	145	1 000	8 50
H S Newlove	184	200	1 70
H S Newlove	190	300	2 55
H S Newlove	191	500	4 25
H S Newlove	330	1 900	16 15
Minnie M Norris	202	300	2 55
Mamie M Norris	203	1 250	10 65
Susie A Otto	117	1 000	8 50
Susie A Otto	118	1 000	8 50
Sam A Otto	119	2 000	17 00
John S Phillips	100	100	85
A L Park	43	10 000	85 00
A L Park	44	10,000	85 00
A L Park	45	2 000	17 00
A L Park	47	500	4 25
A L Park	48	4 000	34 00
A L Park	49	500	4 25
A L Park	122	1 000	8 50
A L Park	141	2,000	17 00
A L Park	153	1 000	8 50
A L Park	164	1 500	12 75
A L Park	188	500	4 25
A L Park	189	10 000	85 00
A L Park	207	3 400	28 90
A L Park	208	4 000	34 00
A L Park	230	10 000	85 00
A L Park	231	10 000	85 00
A L Park	266	3 000	25 50
A L Park	295	12 000	102 00
Ralph G Rohrer	321	300	2 55
O W Shafer	21	30 000	255 00
O W Shafer	222	20 000	170 00
O W Shafer	224	10 000	85 00
O W Shafer	225	6 000	51 00
O W Shafer	226	5 000	42 50
O W Shafer	227	5 000	42 50
O W Shafer	374	5 000	42 50
O W Shafer	375	950	8 07
McIntyre Clute & Co	376	1,500	12 50
S H Wheeler	50	4,000	34 00
J N Wilson	53	1 000	8 50
S H Wilson	57	1 000	8 50
M Holmes Wilson	58	1 000	8 50
G W Wright	86	500	4 25
J J Suess	293	750	6 40
J J Suess	306	700	5 95

And in accordance with law and an order of the Board of Directors made on the 14th day of January, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary will be sold at Public Auction at Room 4, Chittenden Building, Redlands, California, on the 6th day of April, 1895 at the hour of 3 o'clock p. m. of said day, to pay said delinquent assessment thereon, together with cost of advertising and expense of the sale.

A. C. CHITTENDEN,
Secretary.

Office Room 4 Chittenden Building, Redlands California. March 6th 1895.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY.
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Carpet Weaving.
MRS. J. E. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.
PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER
We have recently purchased the celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We weave all kind of carpet and rug weaving.
Hit and miss, yard wide and ward'ns sewed at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet 30 to 35 cents per yard.
First class work guaranteed at low prices.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone
FRED BURCKHARDT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY the 8th day of March 1892, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the Southeast quarter and the South half of the Southwest quarter of Section No. 16 and the Northeast quarter of Section No. 15 all in Township No. 10 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. B. M., containing [illegible] acres.

An undivided one half interest of in and to that certain lode, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the Southeast corner of the Southeast quarter of Northeast quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 3 East, M. D. M., and running thence West seven chains and 88-100; thence Northwest following the meanderings of the bank of Creek along its North branch to Edwards Street in the town of Independence, thence following Edwards street along its [illegible] beginning, six and 80-100 [illegible] lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29 in the town of Independence.

Also the County of Inyo as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lot No. [illegible] in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of Inyo County.

Two hundred feet undivided of in and to [illegible] being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same is granted as the [illegible]

[illegible] in Township Seventeen South, Range Eleven East, Mount Diablo Meridian (12 S. 20) rods south [illegible] the river west [illegible] quarter and [illegible] Section No. [illegible] (1) [illegible] North, Range [illegible] East, M. D. B. M., containing [illegible] acres.

And

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, MAY 31.....1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman .....GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman.....CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge.....GEO. M. GILL.
Sheriff.....ARTHUR M. G VEN.
Clerk .....DENNIS J. HES ION.
District Attorney.....P. W. FORBES.
Assessor.....P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer .....W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner.....I. J. WOO IN.
Survey r (endorsed) .....JOSEPH EELY.
Supt. Schools.....S. V. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist.....FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist .....A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist .....J. R ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist.....JOHN WILSON.
5th Supervisor Dist..FRANK FITZGERALD.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

WEDNESDAY, May, 27, 1895.

Lacey vs. Rossi—Filed complaint Issued summons and writ of attachment.

Religious Services.

Rev S. W Austin will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month

Fort Sanders House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .67¾
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5½
Pig lead	3 90

BORN.

BLANEY—At Georges Creek, May 29 1895, to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Blaney, a son.

New spuds are on the market.

J. R. Moffitt went to Fish Spring yesterday.

Ben T. Williams came in from Modock yesterday morning.

Henry Raine arrived home yesterday from a short visit to Mojave.

Regular meeting of Inyo Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M. to-morrow evening.

Mr. and Mrs. C S. Meroney went to Bishop last Saturday morning.

Miss Matilda Meysan left Lone Pine last Friday for a visit to Los Angeles.

Master Roblin Laird of Bakersfield is visiting friends and his former home here.

At noon to-day the themometer stood at 61. Not a bad imitation of San Francisco weather.

George Wood has received his commission and is now boss postmaster at Independence.

Misses Maud Cook and Lizzie Thompson went to Big Pine on Wednesday for a short visit.

Dick Kennedy came in from Modock yesterday, where he has been working for J. J. Gunn.

County Clerk Hession went to Big Pine yesterday to witness the closing exercises of the public school.

Mrs. I. H. Mulholland was among the visitors from Independence who went to Big Pine yesterday.

Harmon says he won't be married till cold weather comes and then he will have summer all winter.

Mrs. H B Boland and Mrs. Eli Decker came up from Lone Pine yesterday, returning the same day.

W. H. Wells and N. J. Cooley came down from Bishop on Wednesday to attend a meeting of the Fair Directors.

Miss Jennie Baxter went to Big Pine on Thursday's train and will remain for a couple of weeks on a visit with friends.

J H. Stontenbornugh Jr. is doing considerable painting about town. At present he is engaged on the residence of Judge Gill.

Mrs. S W. Austin left Lone Pine for Bakersfield early in the week, where she will spend several weeks visiting with relatives.

School Superintendent Austin will be in town all next week and all communications intended for him should be addressed to Independence, Cal.

The weather has been very cool and disagreeable during the week, and it is quite likely that the storm has been general throughout the State.

Neil McLean and John McSweeny will start for Modock on Saturday to haul ore for J. J. Gunn. Horace Elder has gone out to do the packing.

Decoration day was passed over at Independence without any other special observation except floating "Old Glory" to the breeze on the various public buildings.

The feed on the range is better this season than it has been at any time for the past ten years. With a steady rise in the price of cattle stockmen should have an exceptionally prosperous year.

Directors Meeting.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the 18th District Agricultural Association was held at Independence on Wednesday evening, the members present being E. Robinson, N. J. Cooley, J. E. Shepherd and W. H. Wells. E. Robinson was elected President to serve for the ensuing year and B. H. Yandell, secretary. The question of holding a district fair was discussed at length and the conclusion was arrived at that it is the general desire of the people that such a fair be held. As in the regular course of events the fair would this year have been held at Bishop, a canvass of the situation will be made by the Directors living there and a report made at a meeting of the Directors to be held in the near future. The Secretary and Treasurer were instructed to prepare a report to be presented at the next meeting.

A Big Mining Suit.

On Wednesday of last week a complaint of trespass for $283.000 damages was filed in the Superior Court of Mono county by the Standard Con. Mining Co., plaintiff, against the Bodie Con. Mining Co. The plaintiff alleges that the defendant entered its mining claim, called the West Bullion, by means of underground tunnels and workings, as early as 1884, and since said time has repeatidly extracted and converted to its use ores, belonging to plaintiff, from the ledges known as the "Burgess" and "Second South Ledge". The complaint alleges that the plaintiff did not discover said facts and trespassess until 1894. The mining ground is situated in Bodie, and the plaintiff and defendant are the two leading companies of Bodie District

Ten Dollars Reward

The above reward will be paid for information as to the whereabouts of the following described stock, which were lost at Rose Springs, near Haiwai, on May 15. One bay horse branded J. One bay horse branded AR. One bay mare branded JH. One gray mule branded X. One black horse-mule branded P. The finder will please communicate with the this office or with A. W Eibeshutz Independence, Cal.

A W. D. Carroll, of Lone Pine, was in town yesterday. Mr Carroll recently made a trip to the Piute Monument and succeeded in getting an excellent view of it. The rock is seen very plainly and a group of figures at its base gives a good idea of its height and dimensions. Mr. Carroll has done a great deal toward advertising Owens Valley through the medium of the many excellent views he has taken, many of which have been reproduced in journals descriptive of California scenery.

Wm. Acularius received a telegram yesterday notifying him to come to Darwin at once to haul ore for D. C Lane at the Sylvanite mine. An unexpected body of ore has been struck in the new shaft and there will be all the hauling that one team can do. He expects to be able to start Monday.

Louis de Tourniel came to from Snow's Canyon during the week. He says that active operations will be suspended there until the weather gets cooler in the fall E. C. Garlock, the Superintendent, has gone East and will not return before September.

Harry Cook, Tom Webb, Norm. Muirs and H. D. Gill returned from Long Valley yesterday. They succeeded in getting there with the cattle in good shape, and report that there is excellent feed. They will start back next Friday.

E. H. Edwards, of Lone Pine, accompanied by his brother-in-law, Herbert Jones, came to Independence last Monday. Mr. Edwards was here for the purpose of attending a meeting of the Stevens Ditch Company.

O I. Mairs is refitting the old post-office building by putting in a new floor and adding an adjoining room. When completed it will be used by H. E. Wilkinson as an office for the signal service station.

Washington has passed a law making it a crime punishable with a heavy fine for the owners of stallions to permit them to run at large. Such a law would be very beneficial in this State.

John Shepherd started for the San Joaquin Valley last Monday taking about forty head of mules with him. Mrs. Shepherd went with him and will visit friends at Stockton.

A school trustee will be elected to-morrow to serve for the next three years. Polls will be open at the school house between the hours of one and six o'clock p. m.

Misses Birdie Levy, Hulda Harris and Etta Wood are expected to arrive on next Monday's train from San Francisco, and will spend their vacation in town.

Parties who have recently visited Los Angeles state that rolled barley will undoubtedly be selling for fifty cents per hundred this fall.

The Meads, Schober and Spratt teams left Mojave on Wednesday morning for Owens Valley, all of them heavily loaded

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

H. E. Wilkinson Plaintiff, vs. Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

The people of the State of California send greeting to Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now and heretofore existing between plaintiff and defendant upon the ground of the defendant's wilful desertion of plaintiff, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein, which complaint is hereby made a part of this summons.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to Court for the relief demanded in said complaint, viz: For a judgment dissolving said bonds of matrimony.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 10th day of April, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of M. V. BARNES, An Insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of M. V. Barnes, the above named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from her debts, and that Saturday, the 29th day of June, A. D 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court room of said Court, at the Court house, in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and she be discharged from all her debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
[SEAL] By W. M. WILLS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st, A. D. 1895.

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of JOHN BARNES, An Insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of John Barnes, the above-named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, and that Saturday, the 29th day of June, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court-room of said Court, at the Court-house in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and he be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
[SEAL.] By W. M. WILLS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st A. D. 1895.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, Inyo County California. Location of works, near Lone Pine, Inyo County, California

Notice is hereby given, that at a meeting of the Board of Directors, held on the 27th day of April, 1895, an assessment (No. 8.) of fifteen cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin to the Secretary at the office of the company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 1st day of June, 1895, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction, and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, June 22, 1895, at 2 o'clock p. m. to pay the delinquent assessment, together with costs of advertising and expense of sale.

D. HOLLAND, Secretary

Office, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. May 2, 1895.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

U. S. LAND OFFICE, INDEPENDENCE, CAL. April 29, 1895.

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Halliday of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal, has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert land claim No. 645, for the ½ of N½ sec. 15, Tp. 15 S. R. 36 E. M. D M before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal. on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co. Cal. William F. Halliday of Oakland Cal. Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, both of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND, Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

U. S. LAND OFFICE, Independence, Cal. April 29, 1895.

Notice is hereby given that William F. Halliday of Oakland, Cal. has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert land claim No 641 for the N½ of SW¼ sec. 12 Tp. 15S R 36 E M. D M. before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal. on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co, Cal. Joseph Halliday Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, all of Lone Pine, Inyo Co Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND, Register.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNDERSIGNED, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ALLIE R. BROWN, Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased

Dated February 15 1895.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administratrix. aug3 5

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

NOTICE.

Whereas, the consent in writing of the holders of two thirds of the capital stock of the Lone Pine Canal Company, a corporation, to change the principal place of business of said corporation from the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, to the town of Lone Pine, in said county and state, is on file herein. Notice is hereby given that the principal place of business of said Lone Pine Canal Company, will be at the town of Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on and after January 26th 1895.

By order of the Board of Directors.

DAVID HOLLAND, Secretary.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The co-partnership heretofore existing between R. W. Thomas of the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, and T. W. Hill of the same place under the firm name and style of "Thomas and Hill" heretofore conducting a general merchandising business at the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, is this day dissolved by the mutual consent of the said R. W. Thomas and the said T. W. Hill.

Witness our hands and the seals this 6th day of February, 1895.

R. W. Thomas
Thomas W. Hill

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NUCLEUS, HAWTHORNE, NEV.

O. Whiting, Prop'r.

First-class hotel in every respect. Table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Patrons and visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

BIG PINE HOTEL.

BIG PINE - CAL

New House, New Furniture, Low Rates

Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Callow, Proprietor.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

FOR SALE.

THE WHITNEY HOUSE

—The only hotel in—

LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL

Reason for selling, failing health For terms address

MRS A STEWART, Lone Pine, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding every the best buggy teams saddle horses and

Livery Accommodations

in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton

O. I. MAIRS Proprietor.

The newest Style

OF

Fashionable Clothing Dry Goods, Ladies Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOD

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES, PEANUTS

WALNUTS, TOYS

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, "DRESDEN" WARE.

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get the

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

[Official.]

Notice To Tax-Payers.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT I have received from the Auditor of the County of Inyo, State of California the assessment Roll for the year A. D 1894-5, that the taxes on all personal property secured by real property, and one-half the taxes on all real property, will be due and payable on the first Monday in October and will be delinquent on the last Monday in November next thereafter, at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto fifteen per cent will be added to the amount thereof; and that if said one-half be not paid before the last Monday in April next at six o'clock p. m. an additional five per cent. will be added thereto; that the remaining one-half of the taxes on all real property will be payable on and after the first Monday in January next and will be delinquent on the last Monday in April next thereafter at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto five per cent. will be added to the amount thereof; that all taxes may be paid at the time the first installment as herein provided is due and payable.

A. M. GIVEN, Tax-Collector.

octo-td

THOMAS & HILL,

—DEALERS IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.

D. A. BENDER, General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.		From Mound House. No. 1		To Mound House No. 2.
		Leave—		Arrives—
Mound House		10.50 a. m		5.20 p m
Sweyton		11.25 a. m.		4.45 p m
Wabuska		1.40 p m		2.30 p m
Hawthorne	Ar.	5.00 p. m	Lv.	11.00 a. m
		No. 3. Leave—		No. 4 Arrives—
Hawthorne		6.00 a. m.		7.25 p m
Luning		7.15 a. m.		6.15 p m
Sodа Springs		7.50 a m.		5.35 p. m
Belleville		8.10 a m.		4.35 p m
Candelaria		9.40 a m		3.50 p m
Benton		1.30 p m		11.50 a m
Basin Creek		3.10 p m.		9.50 a m
Alvord		.05 p. m		8.55 a. m
Independence		4.35 p. m.		7.25 a. m
Lone Pine		5.20 p. m		6.40 a m
Keeler	Ar	7.00 p. m.	Lv.	6.00 a. m.

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles), Bodie (35 miles) Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's tri-weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Alida valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (9 miles) Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles)

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO., 85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave, WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeler, MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER, Propr.

JOHN B. CLARKE,

Successor to John Clarke,

—PROPRIETOR—

John Clarke's Bishop Stables,

BISHOP, CAL.

First-class Turnouts of Every Kind

Fine horses and Carriages.

horses Boarded for any Time

Best of Care and Attention

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal

New House New Furniture. Low Rates.

Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.

O. I. MAIRS Pro

feb12tf

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS. WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

0-m RENO, NEVADA

BIG POP ADVERTISE

J. E. DUN

Harness Ma

Harness of all kinds, cm to the heaviest. Any kind of made promptly and of the best Repairing done on the shortest full line of saddles and harness.

Valley V Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Pr

A New House Newly Throughout. Guests wi every courtesy and attent

INDEPENDEN MEAT MAR

J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very kinds of meats, including

Beef, Mutton, Pork Sau

Lambs supplied by the 5 cents per pound.

j19-tf

EDWARD CHE

Independence, C

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTIO Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCH

....Consisting of....

GROCERIE

PROVISIO

Tobacco, Cig.

WINES AND L

FLOUR & C

Together with an Assortm

DRY GOODS AND C

ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer sho amine my stock and pric befo el here ace, Cal., March 9, 188 j164fu

A. K. EUC

BIG PINE INYO C

Dealer In GENERA MERCHANDIS GROCERI MINER Supplies

PROVISIO

&c., &c., &

A. K. EUC

Big Pi

BELL'S Flouring

A. N. BELL,

TRY BELL

EXTRA PATENT ROI

Having added Patent Rolls and our Mills, I am now turning o

Equal to th

Corn, Oats and Barley

Notice.

Independence, Cal

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

All other powders are cheaper made and inferior, and leave either acid or alkali in the food

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL ST., NEW-YORK.

A philologist of high repute is authority for the statement that there are seventy-two languages spoken in Russia.

Weinstock, Lubin & Co

400 to 412 K St.,

Sacramento, Cal.

Largest General Retail House on Coast.

Wearing Apparel of all kinds for men, women, and children; Dry Goods, Shoes, Hats, Millinery, Valises, Furniture, Carpets, Crockery, Notions, Stationery, Silverware, Toys, Household Supplies, etc.

Catalogue Free.

A handsome illustrated catalogue about our goods and prices sent free to any address. Tens of thousands of customers find it profitable and satisfactory to buy through this book.

TERMS CASH.

Enclose money for goods with order, and if to be sent by mail allow for postage. Any balance left over will be returned.

If interested in any of the items below, order promptly, giving item number.

A156. Chenile Table Covers, pretty floral designs, about one yard wide including the fringe. Special value at 50c; postage, 10c. 50c

A157. Men's white laundried Dress Shirts, best Wamsutta muslin bosoms, reinforced. Special value at 72c. 72c

A158. Ladies' percale Waists, light or dark colors, well made; give bust measure. Price, 25c; postage, 5c. 25c

A159. Men's elastic Suspenders, wire buckles, braided ends, with drawer supporters. Price, 15c; postage, 3c. 15c

A160. Taffeta Silk, narrow stripes, plain lustrous weave, brown, wine or gray, for waists or skirts; 18 in. wide. Price, 49c yard. 49c

A161. Ladies' two piece suit; skirt of navy blue serge; waist of light colored percale. Give height and bust measure. Suit complete, $1.75; postage, 22c. $1.75

A162. Sateen house Wrapper, black ground, neat colored figures, ruffles over shoulder; bust measure 32 to 42 in. Price, $1.50; postage, 15c. $1.50

Send for our Free Catalogue of paper patterns, containing over 1,000 illustrations of stylish garments.

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN & CO.,

Sacramento, Cal.

FADS OF PASSION'S POETESS.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox, the poetess of passion, has as many fads as ideas about love and verses. Her principal fad is her lord and master, an interesting man who is not at all aesthetic in appearance. Next come her gowns. For evening they are barbarically splendid, made like flowing robes, covered with lace and jewels and ornaments. Her fad in animals is a white kitten, which came all the way from Paris in a crated box. For its especial amusement Mrs. Wilcox strung several thousand shells on ribbons and made a portiere of them, which also serves as a plaything for puss. Ella Wheeler Wilcox is also fond of old newspapers, the older and rarer the better, and wears—ye gods and little fishes!—a thumb ring.

Santa Rosa is preparing for the rose carnival, which will take place on May 8th, 9th and 10th.

Marriage, says one "done for," consists of five minutes at the head of the procession and a lifetime in the ranks.

Consumption kills more people than rifle balls. It is more deadly than any of the much dreaded epidemics. It is a stealthy, gradual, slow disease. It penetrates the whole body. It is in every drop of blood. It seems to work only at the lungs, but the terrible drain and waste go on all over the body. To cure consumption, work on the blood, make it pure, rich and wholesome, build up the wasting tissues, put the body into condition for a fight with the dread disease.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery fights in the right way. It will cure 98 per cent. of all cases if taken during the early stages of the disease. Its first action is to put the stomach, bowels, liver and kidneys into good working order. That makes digestion good and assimilation quick and thorough. It makes sound, healthy flesh. That is half the battle. That makes the "Discovery" good for those who have not consumption, but who are lighter and less robust than they ought to be.

Life Among the Afghans.

The courage and undaunted boldness of the Afghan will bear comparison with that of any nation, and many are the instances of personal bravery known to British officers. There lives in the Yusufzai country an old chieftain, the hero of many fights, who now enjoys a well earned pension, with the village manor as a reward for honorable service, and who on more than one occasion risked his life to save that of his commanding officer. The present editor of the London Evening Globe records with gratitude the fact that 30 years ago his life was saved by Afzal Khan, the recent envoy to the Kabul court. Major Wigram Battye, whom I buried at Jelalabad, fell on the battlefield of Fattahabad in the conquest of Afghan territory, but they were Afghan soldiers of his own regiment who stood over his dead body to protect it from insult. The missionary Tuting was attacking the faith of the Moslem in the streets of an Afghan city when his life was attempted by an assassin, but it was his Afghan servant who saved the preacher's life even in the midst of popular tumult.

Colin Mackenzie, one of the Kabul prisoners of 1842, often told the story of that Afghan chivalry which protected the lives and honor of English ladies in the excitement of a national rebellion. Nor are they slow to appreciate the quality of bravery in others. In the frontier war of 1863 a young English officer was deserted by his native sepoys, and for some time held his own in the midst of a crowd of Afghan warriors. When the brave young soldier fell, covered with wounds, the very men who had cut him down bore testimony to the indomitable pluck of the young Englishman, who, rather than run with his men, faced the foe and died like a man. They raised one united shout in the Afghan language as he fell: "Bravo! Bravo! There's a brave young fellow!"

But they are revengeful and jealous.—Home and Country.

Figures Inscribed on Human Eyes.

The legendary belief that the eye of a murdered man might retain a permanent image of his destroyer has just received something like scientific confirmation. According to The Revue des Questions Scientifiques, Drs. Deneffe and Clayes of Ghent university recently had their attention directed by a medical student to the curious appearance presented by the eyes of a woman under treatment in the hospital. The student declared that he had found certain figures distinctly inscribed on the surface of both eyes. Dr. Deneffe was incredulous and suggested that if any such marks existed they must merely be the chance result of some injury, and that the resemblance to figures was probably imaginary. Next day, however, he examined the patient himself and was astonished to find that the left iris bore the number "10" and the right "45," these figures being traced with caligraphic perfection.

Imagination and hallucination are both out of the question, as Dr. Clayes and other observers were brought in to verify the phenomenon. The eyes, moreover, were photographed, and on the enlarged proof the numbers "10" and "45" stand out with unmistakable clearness. Nor is this all. Although the origin of these particular impressions cannot be ascertained, it has been proved that their acquisition may be hereditary. The woman's daughter has the same peculiarity in her eyes, but with a much less degree of regularity and distinctness. The girl's right eye is found to bear a feeble reproduction of the number "10," while in the left iris the figures "20" take the place of the mother's "45." Here, then, is a pleasing puzzle for the physiologists. It would be strange at this time of day to discover that the eye under certain conditions could really perform the functions of the camera.—Westminster Gazette.

The Wife of Moses.

We must examine the Talmud and the books of the commentators before we can answer the question of a correspondent: "Did Moses take a negro woman to wife?" We learn from the twelfth chapter of the book of Numbers that certain persons "spake against Moses because of the Ethiopian woman whom he had married, for he married an Ethiopian woman," but it must be remembered that all the people of the extensive region anciently known as Ethiopia were not negroes. The Cushite race lived there in the time of Moses. Perhaps the wife whom the Lawgiver of Israel married was a Cushite or Sabean. If, however, she was of the negro race, we cannot help it.—New York Sun.

Ivory Ball Making a Slow Process.

It does not look reasonable that 6 to 12 months should be needed to make a billiard ball, but a first class ball cannot be manufactured in less time, owing to the tendency of carved ivory to shrink. If it shrank equally, a ball could be cut and polished in a few hours, but it does not, the shrinkage being greater in the direction of the width than of the length of the tusk. A ball must thus be roughly shaped, then kept for a number of months, until the shrinkage process has been completed, when the fine cutting and polishing may be done.—Chicago Tribune.

Prince Bismarck is determined never to grow bent. When taking his daily walk, he carries a stout cudgel across his back, held between his elbows. This helps him to keep himself erect.

Use words of Saxon rather than of Latin origin whenever it is possible to do so, thus gaining terseness and vigor rather than a large number of syllables with diminished force.

THE SPENT BALL.

By H. S. KNEEDLER.

"Yes, without a future! For to what future can a man look who cannot measure it by experiences he has known? All things are relative. We base our hopes of happiness upon what we know has given us happiness. Our ambitions, our pleasures, our dreams are all things of growth to which our daily lives minister. The love of parents, the shelter of home, the companionships of youth, the incentives of early rivalries, all contribute to this better judgment. We gather our store of knowledge day by day, and with it we acquire the capacity to enjoy and to apprehend the anticipated successes of tomorrow. But a man without a past! What can life hold for him? To feel the unutterable desolation of an impenetrable waste behind him—to know that he is a mariner who sails without a compass an unknown sea in whose flood the keel of his bark leaves not even a ripple, to live without memory and without hope, without the comfort, aye, and the pangs of one's existence. My God! what can the future hold for such an one?"

I watched his keen knife.

"Nothing," replied Jones sadly. "And perhaps that is the reason we find him so willing to give it up."

"It must be so. And yet I feel that back of all this there must be some hidden mystery which, if we could only penetrate, would set this man free from the bondage of such punishment as his must be."

"You are right in calling it a punishment," Jones replied. "But what a torture it is, too! I have heard people speculate on the merciful Providence which kept our future a secret. Yet it seems to me that a man could bravely go forward to any fate, much as the old martyrs faced the stake when they knew they had to sizzle. But surely no one, except he were lost to every moral tie, could wish to be perpetually forgetting."

"To forget! Why, no! To forget is death. What would life be without its memories of early loves and joys, of a mother's kiss at night, a father's blessing, a wife's world-wide love? Life is only a bundle of memories. We gather a flower here and there to put with the others in the keeping of our hearts. A thorn or poisonous weed creeps in at times, but the others are no less the precious for their presence. Memory is the thing that keeps our hearts young, our faith pure, our confidence in the realities of life sacred. It is the tie that binds us to our fellows, that, like a golden cord, springs from the anchor of our faith and binds us to heaven."

"Then let us do what we can to restore this man's past to him."

"Our only hope is in your specialist," I said. "I trust he may not find the task as hopeless a one as it seems to me."

Our impatience made it seem an interminable time before Dr. De Costa reached Donaldsonville. As a matter of fact it was only two days, but days were precious now and we lived in dreadful suspense. Much of the time we spent with the accused, the interest of the judge securing us unwonted liberties in that respect. There was a dreary satisfaction in talking with him and providing little delicacies for his use. By the time the great specialist arrived Brigham was looking muca as he had looked when we knew him in Memphis, at least more presentable and cleaner than when he first came from the noisesome jail. Otherwise there was little change. He talked frankly of his life in the lumber camp and his confinement in prison, but when we would press him to tell us what had happened before he went to the lumber camp he would grow impatient and say: "Don't ask me, for I do not know. It all happened so long ago that I have forgotten."

Even De Costa was puzzled when we narrated the particulars of the case. The doctor was a small man, with a closely cropped gray mustache and beard. He wore gold rimmed glasses, and had a habit of taking them off and wiping them with his silk handkerchief when he was thinking intently. "It is very strange," he said, "very strange, indeed, but it may be a form of asphasia of which we have no knowledge. Perhaps some sudden mental perturbation may have caused the rupture of a blood vessel in the brain, which, while it has has had no observable physical effect, has paralyzed the functions of that particular organ. But I can tell better when I have talked with the man, and I think I had better see him alone at first, so that I may the better diagnose his case."

Jones and I escorted him to the jail, and waited outside the result of the conference. It was an hour before he summoned us to him, and then he met us in the little court yard and said:

"Gentlemen, I can find no trace of insanity about him. He is as rational as any of us. The only explanation I can offer is that at some time he suffered a severe shock to some of the nerve centers, or passed through an illness which has left his mind prior to that time, and perhaps periodically since, a blank."

"Are there cases on record of that kind?"

"There are a few; but usually where such intellectual paralysis, or local pareses, has been superinduced by injury or breaking down of the brain cells, it has been attended by complete loss of all sense of memory. The fact which throws doubt upon this case being such an one is the apparent continuation or survival of certain faculties. For instance, the man is able to reason, he talks not only with coherence, but he correlates ideas and words with events; he retains full grasp of his intellectual acquirements, as, for instance, the ability to read, to write. This is very unusual."

"It can't be that kind of a case," remarked Jones, "for I have heard of those people who came out of an attack of typhoid or brain fever and had to commence all over again, beginning just as children do with their alphabet."

"There is a possibility that such may be true in this case to the extent I have mentioned. In fact I do not know of any other explanation, and it would be a difficult matter to demonstrate."

"What makes such a thing seem impossible to me," I replied, "is that this man was manifestly living in the same condition at Memphis. He seems to be existing in intervals, and at the close of each period his memory becomes a blank to all that has preceded."

"That recurrence in the intervals of what we might call consciousness could perhaps be accounted for by a temporary lessening of pressure on the brain if the affection was traceable to an injury," replied the doctor. "When through any cause the pressure was relaxed he would recover the use of faculties least affected; when suddenly accentuated the brain would relapse into a torpid condition, while physically the man might be perfectly well. He would then act mechanically from muscular rather than mental volition."

"By George!" I exclaimed, as a thought flashed a ray of hope into my mind, "the scar."

"What scar?" said the doctor, suddenly alert.

"This man has a scar on the right side of his head," I responded, indicating the place above my own ear. "I first noticed it at Memphis, and it was one of the personal peculiarities by which I identified him in court when I first saw him here. I remember, too, that he told me it sometimes made him dizzy when he pressed it."

"Now we are getting very close to the seat of the trouble," said the doctor, manifestly brightening. "Why did you not mention this before?"

"I confess it seemed so trivial a thing that I never thought of it."

"It may be the solution of the whole mystery, and enable us to restore this unfortunate to his rightful mind. Come, gentlemen, let us see the man again at once."

We returned to the cell where Brigham was confined. He welcomed us very courteously, but the doctor stood upon no ceremony. He said brusquely:

"Mr. Brigham, your friends have told me of an injury to the head which you once received. I wish to examine it."

"There is certainly a mark of some sort upon the side of my head," was the prisoner's reply, "but what it is, or how it came there, I cannot even infer."

The doctor's white, nervous fingers were already running through the man's hair. They stopped a moment over the point where the scar was, then tightened, and before we could spring forward to catch him Brigham grew deathly pale, his eyes closed, he reeled and fell in a huddled heap upon the rough wood floor and lay there as one dead.

"This is the secret!" exclaimed Dr. De Costa triumphantly, as he stood over the unfortunate man. "Don't be excited, gentlemen. He will come to in a few moments, and presently I hope we shall give this man's past back to him."

"You can do that?"

"Assuredly. In some way, which we shall perhaps learn from the lips of the patient himself, this man was injured in the head. A minute fragment of the skull was carried away. In time the skin grew over the wound and formed a tough, serviceable cover. But it exerted a certain local pressure which is intensified to unconsciousness, as you have seen, by slight pressure. When this man recovers what in his case is only partial consciousness he will probably have entered upon another phase of life, and will have completely forgotten the events which have distinguished the interval that has elapsed since he last lost consciousness. It will suit our purpose to mislead him a little, so please follow my directions."

The doctor dipped his handkerchief in a cup of water which stood near by, and laid it on the forehead of the unconscious man. Presently life began to assert itself. He breathed convulsively, his eyes twitched and then his lips opened a little and he moaned like one in pain.

"Let us lift him to the bed," said the doctor in a whisper. We obeyed his directions, and stood around the low couch breathlessly awaiting the next act in this strange drama of life.

In a few minutes the color began to come back into the wan cheeks, the eyes opened wearily and Brigham asked:

"Where am I?"

"You are in bed at present," replied the doctor, tying a handkerchief quickly about his patient's head.

"But what has happened? I feel weak and dizzy."

"Nothing very serious—a slight fall, which has hurt your head a little. I shall bind it up and you will soon be well."

"Oh, yes, my head," said Brigham, trying to raise his hand to it. "It feels as though I had been struck there, but I do not remember how it happened."

"No, nor are you likely to until you recover from the shock and I dress the wound. It is not a very serious one, but I shall have to stitch it up, and when I get ready to do it I want you to take a little ether."

"But I am not afraid of the pain."

"Ah, I know that, but you might bother me. Men who are not afraid of pain are a greater nuisance to doctors than those who are."

"Are these physicians too?" our late comrade asked, moving his hand toward Jones and I. It was evident he had no recollection of ever having seen us before.

"They are my assistants," replied the doctor curtly, "and I shall now ask one of them to go to the hotel and bring my operating case to me."

"Let me go," said Jones. "I'm glad to get a chance to breathe the pure air again."

(To be continued.)

A mass meeting of citizens of Ukiah is to be held to take action in the matter of the proposed construction of a branch railroad to penetrate the redwood belt of the upper Navarro. The road will open up over 100,000 acres of the finest timber land on the coast.

VERY COSTLY.

In many things which make life burdensome, it is not merely the discomforts we feel, but the loss of time and money. Among minor accidents, none are more liable to cause this than a sprain. Very many serious cases are known that have cost a lifetime of misery and very much in time and money. Much of this is owing to neglect. St. Jacobs Oil, used promptly on the worst case of sprain, will cure it as surely as it is used. It is the best, and needs only the care and attention of applying it in good time to make the cure effective and permanent.

AN ALPENA MIRACLE.

Mrs. Jas. M. Todd, of Long Rapids, Discards Her Crutches.

In an Interview with a Repor er She Reviews Her Experience and Tells the Real Cause of the Miracle.

(From the Argus, Alpena, Mich.)

We have long known Mrs. Jas. M. Todd, of Long Rapids, Alpena Co., Mich. She has been a sad cripple. Many of her friends know the story of her recovery; for the benefit of those who do not we publish it today.

Eight years ago she was taken with nervous prostration, and in a few months with muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. It affected her heart, then her head. Her feet became so swollen she could wear nothing on them; her hands were drawn all out of shape. Her eyes were swollen shut more than half the time, her knee joints terribly swollen, and for eighteen months she had to be held up to be dressed. One limb became entirely helpless, and the skin was so dry and cracked that it would bleed. During these eight years she had been treated by a score of physicians, and has also spent much time at Ann Arbor under best medical advice. All said her trouble was brought on by hard work and that medicine would not cure, and that rest was the only thing which would ease her. After going to live with her daughter she became entirely helpless and could not even raise her arms to cover herself at night. The interesting part of the story follows in her own words:

"I was urged to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and at last did so. In three days after I commenced taking Pink Pills I could sit up and dress myself, and after using them six weeks I went home and commenced working. I continued taking the pills, until now I begin to forget my crutches, and can go up and down steps without aid. I am truly a living wonder, walking out of doors without assistance."

"Now if I can say anything to induce those who have suffered as I have, to try Pink Pills, I shall gladly do so. If other like sufferers will try Pink Pills according to directions, they will have reason to thank God for creating men who are able to conquer that terrible disease, rheumatism. I have in my own neighborhood recommended Pink Pills for the after effects of la grippe, and weak women with impure blood, and with good results."

Mrs. Todd is very strong in her faith in the curative powers of Pink Pills, and says they have brought a poor, helpless cripple back to do her own milking, churning, washing, sewing, knitting, and in fact about all of her household duties, thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

HE KNEW HIS LIMIT.

The tramp had applied at the kitchen door of a house in New England and, a slim maid had appeared.

Maid (curtly)—What do you want?

Tramp in (his politest manner)—Something to eat, please.

Maid—I'll have to see the landlady.

Tramp (interrupting)—Excuse me; but is this a boarding house?

Maid—Of course it is.

Tramp—Then I desire to withdraw my request. I ain't very strong, and a feed of hashed beef would kill me. Extend my compliments and regrets to the landlady.

Then he bowed himself out.—Truth.

Jacob Lafe, a section hand on the Burlington Railway at Alger, Wyo., shot Barbara Walker, 16 years old, daughter of the section foreman, one day last week. Lafe then shot and killed himself. The girl is still living, but her recovery is impossible.

POOR INDEED!

The prospect of relief from drastic cathartics for persons troubled with constipation is poor indeed. True they act upon the bowels, but this they do with violence, and their operation tends to weaken the intestines, and is prejudicial to the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is an effectual laxative, but it neither gripes nor enfeebles. Furthermore, it promotes digestion and a regular action of the liver and the kidneys. It is an efficient barrier against and remedy for malarial complaints and rheumatism, and is of great benefit to the weak, nervous and aged. As a medicinal stimulant it cannot be surpassed. Physicians cordially recommend it, and its professional indorsement is fully borne out by popular experience. Appetite and sleep are both improved by this agreeable invigorant and alterative.

Japan does not care about Li Hung Chang's yellow jacket. What that country is after is the yellow metal.

NOTICE.

Drs. H. H. Green & Sons of Atlanta, Ga., are the greatest dropsy specialists in the world. Cure more patients than the entire army of physicians scattered over this beautiful land of ours. A valuable discovery outside any medical book or published opinion. A purely vegetable preparation. Removes all dropsical symptoms rapidly. Ten days' treatment mailed to every sufferer. See advertisement in other column.

New York and Chicago should find something new about each other's styles of "society," or else let the matter drop.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

To Cure Earache

Saturate a piece of cotton with Pain-Killer and place it in the ear. The pain will quickly cease. To cure toothache, place the cotton in the hollow of the tooth, and bathe the face with

Pain-Killer

This good old remedy will cure any ache or pain that ever attacked the old or young. Miners, Stockmen, and everyone who is not within calling distance of a doctor should never be without a bottle of Pain-Killer. Sold everywhere. The quantity has been doubled, but the price remains the same. Get a bottle at once.

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Providence, R. I. Sole Proprietors.

SPRING CLEANING

Is such a trial that men say "Let the house take care of itself." But the conscientious wife feels bound to risk health and strength in this annual struggle with dust and dirt. The consequence of her feverish anxiety over extra work is depletion of the blood, the source of all life and strength, manifested in that weak, tired, nervous condition too prevalent at this season, and very dangerous if allowed to continue. What every man and woman needs in the spring is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It keeps the blood vitalized and enriched, and thus sustains the nerves and all the bodily functions.

"I take Hood's Sarsaparilla every spring, and it is the only medicine I use through the year. It enables me to do my house cleaning and farm work all through the summer. It helped me very much for palpitation of the heart. I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the medicine for everyone, and all who take it will never be without it. I have also used Hood's Pills, and they are the best I ever tried."—Mrs. F. H. Andrews, S. Woodstock, Ct.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Is the Only True Blood Purifier

"IT IS IGNORANCE THAT WASTES EFFORT." TRAINED SERVANTS USE

SAPOLIO

MALARIA! Three doses only. Try it.

DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY.

"What do you think of this portrait of me, my dear?" asked Witherup. "It is very smiling and pleasant," said Mrs. Witherup. Then she added, wistfully: "I wish you'd look like it once in a while, John."

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss.
LUCAS COUNTY.

FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

SEAL. A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Minister—So you say that you saw some boys out fishing on Sunday, Bobbie. I hope you did something to discourage them. Bobbie—Oh, yes, sir. I stole their bait.

We think Piso's Cure for Consumption is the only medicine for Coughs.—Jennie Pinckard, Springfield, Ills., Oct. 1, 1894.

The late king of the New England gypsies, who was buried the other day, left an estate valued at $100,000.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted. Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Ely's Cream Balm

Cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Heals the Sores.

Apply Balm into each nostril. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP - FOR CHILDREN TEETHING - For sale by all Druggists, 25 cents a bottle.

PALESTINE CORN

Is hard to beat. Can be planted till June. Yields about 2,000 lbs. corn and 1½ tons excellent fodder per acre on dry land. Can be harvested with combined harvester. Send $1 per acre for seed desired. Address: SACRAMENTO RIVER NURSERY CO., WALNUT GROVE, CALIF.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. Woods & Co's.

"Castlewood" Kentucky Bourbon

Cartan, McCarthy & Co.

Sole Agents, and Distributors

San Francisco

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY,

LITTLE SHIRTS We offer for immediate demand summer underwear, shirts, pants, drawers, short or long sleeves, knee or long pants, sizes 16 to 20 at 15c, or 22 to 36 at 20c, and 38 to 44 at 25c, mailing 4c; warranted. Mention this paper. Send stamps to SMITH'S CASH STORE, 414 Front St., S. F.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE.

FOR SALE BY

CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

PLEASANT Profitable Employment AT HOME. No experience or capital required. a month and expenses to $50 the right parties. Address for particulars M. A. THOMPSON, Stockton, Cal. (Mention this paper.)

DROPSY

TREATED FREE.

Positively Cured With Vegetable Remedies.

Have cured thousands of cases. Cure cases pronounced hopeless by best physicians. From first dose symptoms disappear; in ten days at least two-thirds all symptoms removed. Send for free book testimonials of miraculous cures. Ten days' treatment free by mail. If you order trial, send 10c. in stamps or pay postage. Dr. H. H. Green & Sons, Atlanta, Ga. If you order trial return this advertisement to us.

WALTER BAKER & CO.

The Largest Manufacturers of PURE, HIGH GRADE COCOAS AND CHOCOLATES On this Continent, have received HIGHEST AWARDS from the great Industrial and Food EXPOSITIONS In Europe and America.

Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or other Chemicals or Dyes are used in any of their preparations. Their delicious BREAKFAST COCOA is absolutely pure and soluble, and costs less than one cent a cup.

SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE.

WALTER BAKER & CO. DORCHESTER, MASS.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE IS THE BEST. FIT FOR A KING.

$5. CORDOVAN, FRENCH & ENAMELLED CALF. $4. $3.50 FINE CALF & KANGAROO. $3.50 POLICE, 3 SOLES. $2.50 $2. WORKINGMEN'S. EXTRA FINE. $2. $1.75 BOYS' SCHOOL SHOES. LADIES. $3. $2.50 $2. $1.75 BEST DONGOLA. SEND FOR CATALOGUE. W. L. DOUGLAS, BROCKTON, MASS.

Over One Million People wear the W. L. Douglas $3 & $4 Shoes

All our shoes are equally satisfactory

They give the best value for the money. They equal custom shoes in style and fit. Their wearing qualities are unsurpassed. The prices are uniform,---stamped on sole. From $1 to $3 saved over other makes. If your dealer cannot supply you we can.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

if you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc., AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. Branch House, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

INCUBATORS

Send for Catalogue. W. C. Beach, Ripon, Cal.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

The Aermotor all Steel Feed Cutter Worth $40 FOR $10

We will furnish this feed cutter, one only to one person not later than July 1, 1895, for $10.00 cash, and address of ten neighbors and acquaintances of the sender known personally by him to be responsible and influential men in their localities who need and are likely to buy something in our line this year. After July 1, money sent in on this offer will be returned to sender and no attention will be paid to inquiries or letters concerning this offer. It is literally now or never. The feed cutter is delivered f. o. b. Chicago. If shipped from branch houses back freight will follow.

This all steel frame and saw which we put out at sell only at $25.00. Is justly 26-inch very superior $15.00 last year, but now one of the most popular articles we ever made. AERMOTOR CO. Chicago.

MEN Dr. LIEBIG & CO. Special Doctors for Chronic, Private and Wasting Diseases.

Dr. Liebig's Invigorator, the greatest remedy for Seminal Weakness, Loss of Manhood and Private Diseases, overcomes Prematureness and prepares all for marriage life's duties, pleasures and responsibilities; $1 trial bottle given or sent free to any one describing symptoms; call or address 400 Geary St., private entrance 408 Mason St., San Francisco.

Mrs. Dr. Wegener. PRIVATE HOME for all Female Diseases; separate rooms for ladies before and during confinement; have enlarged and arranged my home to suit rich and poor; irregularities cured in one day; guaranteed; regular physician of long and successful practice; travelers attended; no delay; all business strictly confidential. 419 EDDY ST., San Francisco, Cal.

S. F. N. U. No. 671. New Series No. 18.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, JUNE 7, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVI. NO. 51. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JUNE 7, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1284.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.00
Three Months	1.25
One Month	50
Single Copies	10

MIMIC WAR.

Firing Upon Dummy Soldiers Made of Iron.

A MAD CHARGE AT DOUBLE-QUICK

Accurate Firing with Real Bullets at Long Range—The Enemy Is Utterly Routed.

Military instructors in the French schools have evolved a novel and successful method of drilling the cadets which gives them a semblance of real warfare and brings them face to face with the different positions assumed by the enemy during a battle.

The cadets of Saint-Cyr are from time to time ordered into open country some miles away from Paris, and are there drilled in mimic battles, in which they fire and charge at visible foes in the shape of iron figures—silhouettes, the cadets call them—whole battalions of dummies, officers and men, drawn up in battle array and assuming the different positions of an enemy in combat, or standing impassively before the bullets and the bayonet thrusts of their ardent young foes.

Preparatory to the mimic battle the cadets are separately instructed in rifle practice. They have sighted their guns and aimed at targets at 200, 300, 400 and 600 yards range. In the rapid firing their eyes become accustomed to the appearance of the enemy, whether lying down, kneeling, standing or in motion.

For the volley firing under the command of an officer, the cadets are rallied in squads of twelve, twenty-five or fifty in order to perfect them in volley and rapid firing on the dummies grouped together at a known distance of 800 or 1,000 yards. The last drill of all is a combination manoeuvre, in which all the practices studied separately are applied to a general attack upon the dummy lines.

For this purpose a battalion of Saint-Cyriens was ordered to the Champs de Chalons. The Major in command received the following instructions upon setting out: "The enemy is marching in such a direction, and having to protect his flank from a surprise, he has sent a battalion to take up a position in such a place; it is this battalion of dummies which you must reconnoitre, find and put to flight."

The cadets received on setting out thirty-two ball cartridges; in actual war a soldier would receive 185. The battalion, falling into marching order, set out galy and very much interested in this new manoeuvre. Scouts were sent out ahead charged with the duty of discovering the enemy. The battalion marched silently on. Suddenly a scout ran up breathlessly and said:

"The enemy is in sight."

"Show me his position on the chart," demanded the Major.

"Here, Major."

"Very well, then, and now how far away do you think he is?"

"Eighteen hundred to two thousand yards, perhaps, but I am not sure."

The Major dismounted and made an observation. On the crest of the hill opposite he perceived the dummies ranged in battle array. Between lay a plain. He approximated the distance by the aid of an instrument named in honor of its inventor, a captain of the Military Academy, and called Lunette Souchier.

"Eighteen hundred yards?" exclaimed the Major. "You are much mistaken; he is not more than thirteen hundred yards away." A word about this wonderful glass. The Lunette Souchier is a powerful field glass. When properly focussed two refractory lenses are interposed between the eye and the objective, and from that time not one but two images are seen.

One of them is the original image. The other is the image virtually created by the lenses, easily recognized by its shadowy tint, and as much elevated above the real image as the distance is more or less great. If the head of the real image reaches to the shoulders of the shadow the distance is 300 yards, if to the waist 600 yards, if to the knees 1,000 yards. If the two images stand with the feet of one on the head of the other, then they are exactly 1,400 yards away. If they are entirely separated the distance is so great as to be only approximated by guesswork.

Upon a signal from the Major the battalion silently fell into line. Fire by companies! At the enemy! At 1,300 yards!" The officers of the different companies repeated the command, the click of loading guns sounded along the line, a moment of silence, and then the order, "Commence firing." Then the Captain's stern "Fire!"—and a hundred guns blazed away in unison. The one hundred balls tore through the air with a hissing sound and buried themselves in the earth, 1,300 yards away. "A little short," said the Maor, with his glass to his eyes. "Second company," he commanded, "at thirteen hundred and fifty yards." This time the result was good, the aim was better, and the firing continued uninterruptedly from right to left. "Cease firing!" The officers and men rushed to the crest of the hill, and, as they approached their silent enemies stood rigidly against the sky. They were found to be equivalent to three companies of fifty-six men each, the center company being formed of standing and the two wings of kneeling dummies. Behind each company stood an officer, recognizable by his white collar. At twenty yards behind the center stood a group representing the Major commanding this stoic and motionless battalion, his adjutant, his quartermaster and two aides.

This group alone bore ample proofs of the fusilade to which they had been subjected. The adjutant, quartermaster and one soldier each had been hit once. The two captains were wounded and sixteen privates thrown to the ground. A total of twenty-one men down at 1,350 yards, out of 176.

The cadets returned to their former position, and the order to fire was given again. This time they advanced and kept firing until they stood within 600 feet of the enemy. Again the results were examined. Out of 176 dummies sixty-two were wounded, several having two or three balls in their bodies. This time the Major was not hit, but of his staff only one remained standing. The dummies on either wing remained intact. The fire had been concentrated in the centre.

"Fire at will at six hundred yards, on the enemy's lines! Spread the fire!"

Both wings and centre were covered. Each cadet fired four balls and ninety-six dummies were wounded. Then the firing became more furious, and the enemy was overwhelmed with a shower of balls. The enemy was reinforced by a fourth company, placed in line by the men under cover.

"Rapid fire!" The bayonets taken out of the scabbards were rapidly adjusted to the guns and the firing commenced. Fierce and terrible was the attack. Great clods of earth were thrown in the air and the dust rose in clouds around the stoic foe.

"To the charge!" With bayonets erect, the line advanced at double-quick, then stopped and executed a rapid fire for half a minute. Ten cartridges to a man had been expended. This time the result was terrible; out of 234 dummies, 174 had bit the dust. Each of them carried the mark of at least three balls. The Major's staff was utterly wiped out, and the Major himself had nine balls in him. Every captain had received at least eight shots. One of them pesented the harrowing spectacle of twenty-seven bullet-wounds. The explanation of this mutilation is a warning to real officers in our next war; he had stood behind his company, who were kneeling, and naturally the opposing bullets had selected him as a target.

The decisive moment came. One hundred and fifty yards separated the assailant from the enemy. The assault was to be made under an overwhelming fire.

"Rapid fire!" The next forty seconds was carnage. No army could stand before this slaughter unsheltered. Behind the companies the bugles sounded loud and shrill. The speed quickened. The din became terrific. The captains' voices were heard: "Without bayonets! Charge!"

Then the noise was indescribable. Each young soldier tried to outstrip his comrade in the mad charge. Officers waved their swords before their companies, repeating: "Forward! Forward!" It was a delirium lasting a few seconds, during which a shudder passed over the spectators in anticipation of what the final shock would be. Suddenly all was quiet. The line had reached the dummies, who could not get out of their way. Laughs and exclamations took the place of cries. With astonished eyes the Saint-Cyrienes counted the holes and turned over the iron carcasses, transformed veritably into saw-teeth by the gunshots, and surveyed the ground ploughed up by bullets, as by a scythe with a thousand teeth.

The unfortunate dummy major had received thirteen fresh balls, so that forty-seven balls were his share during the battle. The captains and their officers were riddled. The total for this fifth and last charge was 203 dummies out of 234.

A recapitulation for the entire manoeuvre showed that 6,500 balls had been used and 1,897 had taken effect.

THE USE OF THE HUMP.

There are some men in this world who can answer any question that is put to them, and sometimes when they do not really know what they are talking about, they will give answers that are not at all bad. One of these persons was once a keeper of the London Zoo. He was pestered to death by the questions which people asked, but he always gave an answer. On a recent occasion a countryman strolled in, and after looking curiously at the camel for a few moments, he turned to the keeper and said:

"I say, mister, what's he have a hump for?"

"What does he have a hump for?" repeated the keeper.

"Yes. What's the good of it?" asked the visitor.

"Why—er—it makes a camel of him, of course," replied the keeper, after some hesitation. "People wouldn't travel miles to see him if he didn't have that hump. Fact is, without it he might as well be a cow."

The stranger departed very well satisfied.—Harper's Young People.

GENTLE SATIRE.

A new story, illustrating Alexandre Dumas' gentle satire, is being told in Paris. One day he overheard two literary novices speaking disparagingly of Racine, Voltaire, and others. M. Dumas, turning towards them deprecatingly, said to them: "After all, my friends, it is possible that we would not have done better had we lived in their time."

It is idleness that creates impossibilities, and where men care not to do a thing they shelter themselves under a persuasion that it cannot be done. The shortest and the surest way to prove a work possible is strenuously to set about it; and no wonder if that proves it possible that for the most part makes it so.—South.

She was a new telephone girl. "What number, please? "One hundred and fifteen. "I didnt catch that. "One hundred—" "Yes. "And fifteen." "All right. Here is 100. Fifteen is busy just now."—Harper's Bazar.

A CHINA HOUSEBOAT.

Aboard One of these Lazy Water Crafts.

SNUG QUARTERS AND CLEAN DECKS.

An Inland Voyage Beside Rocky Terraces and Flat Meadow Lands to the Granite Piers.

Like many other people, I entertain grave doubts and suspicions as to Father Neptune. But I have found there are a few pleasant methods of water travel, and in this category I used to include Sound steamers, canal boats and ocean greyhounds. Since I have been out in the far East I have discovered a fourth treasure of this class, and that is a Chinese houseboat.

It is the coziest, laziest, loveliest water vehicle on the face of the globe. It is designed for use on shallow streams, sandbanks and wet meadows and not on the raging deep.

A good houseboat ranges from twenty-five to fifty feet in length and from eighteen to fourteen in width. Anything smaller is a fraud and a delusion, and anything larger cannot sail up a narrow stream or tide-water. It draws fully loaded from six inches to two feet. The bottom is as flat as a village scow. The bow, sides and stern curve like a well-fattened duck. Two masts with large lateen sails catch the wind, when there is any.

A goodly supply of bamboo poles and great sweeps enable the tai-con (sailing master) and the crew to push or tow, as the case may be. A coil of rope enables the philosophic Celestial to get out and tow whenever the humor or the necessity strikes him. Two-thirds of the hull is built up into a little house six feet two inches high. The floor rests upon the bilges, so that the sides of the place are curved. Partitions and sliding doors, curtains and ingenious furniture enable a person to divide the space into one, two or four rooms, including parlor, dining room and bedrooms.

On the deck are square boxes built into the boat, which serve respectively as ice-box, stove, pantry and fish box, closets, racks, shelves and drawers contain the table ware, house linen, glassware, books, guns, fishing rods, canned foods, biscuits, medicines, grips and clothing. Every available cubic inch of space is utilized. A door and stair at either side give access to the small surfaces which are left of the deck. The tai-con or one of the crew acts as cook, steward, or waiter. A second aids him as scullion and server. The rest of the table work you do yourself.

The boat is exquisitely clean inside and out. It sails swiftly, goes almost anywhere, cannot capsize, and as it is employed on small bodies of water is generally free from that see-saw motion which, however grateful to sea dogs and other marine monsters, is not enjoyed by the average civilized man and woman.

It is cool and well ventilated, and on account of its motion exercises a soporific charm upon its passengers that at least twice a day is not to be withstood.

You find these houseboats all through China. No country is better qualified for such style of locomotion. Rivers, large and small; estuaries and arms of the sea, tidewaters and lagoons, lakes and ponds, and, above all, numberless canals enable a person to make journeys in almost any direction.

Amoy, for example, looks on the map as though it had no water communication, yet nevertheless its waterways extend in every quarter and aggregate over a thousand miles. One of the pleasantest tours which it afford is from the city up to a wonderful structure in stone known as the P'Olam Bridge. It is a strip of infinite variety and beauty.

At the start you have, on one side, the Island of Kulangsu and on the other that of Amoy. The former is a heap of giant granite boulders half covered with vegetation. It is the European settlement of the district and their handsome houses dot the surface of the land in graceful but irregular lines.

On the other side is the great city of Amoy, unspeakably hideous and filthy. As you pass it it seems an endless surface of hovels, tombstones, houses and graves. Beyond it are the mountains in the center of the island.

The great harbor is dotted with islands, some mere rocks a few feet in diameter, and other territories a hundred miles in area. Here and there the waterways vanish into the horizon. Around in every direction ranges of mountains arise tier upon tier until they disappear in the blue distance.

Up one of the waterways, the Dragon River, you take your course. At first it flows between sterile hills, upon whose sides the only green things are mossy boulders and grave-stones. Then the river begins to contract and the alluvial land to appear. It is a rich yellow soil, very much like the fields which border the Missouri river. It is wonderfully fertile, too. Where it is used as kitchen gardens it grows six and seven crops a year, and a single acre supports a family in affluence. The hills and mountains change in character, and instead of rock-ribbed slopes become great step-ladders of terraces one above the other. On some you can see the tea shrubs, whose leaves next year will be drunk in many an American home; the sweet potato vine, peas, beans, and above all the democratic and ever-popular peanut.

This exotic from the American continent, if exotic it be, is John Chinaman's perpetual delight. He roasts it as does his American cousin. He also boils it and eats it with salt. He grinds it in a mill and extracts an oil as pure and delicious as the finest virgin olive of Lucca. He makes it into candy, cake and sweetmeats.

Here and there are great fishponds, made by walling in a lagoon or fencing up the end of a valley. They swarm with finny inhabitants, and are said to pay their owners far handsomer returns than the fertile fields which furnish their shores.

Now and then you encounter long fields of cane-brake so thick and gnarled as to be impenetrable to man. Here the tiger occasionally finds refuge when too hotly pursued by his human foes. Farther on up the river you come to a manufacturing city, named Chioh-Be. The river front and the thoroughfares which run into it seemed to be walled with the products of industry. Here are vast piles of boards, all cut and sawn by human labor; beams, joists and scantlings; tea-wood, out of which are made tea boxes; boat timbers, lumbers for house building, fire wood, coffins, masts and spars, poles and ungainly tree trunks.

Here is an armada of junks, carrying the commerce of this city and the still large city of Chin-Chew, a place with a population of over a million, down to the sea.

You pass Chioh-Be, and the country again becomes rougher but more picturesque in appearance. The shores are intensely green, the fields and hills are cultivated wherever the eye glances, and here and there can be seen the quaint houses of the Chinese husbandmen. It is evident that the land is prosperous; the houses are large, neat and well kept. The temples are bright and clean, and nowhere are there indications of the poverty and squalor you find in the great cities.

Every now and then the practiced eye of the collector of antiquities spies the relic of the ancient Chinese wars. At one point it is a couple of guard houses, which command a narrow pass. At another it is a circular watch tower high upon a peak, similar to the towers in Spain and Granada.

As you look at them the tai-con touches you upon the shoulder; you glance around, and see that your journey is done.

While you were lost in thought the river made a bend and your houseboat is within a few feet of a great bridge nearly a half mile in length, which spans the stream, and much of the land on either side. At the first glimpse it looks like a very ordinary bridge. There are some forty odd piers of square-cut granite, fifty and sixty feet apart, and on this what seems an old and dilapidated superstructure. But as you approach it your commiseration changes to wonder. What seemed decaying wood resolves itself into solid granite, and then you realize that the great superstructure is made up of stone-beams and monoliths sixty feet long, six feet wide and six feet thick, a block to compare with the great Egyptian obelisk in Central Park.

Had the ancients known of this bridge they would have made it the eighth wonder of the world, for its erection certainly demanded more patience and more skill than did the pyramids or the tomb of King Mausolus.

Its story is a simple one. For many centuries the stream was crossed with wooden bridges, but each year the spring freshets carried them away. A skilled Chinese engineer came upon the scene one day and offered to build a bridge, which would stand till the end of time. He was so plausible that the authorities accepted his proposals. He set to work and built the foundations of his piers up to the water's level at high tide, and at the same time cut the great blocks in quarries up the river beyond. The stones were moved from their resting places and put on board huge rafts and light draught junks and were then floated down the river to the piers.

Here they were anchored until high tide, when the anchor ropes were loosened and the stone floated in, so that its ends just rested above the half built piers. As the tide fell further it rested upon the piers and the boats were free. At low tide the rafts and junks were covered with logs, two feet in diameter, securely lashed together. Then as the tide rose the buyant wood lifted the stone from the piers and skilled masons put in another course of masonry. Thus the bridge rose in the air course by course, stone by stone, until it obtained its present form.

The story is easily told, but the work was not easily done. There were deep tides which would not lift. There were freshets which swept boats and men away. There were snags which sunk the junks. There were great storms which made work impossible.

It is so long ago that even legend has forgotten the details. One account says the engineer took three years, another thirteen years, in making this wonderful viaduct. But when it was done, and the people saw the magnificence of the conception, it was as good as the last act of a Bowery melodrama. The people rose up and called the engineer blessed. The merchants gave him a palace with great fields. The Mandarins gave him buttons and decorations enough for a regiment. The Emperor inscribed his name on the Book of the Immortals, and when he died he was deified and made into one of those seven hundred and seventeen small gods, that you are always falling over when you are traveling through China.—Mail and Express.

A hen's egg on exhibition in Auburn, Placer county, is reported to measure 6½ inches in girth and 8 inches in length, weighing three ounces. It should be sent to the State Board of Trade rooms in this city for permanent exhibition as an illustration of what an ordinary California hen can do when she tries.

RED-HAIRED WOMEN.

The Course of History Changed by Blondes.

THE FIERY LOCKS OF OLD WAR GODS.

The Egyptians Sacrificed to Show their Aversion—A Favorite Color Among the Irish.

The glory of woman is her hair, and there is evidence to support the assertion that red hair is a crowning glory.

It is held that the purest types of mankind have been blondes of what is called the exaggerated type and that the original royal families of Europe have been fair, despite the woman novelist's stereotyped description of the atrabiliar hero of noble birth with raven hair and blue black whiskers.

It is rather curious, says the Philadelphia Times, that nearly all the women who have been great enough to have their heads cut off, have had red hair. Take half a score of the women who have been at the bottom of most trouble—say, Catherine of Russia; Joan of Arc, Elizabeth, Mary Queen of Scots, Anne of Austria, Empress Eugenie, Ninon de l'Enclos, Lucretia Borgia, Beatrice Cenci—all of them had red hair, and very few of them died in their beds. Even in prehistoric times, it appears that red-haired women made all the trouble.

A red-haired woman caused the fall of Troy, and a red-haired woman brought to Ireland seven centuries of woe. Two historic abductions of the world were of red-haired women. The destruction of Troy and the trials and tribulations of the men of Argos were caused by the elopement of the red-haired Helen, the highest type of Homeric beauty.

Among primitive and barbarous people red hair was generally regarded with favor, although associated with the cruel and terrible. The gods of savage and semi-civilized nations have generally been cruel and awe-inspiring deities and their color was generally red. Red in the old sagas and folk-lore symbolized blood, war, hatred; and among the early nations it was associated with divinity and power, both preistly and royal. The tabernacle of the Israelites was covered with skins dyed red; the gods and images of Egypt and Chaldea were painted red, and to this day red is one of the distinguishing colors of the Roman Pontiff and his cardinals.

But even among these people red hair was not in favor. The ancient Egyptians, for instance, were violently averse to red hair, and their hatred was literally a burning one, for according to Diodorus they annually went through the gruesome ceremony of burning alive one red-headed maiden in the hope that they might in that way prevent the color from becoming a common one among them.

In Spain there is an equally strong prejudice against red hair. Their proverbs say, as do other authorities, that the hair of the traitor Judas Iscariot was red. In all Spanish paintings Judas is distinguished from the other disciples by the fiery color of his hair, and among Spanish people the world over red hair is commonly known as "Judas hair."

Among savage tribes, however, red hair is usually held in great esteem. Some of the Alaskan women, for example, smear their hair and faces daily with the red juice of the choke cherry, which gives them a bloody corsair aspect. Among the native New Zealanders kura, or red, is the sacred color, and a red-haired woman has a clear road to heaven. All the New Zealand gods and idols are painted red.

When a person dies his house is so painted, and the scraped bones of dead chiefs are also painted a bright red and then wrapped in a red stained mat and placed in a red box in a red grave over which is erected a red post. Among most savage tribes, as among the American Indians, red signifies war and butchery, although among some, notably the Sioux women, red paint is used only in love and courtship.

The Irish are very fond of red-haired women. Among them locks of the most fiery hue have always been considered a lovely attribute of beauty. And there is an old Irish ditty which runs:

"Heigh for the apple and ho for the pear,
But give me the pretty girl with the red hair."

At one time, it is said, the Irish peasantry managed to have hair of their own choosing by wearing a small "scratch wig," usually made out of red hair on the top of their natural hair.

Red hair is generally regarded as indicating a pugnacious or peculiar disposition. Anthropologists assert that certain well-defined moral and social characteristics are peculiar to red-headed women; for example, they are found to be capable of greater cruelty than other women, are more deceptive, more designing and more ambitious; they scheme and plot. They are brighter and livelier than other women, but at the same time are usually indolent and domineering, and are often lazy to the point of personal uncleanliness. They are more passionate and excitable.

And "red hair" in these days has become a wonderfully comprehensive term. Formerly finer distinctions were drawn than are now, and certain shades of red were much admired and were carefully distinguished from red proper; but now a woman is a redhead and attracts white horses whether her locks be a "fiery Milesian," "pole amber," "burnished gold," or "brown in the shadow and gold in the sun."

Red hair, like everything else, has its constant admirers, and at times it has even been the raging fashion. This has been so from earliest times. In Venice, during the days of the painter Titian, red hair was in such high favor that the most favorite shade of it took his name. And hair of Titian red is even now thought to beautify any head. Curious and tedious devices are resorted to in order to get this peculiar shade and luster. The hair is exposed to the hottest rays of the sun for hours at a time until it is bleached into the proper shade.

In Titian's time, on the morning before a carnival ball, the beauties of Venice could be seen sitting on housetops waiting patiently for old Sol to do his work. The hair was first soaked thoroughly in a wash made of block sulphur, alum and honey, and then hung over the brim of a crownless straw hat to dry and bleach.

Browning seems to have fallen a victim to the charms of Titian red hair and he says some characteristically extravagant things about it. The rage for red hair must certainly have been a lively one to have remained in the atmosphere of Venice all these years, and long enough to have fired the imagination of Browning as it has. In "A Toccata of Galuppi's" he refers reminiscently to the

"Dear dead women, with such hair, too—
What's become of all the gold
Used to hang and brush their bosoms?"

Browning agrees with the tradition that women's tresses, whatever their color, are her strongest weapons. The golden fleece of some fair head sent the Argonauts on their famous voyage, and according to the poets the fair fleece of other heads has sent countless thousands on goose chases ever since. Tennyson's "golden brown" appears on many of the laureate's female heads. Shakespeare pays a tribute to the power of red hair when he makes King Philip quail before the eloquence of a weeping woman's golden hair—Mail and Express.

POKER IN ARKANSAS.

"It didn't take us long to get acquainted in Horton Centre. The glad hand was put out everywhere, and there was a jug or a tickler back of every one. After a couple of hours of this welcoming business somebody suggested a little game of draw just to pass the time, and a tall, lanky man said that as it was pretty warm we might as well go to his house and play on his piazzer, as he called it. After the game had been going on half an hour or so, Tobe and I just looked at each other. It was the softest, easiest outfit we had ever struck. The other four players just threw their money away making the biggest fool bets anybody ever saw. Fact is, they couldn't have been worse poker players if they hadn't seen a card before in their lives. By 8 o'clock at night we had all the money in sight, and Tobe said we'd better be starting out as it was a long walk home, and the moon would be getting low down before we could reach there. The tall, lanky fellow begged us to stay all night, but we had to refuse. We started home for Guffer's store through the woods just loaded down with cash and pretty near four hundred winner, when all of a sudden we heard dogs baying behind us. We both recognized hounds. Tobe said he reckoned somebody was coon hunting, but thought it was mighty funny time of the year for 'em to do it, and he began to tell me about a coon hunt he had gone on once, when he broke off.

"'Pard,' he hollered, 'get a tree; those dogs are after us.'

"I shinned up one and Tobe took another, and in two minutes the meanest lot of big-mouthed, mangy hourds you ever saw were cavorting around under us howling like hyenas. We both hoped somebody would come and pretty soon somebody did. It was the tall, lanky man. He came up and quieted the dogs, and then leaned on a long double-barreled gun and proceeded to address us. He said he was mighty pained to do what he had to do, but the fact was that Horton's Centre had been victimized ever since the railroad came by poker-playing strangers, who came in and cleaned up all the ready money in the community. He was sorry to say that we had returned the cordial hospitality extended to us in the same cruel way. We had gone into a game with the Mayor, the town marshal, the leading merchant, and the County Treasurer, which was himself. The County Treasurer had staked the other gentlemen with all the available public funds, and we had skillfully—he would not say dishonestly—won them all. It was his duty to require us to hand the winnings and any other small change we might have about us back. The dogs were not hungry, but would get so after awhile, and when we got tired of roosting and came down they might appease their appetites with us. Besides there were some other citizens of Horton Centre back in the woods who could pick a 'possum out of the highest tree in the bottoms on the darkest night in the year. Did we shell out? We did. We threw the money we had down on the ground and the tall, lanky man gathered it up. Then he said good night and whistled to the dogs.

"'You'll have a safe road to Guffer's,' he remarked in a hearty tone, as he moved off, 'and mebbe it might be as well ef you didn't mention this here little eppyzode when you gits thar.' Tobe and I left Arkansas in three days, and I reckon some Arkansas cotton planters are waiting for us to come for their crops yet."—Washington Post.

In Saxcony, where turnips are largely grown for the manufacture of sugar, the school children are employed in the turnip fields to thin the young plants, and in most villages special "turnip holidays" are given.

Last year America shipped over $10,000,000 worth of agircultural products to Argentine Republic.

A WAR-TIME JOKE.

What Might Have Been a Serious One.

IT HAPPENED THIRTY YEARS AGO.

Capt. Torsch, of Baltimore, Tells How He Captured a Line of Federal Rifle Pits.

Captain John W. Torsch of Baltimore has good reason to keep green in his memory what might have been a serious 1st of April joke, says the Baltimore Sun in writing up events of the 1st of April.

Thirty years ago yesterday he was in command of the Second Maryland Battalion in General McComb's brigade, lying below Petersburg. The Confederate army, composed of General A. P. Hill's corps, had been lying in winter quarters, faced a short distance away by the Union line.

Late in March a number of rifle-pits in front of General Cook's brigade, in the camp line adjoining that of General McComb, had been captured and occupied by the Union forces. At midnight, March 31, 1865, a courier rode up to Captain Torsch's headquarters with an order which, when obeyed, seemed to have been inspired as an April-fool joke.

The captain still has the innocent-looking paper in his possession. It reads:

Headquarters McComb Briagde,
April 1, 1865.

Captain—You will report with your battalion under arms at once at the chapel of General Cook's brigade.

By command.

Brig.-Gen. Wm. McCabe.

To Captain Torsch, commanding Second Marlyand.

Captain Torsch thus tells the story of the result of his obeying the order:

"In connection with Tennessee and Mississippi commands the Second Maryland was expected to recapture a line of riflepits in front of General Cook's brigade. It was rather tough work on a dark night, as we had never been over the ground before. I was reminded of the story of a coal-black negro trying on a dark night to catch a black cat in a dark cellar.

"We followed behind our line of breastworks until we reached a point opposite the pits which were to be captured. Then we crawled forward a hundred yards or more and rested to await the signal to attack, which was to be the firing of a cannon.

"Just before daybreak the signal was given. We dashed forward, and in a very few minutes had completed our work by driving out the enemy and occupying the pits. Only two men were wounded in this dash.

"We awaited daylight before making a further move. When the light came the joke also dawned when we saw the curious predicament in which we had been placed. Evidently anticipating a move of this sort, the enemy had constructed a new line of pits, some of them not fifty feet from our front.

"The firing commenced as soon as it was light enough for us to be seen. In addition to the fire from the front, every time one of the men made a move and showed himself there came a firing from our breastworks in the rear. The Confederate forces knew nothing of our attack and supposed we were the enemy.

"It was certain death to move from one pit to another. Orders were written, then wrapped about a bullet, which was thrown from pit to pit, for the men to save their ammunition and prepare to receive a charge. No charge came, however, but we were in constant dread of one.

"N. Lee Goldsborough, now a captain in the Fifth Maryland Regiment, managed to crawl back to the breastworks and return with additional ammunition, as ours was nearly used up. The intervening ground was covered with tree stumps, where a forest had been cleared away, and these offered some little protection for this daring venture. We were also able to get word to the rear to have our own soldiers stop firing.

"So our April-fool joke consisted of lying in the rifle-pits all day long. The hot sun poured down on us. We were without rations, could get no water and could make no move to the rear until after dusk.

"Anxious for further orders and to see what had become of those who had been expected to support us in the advance, I crawled back to the breastworks. Leaving a trail behind me like that of a mole, only mine was a depression in the soft earth, I finally reached headquarters. Cheers and congratulations met me and I was given orders to withdraw the line. With some of the vim taken out of me by that day's experience, I took advantage of my prerogative and sent a junior officer, who had been on picket duty, to carry out the order. By that time it was darker and the men had no great difficulty retiring from their perilous position.

Afterward we learned that Major-General Heath, in whose division we were, had taken means to protect the Second Maryland. As soon as he heard of the position in which we had been placed, he placed an artillery battery for our support in case of a charge from the front.

"Altogether it was a very warm first of April for us."

Fish have their heads at the large end of their bodies and their tails at the narrow end because when water flows past the broad end of an obstacle shaped like a fish no eddies are formed, while the water is greatly disturbed when the narrow end is presented to the current.

INDEPENDENT

Inv. H. Mulholland,

EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 7 1895

Walter Q. Gresham, secretary of state, is dead, and the country has lost one of its most distinguished citizens. A brave soldier, a learned and upright judge, a member of two cabinets, his motives as a public official were never questioned except by rank partisans, who are never pleased by anything that a political opponent does. In 1886 Mr. Gresham was a prominent candidate for president and would probably have been nominated by the Republican convention had it not been that he was not in favor of the tariff policy of that party. In 1892 he was mentioned as a candidate for president on the People's Party ticket, but he decided to support Cleveland, believing that the Democratic party was right on the issue upon which the people were divided at that time. His support meant many votes for the Democratic ticket and it is not strange that he was offered the first place in the cabinet by the president. He had served as post-master general and as secretary of the treasury under President Arthur, and brought to the discharge of the duties of secretary of state a knowledge of public affairs that few men ever possess. He had many puzzling questions to solve recently and when the historian takes a calm survey of his official acts for the past two years we believe that he will be ranked among the greatest secretaries of the nation. For partisan purposes he has been villianou ly abused, but he never kept his ear to the ground to find out whether his actions were indorsed by the mob or not, but was satisfied to do his whole duty and permit time to justify his course. It is to be regretted that public men never know while in office the real estimate that is placed upon their patriotism, loyality and public service. The people criticise a man in high station unmercifully, but as soon as death claims him, then they acknowledge his worth to the nation and make all the amends their power for the abuse heaped upon him while alive. From this time forward the career of Walter Q. Gresham will be held up as a model for ambitious boys, for a careful review of his public services will prove that he was an American patriot, and that he always did everything in his power for the advancement and betterment of all the people. In the presence of death criticism and abuse will cease and the good work of Gresham will pass in review and his memory will be universally honored.

According to the statement of the Director of the Mint, made on Wednesday, California leads in the list of gold-producing states, her output in 1894 being $13,570,000. The total coinage value of all the gold produced in the United States in 1894 was $39,500,000 so California is credited with one third of the entire amount. The appreciation of the value of gold has done much to stimulate the production of the metal in this State. Many mines that were formerly unfavorably considered are now worked profitably. The fact suggests slight consolation for the many injuries which the appreciation of gold has afflicted on California.

C. P. Huntington has expressed the opinion that the United States is on the edge of an era of good times. Whatever may be said of C. P. Huntington no one has ever impugned his business grasp and financial sagacity. He is undoubtedly right about the good times, and we may be sure that all the money Californians may permit Mr. Huntington to make at their expense out of the good times he will make.

Robert T. Lincoln is said to be the second choice for President of the friends of all the the other Republican aspirants. Robert T. Lincon's name is a tower of strength, but he happens to be Pullman's legal adviser and President of the Chicago Gas Trust. Such positions may be honorably held, but at the present time they do not help a candidate to popular votes.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

TRADE MARK

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING

EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.

FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

SURFACE CULTIVATION.

Shallow Cultivation Advocated For Oats, Wheat, Sweet Potatoes and Corn.

During the past ten years most of the farmers of my acquaintance have learned that they can grow much larger crops of oats with three inches of the surface soil made fine than to plow six or eight inches deep. I have practiced this method of putting in oats for 12 years and have grown much larger crops than formerly, and have not had a single failure, while under the old way we had frequent failures. The foregoing is from the pen of the successful farmer and well known agricultural writer, Waldo F. Brown, who has the following to say in a communication to Prairie Farmer:

It is a great advantage to prepare the seed bed for oats with an improved harrow, for one team will put in as much land in a day as three teams will to break the land and harrow and roll until it is fine. We often have but a day or two of fine weather at a time in March when the land is dry enough to work, and when our clay upland gets thoroughly saturated we often must wait a week or two before it dries so as to be fit to work. It is a great advantage to adopt a speedy method, for usually early sown oats yield much more than those sown late. I usually first use a disk harrow and then sow the oats and cross harrow with an Acme harrow, which is the best implement to give a fine, level seed bed that I have ever used.

I am told that this method of putting in oats is now almost universally adopted, and that whenever one farmer begins it in a neighborhood in a few years all the rest follow this plan. It is now universally acknowledged that a shallow seed bed produces the best wheat, and wheat on such land endures the winter better, and this was found out by observing that where the horses turned on the plowed land and tramped it so hard that barely enough loose earth could be had to cover the seed with the crop was better than on other parts of the field. The same is true of sweet potatoes, and this fact, which was discovered from setting plants on hard tramped land, has led to shallow plowing and the making of small ridges for the crop, and the result is a large increase in yield and better shaped tubers.

I meet occasionally at the institutes a man acknowledged by his neighbors to be one of the best corn growers of the locality, who claims that the same kind of a seed bed gives the best crop of corn, and there is an increasing number of farmers each year who have found that shallow cultivation which stirs two inches of the surface soil in the cornfield gives much better results than tearing the roots of the corn with plows that run four to six inches deep.

In my judgment, the implement which will give perfect surface cultivation in the cornfields is yet to be invented, and when it is we want it made so that it will cover these rows of corn and enable us to stir the soil on a strip not less than ten feet wide at each time through. Any of the good weeders will do this to perfection on some soils and under favorable conditions, but it is not yet what we want in the large cornfields of the west. The reason we want to get over a wide strip is that the best work is done in the cornfield soon after a rain, when the land will crumble at a touch and the weeds will be killed before they see the light. I have no doubt that inventive genius can give us such an implement, or, if not one that will cultivate three rows, at least two. The Acme harrow makes an ideal seed bed, and the principle of slicing and turning the surface soil ought to be applied in our cornfields in cultivating, and I see no difficulty in the way of using the slicing cultivator in the cultivation of corn.

Bush Lima Beans.

A correspondent of American Agriculturist says: Henderson's, which is the Dwarf Sieva, is always prolific, but the beans are small and deficient in that delicacy of flavor that is conspicuous in the regular limas. But for a wet season it is better, as it does not mildew as the larger kinds are apt to do. Burpee's dwarf lima, which is a true large lima in every respect, excepting its dwarf habit, behaved wonderfully, the drought and heat having been to its liking. The plants branched out widely and kept up a continuous crop. With me in rainy seasons the beans have mildewed badly, as the running sorts always do, near the ground. To be successful with this sort it must have plenty of root. The rows should be three feet apart, and the plants at least a foot apart in the rows. This will afford plenty of air, and in a measure prevent mildew. The Kumerle or Dreer's lima, which is a dwarf potato lima, has done remarkably well, although I prefer the flavor of the large sort. For general purposes this is the most profitable because it is the most prolific.

News and Notes.

The electrical plow, which, it is claimed, may be operated at much less cost than one propelled by steam, is a leading novelty in farm machinery.

Reports from horse breeding centers in the west indicate that many large brood mares have been sold, their owners being disgusted with prevailing prices. Rural New Yorker says electricity and the bicycle will never hurt the business of the large truck horse, and those who keep their brood mares and breed to the best will be well repaid. Breeders of scrub or misfit horses have a worse prospect ahead than the exclusive wheat growers.

The American cranberry is beginning to make a reputation for itself both in Great Britain and on the continent, following in the footsteps of American corn.

While the agricultural department crop report makes the prices of some of the crops higher, there is a decrease in a larger number, while in two great staples—wheat in the north and cotton in the south—there is a material, not to say disastrous, decrease.

NEW FEE BILL.

CHAPTER CCVII.

An Act to establish fees of county, township and othe. officers, and of jurors and witnesses in this State.

[Approved March 28, 1895.]

The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The following county, township, and other officers shall charge and collect the following fees.

COUNTY CLERK.

On the commencement of any action or proceeding in the Superior Court, except probate proceedings, or on appeal thereto, to be paid by the party commencing such action or proceeding, or taking such appeal $5 00

On the filing of a petition for letters of administration, testamentary, or guardianship five dollars, to be paid by the petitioner; provided, that at the time of filing the inventory and appraisment in any such proceeding there shall be an additional deposit of one dollar for each additional thousand dollars of the appraised valuation, in excess of three thousand dollars.

On filing the petition to contest any will or codicil 3 00

On the appearance of any defendant, or any number of defendants answering jointly, to be paid upon filing the first paper in the action by him or them 2 00

On placing any action, except a probate proceeding, or default case, on the calendar for trial or hearing, to be paid by the party at whose request such action or proceeding is so placed 2 00

For every additional defendant appearing separately 1 00

The foregoing fees shall be in full for all services rendered by such Clerk in the cause, to and including the making up of the judgment roll.

On the filing of any notice of motion to move for a new trial of any civil action or proceeding, the party filing same must pay to the Clerk, in full for all services to be rendered in connection with said motion, except as hereinafter in this section provided 2 00

For issuing an execution or order of sale in any action 1 00

In all proceedings begun or acts performed prior to this Act becoming a law, such and charges as were provided by the law at the time such proceedings were begun or acts performed.

The Clerk shall also charge and collect the following fees and compensation not above provided for:

For any copy of any record, proceeding or paper on file in the office of the Clerk relating to any civil action pending in said Court, when said copy is made by him, per folio 10

For each certificate of the Clerk, under seal of the Court 25

For filing each claim in probate or insolvency proceedings 15

No fees shall be allowed or charged by the Clerk for services rendered in any criminal case.

For services rendered by the Clerk, not in connection with civil actions or proceedings in Court, he shall charge and collect, for the benefit of the county, the following fees:

For issuing marriage license, one half to be paid to the County Recorder 2 00

For filing and indexing articles of incorporation 1 00

For filing and indexing certificates of copartnership 1 00

For filing and indexing all papers to be kept by him, other than papers filed in actions or proceedings in court, and official bonds and certificates of appointment, each 25

For issuing any license required by law, other than marriage licenses 1 00

For examining and certifying to a copy of any paper, record, or proceeding prepared by another and presented for his certificate, fifty cents, and one cent per folio for comparing the said copy with the original.

For making satisfaction of order of court, or judgment 25

For receiving and filing remittitur from Supreme Court 50

For administering each oath, without certificate, except in a pending action or proceeding 10

For taking any affidavit, except in criminal cases 25

For taking and approving each undertaking and the justification thereon, except in criminal cases 50

For searching records or files, for each year 50

For taking acknowledgement of any deed or other instrument, including the certificate 50

For filing notices of appeal and appeal bonds, each 75

SHERIFF.

For serving any process, writ, order, or paper, except as hereinafter provided, required by law to be served by the Sheriff 10

For serving a writ of attachment, execution, or order for the delivery of personal property 1 00

For taking any bond or undertaking 50

For serving an attachment or execution on any ship, boat, or vessel 3 00

For keeping and caring for property under attachment or execution, such sum as the court may fix; provided, that no greater sum than two dollars per day shall be allowed to a keeper when necessarily employed.

For a copy of any writ, process, or paper actually made by him, when required or demanded according to law, per folio, ten cents; provided, that when correct copies are furnished to him for use, no charge shall be made for such copies.

For advertising sale of property and posting notice, exclusive of cost of publication, or furnishing notice for publication, each 50

For publication of notice in newspaper, the reasonable cost of publication, subject to the approval of the court.

For serving writ of possession or restitution; putting a person in possession of the premises, and removing the occupant 1 50

For subpoenaing witness, including copy of subpoena, each 25

For summoning trial jury of twelve or less 2 00

For each additional juror 10

For traveling in the service of any paper required by law to be served, for each mile actually and necessarily traveled, one way only, fifteen cents, when such travel can be made by rail, in other cases, twenty-five cents. No constructive mileage to be allowed.

For collecting money on execution, with or without levy, one per cent on the first thousand dollars or less, and one half of one per cent on all sums over one thousand dollars.

For executing and delivering Sheriff's deed 1 50

For executing and delivering certificate of sale 50

For transporting prisoners to county jail, actual cost of such transportation.

For executing and delivering any other instrument, per folio 10

RECORDER.

For recording every instrument, paper, or notice required by law to be recorded, per folio 10

For indexing every instrument, paper, or notice, for each name 10

For filing every instrument for record, and making necessary entries thereon 20

For each certificate under seal 25

For every entry of discharge, credit, or release on the margin of record, and indexing same 25

For searching the records of his office, for each year 50

For abstract of title, for each conveyance or incumbrance 25

For recording each map or plat where same is copied in book of record, for each course 10

For recording each map or plat, where same is not copied in a book of record 50

For figures or letters on maps or plats, per folio, ten cents; provided, that the fees for recording any map shall not exceed fifty dollars.

For taking acknowledgement of any instrument 50

For recording marriage license and certificate, to be paid by County Clerk 1 00

For recording transcript and all services in estray cases 1 00

For recording each mark or brand 50

For administering each oath or affirmation, and certifying the same 25

For filing, indexing and keeping each paper not required by law to be recorded 25

The Clerk, Sheriff, and Recorder shall account for all fees in this section provided for, and the Clerk, Sheriff and Recorder, unless otherwise provided by law, shall pay the same to the County Treasurer on the first Monday of the month following their collection, as provided in this Act.

County Officers must, and township officers may, demand the payment of all fees in civil cases, in advance.

SECTION 2. No fees or other compensation shall be paid for certificate of declaration to become a citizen of the United States, and for making a record thereof, or issuing a certificate of citizenship to become a citizen of the United States, or for making a record thereof; and no fees or other compensation shall be paid for filing the statement and affidavit of a committee or candidate voted for at any public election held within the State; and this section shall apply to all the counties in the State.

SECTION 3. All Acts or portions of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect immediately.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, to all persons having business with the offices of Clerk, Sheriff or Recorder of the County of Inyo that the above provisions of the Fee Bill are mandatory, and will be strictly enforced.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk and Recorder.

Independence, Cal., June 3, 1895.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, California. Location of Canal, near Lone Pine, Inyo County, Cal.

NOTICE—There are delinquent upon the the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 8, levied on the 27th day of April, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders, as follows:

Names.	No. Cert.	No. Sh's.	Am't
T. C. Roland	3	500	$ 75 00
T. C. Roland	4	200	30 00
T. C. Roland	18	500	75 00
T. C. Roland	19	200	30 00
J. A. McKenzie	11	700	105 00
E. Robinson	1	500	75 00
E. Robinson	2	500	50 00
J. Gibson	12	200	30 00
F. H. Mack	17	500	45 00
Fred Spence		75	11 25
R. C. Sneer		75	11 25
D. Holland		50	7 50

And in accordance with law, and an order of the Board of Directors, made on the 17th day of April, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary, will be sold at public auction, at the office of the said Company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on Saturday, the 22nd day of June, 1895, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. of said day, to pay said delinquent assessment thereon together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

Notice.

Pursuant to an order of the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, Cal., passed on the 5th day of April, 1895, the attention of the public is called to the following sections of the County Government Act of 1893:

SECTION 41. The Board of Supervisors must not hear or consider any claim in favor of any person, corporation, company, or association against the County or District Fund, unless the same be itemized, giving names, dates, and particular services rendered, character of process served, upon whom, distance travelled, where and when, character of work done, number of days engaged, materials furnished to whom, and quantity and price paid therefore, duly verified as to its correctness and that the amount claimed is justly due, is presented and filed with the Clerk of the Board within a year after the last item of the account or claim accrued. This section, as to itemizing, shall not apply to services rendered under section one hundred and forty-eight; provided, that such services are substantially stated, with their value, and verified as above. If, in case of any claim, which requires itemizing, the B. and do not hear or consider the same because it is not itemized, they shall give notice to be given to the claimant, or his agent or attorney, of that fact, and give time to have the claim itemized and reverified.

SECTION 42. No account must be passed upon by the Board, unless made out as prescribed in the preceding section and filed by the Clerk at least one day prior to the session at which it is asked to be heard.

NOTICE is hereby given that any claim which fails to comply with the above sections will be returned for correction, and consideration thereof laid over until the next succeeding regular meeting of the Board.

By order of the Board of Supervisors.

D. J. HESSION,
Clerk of said Board.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

H. E. Wilkinson Plaintiff, vs. Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

The people of the State of California send greeting to Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now and heretofore existing between plaintiff and defendant upon the ground of the defendant's wilful desertion of plaintiff, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein, which complaint is hereby made a part of this summons.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to Court for the relief demanded in said complaint, viz: For a judgment dissolving said bonds of matrimony.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 10th day of April, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

FARROW'S MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA.

This is the Standard Military Encyclopedia of the world and the only work of its kind in the English language. It has the endorsement of the War Department and the leading military commanders of America and Europe. It is issued in three large octavo volumes of about 1000 pages each, printed on fine paper, from new electrotype plates, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. It is a complete library of military information both for military and non-military people. Every library should have it. Circulars sent on application. Good agents wanted.

MILITARY AND NAVAL BOOKS.

All the leading, up-to-date military and naval books. Price list furnished on application.

MILITARY-NAVAL PUBLISHING CO.,
611-621 Broadway, New York City.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-Officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo county, Cal.

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc. given careful and prompt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR
AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases.

Brown & Wills,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery.
All kinds of dental work done according to latest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING
IN ANY STYLE.
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE,
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.

P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administrator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.

REDLANDS GOLD MINING COMPANY

Location of principle place of Business: Redlands, California.

Location of works, Panamint Mining District, Inyo County, California.

NOTICE—There are delinquent upon the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 1, levied on the 14th day of January, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders as follows:

Name.	No. Cert.	No. Sh's	Am't
G W Osburn	194	100	$ 85
R C Avery	274	250	21 25
J H Allen	305	2000	25 50
J H Allen	334	5000	42 50
Emma Bingham	33	200	1 70
A J Boyer	169	200	1 70
J Bunt	298	400	3 40
F Bedford	332	620	5 25
Mrs. R B Clute	69	25,000	212 50
M F Clute	70	40,000	340 00
M F Clute	335	1,430	12 15
M F Clute	356	50	40
M F Clute	367	4,650	39 50
Geo. J Caldwell	104	400	34 00
Geo. J Caldwell	111	50	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	112	900	76 50
Geo. J Caldwell	242	50	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	243	50	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	245	50	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	247	10	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	248	10	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	249	10	8 50
Geo. J Caldwell	250	200	17 00
Geo. J Caldwell	313	50	42 50
Geo. J Caldwell	331	100	85 00
Geo. J Caldwell	360	5	4 70
Geo. J Caldwell	368	70	59 50
Geo. J Caldwell	369	6	5 10
W Coggeshall	201	1	85
Davis Dowell	94	3	2 55
Wm. Fossell	63	5	4 25
T E N Eaton	152	3	2 55
T E N Eaton	170	20	17 00
T E N Eaton	211	4	3 45
J M R Eaton	157	1	85
J M R Eaton	163	19	16 15
J M R Eaton	209	35	29 75
Miss T E N Eaton	198	3	2 55
Miss Grace Eaton	199	2	1 70
Geo. M Eaton	210	3	2 55
Chas. E French	223	40	34 00
Chas. E French	320	50	42 50
Chas. E French	324	100	85 00
Chas. E French	325	100	85 00
Abbie R French	230	10	8 50
J R Gillith	311	2	1 70
I M Hough	85	10	8 50
I M Hough	519	60	51 00
G L Houlton	125	12	10 20
G L Houlton	144	4	3 40
Hattie M Huffman	200	7	5 95
Maggie Hich	216	3	2 55
Horton & Parker	363	50	42 50
E J Inwood	255	10	8 50
H W Comp. (trustee)	292	500	42 50
J W Jansen	80	600	51 00
W T Johnson	82	600	51 00
W T Johnson	140	300	25 50
W T Johnson	212	350	29 75
W T Johnson	230	800	68 00
E S Jacoby	161	100	8 50
Mrs. T Luther	234	100	8 50
A M Mitchell	25	300	25 50
W T Mitchell	18	10	8 50
W T Mitchell	299	40	34 00
R W M Intyre	165	30 60	26 01
R W McIntyre	283	40 00	34 00
R W McIntyre	285	120 00	102 00
R W McIntyre	286	250	21 25
R W McIntyre	354	300	25 50
G E Neily	145	1 000	85 00
H S Newlove	184	200	17 00
H S Newlove	190	300	25 50
H S Newlove	191	500	42 50
H S Newlove	300	1,000	85 00
Mamie M Norris	201	2,050	174 25
Mamie M Norris	203	1,250	106 25
Susie A Otto	117	1,000	85 00
Susie A Otto	118	1,000	85 00
Susie A Otto	119	200	17 00
John S Phelps	180	100	8 50
A L Park	43	10,000	850 00
A L Park	44	10,000	850 00
A L Park	45	2,000	170 00
A L Park	47	5,000	425 00
A L Park	48	4,000	340 00
A L Park	49	500	42 50
A L Park	122	1,000	85 00
A L Park	141	2,000	170 00
A L Park	153	1,500	127 50
A L Park	164	1,500	127 50
A L Park	188	500	42 50
A L Park	189	10,000	850 00
A L Park	207	3,400	289 00
A L Park	208	4,000	340 00
A L Park	231	10,000	850 00
A L Park	235	10,000	850 00
A L Park	246	3,000	255 00
A L Park	295	12,000	1,020 00
Ralph G Rohrer	321	500	42 50
O W Shafer	221	30,000	2,550 00
O W Shafer	222	20,000	1,700 00
O W Shafer	224	10,000	850 00
O W Shafer	225	10,000	850 00
O W Shafer	226	5,000	425 00
O W Shafer	227	5,000	425 00
O W Shafer	374	5,000	425 00
O W Shafer	375	950	80 75
McIntyre Clute & Co.	376	1,500	127 50
S H Wheeler	50	4,000	340 00
J N Wilson	53	1,000	85 00
E H Wilson	57	1,000	85 00
M Holmes Wilson	58	1,000	85 00
Grant Wright	86	500	42 50
J J Suess	206	750	63 75
J J Suess	336	700	59 50

And in accordance with law and an order of the Board of Directors made on the 14th day of January, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary will be sold at Public Auction at Room 4, Chittenden Building, Redlands, California, on the 6th day of April, 1895 at the hour of 3 o'clock p. m. of said day, to pay said delinquent assessment thereon, together with cost of advertising and expense of the sale.

A. C. CHITTENDEN,
Secretary.

Office, Room 4 Chittenden Building, Redlands California. March 6th 1895.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Carpet Weaving.
MRS. J. R. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.
PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER
We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kinds of carpet and rug weaving.
Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished, at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 36 cents per yard.
Ladies work guaranteed at low prices.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Fire arms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.
FRED BURCKHARDT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY, the 8th day of March, 1895, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 19, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 10 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the South-east corner of the south-east quarter of North-east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 98-100; thence North-east following the meanderings of the bed of Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence, thence following said Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, six and 80-100 acres; also lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy Place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29, in the town of Independence, the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the subdown of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hallahan, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead, or lode, situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "La Dispricada Lode."

That certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura State of California, commencing at a point twelve and nine-twentieth (12 9-20) rods south of the general corner of the south west quarter and the North-east quarter of Section No. twelve (12) and the South-west quarter and the South-east quarter of Section No. one (1), in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and seven-twentieth (68 17-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North-west along a small branch or swale to a point twenty four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North East quarter and the South east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North east quarter of the North west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West; running thence North forty-four and eleven twentieth (44 11-20) rods; thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres: Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney, at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice, and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER,
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah deceased.

Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th 1895.

SAVE YOUR SHOES
AMES' SHOE PRO-
tector is warranted to make the sole wear as long as the remainder of any ordinary shoe, and to save from 20 to 60 times its cost in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.
PAT. APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROP'R.
Horseshoeing ..... $2 00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1894, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday ..... January 5th
" ..... February 9th
" ..... March 16th
" ..... April 6th
" ..... May 4th
" ..... June 1st
" ..... June 30th
" ..... August 3rd
" ..... August 31st
" ..... October 28th
" ..... November 2nd
" ..... November 31st

THOMAS C. ROLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND RHINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, JUNE 7.....1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman .....GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman.....CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge.....GEO. M. GILL
Sheriff.....ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk .....DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney.....P. W. FORBES.
Assessor.....P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer .....W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner.....I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed) .....JOSEPH SELBY.
Supt. Schools.....S. V. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist.....FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist.....A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist .....J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist.....J. J. STEWART.
5th Supervisor Dist. FRANK FITZGERALD.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

SATURDAY, June 1, 1895.

Frederike Raine vs. Ah Joe et als—Filed complaint. Issued summons and writ of attachment.

TUESDAY, June 4, 1895.

John H. Wise et al vs. Bertrand Raine—Filed complaint. Issued summons.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .67¼
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5¾
Pig lead	3.90

Mrs. John Clarke, of Bishop, visited in town several days this week.

D. C. Lane arrived at Darwin during the week from his home at Pomona.

Mrs. L. Josephs and Master Irving are visiting relatives at Independence.

Fully fifty per cent more hay will be cut in the Valley this year than last.

BUTTER from the Fairview creamery can be obtained from H. Levy.

The Board of Education held a special session on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Thos. C. Boland and J. A. McKenzie were in town last Saturday, returning Sunday.

Mrs. J. C. Irwin and Mrs. J. J. Gunn arrived home on Wednesday from a visit to Minnietta.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. M. Green came up from Lone Pine last Monday, returning the same day.

H. E. Wilkinson has moved into his new quarters in the former postoffice, adjoining the Norman House.

Misses Maud Cook and Lizzie Thompson arrived home on Wednesday from a weeks visit at Big Pine.

J. J. Gunn is expected in from Minnietta on Monday. He has a carload of high grade ore ready for shipment.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Meroney have returned to their home at Keeler after a month's visit at Independence and Bishop.

Tim Madden and Jim Rose came down from Fish Springs early in the week. Tim is on the sick list and is receiving medical treatment.

Irving O. Woodin arrived at Independence last Monday from Belmont where he has been at school. He expect to go East soon and enter Harvard.

All persons who have claims to present to the Board of Supervisors will do well to observe the notice published this week relative to the presentation of claims.

The Meads, Schober and Spratt teams arrived at Independence on Wednesday from Mojave. The outfit comprised thirty-two animals and five wagons, all heavily loaded.

In the language of Chimmie Fadden, "the Big Pine Hotel is chief, and that goes, see?" Anybody who expects better accommodation and attention than that hostelry provides is possessed of porcine instincts.

A movement is on foot to give a Fourth of July celebration at Independence. It is proposed to give a series of children's games in the afternoon and a grand ball in the evening. Further particulars will be published as the arrangements are made.

Web Walker is playing in hard luck. The late frost last fall blighted his official prospects and the wind this spring played havoc with his garden. Like Mark Twain's Judge, however, he doesn't complain and still has his smile with him.

The Sorba mine, at Darwin, owned by D. C. Lane, is without doubt one of the most valuable mining properties in the State, and the fortunate possessor is realizing a handsome fortune out of a small investment. There is every reason to believe that there are a number of other prospects in the county which with sufficient capital to develop them, will turn out just as valuable as the Sorba mine.

At The Close Of Big Pine School.

On Thursday and Friday evenings, May 30 and 31, the people of the Big Pine school held a reading contest, and closing exercises. Their teacher, Miss L. N. Bell, had offered two gold medals to the school, one for the best reader among the boys, and one to the best reader among the girls, the reading to be judged by five of the audience gathered to hear them Thursday evening. The children acquitted themselves very well, especially the young ladies, their class being older and further advanced than the class of boys. The task of the judges was a difficult one. After summing up the markings given by the judges to each pupil, it was discovered that Miss Ora Eldred was entitled to the medal among the girls, and Master Hartwell Meredith among the boys. After the reading Miss Bell presented diplomas of honor to pupils especially deserving for good deportment and scholarship. The following were the pupils so honored: Ora Eldred, Maggie Peterson, Gertie Mitchell, Sam Meredith, Clara Eldred, Willie Steward, Bertha Crocker, Daisy Phillips. S. G. Sneden Esq. in a few well chosen words conferred the medals and diplomas, and the evenings exercises were closed by singing America. On Friday evening the school gave a musical entertainment, and the fact that Big Pine folks love music was demonstrated by a crowded house. It was evident from the performance that the children had received the best of training. The tambourine, military and Quaker drills, could have been so well performed only after the most careful and painstaking practice. Miss Bell was assisted during the evening by Miss Clara Eldred, Mr. Callow, Dr. Dorrence and Miss Gertrude Mitchell. The entertainment was followed by a social dance which continued until daylight Saturday morning. The people of Big Pine may well be proud of the children's performance. Only an experienced educator could have brought out the children's power so well.

Special Meeting Of The Board os Education.

On Tuesday, June 4, the Board of Education of Inyo County, met as a special meeting to examine the papers submitted by the scholars of the various schools of the County, on application for graduating diplomas, and to determine which of these had attained the required average of eighty per cent. Upon exameting the papers, the following named pupils were granted diplomas of graduation:

BISHOP.

James Delay. Arthur Shirley.
Libbie Garretson. Lou Darrah.
Jennie Cruse. Edward Delay.
Mary Cashbaugh. Katie Cashbaugh.

BIG PINE.

Clara Eldred.

IRVING.

Stella McLaren. Grace Turner.
Will Nelligan. Hattie Lewis.

MILTON.

Carl Walter. Frances Aguirre.

RIVERSIDE.

Carrie Wonacott.

STATION.

Lettie Shively.

WARM SPRINGS.

Charles Partridge

At the February meeting of the Board Chas Rose and Albert Salazar were graduates, making for the past school year a total of twenty graduates.

Meteorological Summary for Month of May, 1895, Independence Cal

Mean barometer, 29 85
Highest barometer, 30 17 date 10th
Lowest barometer, 29 50 date 27 h
Mean temperature, 65 8
Highest temperature, 89 date 7 h
Lowest temperature, 37 date 28 h
Greatest daily range of temperature, 37 date 7 h Least 19, date 27 h
Total excess in Temp. during month, 14
Total excess in Temp. since January 1st, 59
Prevailing direction of wind, NW
Total movement of wind, 7564 miles
Maximum velocity of wind, direction, and date, 48 miles Northwest on 27 h
Total precipitation, 01
Number of days on which 01 inch or more of precipitation fell, 1
Total deficiency in precipitation during month, 28
Total deficiency in precipitation since January 1st, 21
Number of cloudless days 15, partly cloudy days 8; cloudy days 8.
Dates of frost, 28 h

H. E. WILKINSON,
Observer Weather Bureau.

To The Public.

I have been informed that parties at Independence have been selling poor butter as my production. My butter is put up in squares with the words, "Fairview Creamery" in capital letters, stamped across the face. It is always wrapped in butter parchment and packed in boxes bearing the creamery stamp. Butter prepared in any other way without stamp or wrapped in cloth is not genuine. I have been using my stamp for over two years, and not a square ever leaves the factory without being printed.

W. D. ROBERTS
Round Valley, May 31, 1895.

Ten Dollars Reward

The above reward will be paid for information as to the whereabouts of the following described stock, which were lost at Rose Springs, near Haiwai, on May 15. One bay horse branded J. One bay horse branded AR. One bay mare branded JH. One gray mule branded X. One black horse-mule branded P. The finder will please communicate with thi this office or with A. W. Eibeshutz, Independence, Cal.

Gus. Steecker came in from Snows Canyon early in the week, where he has been at work putting in a battery in the new mill. He expects to go out there again next September and complete the work. Mr. Steecker expects to start work next Monday on the new mill at the Hirsch mine, which will keep him busy for several months. It is proposed to erect a 15 stamp mill, with concentrators and all other necessary machinery for the complete handling of the ore.

George Lewis came down from Fish Springs last Saturday. His mine at Poverty Hill still continues to improve. He has a three foot ledge, in clay casings, with a pay streak about six inches wide. The ore is free-milling and is worth about eighty dollars per ton.

The Independence Water Company has secured the necessary pipe and will soon have in six-inch mains to replace the four-inch now in use.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of M. V. BARNES, An Insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of M. V. Barnes, the above named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from her debts, and that Saturday, the 29th day of June, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the Court room of said Court, at the Court house, in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and she be discharged from all her debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
[SEAL.] By W. M. WILLS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st, A. D. 1895.

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of JOHN BARNES, An Insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of John Barnes, the above named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, and that Saturday, the 29th day of June, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the Court-room of said Court, at the Court-house in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and he be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
[SEAL.] By W. M. WILLS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st A. D. 1895.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. Location of works, near Lone Pine, Inyo County, California.

Notice is hereby given, that at a meeting of the Board of Directors, held on the 27th day of April, 1895, an assessment (No. 8) of fifteen cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin to the Secretary, at the office of the company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 1st day of June, 1895, will be delinquent and advertised for sale, at public auction, and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, June 22, 1895, at 2 o'clock p. m. to pay the delinquent assessment, together with costs of advertising and expense of sale.

D. HOLLAND,
Secretary.

Office, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California. May 2, 1895.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
April 29, 1895.

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Halliday of Lone Pine, Inyo Co., Cal., has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert land claim No. 645, for the N ½ of Sec. 15, Tp. 15 S., R. 36 E. M. D. M. before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal., on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co. Cal. William F. Halliday of Oak and Cal. Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, both of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND,
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Independence, Cal.
April 29, 1895.

Notice is hereby given that William F. Halliday of Oakland, Cal. has filed notice of intention to make proof on his desert land claim No. 641, for the NW ¼ of SW ¼ sec. 12 Tp. 15 S. R. 36 E. M. D. M. before Register and Receiver at Independence, Cal. on Monday, the 10th day of June, 1895.

He names the following witnesses to prove the complete irrigation and reclamation of said land: Finley McIver of Citrus, Inyo Co. Cal. Joseph Halliday, Peter Laberge and Manuel Silva, all of Lone Pine, Inyo Co. Cal.

IRV H. MULHOLLAND,
Register.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix, at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ALLIE R. BROWN,
Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased.

Dated February 15 1895.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administratrix.
aug3 5t

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

NOTICE.

Whereas, the consent in writing of the holders of two thirds of the capital stock of the Lone Pine Canal Company, a corporation, to change the principal place of business of said corporation from the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, to the town of Lone Pine, in said county and state, is on file herein. Notice is hereby given that the principal place of business of said Lone Pine Canal Company, will be at the town of Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on and after January 26th 1895.

By order of the Board of Directors.

DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The co-partnership heretofore existing between R. W. Thomas of the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, and T. W. Hill of the same place under the firm name and style of "Thomas and Hill" heretofore conducting a general merchandising business at the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, is this day dissolved by the mutual consent of the said R. W. Thomas and the said T. W. Hill.

Witness our hands and the seals this 6th day of February, 1895.

R. W. Thomas
Thomas W. Hill

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.

☞ First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

BIG PINE HOTEL.

BIG PINE · CAL

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates

☞ Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modoc Cal.

FOR SALE.
THE WHITNEY HOUSE

—The only hotel in—

LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL

Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address

MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

Pioneer
Livery & Feed Stables

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the abovewell known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the ton or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

The newest Style

OF

Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies'
Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOD
CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain
Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED "DRESDEN" WARE.

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get the

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

[Official.]

Notice To Tax-Payers.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT I have received from the Auditor of the County of Inyo, State of California the Assessment Roll for the year A. D. 1894-5, that the taxes on all personal property secured by real property, and one-half the taxes on all real property, will be due and payable on the first Monday in October and will be delinquent on the last Monday in November next thereafter, at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto fifteen per cent will be added to the amount thereof; and that if said one-half be not paid before the last Monday in April next at six o'clock p. m. an additional five per cent. will be added thereto; that the remaining one-half of the taxes on all real property will be payable on and after the first Monday in January next and will be delinquent on the last Monday in April next thereafter at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto five per cent. will be added to the amount thereof; that all taxes may be paid at the time the first installment as herein provided is due and payable.

A. M. GIVEN,
Tax-Collector.

oct5 td

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE,
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First Class and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER, General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.		From Mound House. No. 1		To Mound House No. 2.
		Leave—		Arrive—
Mound House		10.50 a. m.		5.20 p. m
Ivanton		11.25 a. m.		4.45 p. m
Wabuska		1.40 p. m		2.50 p. m
Hawthorne	Ar.	5.00 p. m	Lv.	11.00 a. m
		No. 3.		No. 4
		Leave—		Arrive—
Hawthorne		6.00 a. m.		2.25 p. m
Luning		7.15 a. m.		6.15 p. m
Sodaville		7.30 a. m.		6.05 p. m
Belleville		8.10 a. m.		4.30 p. m
Candelaria		9.30 a. m.		3.50 p. m
Ralston		1.30 p. m		11.50 a. m
Basin Creek		2.10 p. m		9.50 a. m
Alvord		3.10 p. m		8.55 a. m
Independence		4.35 p. m.		7.20 a. m
Lone Pine		5.20 p. m.		6.40 a. m
Keeler	Ar.	7.00 p. m.	Lv.	6.00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (36 miles), Bodie (13 miles), Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Palmer, Cummings & Co's tri weekly stages (leave Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Dunderville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbia (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma, Alta Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (6 miles), Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (116 miles).

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER, with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine. Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

RESTORE YOUR EYESIGHT

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave,
WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS
at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeler,
MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS
at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER,
Propr.

JOHN B. CLARKE,

Successor to John Clarke,

—PROPRIETOR—

John Clarke's Bishop Stables,

BISHOP, CAL.

First-class Turnouts of Every Kind
Fine horses and Carriages.
horses Boarded for any Time
Best of Care and Attention

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.

Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.

O. I. MAIRS Pro
feb12tf

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS. WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

☞ All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

0-m RENO, NEVADA

BIG PINE ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, on the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

INDEPENDENCE

MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

☞ Lard supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.

j19-tf

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

☞ Buyers and consumers should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1895.
j164tf

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE, INYO Co. Cal

Dealer In GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS'
Supplies

PROVISIONS

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

BELL'S Flouring Mills

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

Take no Substitute for Royal Baking Powder. It is Absolutely Pure.

All others contain alum or ammonia.

It is a singular fact that M. Worth had a strong dread of March the 10th, as it was the anniversary of the death of Duc de Morny. Something terrible, M. Worth felt, was certain to happen to him on that date. He died on March 10th.

I SEE IT WHEREVER I GO!

Speaking of the illustrated catalogue of Weinstock, Lubin & Co., Pacific coast travelers frequently remark: "I see it wherever I go." No wonder! It is probably in fifty thousand homes to-day.

This book, familiar in so many homes, sells goods as readily as our best salesmen. Why should it not? Clear in its statements, honest in import, replete with news—it deals direct, and above all, is complete. The latest devices, the sensible household necessities that you need and what you most like to have are all there in beautiful illustrations and interesting descriptions. It is a HELPFUL book for young and old, rich and poor, and FREE for the asking.

The catalogue, together with fast mail, express and freight, places the advantages of this store within quick and easy reach of customers living hundreds of miles from Sacramento. Think of all that means!

It means that your orders will be filled from the largest general stock of merchandise on the coast, and as carefully as if you were here to choose for yourself. The privilege to return, at our expense, anything not as ordered is a guarantee that the style and quality of the goods will be as nearly right as we know how to have them.

It means that you will get the benefit of lowest prices. We have facilities for buying which few merchants anywhere enjoy and the result is generally a saving for customers of 10 to 50 per cent. We have but one price and mark all goods in plain figures.

Our Illustrated Catalogue is free. If you have not one, we would be pleased to mail a copy on receipt of your name and address.

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN & CO.,

400-412 K STREET,

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

ODDS AND ENDS FROM ABROAD.

Sir Robert Lowe, the commander of England's latest "little war," the expedition to Chitral, is one of the many soldiers who have brilliant reputations in India, though they are hardly known at home. Sir Robert has for forty years been in the East, and has taken part in every campaign of importance. He was present at the siege of Delhi, at the second siege of Lucknow and at several smaller frontier fights. He is at present major general in charge of the Lucknow district.

Mr. Labouchere writes: "When the Emperor William sanctioned the marriage of his sister Princess Victoria to Prince Adolphus of Schamburg-Lippe, a cavalry officer who was richer in 'blue blood' than in possessions, every one at the court of Berlin was puzzled. It now turns out that a secret arrangement had been made by the Prince of Lippe-Detmold that on his death Prince Adolphus should act as regent of the principality, with the prospect of succeeding to the throne on the demise of the present Prince Alexander, who is a lunatic. Prince Adolphus is very fortunate, as the late Prince of Lippe Detmold was enormously rich, and his estates, which are of great value, pass with the principality. The Princess of Lippe-Detmold possess the famous Senner breed of horses, and their collection of silver plate is surpassed only by that of the Duke of Cumberland."

The memorandum of the First Lord of the Admiralty on the navy estimates has been issued, from which it appears that the total is £18,701,000, or £1,334,900 more than the sum voted for 1894-5, and £4,460,900 more than the total of the year previous. The programme makes no provision for any more battleships, but four first-class crusiers, as big or bigger than battleships, are to be contructed, as well as four of the second class, two of the third and twenty torpedo boat destroyers.

Dr. PIERCE'S

FAVORITE

PRESCRIPTION

FOR

WEAK WOMEN.

On first introducing this world-famed medicine to the afflicted, and for many years thereafter, it was sold under a Positive Guarantee of giving entire satisfaction in every case for which it is recommended. So uniformly successful did it prove in curing the diseases, derangements and weaknesses of women that claims for the return of money paid for it were exceedingly rare. Since its manufacturers can now point to thousands of noted cures effected by it in every part of the land, they believe its past record a sufficient guarantee of its great value as a curative agent, therefore, they now rest its claims to the confidence of the afflicted solely upon that record. By all medicine dealers.

THE SPENT BALL.

By H. S. KNEEDLER.

He was not gone long, and little was said while he was absent. Dr. De Costa made a pretense of examining the wound, and with great gravity explained to me that it was merely a flesh wound, and that the operation of sewing it would be a simple one. When his operating case was handed to him he opened it, and took from a morocco pocketbook a thin sheet of beaten silver. This he cut with a pair of scissors to the desired shape, and he exercised great care in filing and polishing the edges so that there should be no ragged protuberances.

Presently, when all was ready, he prepared a paper funnel, into which he placed a piece of cloth saturated with ether, and this he directed me to hold over Brigham's nose and mouth. When that unfortunate had fallen into a deep sleep, the doctor seized his scalpel and went to work with the air of a man who knows thoroughly what is to be done, and has abundant confidence in his own ability to do it. I watched his keen knife as it moved here and there, balanced by a hand which knew no tremor.

The thick skin from which the hair had been shaved by a few dextrous strokes was cut in wide V shape and laid back, showing a small ragged opening in the bone which nature had sought to protect by an added growth of the epidermis. Exposed before us was the brain of this man who had said he had no past. Over this opening the small silver shield was fitted with wonderful nicety and fixed in place; then the skin was drawn back and a few stitches completed the work. It was an hour from the time I first held the ether to Brigham's nostrils to the time when the doctor rose to his feet, and wiping his blood stained fingers upon the wet handkerchief looked down upon his work.

"We shall soon know what we have done," he said. "If the operation is successful, the probabilities are that this man will take up the thread of his life where he left off when that wound was inflicted."

"Did we whip them?" It was Brigham who spoke. He raised up on his elbow and a smile broke over his face. "I was hit then, was I? Well, you don't think its very bad, eh, doctor? It can't be very serious or I would feel worse—in the head, eh—a piece of shell, I suppose, or a minnie ball."

"Yes, a spent ball," said the doctor softly.

"But I say, you don't belong to the Fifteenth. By George, I haven't fallen into the hands of the Johnnies, have I?" and the patient's eyes opened wide in quizzical inquiry. "That would be a joke on me, wouldn't it, and I guess I never would hear the last of it in our mess."

"What the deuce is he talking about?" asked Jones in a stage whisper. "Off his nut, isn't he, Doc?"

"Not a bit of it," replied that distinguished gentleman, who had been watching his patient with great intentness. "He is fighting over the battle or skirmish in which he was wounded."

"But say," broke in Jones, "that couldn't be; it's close to six years since the war closed."

"There have been no years since then for him," replied the doctor. "I told you he would take up his life where he laid it down when that wound was inflicted. He is fulfilling my prediction."

"By George, didn't we make great work of that supply train. I wonder what Old Hood will say when he hears how we made bonfires of his cherished pontoon bridges."

"What was your regiment?" asked the doctor quietly.

"Why, the Fifteenth Pennsylvania cavalry, of course. Why do you ask me that?"

"And where was this fight you were hit in?"

"Oh, come now, what are you asking me that for?"

"Because I want to know."

"And you don't?"

"Don't what?"

"Don't know?"

"Of course not, or I would not have asked.'

"Well, where have you been the last few weeks, anyhow?"

"Why, at Thornhill; and I guess if you look it up on the map you'll find it's in Alabama. But say, if I am a prisoner and you are one of those Johnny rebs we've been after, you'll have to 'fess up that you've got mighty near the end of your tether."

The doctor winced a little bit and said: "I'll 'fess up that I was one of those rebs, but that's a long time ago now; you've whipped us, and what we want to know is something about you."

"Well, this is great sport. Anyhow I'm glad I fell into your hands, for you don't appear like such a bad kind of a fellow; but what makes you say it was a long time ago?"

"Because it was, let me see—what was the exact date of that fight at Thornhill?"

"Oh, pshaw, you're joking now. Why January third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, of course."

"So it was, so it was; just five years and two months ago."

"Well, if you ain't the queerest fellow I ever did run across. Say, I knew you fellows got dreadfully mixed up on things in general, but, by Jove, you didn't try to doctor up the calendar any, did you?"

"You think I am joking," replied the doctor seriously, "but I am in very great earnest. It is more than five years ago since that skirmish took place at Thornhill, when Hood's train was destroyed. You were struck in the head and have been unconscious ever since."

"Unconscious for five years?"

"I call it that because I suppose you have no consciousness of what has taken place in the interval, though to all intents and purposes you were, so far as your associates knew, in possession of your faculties."

"But the war?"

"It closed long ago."

"And my regiment, the Fifteenth Pennsylvania cavalry?"

"Disbanded long since."

"And me?"

"Enrolled, perhaps, among the missing."

"But the folks at home in the old homestead on the Wissahickon?"

"Watching yet for your return; and not yet without hope, I trust."

"My God, is it possible that this is true—that I have been dead and yet alive for five years. Tell me it is all a joke."

"On my honor as a gentleman, as a soldier," and the doctor laid his hand upon his heart.

"But what has happened in all this interval—this blank in my life?"

"That we only know in part. Of the last few months we know something. Of the period before these gentlemen first knew you we are ignorant. These years have been like strands absorbed into the woof of the universal life, indistinguishable and lost."

"Well," said the wounded man, when he knew all that the doctor and I could tell him, "it is something to have recovered one's past."

"And to have a future," I added.

CHAPTER VII.

"I'll do better and show you her photograph."

"Clothed in my right mind, and, what is better still, soon to see the dear ones at home. It is pretty hard for a man to lose five of his best years—to feel that there is a blank there which can never be filled in—but it is something to have made such friends as you have been."

The speaker was Jack Kinsey. You would scarcely have recognized in him the Ansil Berner who was accused of the murder of Mme. Armand, though you might have recognized him as the Jason Brigham of the Memphis Avalanche staff. A couple of weeks had done wonders for him. Through the active efforts of our friend the judge, together with the intercession of Dr. De Costa, it had been a matter of small trouble to secure full exoneration for him. We were going north together, and had chosen that most delightful of all the luxurious methods of travel—steamer on the Mississippi.

The wires had told the story of his long absence to the old folks at home, and had brought Jack the glad news that there were no vacant places in the home he had left. Better than that, they had brought him plenty of money, for Jack's father was a retired Philadelphia merchant. So we journeyed northward. If it had been wholly left to Jack we would have gone up by rail but I had a reason of my own for urging the river route, and as yet I had not taken the object of my solicitude into my confidence. We were sitting on the cabin deck smoking our cigars when Jack—whom Jones would persist in calling Brigham, because he said this thing of a man having so many names perplexed him—uttered the words with which this chapter opens.

"We have only done what you would have done in like circumstances," I replied. "But it does seem hard to lose those years."

"You cannot imagine how grotesque it all seems," said Jack. "Why, it appears to me as though it was only last week that I left home a mere stripling. It seems as though it was only yesterday that the colonel handed me my commission as lieutenant. I cannot realize that the war has closed, that the armies have left the field, and that the country is now at peace. All this is a grotesque fancy to me. And then to think what I have done all this intervening time—that not a memory survives of any of those apparently lucid periods. But I suppose the doctor was right, and that each time the pressure upon my brain grew too great it was like the sudden letting down of the curtain upon an act in a play. It blotted out from memory all that had preceded."

"We had very excellent evidence of that," replied Jones, "when our friendly advances were coolly repelled. But I am off to interview the pilot, and you fellows can sit here and philosophize or ruminate all you want to."

When our companion had gone I turned to Kinsey and said, "There was one thing I have not yet spoken to you about, and it is high time you knew it."

"Don't look so serious, old fellow," he replied. "It was not very bad, was it?"

"That depends on how you look at it,' I retorted. "The fact is you were guilty of a very grave breach of faith at Memphis, and I want you to make reparation."

"If I wronged any man I will do him ample justice."

"But it was worse than that."

"Worse?"

"Yes; you stole a woman's heart—the heart of a very sweet and amiable woman too. In fact, you made love to her desperately, won her affections, secured her pledge to marry you, and then disappeared on the very night on which you declared your affection."

"You are not serious?"

"I was never more so in my life."

"But this is really too much. I can't marry a woman whose acquaintance I would have to make all over again."

"Not so fast, not so fast! Who knows that she will want to marry you? Women are fickle creatures. To make sure of marrying them you must keep them in the humor. One cannot raise the siege an instant. This woman, as I have said, is sweet and amiable. But, mark you, she has plenty of spirit, is as high mettled as a Kentucky colt. She has suitors by the score, and though she appeared heartbroken at your mysterious disappearance, she may be wearing some other gallant's heart upon her sleeve ere now."

"Well, tell me whether she was fair or plain. I'd like to know what kind of taste I displayed during the time when my brain was playing such tricks with me."

"I'll do better and show you her photograph," I responded, taking it from the case in which I carried it and extending it toward him. "Judge for yourself."

He looked at it a long time, admiration growing upon his face as he studied each lineament. Then he said:

"I'd marry that woman tomorrow if I could."

"Believe me, you are not the only one who would make the sacrifice," I said somewhat cynically. "She would make any man happy."

"But tell me about her. Quick, I am impatient to know. Tell me all about her and my association with her. Why, what a fool I must have been! Her presence would be enough to restore the balance of one's reason."

"Or unseat it," I interjected.

"My boy," and here the major looked upon me appealingly, "there isn't much left to tell. Put yourself in Kinsey's place. What would you have done, do you suppose? Why, stopped at Memphis, of course, just as he did. It's strange how a man will put off meeting even the people he loved by reason of kinship for a little thing like that, but he will every time. You might say it was an awkward thing for Kinsey to explain. I'll grant you that; but then it would have been decedly awkward not to have married the girl. I'll leave you to guess how he did it. That is not important in its relation to this incident, and I'm sure I don't know the particulars, for they never told me. But every year I spend my holidays with Jack Kinsey in his big, hospitable home on the bluff, overlooking the river at Memphis, and I'm sure of a welcome as long as I choose to stay."

THE END.

Family Weather Signals.

He was inclined to be humorous, but sometimes unwise. He had forgotten to go home to supper, and he knew what was in store for him when he should finally get there, so just to be pleasant and entertaining he got some miniature flags and put them in his pocket.

"John Henry," exclaimed his wife as he entered the house, "I should think you'd be ashamed of yourself to treat your wife with so little consideration."

He slowly unrolled his little package of flags, took out a square red one with a black square in the center and fastened it to the mantel.

"What's that?" she demanded sharply.

"Storm signal," he replied pleasantly.

She drew herself up haughtily. Once or twice she seemed on the point of speaking, but controlled herself and finally turned coldly away. He merely took down the red flag and replaced it with a white one with a black center.

"Cold wave," he said.

There was a moment's silence, and he saw that her feelings were hurt.

"You're cruel," she said at last. "You stay away from dinner and then you come home just to make fun of me. I—I"—

He put up a blue flag.

"Rain or snow," he said.

"Why do you want to be so mean?" she asked. "Why can't you be the dear, kind man you used to be? I won't be cross again."

He put up a white flag.

"Fair weather," he said, "and also a flag of truce. I capitulate to tears."

And the white flag floated the entire evening.—Chicago Post.

Intoxication From Tea.

Although Cowper speaks of "the cups that cheer, but not inebriate," there is evidence of the intoxicating power of tea. In China tea is rarely used till it is a year old because of the peculiar intoxicating property which new tea possesses. Three or four grains of theine are contained in less than half an ounce of good tea and may be taken in a day by most full grown persons without unpleasant effects, but if twice this quantity, or eight grains, a day be taken the pulse becomes more frequent, the heart beats more strongly and trembling comes on. At the same time the imagination is excited, and after awhile the thoughts wander, visions begin to be seen, and a peculiar state of intoxication comes on. All these symptoms are followed by and pass off in a deep sleep.

Whether the tannin in tea contributes in any degree to its exhilarating or narcotic action is not known. That it does aid in the exhilarating effect which tea produces is rendered very probable by the fact that a species of tannin is the principle ingredient in the Indian betel nut, which is so much prized in the east and which is said to produce a mild and agreeable intoxication. Mate or Paraguay tea, prepared from the leaves of the Brazilian holly in the state in which it is commonly used for a stimulating beverage, also intoxicates.—Baltimore American.

How It Feels to Be Hanged.

There is a question which quite frequently arises, especially after a legal execution has taken place, which very few living persons are in position to answer. It is this: "What are the sensations experienced during hanging?" Some few who have lived through the trying ordeal have given accounts of their feelings and sensations during such critical moments, and from what they say it is not such a terrible way to die as some have imagined. All concur in saying that after one single instant of pain, the chief sensation is that of a mass of brilliant, ever changing colors before the eyes. Captain Montagnac, who was hanged in France during the religious wars, and who was resuscitated when life was all but extinct, said that he lost all sense of pain the moment the trap sprung. The next sensation was that of brilliant, many colored lights, and he is even said to have upbraided his rescuers for taking him away from a sight, the beauties of which defied all attempts at description.

All accounts which the writer has ever read warrant these conclusions: That the suffering is but momentary; that a pleasurable feeling immediately succeeds; that colors of various hues start up before the eyes, and that when these have been gazed upon for a limited period of time the rest is total oblivion.—St. Louis Republic.

The Old Oaken Bucket.

"The Old Oaken Bucket" was written by Woodworth, a printer of New York and of almost every other American city. Not far from the printing office where he was employed there was a dramshop which he frequented, and one hot summer afternoon he strolled in there and called for brandy. It was poured out, and as he held up the glass he remarked to a brother printer, "There's nothing like that." "Yes, there is," responded the other. "A drink of cool well water from the old oaken bucket that hangs in my father's well." Woodworth went back to the printing office, sat down at a desk and began to write, and in the course of the afternoon finished the song. The music is by Kiallmark, and the melody is that written for "Araby's Daughter."

A Boy's Ambition.

There is, as a rule, nothing more lofty than the ambition of a boy of 5 who has looked carefully over the whole range of human endeavor and made up his mind what he is going to be. A lad of that observant age known to all of his kind as "goin on 6" was asked the other day if he expected to become a lawyer like his father.

"Oh, no," said he with a positive shake of his head. "I'm going to be a captain of a big ship, and I'll sail out west and bombard the Indians on the plains."—Harper's.

LONGFELLOW'S AFFLICTION.

Suddenly an awful calamity befell him in the death of his wife by accident. One sad day in July, 1861, Mrs. Longfellow's light dress caught fire from a match fallen on the floor. The poet rushed to her aid; but despite all his efforts, her injuries were fatal. She died the next morning. Longfellow himself was so severely burned that he was unable to be present at her funeral.

When his wounds healed he was still broken in spirit. To give himself occupation, and to help him bear his sorrow, he translated into English the "Divine Comedy" of Dante. He found the labor restful and consoling; and in time he completed his translation, which was published in 1867.—Prof. Brander Matthews in St. Nicholas for April.

The residents of Vienna last year ate 18,207 horses.

ON THE SPOT.

"Out damned spot," was what troubled Mrs. Macbeth; but it was something intangible that she saw. In the active season of spring and summer sports—there are spots that are not visionary, but which bring with them pain and great discomfort. Bruises, black and blue, are the accompaniments of every active sport. They often cripple and are always a sore trouble. Come from what source they may, the thing to do on the spot is to use St. Jacobs Oil freely and promptly. There is nothing surer, and it wipes out the pain as we would wipe off a slate. In like manner sudden attacks of rheumatism, to which people are liable at this season, can be promptly cured by applying St. Jacobs Oil to the pain spot.

Grace—Are you sure she loves you? Dick—Positive. She said she would rather have me save my money than buy her a Christmas present.

A TERRIBLE VISITANT.

Pain is always a terrible visitant, and often domiciles itself with one for life. This infliction is preventible, in cases of rheumatism, by a timely resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which checks the encroachments of this obstinate and dangerous malady at the outset. The term "dangerous" is used advisedly, for rheumatism is always liable to attack the vital organs and terminate life. No testimony is more conclusive and concurrent than that of physicians who testify to the excellent effect of the Bitters in this disease. Persons incur a wetting in rainy or snowy weather, and who are exposed to draughts, should use the Bitters as a preventive of ill effects. Malaria, dyspepsia, liver and kidney trouble, nervousness and debility are also among the ailments to which this popular medicine is adapted. For the infirmities, soreness and stiffness of the aged it is highly beneficial.

Old Beau—Miss Flossie, be mine. I would give my life for you. Miss Flossie—Well, you may if it's heavily insured.

BEWARE OF OINTMENT FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAINS MERCURY.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

☞ Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

She—I think there is considerable room for improvement in ladies' dresses nowadays. He—Well, in the sleeves, especially, I should say there was room enough for almost anything.

I believe Piso's Cure for Consumption saved my boy's life last summer.—Mrs. Allie Douglass, Le Roy, Mich, Oct. 20, 1894.

The Easter woman is just as attractive and lovely as the much-talked-of summer girl.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

I was afflicted with catarrh last autumn. During the month of October I could neither taste or smell, and could hear but little. Ely's Cream Balm cured it.—Marcus Geo. Shautz, Rahway, N. J.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from Colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents, at Druggists, or by mail, ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to

DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY,

which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

LOOK OUT FOR "No. 1"

Your First Duty is to Yourself; Your Bodily Condition Calls for the Help to be Found in a Good

SPRING MEDICINE

The best Preparation for this Purpose is

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Spring is the season for cleansing and renewing the blood. During the winter it has crept sluggishly through the veins, gathering impurities from indoor air, from fatty substances in the food, and from many other sources.

The great blood purifying medicine especially prepared to do this work is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It will give to the blood purity, richness and vitality, and these will bring health and vigor, strong nerves, a good appetite, refreshing sleep, and powers of endurance.

Cleanse your blood by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, a renovating preparation especially prepared to make pure blood, then you may enjoy the season of flowers and birds and outdoor pleasures, for you will be healthy, strong and well.

"I cannot speak too highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla, as it has worked wonders in my case. I am 74 years of age and have been afflicted with salt rheum on my hands for a great many years. I tried many things to cure them, but failed. My hands would crack open and bleed protusely, and the pain was terrible to bear. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla the flesh has healed and the skin is as smooth as any farmer's. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as a reliable medicine, and always speak in its favor."—Lloyd B. Chase, Swansea, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Is the Only True Blood Purifier

Prominently in the public eye today. Be sure to get Hood's and only Hood's.

HOOD'S PILLS cure all liver ills, biliousness, headache. 25c.

"HE THAT WORKS EASILY, WORKS SUCCESSFULLY." CLEAN HOUSE WITH SAPOLIO

MALARIA! DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY. Three doses only. Try it.

PURE

ARM AND HAMMER

BEWARE of imitation trade marks and labels.

is the whole story about

ARM AND HAMMER SODA

in packages. Costs no more than other package soda—never spoils flour—universally acknowledged purest in the world.

Made only by CHURCH & CO., New York. Sold by grocers everywhere.

Write for Arm and Hammer Book of valuable Recipes—FREE.

CABLED FIELD and HOG FENCE, 24 in. to 58 in. high; CABLED POULTRY FENCE, 24 in. to 63 in. high. STEEL WEB PICKET LAWN FENCE, 18 in. to 50 in. high. STEEL WIRE FENCE BOARD and ORNAMENTAL STRIP. Steel Posts, Steel Rail, Steel Gates and Steel Tree, Flower and Tomato Guards. We manufacture a full line of Wire Fencing, Gates and Posts, and solicit your patronage. Catalogue Free. De Kalb Fence Co., 100 High St., De Kalb, Ill.

JNO. WOODLOCK, PACIFIC COAST AGENT, 26 Beale St., San Francisco, Cal.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

STEEL TANKS

We furnish steel tanks with covers, all galvanized after completion, in nests of ten, 8 to 12 feet high and 30 to 36 inches in diameter, at 2½c. per gallon. They do not rust, shrink, leak, give taste to water, nor allow foreign substances to get in. They can be put in garret or barn and thus are protected from freezing. They take no getting up, are cheaper than wood. Tank substructures of all sizes made to order. Send for price list and designs for substructure and ornamental water supply.

AERMOTOR CO. CHICAGO.

2½ CTS PER GAL

Did you ever stop to think how completely the Aermotor Co. made the modern windmill business? How it has monopolized this entire line of manufacture because of its ideas, inventions, designs, qualities and prices, or forced others to be literal and servile imitators? Witness the steel wheel, the back geared pumper, the high geared power mill, the steel towers, fixed and tilting, the galvanizing of work after completion, the grinder centrifugal feed, the improved irrigating and other pumps, the all steel pole saw—one of the most popular things we ever put out—the steel storage and stock tanks. Everything we have touched we have bettered and cheapened. It is the thing we have delighted in and it has paid. We have established a score of branch houses, so as to have all these goods near those who want them. The Aermotor Co. has but one more ambition. It wants to build and fill one more new building. It has 2 acres of land at its present location unoccupied by buildings. It expects to commence in June to cover that 2 acres with a single building, 7 stories high. This will give it 14 more acres of floor space. Then when the public demand requires more goods than can be produced with this added space, it will refuse to extend further, or make any effort. It will have done its share to supply the demand. It will then turn away all new comers. UNTIL THAT TIME IT EXPECTS TO CONTINUE TO SUPPLY THE WORLD WITH THE GREATER PART OF ITS WIND WHEELS, TOWERS, GRINDERS, FEED CUTTERS, PUMPS, STEEL FRAME BUZZ SAWS, STEEL STORAGE AND STOCK TANKS, STEEL SUBSTRUCTURES, ETC., ETC., GALVANIZED AFTER COMPLETION. IT WILL CONTINUE TO DEAL MOST LIBERALLY WITH THE PUBLIC, FURNISH REPAIRS AT A LOW PRICE, AND BE THE GREAT MODEL SQUARE-DEALING WIND POWER AND WATER SUPPLY HOUSE OF THE WORLD. AERMOTOR CO., CHICAGO.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

if you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc., AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

PLEASANT Profitable Employment AT HOME. No experience or capital required. A month and expenses to $50 the right parties. Address for particulars M. A. THOMPSON, Stockton, Cal. (Mention this paper.)

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE. FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. Woods & Co's. "Castlewood" Kentucky Bourbon Cartan, McCarthy & Co. Sole Agents, and Distributors San Francisco

PALESTINE CORN

Is hard to beat. Can be planted till June. Yields about 2,000 lbs. corn and 12 tons excellent fodder per acre on dry land. Can be harvested with combined harvester. Send $1 per acre for seed desired. Address: SACRAMENTO RIVER NURSERY CO., WALNUT GROVE, CALIF.

INCUBATORS

Send for Catalogue. W. C. Beach, Ripon, Cal.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE IS THE BEST. FIT FOR A KING.

$5. CORDOVAN, FRENCH & ENAMELLED CALF.

$4. $3.50 FINE CALF & KANGAROO.

$3.50 POLICE, 3 SOLES.

$2.50 $2. WORKINGMEN'S. EXTRA FINE.

$2. $1.75 BOYS' SCHOOL SHOES.

LADIES.

$3. $2.50 $2. $1.75 BEST DONGOLA.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE. W. L. DOUGLAS, BROCKTON, MASS.

Over One Million People wear the W. L. Douglas $3 & $4 Shoes

All our shoes are equally satisfactory They give the best value for the money. They equal custom shoes in style and fit. Their wearing qualities are unsurpassed. The prices are uniform,---stamped on sole. From $1 to $3 saved over other makes. If your dealer cannot supply you we can.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP - FOR CHILDREN TEETHING - For sale by all Druggists, 25 cents a bottle.

S. F. N. U. No. 672. New Series No. 19.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, JUNE 14, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVI. NO. 52. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JUNE 14, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1285.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.00
Three Months	1.25
One Month	50
Single Copies	10

IMMIGRANT GIRLS.

Some Come to New York Without Friends.

CASTLE GARDEN MISSIONARIES.

What is Done to Protect and Help Friendless Foreign Women When They Land.

As a proof that greatest dangers are oftenest hazarded through ignorance, and that the cheerful bravery of women is equal to that of men, visit any day Ellis island, in New York harbor, and watch the landing of a bargeload of immigrants just off an English, German or Scandinavian steamer.

In the great struggling crowd of embryo citizens that pass in searching review before the vigilant inspectors is sure to be counted a score or more of young, unmarried, unprotected, penniless women and girls, who have in serene confidence crossed a very broad sea in search of future employment. In addition to their other disabilities, they are absolutely ignorant of the language, laws, customs and currency of America.

In the good old days, when Castle Garden was a broad open gate to the new world, there was something more than a problematic interest in the position of these lonely immigrant girls, it was so often pathetic and tragical. That has been changed for the better and the solitary peasant woman who arrives, not only at Ellis island, but at any of the immigrant stations in Boston, Philadelphia or New Orleans, finds self-constituted friends on the lookout, not only to welcome but to offer her practical assistance, a good temporary home, should she need it, and safe delivery to her friends or relatives, if she can claim any in the states. In New York this excellent order of things is due to the societies that call themselves "Immigrant Missions."

The system by which they are received and cared for is simple enough and aided in its workings by the government officials. Every time the big gong above the wharf door announces that a fresh bargeload of immigrants has arrived and the stream of foreign humanity begins to travel down the long wire-fenced lanes in the great hall and pass the uniformed inspectors, a group of business-like, plainly dressed, kindly faced women gather near the detention pen. They are the missionaries from the Methodist, Catholic and German homes and from the port chaplaincy of the Episcopal church. Experience, intuition and sympathy, a nod from one of the officials, or the frightened, bewildered stare of a girl, hurried, with her nobby boxes and bundles, past the inspection desks to liberty beyond the line of her pushing, struggling, fellow-passengers, denotes a case for special mission aid. If there is some one who comes to claim her and can, to the satisfaction of the officers, establish her identity, she is privileged to go her way rejoicing, but in the majority of cases, if not detained by law to answer charges or under suspicious evidence, she proves the legitimate care of the missionaries.

Many Swiss, nearly all Irish and some German girls naturally go to the Catholic home, where for a small sum they are provided with good safe lodgings and aided in finding employment. The English, Swedes, Norwegians and Danes gain cozy shelter under the modest roof of the Methodist mission in an old-fashioned house on State street. Undoubtedly this is the most comfortable and inexpensive home offered the immigrant girl, for, though under the patronage of the Methodist church, its charity is distributed without regard to creed or prejudice. This comfortable lodgement and three simple, wholesome meals a day are provided gratis to girls who can pay nothing, and it is left purely to the sense of independence and gratitude of the more fortunate ones to give 50 cents a week in return for the advantages offered. The only rules enforced are in favor of conduct, cleanliness and aid in cooking and preparing the meals. Paid in honor of these humble guests that if possible they willingly offer the price of the hospitality when, or after establishing themselves at work remit to the matron what they can out of their first wages. This is scarcely surprising when it is considered that in addition to offering shelter the mission is also a sort of employment bureau and out of the hundreds more girls who, during these three months, come to it for protection ninety goodly per cent., under its auspices are established in private families with instruction to come back to the mission when in any trouble.

"Just this spring we have sheltered a great number of English girls," volunteered the matron over her orderly entry book. "The commissioners and officials look, of course, most closely on what we do and afford every help to do the regulations against permitting single women to go forth into the streets of New York without warning or question. One of the most pathetic cases we have had, however, was a rosy-cheeked, gentle little German milliner, not more than 17, who explained she had, at the advice of two clever American friends, sold out her little business in her native town to come to New York and practice with them her calling at a great profit. We found her sobbing as if her heart was broken just outside the detention pen, with a pile of queer little parcels heaped near her and a big officer looking on with careless compassion.

"But they had promised the two clever friends were on hand to receive the poor child, but at one glance the officer and their truly abominable purpose, warned them off the island, and detained the girl, who, horrified and dismayed, sat down, womanlike, to weep over her hopeless condition. She was cared for, of course, and these you see are some of the dangers that beset immigrant girls.

"It's the business of our missionary, moreover, to investigate friends or relatives, to conduct girls, not only to the proper railroad stations whence they are bound further on to distant destinations, but to buy them their tickets, initiate them as well as she can into the customs of the country, persuade doubtful ones to stop at the home till connections outside of the city can be written to and heard from, and then make sure the relatives and friends are all they assume to be.

"Those who are perfectly penniless we provide with what we can, and those who are in grave trouble, who cannot satsifactorily answer the officials' queries and who must be returned to the port whence they sailed, we offer such comfort and succor as is in our power, so that at present it is almost a difficult matter for danger to confront the immigrant girl before friends have her interests firmly in hand."

WHERE WOMEN HAVE SUFFRAGE.

The countries of the world where women already have some suffrage, have an area of over 18,000,000 square miles and their population is over 350,000,000.

In Great Britain women vote for all elective officers except members of Parliament.

In France the women teachers elect women members of all Boards of Education.

In Sweden women vote for all elective officers except Representatives; also, indirectly, for members of the House of Lords.

In Norway they have school suffrage.

In Ireland the women vote for the harbor boards, poor law guardians, and in Belfast for municipal officers.

In Russia women householders vote for all elective officers and on all local matters.

In Finland they vote for all elective officers.

In Austria-Hungary they vote, by proxy, for all elective officers.

In Croatia and Dalmatia they have the privilege of doing so in local elections in person.

In Italy widows vote for members of Parliament.

In the Madras Presidency and the Bombay Presidency (Hindoostan) the women exercise the right of suffrage in all municipalities.

In all the countries of Russian Asia they can do so wherever a Russian colony settles. The Russians are colonizing the whole of their vast Asian possessions, and carrying with them everywhere the "mir," or self-governing village, wherein women who are heads of households are permitted to vote.

Women have municipal suffrage in Cape Colony, which rules a million square miles.

Municipal women suffrage rules in New Zealand, and, I think, at Parliamentary elections.

Iceland, in the North Atlantic, the Isle of Man (between England and Ireland), and Pitcairn Island, in the South-Pacific, have full woman suffrage.

In the Dominion of Canada women have municipal suffrage in every province and also in the Northwest Territories. In Ontario they vote for all elective officers, except in the election of members of the Legislature and Parliament.

In the United States twenty-eight States and Territories have given women some form of suffrage.

School suffrage in various degrees is granted to women in Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont and Wisconsin.

In Arizona and Missouri women vote, by petition, on liquor license in many cases.

In Delaware suffrage is exercised by women in several municipalities.

In Kansas they have equal suffrage with men at all municipal elections.

About 50,000 women voted in 1890.

In Monana they vote on all local taxation.

In New York they can and do vote at school elections. The question of the constitutionality of the law is still undecided. They vote also in many places in this State on local improvements, such as gas and electric street lighting, paving, sewerage, and municipal bonds.

In Utah women voted until disfranchised by the "Edmunds law," when they promptly organized to demand its repeal.

In Pennsylvania a law as passed in 1889 under which women vote on local improvements by signing or refusing to sign petitions therefor.

In Wyoming women have voted on the same terms with men since 1870.

The Convention in 1889 to form a State Constitution unanimously asserted a provision securing them full suffrage. This Constitution was ratified by the voters at a special election by about three-fourths majority. Congress refused to require the disfranchisement of women and admitted the State July 10, 1890.

And let it not be forgotten that in the Senate of the United States, Feb. 7, 1889, a select committee reported in favor of amending the Federal Constitution so as to forbid States to make sex a cause of disfranchisement. Congress adjourned, however, on March 4 following without reaching the subject. —Political Progress.

Hurrying Stranger (in Squeehawket) —"Is there time to catch the train?" Languid Native—"Waal, stranger, ye've got time enough, I reckon, but I'm dead sure ye hain't got the speed!"

IN JERUSALEM.

Easter Ceremonies at St. Petes's at Rome.

AN IDEAL PALACE OF OBSERVANCE.

How the Day is Made Memorable in the City of the Resurrection—Garden of Gethsemane.

Easter Sunday in Jerusalem! Almost irresistibly these words carry the thinker back more than 1,800 years to that little city of Palestine, where the world's greatest tragedy was enacted and where a miracle occurred which has no counterpart in the history of the universe.

There is an indefinable something about the place which takes hold of the emotions of the visitor and fills him with awe as he looks reverently at the objects which witnessed His last walk to a cruel death, and again at the spot marked as the place of the glorious resurrection.

There are houses there more than 2,000 years old and some of their walls of stone were passed by that awful procession struggling along to the mount of Calvary. No art of the word painter can picture the halo of deep antiquity hanging over the city. The solemnity of its age, the grandeur of its associations, cut a niche in the memory which time does not efface.

It is the ideal city of all others for the celebration of the Easter festival. Christ stood upon the hill of Calvary 1862 years ago and looked down upon the town where He had labored and had been betrayed. That was the first Easter morning and since then every year kind and loving hands, representing countless generations of all times, all creeds and all races, have left some token in honor of the day at the numerous places made sacred by His presence.

On Easter day the reputed tomb of Christ in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre is covered with the lillies which are used all over the world. The mount of Calvary is visited by the Christian population of the town and the members of the various religious orders inhabiting it, and flowers are strewn upon the spot where the cross is supposed to have stood. The archways under which Christ walked on the morning of the crucifixion, and which are standing now and may stand for another 2,000 years, are visited and pointed out to the small children and their histories told. Teaching the events of Easter time to the young of Jeursalem is an easy matter. Actualities are there, and they can be seen for the trouble of looking.

The city itself is not greatly changed from the time when Christ visited it. At the Gate of Jopa there are always masses of camels, merchants, peddlers and beggars. Indolence and activity rub shoulders without the usual jarring.

It is the same strange, weird Jerusalem.

Jerusalem, the prize of the nations, the terminus of famous pilgrimages, the object of Roman and crusading wars; for it Assyrians, Egpytians and the world had fought; the place where the queen of Sheba visited and Richard Cœur de Lion had conquered; the home of Solomon, of Ezekiel, of Jeremiah, of Isaiah, of Saladin. There is the mount of Zion, the spot of David's heartbreak; and Mount Moriah, where sacrifices smoked; the Mount of Olives, where Jesus preached, and Golgotha and the holy sepulcher, where He was buried.

A place redolent of antiquities, a city teeming with memories of the men and women of the bible. A wonderful place, with the power to stir the emotions of a man of stone. Above all is the "Place of the Skull," as it was called in the earthly days of Christ, known now as Mount Calvalry. From the famous Gate of Joppa it can be seen, and if we knew its ancient name it would speedily be recognized.

It is a hill shaped like a human skull, and just beneath what might be called its forehead are two cavernous spots which at a distance resemble eyes. Not only this, but the inside of the hill is shaped like the human skull. Entering the grotto under Calvary, it is found to be thirty-five feet high, the top and sides being malachite, green, brown, black, gray, white and red. It is called Jeremiah's grotto, for it was there that he wrote his Book of Lamentations.

The summit of the hill is just wide enough to contain three crosses. It was the spot where malefactors had been slain for ages and Christ was slain as a malefactor.

Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage has visited this spot oftener, perhaps, than any other American divine, and when he was asked what his emotions were on seeing the place, he said:

"Toward this hill the prophets pointed forward. Toward this hill the apostles and martyrs pointed backward. Toward this hill all heaven pointed downward. Toward this hill, with foaming execrations, all perdition pointed upward. Round it circles all history, all time, all eternity, and with this scene painters have covered the mightiest canvasses, sculptors have cut the richest marble, orchestras have rolled their grandest oratorios, churches have lifted their greatest doxologies and heaven has built its highest thrones."

The garden of Gethsemane, wherein is the reputed tomb of Christ, is a small inclosure 160 feet long and 150 feet wide. It is cared for by a colony of Franciscan monks, who spend much time beautifying it. The bible says, "In the midst of the garden was a sepulchre," and the students of biblical events generally acknowledge that in this place Christ was buried.

Now the place is beautifully adorned with hedges, kept in exquisite order by the monks. There are innumerable beds of pinks and roses and visitors are given a nosegay by the monk in attendance.

One of the most interesting features of the place is a bunch of seven venerable olive trees, some of them nineteen feet in circumference and so old that their turnks are kept shored up by stones. It is said that they are descendants of the original trees of the time of Christ and are unlike all other trees of the same variety in that country.

Two monuments in the garden are full of interest. One, a small pillar, marks the spot where Jesus was betrayed by Judas Iscariot, and a small rock shows the place where the three disciples, Peter, James and John, slept during their Master's agony.

The Church of the Holy Sepulchre occupies the space surrounding the tomb of Christ. This ancient edifice was begun by the crusaders in 1180, A. D., and it was largely added to at subsequent times.

The most imposing Easter celebration any where is the one which takes place in Rome Easter Sunday. Travelers journey thousands of miles to see it, and what they see is practically the same celebration which has been handed down for centuries by the laws of the Catholic church.

It is one of the few religious ceremonials actively participated in by the Pope, and the fact that he takes part draws tens of thousands of visitors to the Eternal City.

The queen of festivals, as Easter is called, in Rome, is ushered in by the firing of cannon from the castle of St. Angelo, and as early as 7 o'clock in the morning carriages containing the wealthy classes are pouring toward St. Peters'.

The altar is most richly decorated, and the whole vast structure is festooned with flowers emblematic of the day. The lights around the tomb and figures of St. Peter blaze brightly.

From a hall in the adjoining palace of the Vatican the Pope is borne into the church under the most imposing circumstances. Preparations for this entry are made many weeks in advance.

Seated in his sedia gestatoria, his vestments ablaze with gold, he is carried into the edifice. On his head he wears a tiara—a tall, round, gilded cap, representing a triple crown, and which is understood to signify spiritual power, temporal power and a union of both. Beside him are borne the flabelli, or large fans, composed of ostrich feathers, in which are set the eye-like parts of peacock feathers to signify the eyes or vigilance of the church. Over him is borne a silk canopy richly fringed.

After officiating at mass at the high altar the Pope is with the same ceremony borne back through the crowded church, and then ascends to the balcony over the central doorway. Rising from his chair of state and surrounded by his principal officers, he pronounces a benediction with indulgences and absolution.

Then printed slips of prayers blessed by the Pope are scattered among the vast assemblage. The people struggle to obtain possession of them. They are prized highly, and the common people, if they are lucky enough to get them, hand them down from generation to generation.

PARALYZING A FELON.

Of few men who have led the rough-and-ready life of the late Barnes Greeley —brother of the great Horace—can it be said that they have been under the influence of liquor but once in their lives, and that once with deliberate intent. He used to boast that his only potations were medicinal, says Kate Field's Washington.

"The one time," said he, "that I ever tasted liquor was when I had a big felon on my finger. Somebody said that a good drunk would cure me. I lost no time in filling up with the best that I could get, first going to my daughter's house and telling her what I intended to do. I loaded myself in town and then took a bottleful of whisky and went to my daughter's. I didn't like the whisky, but my prescription called for a downright, 'dead drunk' and I got it.

"For awhile I made things lively at my daughter's house, running things after the most approved manner of confirmed old topers. Then I sunk into oblivion, and they say it was a question for a time whether I would rise again or not. But I did, and the pain was gone from my felon, and it soon got well. It was a radical remedy, and if I ever get another felon I will go off on my second drunk, although I'm 75 years old."

IS IT THE WOMAN MAKES THE GOWN?

The quickness at repartee of Dean Smith of Barnard College has gained a reputation as well founded as that for her keen intellect.

At one of the Barnard teas a few afternoons since she was noticed by a young woman who had just come in and who had not seen Dean Smith since her Chicago University days, but recognized immediately the red velvet gown she had worn during the previous winter at like functions in the city of wheat and pork.

"It seems to me I know that back," the young lady remarked, not meaning to be audible.

"This is my last winter's back," coolly observed Dean Smith, as she turned with a self-possession sparkle in her eye, "Please look at my face."

"Do you believe that George Washington was refused by five women before he finally succeeded in getting married?" "Certainly. Why not? Very few women would care to be known as the Mother of their Country."

MYTHICAL RICHES.

Looking After the Heirs to Fortunes Abroad.

CLAIMS HAVING NO FOUNDATION.

An Occasional Estate Recovered in Germany or France, but Largest Hopes Apt to be Baseless.

There is flourishing on a downtown east side street in New York a Legacy Advance Company, with a counselor at French and German law as general manager. The offices are handsomely appointed, and apparently the business is profitable. Most of the clients of this company are of French or German birth, and if they can satisfy the general manager that they have an inheritance coming to them from Europe they may obtain from him an advance on it. The company will either buy the inheritance outright or it will collect it on commission. New York's foreign population is large, and many of its members are living a hand-to-mouth existence waiting for relatives at home to die and leave them money. The Legacy Advance Company will not discount the claims of prospective heirs because the laws in this country will not permit. In England this sort of discounting is a recognized business. "If it were only permitted here," said the manager of the company, "there would be millions in it, but it isn't, and we don't do any of that kind of business. I know of one company in London that has made over seven millions in those discounts."

This New York company finds that there is business enough in collecting inheritances, and some of the men and women who ask it for aid give it phantom chases. This is particularly true of the French claimants. They are always and on general principles expecting something from somebody. Every time the French papers announce the death of a wealthy man without heirs there is to be found some one in this city, says the Sun, who is ready to claim relationship and a part of the estate. The Legacy Advance Company takes no chances. When a claimant satsifies the manager that he has a reasonable claim to an inheritance abroad and is willing to give a power of attorney to collect it, the manager cables for information to his agent in the town where the estate happens to be. If he receives satisfactory evidence that the claim is a good one he makes an advance to the heir here and sets in motion his machinery for collecting the legacy. It is easier to collect legacies in Germanny than in France, and it is easier to collect them in either country than in the United States. Moreover it is cheaper. An estate may be settled in from six weeks to three months in Germany, whereas in this country it would take a year to bring about the same settlement.

"Most of the legacies that we have for collection," said the manager, "are small ones ranging from 2,000 to 10,000 marks. Occasinally we have a big legacy for collection, but generally big legacies prove to be myths. For instance, here is a letter that I have just received from a man in the West, who claims that the city of Amsterdam owes him $15,000,000. An ancestor of his settled there in 1795, he says, and died, leaving a big fortune, which the city appropriated, as there were apparently no heirs to claim it. This man writes that he has absolute proof that he is an heir to this estate. Unfortunately for him all such claims were declared void by a law passed in 1885. Perhaps were it not for that law he might be able to collect something. Who knows! As it is, however, he is wasting his time, and I shall have to write and tell him so."

"Do you have many bogus claims presented to you?" asked the Sun reporter.

"Yes, there are a good many such. Sometimes the claimant himself is fooled. Not long ago a well-dressed man called at our office and asked us to collect a claim for 30,000 marks from an estate that had been left in Switzerland. The man showed us his papers identifying him, and gave us a description of the property there, and complete history of it. We communicated with our agent in Switzerland, and found that an estate had been left just as this man had described, and that he was one of the heirs. We were taking the necessary steps to collect it when a tramp came into our office. He was shabbily dressed, and looked as if he had been kicking around the streets for months.

"'Are you collecting a legacy in Switzerland for Blank?' he asked.

"'We are,' I answered, surprised that this man should know anything about it.

"'Well, you are on the wrong track,' he said, 'because I am Blank, and the other man for whom you are acting is a fraud.'

"His appearance didn't tend to corroborate his claim but he told substantially the same story about the estate that the other man had told, and my curiosity was aroused. He said that the man whom we supposed to be the real Mr. Blank was, or rather had been, his servant. He had waited for an opportunity, and had then robbed his master of all his money and his papers. Armed with his papers he had been passing himself off as the real Mr. Blank. This tramp told such a circumstantial story that I was impressed by it. I got him a shave and then had him photographed. I sent this photograph, with the details of the case, to Switzerland, and my agent sent back word that the tramp was the real Mr. Blank and that the other man's claim was fradulent. The first man evidently got wind of the fact that he had been exposed, for he never turned up again."

Many of the clients of this company are women and frequently they permit their imaginations to run away with them when they describe their large estates abroad.

"Not long ago," said the manager, "a young Frenchman and his wife, whom he had married the day before, came to me and asked me to collect a legacy in France that was waiting for his wife. The Frenchman was jubilant over his good fortune. He had married a pretty girl and an heiress. I asked her for the details of this legacy. While the husband, full of pride, sat beside her and listened, the wife told me about this estate, what a fine old place it was, and how she had spent her childhood there. She located it definitely, described the house and the amount of ground around it and some of the old family furniture that belonged to her. Her story almost convinced me, and her husband was already planning how he was going to spend this fortune that had come to him by marriage. I sent to my agent and had the story investigated. It was pure fiction. There was no such estate as the young woman had described, and she herself wasn't known in the town where she had located it."

THE BUSY WOMAN'S GARDEN.

The busy woman wants for her summer garden such flowers as will give the largest amount of bloom throughout the season with the least possible amount of care.

One of the best annuals is the phlox. It is of the very easiest culture. It begins to bloom early in the season. If prevented from developing seed, it blooms all summer. It comes in a great variety of colors and shades, from pure white to deep crimson. The two finest varieties are the bright white and rose. Grow these colors in a bed by themselves, and you will be more pleased with the result than you will if you have half a dozen other colors in it.

The petunia is another easy grown plant. It blooms with wonderful freedom and keeps at it until frost comes. If you go over the bed once a month and cut off the ends of the old branches, the supply of flowers will be greatly increased, as new branches will be sent out, on which a great many flowers will be produced. The colors range through all shades of rose and violet to pure white. Many varieties are blotched and marked in peculiar and striking ways. Some of the newer sorts are beautifully fringed and very large.

The calliopsis is a charming flower. It gives a great profusion of most showy, brilliant blossoms, some of a rich golden yellow with a maroon blotch at the base of each petal, others all maroon. It is excellent for cutting, because of its long stems.

Every garden should have a bed of nasturtiums. If you want many flowers from this plant, do not give it a very rich soil. If you do, there will be a luxuriant growth of branches and foliage, but few blossoms. The dwarf varieties are best. This is an excellent plant to cut from. Its colors range from palest yellow to dark crimson and maroon.

Balsams are beautiful plants. Their flowers are like miniature roses in form, and they are produced in great numbers all along the branches. The foliage is also profuse, and a great deal of it must be cut away in order to give the flowers a chance to display their beauty.

Of course sweet-peas should be included in this list. So should the old morning-glory, which I consider our best flowering vine for general cultivation. It is of rapid growth, of the easiest culture, and what can be more beautiful than a great mass of it covered with its pink, white, crimson, and blue "glories"? It is a plant whose popular name is a most appropriate one. —Harper's Bazaar.

WANTED TO DIE RICH

Many years ago, according to one of the yarns of the sea told by mariners who claimed to have been present, a British ship having on board a large consignment of Spanish dollars for a house in Rio Janeiro was wrecked on the Brazilian coast. Hoping to save some of his precious cargo the Captain ordered some of the casks containing the gold brought on deck, but the vessel was so badly wrecked by the continuous pounding on the rocks that it was soon found necessary to take to the boats without any of the treasure. As the last boat was about to leave the ill-fated craft, one of the officers, to make sure that no one was left on board, went back to make a last tour of the ship. To his surprise, sitting beside one of the casks with a hatchet in his hand, he found one of the sailors.

"Hurry up!" cried the officer. "We came within an ace of going off without you."

"I'm not going," replied the sailor, giving the cask a hearty whack with the hatchet, bursting it open, and laughing with delight as the coin poured out around him. "I've always wanted die rich. I've been poor all my life, and this is my first and last chance. Go ahead. I'll stay here with my fortune."

Argue as he might, the officer could not persuade the fellow to leave the gold with which he played as a child with marbles, and he finally had to leave him to his fate.—Harper's Young People.

"Why, Rastus, I never expected to see you in jail!" "Nor, suh," said Rastus. "Me nuther, suh." "What are you here for?" "Keepin' chickens, suh." "Why, I didn't know that was against the law." "Well, suh, diss were a peculiar case, sub. You see, dose chickens blonged to anudder man, suh."

"Is Hawkins a generous man?" "Well—in his own way he is." "Ah! Sort of sui generis!"

PREHISTORIC RACE.

Many Relics of an Unknown People.

RECENT DISCOVERIES IN EGYPT.

Professor Petrie's Most Interesting Find in the Ancient Land of the Pharaohs.

The Sun's London cable says the soil of Egypt has just yielded up another secret which archæologists and the world at large will receive with the keenest interest. Professor Flinders Petrie, who is the greatest of modern Egyptologists, announces the discovery of a new race whose existence has hitherto been unsuspected in that ancient land

He has just returned from a three-months' search in the district beween Ballas and Nejadeh, thirty miles north of Thebes. He uncovered remains of several successive dynasties of great classical interest in the ruins of the ancient own Neub. They were discovered less than a quarter of a mile away from the remains of anoher city, which is utterly different in all its contents from anything heretofore found in Egypt. If the town had been found in Syria or Persia no one would have supposed it was connected with Egypt.

Not only was the town found, but also a series of cemeteries of the same race. Nearly 2,000 graves were excavated. Every object was noted in its position, and everything was preserved and marked by Petrie and his assistants. The result was most strange and inexplicable. Not a single Egyptian object was found — not a scarab, hieroglpyh, Egyptian bead, god or amulet, such as are abundant in the neighboring Egyptian town. Not a body was mummified or buried at full length. All were contracted, with their knees bent up to their arms.

The age of these people was the next problem. Little by little the explorer limited their epoch until he can definitely say they lived between the seventh and ninth dynasties, or about 3,000 B. C. They probably were a people who overthrew the Egyptian civilization at the close of the old kingdom and produced the dark age of the seventh and eight dynasties, when the Egyptians seem to have been oppressed by disaster. It is clear that the physiognomy of this race was fine and powerful, without a trace of prognathism. Their stature was remarkable, some being over six feet in height. The development of the legs points to their having been a hill race. Their hair was brown, wavy and not crisp. A prominent aqualine nose and long, pointed beard gave a strong resemblance to the Libyan and Amorite type.

One remarkable custom was the eating of portions of the bodies of deceased persons. The head was almost always severed from the shoulders, and the hands were often removed. Pottery was placed over the decapitated neck. In one place was a handful of ribs, in another a handful of arm bones, elsewhere a pile of vertebræ. The bones of several bodies were heaped together, and lines of bones were strewn around the pile, each with their ends broken off and the marrow scooped out. All these things point undoubtedly to ceremonial canibalism. It is to be inferred that this implied an ignorance of civilization. In many lines of pottery, flint working and bead making these people were the equals or superiors of the Egyptians.

Their arts were well advanced in most ways, but in two directions there was a low level. No writing was known beyond personal marks. Drawing and sculpture were in a rude condition. Metal, however, was well known. Copper chisels, or rather adzes, show that the people were familiar with woodwork, and traces of finely carved bedframes, with bull's feet, were found. Copper needles show that sewn garments were used, and copper hairpins were made. Flintwork was more developed than among the Egyptians. The forms of knives differ from any of the Egyptian race, and the exquisite machine-like flaking of them shows the highest skill.

Who this unknown race were and whence they came cannot yet be decided. Their pottery shows some resemblance to that of the Amorite period in Palestine. On the other hand, several connections point westward to Malta and Italy. Professor Petrie found ample evidence in the same neighborhood, which is a high plateau 1,400 feet above the present level of the Nile, of the existence of a race of men antedating all history by many thousands of years.

Large massive flints, beautifully worked and unworn, were discovered of exactly the same forms as those well known in the river gravels of France and England. The enormous age of these was shown by the black and brown staining on them, while others 5,000 years old by their side showed scarcely a tinge of weathering. Besides these, other flints of later Paleolithic type are found imbedded in the ancient gravels of the former high Nile.

"Excuse me, madam," said the paying teller, "but you have not endorsed this check. If you will write your name on the back of it, it will be all right." "Oh, of course," said the little woman. "I had forgotten." Then she endorsed the check "Sincerely yours, Janette Hicksworthy."

"This bump," said the phrenologist, feeling of Cadley's head, "shows that you are fond of out-of-door life." "You bet it does," replied Cadley. "I got that bump from falling off a bicycle while indulging in my love for out-of-door life."

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 14 1895

The representative of a French syndicate that is making some investments in California mines told a CALL reporter the other day that there is a great deal of idle capital in France that must seek investment abroad, and that the United States is a great field for financial opportunities. Judging from the amount of foreign capital invested, the European men of money are more alive to the excellent opportunities offered by this country than our own capitalists. The latter put entirely too much money into manufacturing, commercial and agricultural enterprises in the semi-civilized republics of Central and South America. The returns from some of these ventures are good, but oftener there are no returns. Under their unstable governments there is neither security of life nor of property in most of these republics, and the climate is also injurious to people from the temperate zone. There is no lack of opportunities for investment in the United States; and the stability of our government, the enlightenment of our people and the just administration of our laws make this country especially attractive to the foreign investor, who evidently places more value upon these advantages than the more venturesome American investor. We should develop our own vast resources before putting any money into foreign enterprises.

There is no denying that McKinley's boom has received a set-back in Ohio. The victory of the Foraker-Bushnell combination at the late convention regards the old Republican regime to the background and McKinley must recognize the new order of things if he desires the unwavering support of his State in the National Convention. The Republican managers seem to be well split on the question of a candidate for the first place on the national ticket. Carter favors Cameron of Pennsylvania, Clarkson wants to see Allison nominated, others are for Harrison. Morton also has supporters. Such Republican committeemen as have been heard favor some concession to the silver element in their party, and if they carry this point some of the Republican candidates will have to strech their legs considerably to make the straddle necessary to render them eligible. The "sound money" men, however, have a very good fighting chance.

Some of our exchanges are doubtful if a State employment bureau as proposed by Labor Commissioner Fitzgerald will accomplish the purpose for which it is to be established. The free employment bureau established by the State of Ohio a year or two ago has given very satisfactory results, and we do not see why employers and workingmen in California should not be benefited by a similar institution. It will do no harm, at all events, to give the thing a trial. Where cheap foreign labor is so firmly entrenched it seems to us that white labor needs all the help it can get. We have heard no objections to the bureau from the unemployed yet.

A suggestion that seems to be worthy of some consideration was offered by the San Francisco News Letter in its last issue. It is that the sentences of the Chinese now populating the State prisons of California be commuted and that the whole batch be at once deported as felons, under the McCreary to China.

Down in Kansas a murderer has asked the Governor for the privilege of being hanged. California murderers do not manifest this spirit, but it must be remembered that the alternative for them is not doom to remain for life in Kansas.

Dispatches tell of a woman who filled her stepson's shoes with boiling water and forced him to put them on. The legs were done to the bone and had to be cut off. Such incidents tend to check the growing disbelief in the existence of a hell.

The result of the Ohio State convention somewhat diminishes McKinley's chances of a Presidential nomination. Foraker holds the lines and Foraker is a man who drives hard political bargains.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

TRADE MARK

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING

EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.

FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

Two Year Three Crop Rotation.

Following is a report of a successful trial of a three crop rotation in two years on the University farm at Columbus, O. A crop of clover was cut for hay about June 10 last. The land was plowed June 12-16, put in good condition and planted to corn for fodder and ensilage. The corn was cut in September, giving a yield of about 9½ tons per acre. The land was easily put in condition and sown to wheat. In this case an old clover sod was the starting point, but it could as well have been a 1-year-old crop. If it is desired to continue this rotation, clover can be sown next spring in the wheat.

It will be noticed that the ground is plowed but once for the three crops. One objection to the plan is that this plowing comes in a busy time and when the weather is often hot. The time of planting is late, but not too late to secure a good crop for ensilage or dry fodder. Generally little cultivation after the corn has started would be necessary. If there should be a failure to secure a stand of clover, corn could be planted earlier in the spring.

Obstruction of a Grade.

Careful experiments have been made to ascertain how much obstruction a gentle grade even is to the movement of a loaded wagon. One estimate is that a rise of 1 foot in 44 will cut off one-fourth of the load. A rise of 1 foot in 24 cuts down the load one-half. A rise of 1 foot in 10 is such an obstruction that only one-fourth as much can be drawn as if the road were level.

Warned in Time.

"William," said Mrs. Youngwife from the head of the stairs to her husband, who had come home at an early hour in the morning, "there is some of my home-made cake in the pantry, a new kind that I made today. I put it where you can easily find it."

"All right, dear," responded Mr. Youngwife. "How considerate of you! I might have eaten some of it without thinking." And the grateful husband made a supper of cold beef.—Philadelphia Times.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of M. V. BARNES, An Insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of M. V. Barnes, the above named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, and that Saturday, the 29th day of June, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the courtroom of said Court, at the Court house, in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and he be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
[SEAL] By W. M. WILLIS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st, A. D. 1895.

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of JOHN BARNES, An Insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of John Barnes, the above named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, and that Saturday, the 29th day of June, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Courtroom of said Court, at the Court house in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and he be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
[SEAL] By W. M. WILLIS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st, A. D. 1895.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNDERSIGNED, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix, at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ALLIE R. BROWN, Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased.

Dated February 15, 1895.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Administratrix. aug 25

NOTICE.

Whereas, the consent in writing of the holders of two thirds of the capital stock of the Lone Pine Canal Company, a corporation, to change the principal place of business of said corporation from the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, to the town of Lone Pine, in said county and state, is on file herein. Notice is hereby given that on and after said place of business of said Lone Pine Canal Company will be at the town of Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on and after January 26th 1895.

By order of the Board of Directors.

DAVID HOLLAND, Secretary.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The co-partnership heretofore existing between R. W. Thomas of the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, and T. W. Hill of the same place under the firm name and style of "Thomas and Hill" heretofore conducting a general merchandising business at the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, is this day dissolved by the mutual consent of the said R. W. Thomas and the said T. W. Hill.

Witness our hands and the seals this 6th day of February, 1895.

R. W. Thomas
Thomas W. Hill

NEW FEE BILL.

CHAPTER CCVII.

An Act to establish fees of county, township and other officers, and of jurors and witnesses in this State.

[Approved March 28, 1895.]

The People of the State of California represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The following county, township and other officers shall charge and collect the following fees:

COUNTY CLERK.

On the commencement of any action or proceeding in the Superior Court, except probate proceedings, or on appeal thereto, to be paid by the party commencing such action or proceeding, or taking such appeal	$5 00
On the filing of a petition for letters of administration, testamentary, or guardianship five dollars, to be paid by the petitioner; provided, that at the time of filing the inventory and appraisement in any such proceeding there shall be an additional deposit of one dollar for each additional thousand dollars of the appraised valuation, in excess of three thousand dollars
On filing the petition to contest any will or codicil	3 00
On the appearance of any defendant, or any number of defendants answering jointly, to be paid upon filing the first paper in the action by him or them	2 00
On placing any action, except a mortgage proceeding, or default case, on the calendar for trial or hearing, to be paid by the party at whose request such action or proceeding is so placed	2 00
For every additional defendant appearing separately	1 00
The foregoing fees shall be in full for all services rendered by such Clerk in the cause, to and including the making up of the judgment roll.
On the filing of any notice of motion to move for a new trial or any civil action or proceeding, the party filing same must pay to the Clerk, in full for all services to be rendered in connection with said motion, except as hereinafter in this section provided	2 00
For issuing an execution or order of sale in any action	1 00
In all proceedings begun or not performed prior to this Act becoming a law, such fees or charges as were provided by the law at the time such proceedings were begun or acts performed.
The Clerk shall also charge and collect the following fees and compensation not above provided for:
For any copy of any record, proceeding or paper on file in the office of the Clerk, relating to any civil action pending in said Court, when said copy is made by him, per folio
For each certificate of the Clerk, under seal of the Court
For filing each claim in probate or insolvency proceedings
No fee shall be allowed or charged by the Clerk for services rendered in any criminal case.
For services rendered by the Clerk, not in connection with civil actions or proceedings in Court, he shall charge and collect, for the benefit of the county, the following fees:
For issuing marriage license, one half to be paid to the County Recorder	2 00
For filing and indexing articles of incorporation	1 00
For filing and indexing certificates of copartnership	1 00
For filing and indexing all papers to be kept by him, other than papers filed in civil or criminal proceedings in court, and official bonds and certificates of appointment, each	25
For issuing any license required by law, other than marriage license	1 00
For examining and certifying to a copy of any paper, record, or proceeding prepared by another and presented for examination, fifty cents and one cent per folio for comparing the said copy with the original.
For making satisfaction of order in judgment	25
For receiving and filing remittitur from Supreme Court	1 00
For administering each oath, without certificate, except in a pending action or proceeding	10
For taking any affidavit, except in criminal cases	25
For taking and approving each undertaking and the justification thereof, except in criminal cases	50
For examining records of files, for each hour	50
For taking acknowledgement of any deed or other instrument, including the certificate	50
For filing notices of appeal and appeal bonds, each	50

SHERIFF.

For serving any process, writ, order, or paper, except as hereinafter provided, required by law to be served by the Sheriff	1 50
For serving a writ of attachment, execution, or order for the delivery of personal property	1 00
For taking any bond or undertaking	50
For serving an attachment or execution on any ship, boat or vessel	3 00
For keeping and caring for property under attachment or execution such sum as the court may fix; provided, that no greater sum than two dollars per day shall be allowed to a keeper when necessarily employed.
For a copy of any writ, process, or paper actually made by him, when required or demanded according to law, per folio, ten cents; provided, that when a record of notices are furnished to him for posting, no charge shall be made for such copies.
For advertising sale of property and posting notice, exclusive of cost of publication, or furnishing notice for publication, each	50
For publication of notice in newspaper, the reasonable cost of publication, subject to the approval of the court.
For serving writ of possession or restitution, putting a person in possession of the premises, and removing the occupant	1 50
For subpoenaing witness, including copy of subpoena, each	25
For summoning trial jury of twelve or less	2 00
For each additional juror	10
For traversing in the service of any paper required by law to be served, for each mile actually and necessarily traversed, one way only, fifteen cents, when such travel can be made by rail, in other cases, twenty-five cents. No constructive mileage to be allowed.
For collecting money on execution, with or without levy, one per cent on the first thousand dollars or less, and one half of one per cent on all sums over one thousand dollars.
For executing and delivering Sheriff's deed	1 50
For executing and delivering certificate of sale	50
For transporting prisoners to county jail, actual cost of such transportation.
For executing and delivering any other instrument, per folio

RECORDER.

For recording every instrument, paper, or notice required by law to be recorded, per folio
For indexing every instrument, paper, or notice, for each name
For filing every instrument for record, and making necessary entries thereon
For each certificate under seal
For every entry of discharge, credit, or release on the margin of record, and indexing same
For searching the records of his office, for each year
For abstract of title, for each conveyance or incumbrance
For recording each map or plat where same is copied in book of record, for each course
For recording each map or plat, where same is not copied in a book of record
For figures or letters on maps or plats, per folio, ten cents; provided, that the fees for recording any map shall not exceed fifty dollars.
For taking acknowledgement of any instrument	50
For recording marriage license and certificate, to be paid by County Clerk	1 00
For recording transcript and all services in estray cases	1 00
For recording each mark or brand	50
For administering each oath or affirmation, and certifying the same	25
For filing, indexing and keeping each paper not required by law to be recorded	25

The Clerk, Sheriff, and Recorder shall account for all fees in this section provided for, and the Clerk, Sheriff and Recorder, unless otherwise provided by law, shall pay the same to the County Treasurer on the first Monday of the month following the collection, as provided in this Act.

County Officers must, and township officers may, demand the payment of all fees in civil cases, in advance.

SECTION 2. No fees or other compensation shall be paid for certificate of declaration to become a citizen of the United States, and for making a record thereof, or issuing a certificate of citizenship to become a citizen of the United States, or for making a record thereof; and no fees or other compensation shall be paid for filing the statement and affidavit of a committee or candidate voted for at any public election held within the State; and this section shall apply to all the counties in the state.

SECTION 3. All Acts or portions of Acts inconsistent therewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect immediately.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, to all persons having business with the offices of Clerk, Sheriff or Recorder of the County of Inyo that the above provisions of the Fee Bill are mandatory, and will be strictly enforced.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk and Recorder.

Independence, Cal., June 3, 1895.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, California. Location of Canal, near Lone Pine, Inyo County, Cal.

NOTICE—There are delinquent upon the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 8 levied on the 27th day of April, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective stockholders, as follows:

Names.	No. Cert.	No. Sh's.	Am't
T. C. Boland	3	300	$ 7 50
T. C. Boland	4	200	30 00
T. C. Boland	18	100	75 00
T. C. Boland	19	200	30 00
J. A. McKenzie	11	700	105 00
E. Robinson	1	500	75 00
E. Robinson	2	200	30 00
J. J. Gunn	12	200	30 00
P. H. Mack	17	300	45 00
Fred Spencer		75	11 25
R. E. Spencer		75	11 25
D. Holland		50	7 50

And in accordance with law, and an order of the Board of Directors, made on the 27th day of April, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary, will be sold at public auction, at the office of the said Company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, Cal., on Saturday, the 22nd day of June, 1895, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m., of said day, to pay said delinquent assessment thereon together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

DAVID HOLLAND, Secretary.

Notice.

Pursuant to an order of the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, Cal., passed on the 5th day of April, 1895, the attention of the public is called to the following sections of the County Government Act of 1893:

SECTION 41. The Board of Supervisors must not hear or consider any claim in favor of any person, corporation, company, or association against the County or Board of Pond, unless the same be itemized, giving in ordinary language particular services rendered, character of process served, upon whom, distance travelled, where and when, character of work done, number of days engaged, not rials furnished to whom, and quantity and price paid therefore, duly verified as to its correctness and that the amount claimed is justly due, is presented and filed with the Clerk of the Board within a year after the last item of the account or claim accrued. This section, as to itemizing, shall not apply to services rendered under section one hundred and forty-eight; provided, that such services are substantially stated, with their value, and verified as above. If in case of any claim, which requires itemizing, it be not so itemized, they shall cause notice to be given to the claimant, or his agent, of the fact, and give time to have the claim itemized and reverified.

SECTION 42. No account must be passed upon by the Board unless made out as prescribed in the preceding section and filed by the Clerk at least one day prior to the session at which it is asked to be heard.

NOTICE is hereby given that any claim which fails to comply with the above directions will be returned for correction, and consideration thereof laid over until the next succeeding regular meeting of the Board.

By order of the Board of Supervisors.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk of said Board.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

H. E. Wilkinson, Plaintiff, vs. Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now and heretofore existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of the defendant's wilful desertion of plaintiff, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein, which complaint is hereby made a part of this summons.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in said complaint, viz.: For a judgment dissolving said bonds of matrimony.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 10th day of April, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

FARROW'S MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA.

This is the Standard Military Encyclopedia of the world and the only work of its kind in the English language. It has the endorsement of the War Department and the leading military commanders of America and Europe. It is issued in three large octavo volumes of about 1000 pages each, printed on fine paper, from new electrotype plates, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. It is a complete library of military information both for military and non-military people. Every library should have it. Circulars sent on application. Good agents wanted.

MILITARY AND NAVAL BOOKS.

All the leading, up-to-date military and naval books. Price list furnished on application.

MILITARY-NAVAL PUBLISHING CO.,
611-621 Broadway, New York City.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-Officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "Union Hotel" building, Independence, Inyo county, Cal.

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc., given careful and prompt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases.

Brown & Willis,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery.
All kinds of dental work done according to latest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in R. E. Wright's Drugstore.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING IN ANY STYLE.
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 18, 1894.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administrator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PROPOSED NEW ROAD —IN— DIST. NO. 3.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to law and an order of the Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, made and entered on the 3d day of April, 1895, any and all non-consenting land owners and all others interested are hereby notified to appear before said Board on Saturday, the 6th day of July, 1895, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m., and then and there show cause, if any there be, why a new County Road here and hereinafter described, should not be laid out and established as follows, to wit:

Commencing at section corner on township line, between Townships 9 and 10 South, Range 34 East, Sections 3 and 34; thence running North, Magnetic Variation 15 deg. 1 min. E.

		Set stake 20 feet East of section corner and set stake 20 feet West of section line for a 40 ft. wide road; thence:
		Over land of Frank Fitzgerald.
1 North.	29.00	To S. E. corner of L. B. Kelsian; set stake 20 feet east and set stake 20 feet west of line as outside of 40 ft. roadway.
	60.00	To South west corner of E. H. Baxter, H. B. Kelsian west side and J. D. east side; set stake 20 feet west side, and set stake 20 feet east side
	80.10	To section corner to Sections 28, 27, 33, 34; set stake 20 feet south and set stake 20 feet west of line.
2 North.		Sections 21 and 28, T. 9 S. R. 34 E. M. D. M.
3 North.	20.00	T. N. W. corner of J. Shaw, J. P. Shaw on east side and H. B. Shaw on west side; set stake 20 feet east and set stake 20 feet west of line.
	60.00	To south line of J. Shaw and Charles Stewart, west side and J. L. Carl on the east side of the road; set stake 20 feet east and set stake 20 feet west of line.
	81.00	To corner of Joseph Hewitt, Stewart, J. L. Carl on west side and J. L. Stewart on east side.
		These sections being between Sections 21 and 28.
4 West.	20.00	To west line of J. J. Stewart on lands of Joseph Hewitt; thence to the east corner of Mrs. J. B. Stewart.
	60.00	To east bank of the Miller and Blake ditch.
	60.20	To intersection the west bank of the Blake and Miller ditch.
		Mrs. J. B. Stewart on north side and J. W. McMorry on south side. Set stake 20 feet north on west bank of ditch to north side of Road and set stake 20 feet south on west bank of ditch as south side of road.
5 West.	65.00	Enter alkali meadow—Mrs. J. B. Stewart.
	80.10	In section corner to sections 20, 29, 21, 28, over land of Mrs. Stewart.
	20.00	To northeast corner of Indian John Campbell's Homestead.
	24.00	To Big Pine ditch
	42.20	To old county road from Independence to Big Pine; Mrs. J. B. Stewart on north side and John Campbell (Indian) on south side. Set stake 20 feet north on land of Mrs. Stewart; and set stake 20 feet south on land of Indian John Campbell.

JOSEPH SELEY, Surveyor.
S. G. GREGG, Viewer.
JAMES JONES, Viewer.

Field Notes of a survey of a public road in Road District No. 3.

The proposed route South from the South and the commencing at the point of Commencement of Petition 14th day of January, 1894.

Commencing at Section corner on township line between Townships 9 and 10 South, Range 34 East M. D. M. to Sections 33 and 34 thence running; East Mag. Var. 15 deg. 15 min. E.

6 East	20.00	Twenty chains on Section to the Northwest cor. of James Herod's land over land owned by F. Fitzgerald and Geo. Graham, thence
7 South	80.00	Over land owned by James Herod and George Graham, thence
8 S. 45 deg. W.	21.00	Over Government land to the Northwest corner of James O'Conner's land, thence
9 South	29.00	On section line over land owned by James O'Conner at the Court road running from Independence to Big Pine.

JOSEPH SELEY,
County Surveyor
Inyo County.

March 30th, 1895.

By order of the Board of Supervisors
D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY.
L. MUNZINGER & CO., Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for outdoor parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Carpet Weaving.
MRS. J. P. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.
PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER
We have recently enlarged the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kinds of carpet and rug weaving.
Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished, at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.
Work guaranteed at low prices.

FRED GURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Fire arms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics Hall," Lone Pine.
FRED GURCKHARDT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY, the 8th day of March 18[illegible], and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death, in and to those certain lots, pieces or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The [illegible] half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the South-west quarter of Section [illegible], the North-east quarter of Section [illegible], all in Township No. 10 South, Range [illegible] East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

One-half interest of in and to [illegible] acre, or parcel of land situate in the said County of Inyo described as follows, to wit: [illegible] the South-east corner of the North-east quarter of Section No. 12, in Township No. 13 South, Range [illegible] M. D. M., and running thence [illegible] 8.10; thence [illegible] the centerline of the North Branch to Independence [illegible] street along its [illegible] beginning, six and [illegible] Block No. 9 in Independence.

Lots 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block [illegible] in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hallahan, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots No. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided of in and to that certain mining claim, lead or lode, situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "[illegible] Lode."

That certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, commencing at a point of the general corner of the [illegible] quarter and the North-east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South-west quarter and the South-east quarter of Section No. one (1) in Township No. three (3) North, Range [illegible] twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and seven-tenths (68 7-10) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; hence Northwesterly along a small branch or swale to a point twenty-four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North East quarter and the South east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North east quarter of the North-west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North, Range [illegible] twenty-one (21) West; running thence North forty-seven and eleven-tenths (47 11-2) rods; thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres. Together with ten shares of the Capital Stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM E. HUNTER,
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah deceased.

Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th 1895.

SAVE YOUR SHOES
AMES' SHOE PRO
tector is warranted to make the sole wear as long as the remainder of an ordinary shoe, and to save from 20 to 50 cents in repairs.
the shoe to keep it water-tight and spring it back to its original form, so that it will be as good as new for the wearer. Send stamp for pamphlet containing testimonials from people who have worn the shoe. Send 25 cents, postage prepaid, for a pair of Ames' Shoe Protectors, state size and whether for man's or boy's shoe.
AMES SHOE PROTECTOR CO., 36 Bedford St., BOSTON, MASS.
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING
Horseshoeing, General Jobbing
WAGON WORK
PIONEER BLACKSMITHS
Cor. Main St. & Depot
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROP.
Horseshoeing $2 00
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1895, will be held at the lodge room at Independence, as follows:

Saturday ..... January
" ..... February
" ..... March
" ..... April
" ..... May
" ..... June
" ..... July
" ..... August
" ..... September
" ..... October
" ..... November
" ..... December

THOMAS C. [illegible]
BERTRAND BRINE, [illegible]

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, JUNE 14 1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman ..... GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman ..... CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge ..... GEO. M. GILL.
Sheriff ..... ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk ..... DENNIS J. HESTON.
District Attorney ..... W. FORBES.
Assessor ..... P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer ..... W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner ..... I. J. WOODS.
Surveyor (en ticket) ..... JOSEPH EELEY.
Supt Schools ..... S. V. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist ..... FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist ..... V. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist ..... J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist ..... J. J. STEWART.
5th Supervisor Dist ..... FRANK FITZGERALD.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

MONDAY, June 10, 1895.

A. Cohn vs T. W. Carrol—Filed complaint. Issued summons.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Bullion silver, per oz	$ .67
Antimony	10
Copper, ingots in car lots	5¼
Pig lead	3 90

MARRIED.

DORRANCE—BELL—At Bishop, June 6, 1895, by Rev. S. W. Albone, Dr. C. E. Dorrance and Miss Lura N. Bell.

Jack Taylor was up from Lone Pine yesterday.

L. F. J. Wrinkle of Keeler was in town on Wednesday evening.

Full particulars of the Fourth of July celebration next week.

C. W. Craig went to Keeler to-day on a way to San Bernardino.

Tom. Carroll of Bishop spent several days in town this week.

Rich. Boland came up from Lone Pine yesterday, returning last evening.

BUTTER from the Fairview creamery can be obtained from H. Levy.

Ben T. Williams came down from Bishop last Monday and spent the week at Independence.

John Collins came down from Warm Springs yesterday and spent a couple of days in town.

S. G. Sneeden came down from Bishop on Monday's train and remained until Thursday morning.

Summer has evidently come to stay. The thermometer has been playing around the 100 degree mark for the past few days.

J. D. Lewis Esq., C. C. Inman and J. C. Campbell were down from Bishop last Saturday on business in the local Land Office.

The attention of land owners along the line of the proposed new road from Fish Springs to Big Pine is directed to the notice published this week.

Posted in one or more sheet of paper and sent to Crocker & Ace, 619 Montgomery St., San Francisco, for Ace's Shoe Protector, the wonderful saver of shoes.

Ben M. Leete came down from Bishop last Monday and made final proof on his timber culture claim. L. F. Yantell and T. J. Roberts came with him as witnesses.

Al Sandinger came up from Lone Pine yesterday morning and will remain in town a few days. He is badly crippled with rheumatism and is receiving medical treatment.

Chas. A. Richel and G. D. Hedgpenny of Los Angeles arrived at Independence today on their way to Bishop. They expect to visit Long Valley and spend several weeks hunting and fishing.

The Index has changed hands and it is reported that the new owners will remove the paper to Bishop when they take possession on July 10. The north end of the Valley has far more settlers than the country lower this way and will doubtless present a better field for journalistic enterprise.

Farmers in this vicinity complain that the army worm is working a great deal of devastation. Tomato and cabbage plants and potatoes are being entirely destroyed on some of the farms. It is said that Paris green has been tried without effect, and the only remedy seems to be in picking them off.

The Independence Sunday School will give a basket picnic next Tuesday, and all children are cordially invited to attend. Various games and other amusements will be provided for the little folks and every effort made to secure their pleasure. The picnic will be held at the old Post grounds Camp Independence.

News Items By "Special" Correspondent.

A carload of ore was shipped from the Lane mine last Saturday and another car Thursday morning. Six cars are waiting shipment on the dump and the out look is good for steady shipment.

Frank Wrinkler and a friend from Los Angeles have located a lead and silver mine in the Mountain Spring district and took out five tons of good ore last week. They are down seventeen feet on it at present.

The machinery for the Schee mine arrived last week, and was hauled out to Darwin by Sam Thomas' team. It is reported that the mine will suspend operations for several months, probably until September.

Mr. L. Darfee of Round Valley was a passenger on last Monday's stage en route to Los Angles.

E. C. Garlick also went away on last stage. He will go to Cleveland Ohio, and return in about two months.

A. Diaz of Lone Pine and W. T. Grant of Olancha visited Keeler last week and went out to the Coso mountains prospecting.

Miss M. E. Gale of San Jose visited friends in Keeler last Wednesday and returned to Hawthorne on Tourday's train. The young lady is a niece of Conductor Gale.

Mrs. K. Silva and daughter of Lone Pine are resting in Keeler for a short time.

Miss Lena Thompson of Independence is also visiting friends in Keeler.

Mrs. J. Fehman returned from Big Pine last Wednesday.

A party consisting of three men named J. Goss, Jas. Holland, and Chas. Graham, went to Mojave by private conveyance last Saturday.

L. Wimberly of Georges Creek is residing at Keeler for the present and has opened a livery stable.

J. J. Guon shipped a car of rich silver ore by yesterday mornings train.

John Dunphy will ship a carload of good ore next week. Neil McLean starts to haul it from Cerro Gordo Friday.

J. F. Robinson of Darwin has gone to Cerro Gordo to work for Mr. Boland.

Rev. J. A. Davis held two meetings in Keeler last week for the benefit of sinners, and the meetings were well attended. He is a very bright speaker and sings extra well and is a fine performer on the guitar. It is his intention to visit Darwin in a short time.

V. H. Cass who is carrying the mail between Darwin and Panamint, was in town last week. He is sub-contractor under Mr. Thomas Boland.

J. G. McLean has quit work at Darwin at the Schee mine and gone to Lone Pine.

C. Margras of Cerro Gordo is in town.

Henry Mettler of Darwin is in Keeler, and is the latest member of the Lakeside whist club. Henry is a good whist player.

W. H. Monahan of Modock came in Wednesday and will go to Big Pine in a few days. He shipped several tons of rich rock.

T. A. McKenzie went to Lone Pine Wednesday.

Dave Holland and Arthur Smith have gone out on a prospecting trip. They will take in the Modock country and also the Mountain Spring district before they return.

T. Carroll has quit work at Cerro Gordo and is in Keeler for the present.

Mrs. J. Barnes returned to Keeler a few days ago after a lengthy visit at Independence and Lone Pine. She is much improved in health.

John Barnes has sold his elegant piano to parties in Independence.

Geo. T. Mills paymaster on the C. & C., came down over the road on Wednesday and returned to Hawthorne Thursday. He says that times are looking up in the mining out look in Inyo County and also throughout the State of Nevada.

Hot weather and news very scarce
More anon
"SPECIAL"

Childrens Day.

Last Sunday was Childrens Day throughout the United States, and the services in all the churches were adapted to their young minds. Music and flowers were of course essential to that day's programme and the children themselves were undoubtedly the sweetest buds of all. The Sabbath school of the M. E. Church of which Mr. H. E. Wilkinson is Superintendent, gave the people of Independence a treat in the scope of a Childrens Festival. The little folks gave an interesting programme, consisting of recitations and songs, all of the Sabbath School both great and small contributing to the evening's entertainment. Mr. Wilkinson in a few well-chosen remarks made a plea for our Sabbath schools and besought the congregation to take a livelier interest in the work being carried on there. The "Childrens Festival" was deeply appreciated by a large congregation.

To The Public.

I have been informed that parties at Independence have been selling poor butter as my production. My butter is put up in squares with the words, "Fairview Creamery" in capital letters, stamped across the face. It is always wrapped in butter parchment and packed in boxes bearing the creamery stamp. Butter prepared in any other way without stamp or wrapped in cloth is not genuine. I have been using my stamp for over two years, and not a square ever leaves the factory without being printed.

W. D. ROBERTS

Round Valley, May 31, 1895.

Ten Dollars Reward

The above reward will be paid for information as to the whereabouts of the following described stock, which were lost at Rose Springs, near Haiwai, on May 15. One bay horse branded J. One bay horse branded AR. One bay mare branded JH. One gray mule branded X. One black horse-mule branded P. The finder will please communicate with this office or with A. W. Eibeshutz, Independence, Cal.

A Big Mining Sale.

The transfer of the mines in Silver Star district from the present owners to Senator Wolcott of Colorado is all but accomplished. Last month C. J. Hills, the confidental and expert of Senator Walcott, made a thorough examination of the property, and it is presumed his report was more than favorable, as Mr. Wolcott sent the following telegram to J. A. Yerington:

DENVER, June 7, 1895.

J. A. Yerington, Carson City: Have the owners or representatives of Silver Star mines meet me in Carson on Tuesday.

HENRY G. WALCOTT.

Accordingly all the members of the Douglas Company—consisting of W. J. Douglas, Thomas Pepper, Geo. Fettler, Dan Robb and E. Grassie, Ed Brown, owner of the Hardscabble, John Fleming and Frank Pedrassi, owners of the Juniata and Denuvia, left on Monday's train for Carson. About twenty five claims are included in the sale, those above mentioned being part of them. Senator Walcott is one of the best-known and most successful mining men in the United States. His experts have made a thorough examination of the mines and on their report the sale is made. Esmeralda county is to be congratulated on the fact that a man like Mr. Walcott thinks enough of our mines to invest so large an amount of money in them.

The benefits of this sale to the county are incalculable. The purchase price is said to be $750,000, and large additional expenditures must be made in the erection of mills, bringing in water, building roads, etc. The owners of the mines are all poor, hard-working men, and this sale will place them in comfortable circumstances, and allow them to work other mines in the district. It will take several months for the new owners to get down to systematic work, but we predict—and everything warrants the prediction—that within one year Silver Star district will be the busiest camp in the State of Nevada. This is the first piece of really good news that it has been our pleasure to record in a long time, and we trust that it is but the harbinger of other joyous tidings from Candelaria, Silver Peak, Aurora and Pine Grove. The successful consummation of this sale is due largely to to the untiring energy of Jas. A. Yerington. He was limited by the terms of his bond to sixty days in which to place a property that other promoters would require six months to sell, and too much credit cannot be given our young townsman for his efforts in the matter.—Bulletin

T. Webb, Norm. Mors, H. Giles and Harry Cook made their final round up last week and started for Long Valley last Monday with their cattle.

Independence Celebration.

JULY FOURTH 1895.

MORNING EXERCISES.

Prayer ..... S. W. ALBONE
Song, "Red, White and Blue" ..... CHOIR
Instrumental music, Mrs. F. E. DENNISON
Oration
Song, "Star Spangled Banner" ..... CHOIR
Recitation ..... BLANCHE BUNNEY
Song ..... IRMA WEBB
Duet—Violin and Piano .....
Miss ETTA WOOD and Miss HULDA HARRI
Song, "America" ..... MULTITUDE

AFTERNOON SPORTS.

Girls Race, 10 years and under	$2 50
" " over 10 and not over 14	3 00
Boys Race, 10 years and under	2 50
" " over 10 and under 14	3 00
Potato Race, free for all	5 00
3 Legged Race	3 00
Sack Race	3 00
Indian Pony Race	5 00
Chinaman's Race	2 50
Tug of War, Married vs Single Men	5 00
Saddle Horse Race, free for all	30 00

☞ Entrance fee, $2 50; 3 to enter, 2 to start. Entry book now open with Secretary B. H. Yindell; closes 12 M., July 4, 1895.

GRAND BALL IN THE EVENING.

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.

☞ First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

BIG PINE HOTEL.

BIG PINE · CAL

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates

☞ Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modoc, Cal.

FOR SALE.

THE WHITNEY HOUSE

—The only hotel in—

LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL

Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address

MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the ton or ton.

Livery Accommodations

G. I. MAINS, Proprietor.

The newest Style

OF

Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies
Wear, etc., etc.

AT

L. WOOD

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Graham Flour, etc., constantly on hand

CANDIES,
PEANUTS
WALNUTS,
TOYS

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get the

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, DRESDEAN WARE.

[Official.]

Notice To Tax-Payers.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT I have received from the Auditor of the County of Inyo, State of California the Assessment Roll for the year A. D. 1894-5, that the taxes on all personal property secured by real property, and one-half the taxes on all real property, will be due and payable on the first Monday in October and will be delinquent on the last Monday in November next thereafter, at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto fifteen per cent will be added to the amount thereof; and that if said one-half be not paid before the last Monday in April next at six o'clock p. m. an additional five per cent. will be added thereto; that the remaining one-half of the taxes on all real property will be payable on and after the first Monday in January next and will be delinquent on the last Monday in April next thereafter at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto five per cent. will be added to the amount thereof; that all taxes may be paid at the time the first installment as herein provided is due and payable.

A. M. GIVEN,
Tax Collector.

oct5-tf

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER, General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.	From Mound House No. 1		To Mound House No. 2.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Mound House	10.50 a. m.		5.20 p. m.
Dayton	11.25 a. m.		4.45 p. m.
Wabuska	1.40 p. m.		2.35 p. m.
Hawthorne	Ar. 5.00 p. m.	Lv.	11.00 a. m.
	No. 3		No. 4
	Leave—		Arrives—
Hawthorne	6.00 a. m.		7.25 p. m.
Wellington	7.1 a. m.		6.15 p. m.
Sodas Springs	7.50 a. m.		5.35 p. m.
Belleville	8.10 a. m.		4.55 p. m.
Candelaria	9.40 a. m.		3.50 p. m.
Benton	1.30 p. m.		11.50 a. m.
Bishop Creek	3.10 p. m.		9.50 a. m.
Alvord	.05 p. m.		8.55 a. m.
Independence	4.35 p. m.		7.25 a. m.
Lone Pine	5.20 p. m.		6.10 a. m.
Keeler	Ar. 7.00 p. m.	Lv.	6.0 a. m.

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., while connection at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (25 miles), Bodie (32 miles), Loundy and Bridgeport.

AT LANDING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's tri-weekly stages leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, for Downieville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's line of Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Mills valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (7 miles), Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles).

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave, WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeer, MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER, Propr.

JOHN B. CLARKE,

Successor to John Clarke,

—PROPRIETOR—

John Clarke's Bishop Stables,

BISHOP, CAL.

First-class Turnouts of Every Kind
Fine horses and Carriages.
horses Boarded for any Time
Best of Care and Attention

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.

Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.

O. I. MAINS Pro
feb12tf

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS. WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

☞ All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

0-m RENO, NEVADA

BIG TOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP,

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

INDEPENDENCE MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

☞ arties supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.

j19-tf

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

☞ Buyers and consumers should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9 1895.
j164tfn

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE, INYO Co. Cal.

PROVISIONS

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

BELL'S Flouring Mills

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that satisfies.

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Crushed on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

The latest investigations by the U. S. and Canadian Governments show the Royal Baking Powder superior to all others in purity and leavening strength.

Statements by other manufacturers to the contrary have been declared by the official authorities falsifications of the official reports.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL ST., NEW-YORK.

OVERHEARD IN THE MANAGERIE.

"If this place should catch fire what would you do?" asked the Giraffe of the Elephant.

"I'd pick up my trunk and run for the entrance. What would you do?"

"I'd go to that window and slide down my neck to the sidewalk," said the Giraffe, with a wink at the monkeys.—Harper's Young People.

Weinstock, Lubin & Co

400 to 412 K St.,

Sacramento, Cal.

Largest General Retail House on Coast.

Wearing Apparel of all kinds for men, women, and children; Dry Goods, Shoes, Hats, Millinery, Valises, Furniture, Carpets, Crockery, Notions, Stationery, Silverware, Toys, Household Supplies, etc.

Catalogue Free.

A handsome illustrated catalogue about our goods and prices sent free to any address. Tens of thousands of customers find it profitable and satisfactory to buy through this book.

TERMS CASH.

Enclose money for goods with order, and if to be sent by mail allow for postage. Any balance left over will be returned.

If interested in any of the items below, order promptly, giving item number.

A163. Children's narrow ribbed cotton Hose, fast black, double heels and toes; sizes, 6 to 9. Three pairs for 50c, which is much below their real worth. 50c

A164. Women's fine ecru cotton Vests, low neck, sleeveless, and run with silk tape. Price, 16c, which is less than value; postage, 2c. 16c

A165. Japanese decorated hangers, with three pockets, for the wall, 10 inches wide and 4 feet long. Price, 7c; being heavy, the postage is 8c. 7c

A166. Red Flannelettes, with small black figures; width 18 in. Price, 16 yards for $1.00. $1.00

A167. White twilled crash Towelling 15 inches wide. Special price, 25 yds for $1.00. $1.00

A168. Overshirts of good quality flannelette in medium and light colors. These shirts are of generous size, well sewed, and not mean in any particular; turn down collar and side pocket; boys' sizes, 12 to 14 inches; men's sizes, 14½ to 17 in. neck. Price, 25c. 25c

A169. White Nainsook, neat checks, fair quality. Price, 20 yds for $1.00. $1.00

A170. Ladies' low-cut Oxford Ties, in tan leather or black kid, with patent leather tips. Price, $1.50. Postage, 12c. $1.50

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN & CO.,

9 Sacramento, Cal.

THE GOD OF FORTUNE.

The Chinese deity of fortune is always represented as a jolly god and the rich votive offerings which cover his altars are speaking testimonials to his popularity. On the 2d of the second month a special festival is held in his honor, on which occasion his temples are crowded with worshipers, who manifest a devoutness which is strangely wanting in the serivce offered to the less material deities.

Feasts of fat things are greedily presented to secure his favor, and, not content with leaving the lots on the knees of the god, his practical-minded worshipers seek to lift the veil which conceals his counsels from mankind. For this purpose they adopt a curious device.

In some open space or market square a large wooden cannon, loaded with a small charge of powder and a circular rattan wad, is fired perpendicularly into the air. As the wad descends the surrounding crowd struggle to catch it, in the belief that he who is successful will enjoy the blessings of peace and plenty during the ensuing year.—Good Words.

THAT LUMP in a man's stomach which makes him irritable and miserable and unfit for business or pleasure is caused by indigestion. Indigestion, like charity, covers a multitude of sins. The trouble may be in stomach, liver, bowels. Wherever it is, it is caused by the presence of poisonous, refuse matter which Nature has been unable to rid herself of, unaided. In such cases, wise people send down a little health officer, personified by one of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, to search out the trouble and remove its cause.

Richard Green's Escape.

By WILLIAM M'KENDREE BANGS.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association.]

CHAPTER I.

"Pardon me, sir," Richard said to Mr. Joosten.

It occurred to Richard Green one day some years ago that the life in New York which he had led since he had come to a self supporting and a self reliant age, was likely to be only a humdrum and commonplace one, and he forthwith determined with a somewhat reckless disregard of the cost to seek adventure afield, and he had traveled pretty much all over the world, making his way as best he could and moving on from place to place. He had, being in Australia and no more at peace with himself there than he had been at home, shipped before the mast upon a vessel bound for the Sandwich islands and various ports and San Francisco; but, unfortunately, the mate of the ship did not share the appreciation Richard Green had for himself, and he found so great a pleasure in maltreating Green that the latter, ever ready to escape the ills he knew of, promptly deserted upon their arrival at Honolulu, being able to take with him none of his belongings, and in a day or two Green, who had kept a sharp but surreptitious watch upon the shipping in the harbor, saw his good vessel sail away into the ocean and for home.

Richard then was happy; but he was in a bad way. He was among strangers, without clothing and almost without money. He thought he could find employment on some other ship; but to his dismay he found none going the way he wanted to go, and he was willful and determined in this as in other matters, and he would not go where he might. He was unwilling to seek help of the American consul, and was not sure, indeed, that he had a right to ask it; but he boldly took a room far beyond his means at the best hotel in the city and with characteristic boldness and nerve sought occupation which would enable him to live until some opportunity to get away should offer itself. Work, however, he could not find, and how soon he might be turned away from the hotel he did not know.

At length one morning when he had become almost desperate there arrived at the hotel a singular looking man. He was tall and very stout, very red of face, with gray hair and a hearty good natured way about him in spite of an air of general weakness. He looked like a man who would be easily crushed, or who would quickly retreat before the onslaught of any enemy. He was clothed simply but coolly in a suit all of linen, and he had upon his head a broad brimmed hat of soft felt.

The clerk of the hotel plainly knew him, for he received him with great show of deference. A person of quality, Richard thought.

"Well, Mr. Joosten," the clerk asked, "how are matters on the island?"

"Oh, troublesome," Mr. Joosten answered, "troublesome," as he leaned heavily on the counter and slowly mopped his head with an enormous handkerchief.

"So things are not going easily, Mr. Joosten? What is the matter? Mrs. Joosten"——

"She is not troublesome, but other things, they are all very troublesome," Mr. Joosten replied very slowly and somewhat ponderously. Richard Green drew closer to the two. There was something about the man which interested him. Mr. Joosten's English was good, but Green thought he could detect a peculiar foreign accent which was not unpleasant.

"Shall I send you to your room?" the clerk asked.

"No; I have no time. It would be troublesome. I must be about my business. There is need."

"Supplies again, sir?"

"No, a man. I have had to dismiss, discharge my superintendent. It is very troublesome, this plantation, very," he went on helplessly.

Richard pricked up his ears. Here might be the very opening he had been seeking.

"Oh," the clerk responded, apparently sympathizing deeply with Mr. Joosten, "I thought your superintendent was so good a one."

"He was, he was," answered Mr. Joosten almost with a sigh. "He was the best I ever had. Oh, but he was a good man, a good man, very! But he did steal. Phew! I do not know how much—a great deal, a great deal. He was very clever."

"Do you know where to find a man who will do?"

"No, but I shall find him. I must seek him carefully, carefully. It is very troublesome, all of this, all."

"Pardon me, sir," Richard said to Mr. Joosten; and then, turning quickly to the clerk, he added; "won't you be good enough to introduce me to this gentleman?"

"Certainly," the clerk replied, and he did.

"Mr. Green," the clerk continued, "is an American left here by accident."

"So you are an American—yes?" Mr. Joosten said musingly, and he looked Richard over carefully.

"I could not fail to overhear your conversation," Richard answered, a little embarrassed by Mr. Joosten's close scrutiny; "perhaps—you—perhaps, I can do the work you want done."

"So? It may be, but it is not easy."

And Mr. Joosten walked slowly away. Then he turned again to Richard: "We shall see—it may be. Good morning."

Mr. Joosten walked slowly toward the the door. As he neared it he turned again and looked furtively but sharply at Green. Richard was depressed.

"Do not be disappointed," the clerk said to him. "He has gone away to think only. He may come back and want you to go with him today."

Although Green hardly dared to hope that the clerk might be right, he did not go out as usual that morning, and a little before noon he was gratified to see the old gentleman return. Mr. Joosten sought him out.

"So you are an American? You are quick?"

"Yes," Richard answered. "I think so."

"You can work—you can work very hard?"

"I am well and strong. I can certainly work."

"I cannot pay much—no, not much."

"That need make no difference," said Green. "You can wait until you see how much I shall be worth to you."

"It will be very troublesome to talk it all over again."

"I shall try to make it very easy for you," Richard replied calmly enough, although he was not quite clear whether he ought to laugh or be angry.

"When can you come if I—if I think it best? Soon, or shall I have to wait?"

"At any time. I can come at once."

"At once? Good! Let us go, then," he said, apparently glad to have the matter so soon settled, and that very afternoon they were on board Joosten's heavy and slowgoing sailboat bound for the plantation on an island distant not many hours' sail. At about nightfall they made the landing, but it was so dark when they had traversed the little distance to the house that Richard could distinguish little of the surroundings. Mr. Joosten preceded him through the long, wide hall, and without ceremony ushered him into the family sitting room.

"I have come back," he said simply.

His wife, who was the only occupant of the room, except a maid who sat quietly sewing, rose to greet him. She was a large, motherly woman, Richard had time to notice, with wavy gray hair and a face kind, it is true, but as strong as Joosten's seemed weak. She was English, Richard thought.

"I am very glad," she answered. "I did not expect you so soon. And this gentleman?" she asked kindly.

"Will he do? Tell me will he do? I do not know."

"But what is he to do, Hans?"

Her reassuring smile saved Richard from any possible embarrassment.

"Why, be our new superintendent, of course. It will be very troublesome if you say he will not do."

She walked over to Green and took him by the hand. She looked keenly at his face.

"Do?" she said. "He will surely do. You are very welcome, Mr."——

"Green," Richard answered quickly. "You are very kind," he went on. "I shall try very hard to please you."

"Then it is all settled," Mr. Joosten said in a relieved way. "Tomorrow I shall"——

But at this moment he was interrupted by a young man who came in hurriedly without knocking.

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Joosten.

"They want to see him," he answered; "a lot of them."

"It is too bad," said Mrs. Joosten; "and supper must be ready—I am so hungry."

"Go quickly, Hans," Mrs. Joosten said to him as she pushed him gently toward the door. "It cannot take long."

Mr. Joosten went, but plainly much against his will.

"That sort o' thing will be part of your duties," she said to Richard. "The men need a deal of managing."

"Is it very difficult?" Green asked.

"No; not if you are strong with them. And you are strong, I can see that you are."

Mr. Joosten was gone for some time. When he returned he was very warm and his face was more flushed than even it usually was.

"What is the matter?" his wife asked him. "What do they want now?"

"I shall give up. I shall go away," was all that Mr. Joosten said in reply.

"No, you shall never give up," she said with determination, but calmly; "but what is it?"

"They tell me I must not send Fawcon away; that I must bring him back."

"And what did you say to them?"

"I told them I would see," he answered, apparently afraid that his wife would not approve.

"Oh, Hans!" she said reproachfully.

"But what could I do?" he asked helplessly. "I was so hungry and so tired."

His distress and uncertainty were so apparent that Green was about to beg him not to let his engagement of him interfere with anything he might wish to do, but at a glance from Mrs. Joosten he was silent.

"We shall fix it all," she said. "And now you tired men must have supper."

"It is all very troublesome," Mr. Joosten said, as he led the way to the supper room.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Are you married?" said the manager to a man who was looking for a situation. "No, sir." "Then I can't employ you. I have a place into which I could put you, but we engage only married men." "May I ask the reason of this discrimination? Is it that families may be provided with support?" "Not at all. It is because we find that married men know better how to obey than bachelors."

MONEY, BANKING, AND CURRENCY.

Let us assume for the sake of illustration that the storekeeper's $10,000 in orders came finally into the possession of his debtors; that every man who held one of them owed him a sum of money equal to the face value of the order. The result would be that, through the agency of the speculator, the storekeeper would obtain payment of the debts due him. The farmers, by using the orders, would pay their debts in grain, in horses, in old accounts in interest money in products of various kinds. Barter would be simply facilitated by the use of this paper. The speculator himself might not employ any coin in repaying the storekeeper. As we have seen he might send his check to the storekeeper to pay off the orders he had obtained from him and it might easily be that the bank on which this check was drawn would hold a note owing by the storekeeper who had in this way paid for goods which he had purchased. The check would then be used by the storekeeper to pay off the note. Or the check on the bank might be presented to it through another bank on which in turn the first bank might hold a check. Between these two banks there would be a settlement of the difference between the two checks in money. For example: If the check drawn by the speculator to the order of the storekeeper was for $10,500—the $10,000 of orders and $500 half of the profit of the transaction—it might be sent to a second bank for deposit, or in payment of the storekeeper's note for that amount or for smaller amount. If the amount of the note were less than the check, the bank would simply give the storekeeper credit for the difference. Not a dollar of money would pass unless the storekeeper desired a settlement, and then he would receive the balance due him in coin, or in another check, or in bills. The check on the first bank would not necessarily be paid in money when it was presented by the second bank; the first bank might, and if the two banks were located in a city it probably would, hold a check against the second bank. I am now speaking of single transactions for the sake of simplicity. The truth is that to fairly represent the transactions between two banks situated in any considerable city, this single illustration would have to be multiplied by tens, or hundreds, or thousands, according to the size of the city and the volume of its transactions. The demand on the first bank would be for $10,500. If the demand on the second bank held by the first bank was equal to that, there would be simply an offset, and the accounts between the two would be settled without the passing of a single dollar.—Harper's Weekly.

THACKERAY'S JOKES.

While Thackeray was delivering in Boston his lecture on the "Four Georges" he was a constant guest of George Ticknor, the author of a work on Spanish literature. Though the two men were great cronies, they disagreed on many a point.

Ticknor was small, but combative. Thackeray towered above him and generally managed to have the last word. Mr. Healy, in his "Reminiscences of a Portrait Painter," tells a good story of Thackeray's humorous way of ending a discussion.

The discussion had been very lively—it was about some point in history—when Thackeray, suddenly putting a hand on each shoulder of his host and looking down upon him, exclaimed:

"It would never do for two such broken-nosed old coves as we are to fall out and quarrel!"

A general laugh ended the dispute. Thackeray, when a boy, had his nose broken by accident; whereas Tinckor, by a freak of nature, had a queer little pug nose that had a broken look.—Youths' Companion.

A PARISIAN JEST.

There are some very funny fellows in Paris, and many of them like nothing better than to play their jokes on entire strangers. One of these walking along one of the largest business streets one day saw before a clothing shop a great placard stating that the concern had 100,000 overcoats for sale.

Entering the shop the joker asked the man in charge if he were very busy.

"No," replied the salesman. "What can I do for you?"

"I see," said the jester," that you have 100,000 overcoats for sale, and I thought I'd like to try them on."

"I can understand his marrying her; she's worth a million, but how she can marry him puzzles me. He's a blockhead." "H'm! His golden and her wooden wedding, eh?"

MORE HASTE, LESS SPEED.

There is a natural and very strong desire in the spring and early summer to get rid of underwear and overwear, so that the fresh air may thoroughly refresh. But the worst colds of the whole year are taken, and especially at open windows, where the drafts are strongest and a chill the surest. It is there where lumbago sets in. It is just the condition and circumstance to make such an attack sure. It is just the time also when St. Jacobs Oil should be handy for immediate use. It is a time, too, when it makes its surest cures. For lumbago it is a certain remedy.

These balloon sleeves evidently come of a desire to widen women's sphere.

BEWARE OF OINTMENT FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAINS MERCURY.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

☞ Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

"That lady over there? Oh, yes, she is very clever. She has mastered three languages and her husband."

I could not get along without Piso's Cure for Consumption. It always cures.—MRS. E. C. MOULTON, Needham, Mass., Oct. 22, '94.

It is well to hope for success, but much better to deserve it.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Gushing is excusable in immature girls and oil wells.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

SERVED IN TWO WARS.

THE GRIP ALMOST WON WHERE THE BULLET FAILED.

Our Sympathies Always Enlisted in the Infirmities of the Veteran.

(From the Herald, Woodstock, Va.)

There is an old soldier in Woodstock, Va., who served in the war with Mexico and in the war of the rebellion, Mr. Levi McInturff. He passed through both these wars without a serious wound. The hardships, however, told seriously on him, for when the grip attacked him four years ago it nearly killed him. Who can look on the infirmities of a veteran without a feeling of the deepest sympathy? His townspeople saw him confined to his house so prostrated with great nervousness that he could not hold a knife and fork at the table; scarcely able to walk, too, and as he attempted it, he often stumbled and fell. They saw him treated by the best talent to be had—but still he suffered on for four years, and gave up finally in despair. One day, however, he was struck by the account of a cure which had been effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He immediately ordered a box and commenced taking them. He says he was greatly relieved within three days time. The blood found its way to his fingers, and his hands, which had been palsied, assumed a natural color, and he was soon enabled to use his knife and fork at the table. He has recovered his strength to such an extent that he is able to chop wood, shock corn and do his regular work about his home. He now says he cannot only walk to Woodstock, but can walk across the mountains. He is able to lift up a fifty-two pound weight with one hand, and says he does not know what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for others, but knows that they have done a great work for him.

He was in town last Monday, court day, and was loud in his praises of the medicine that had given him so great relief. He purchased another box and took it home with him. Mr. McInturff is willing to make affidavit to these facts.

The proprietors of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills state that they are not a patent medicine, but a prescription used for many years by an eminent practitioner who produced the most wonderful results with them, curing all forms of weakness arising from a watery condition of the blood or shattered nerves, two fruitful causes of almost every ill to which flesh is heir. The pills are also a specific for the troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, all forms of weakness, chronic constipation, bearing down pains, etc., and in the case of men will give speedy relief and effect a permanent cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature. They are entirely harmless and can be given to weak and sickly children with the greatest good and without the slightest danger. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Bangs have practically disappeared in Boston, whence of course comes the announcement that the belle now wears her brow decollete.

A TERRIBLE VISITANT.

Pain is always a terrible visitant, and often domiciles itself with one for life. This infliction is preventible, in cases of rheumatism, by a timely resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which checks the encroachments of this obstinate and dangerous malady at the outset. The term "dangerous" is used advisedly, for rheumatism is always liable to attack the vital organs and terminate life. No testimony is more conclusive and concurrent than that of physicians who testify to the excellent effect of the Bitters in this disease. Persons incur a wetting in rainy or snowy weather, and who are exposed to draughts, should use the Bitters as a preventive of ill effects. Malaria, dyspepsia, liver and kidney trouble, nervousness and debility are also among the ailments to which this popular medicine is adapted. For the infirmities, soreness and stiffness of the aged it is highly beneficial.

A great many men do not get the right kind of neckwear.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

EXPOSURE

to wet and cold is very often the first step to Pneumonia, Consumption, Rheumatism or other serious diseases. Often we say, "Oh, it's nothing," when really our health for years or for life is hanging in the scale. A cold is the thin edge of the wedge of disease. To keep it out is important—and time is everything. When your temperature has been suddenly reduced by wet or cold take a teaspoonful of

PAIN-KILLER

in a half glass of water or milk (warm if possible). Reaction begins at once, relief is immediate and you will have no cold, cough, sore throat or stiffness to reckon with. This sounds easy, and is easy if you have the Pain-Killer at hand. Get a bottle and get acquainted. It kills all forms of pain and is worth its weight in gold. Sold everywhere, at 25 cents a bottle. Prepared only by

PERRY DAVIS & SON, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Since 1861 I have been a great sufferer from catarrh. I tried Ely's Cream Balm and to all appearances am cured. Terrible headaches from which I had long suffered are gone.—W. J. Hitchcock, late Major U. S. Vol. & A. A. Gen., Buffalo, N. Y.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from Colds. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents, at Druggists, or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

LOST Forever! The money you have paid for rent is lost to you. By our plan, we loan, improve, build or purchase the house, lot, or both, anywhere you may reside or select it. It is deeded to you. You occupy it and pay monthly rent to us, until the amount due is paid. In case you die the debt is paid. Men of push can represent us everywhere. Association Bldg., 308 Mason St., room 7, San Francisco, Cal. Stamp for prospectus, etc. Inducements for monthly investments are equally profitable.

That Tired Feeling

It is remarkable how many people there are who have That Tired Feeling and seem to think it is of no importance or that nothing need be done for it. They would not be so careless if they realized how really serious the malady is. But they think or say "It will go off after a while."

We do not mean the legitimate weariness which all experience after a hard day's work, but that all-gone, worn-out feeling which is especially overpowering in the morning, when the body should be refreshed and ready for work. It is often only the forerunner of nervous prostration, with all the horrible suffering that term implies. That Tired Feeling and nervousness are sure indications of an impure and impoverished condition of the blood. The craving of the system for help can only be met by purifying the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the one great blood purifier. It expels all impurities, gives vitality and strength, regulates the digestion and makes the weak strong.

"In the spring I felt very much run down—no strength or appetite. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and my appetite improved and I did not have that tired feeling."—H. R. SQUIRES, East Leverett, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Makes Pure Blood.

"A FAIR FACE MAY PROVE A FOUL BARGAIN." MARRY A PLAIN GIRL IF SHE USES

SAPOLIO

MALARIA! DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY. Three doses only. Try it.

Hercules

GAS OR GASOLINE

Engines

Workmanship the very best.
Always Ready, a boy can start them
No double or false explosions.
They Oil Themselves

A FEW USES TO WHICH THE HERCULES CAN BE PUT:

For Wood-working Machinery.
For Bean-cleaning Machinery.
For Hoisting-works in Mines.
Running Machine Shops.
Running Shoe Factories.
Bottling Soda Water.
Sawing Cord-wood.
Running Churns.
Sawing Lumber.
Pumping Water.
Running Elevators.
Running Paint Mills.
Running Electric Motors.
For Printing Machinery.
Running Sewing Machines.
For Electric Light Dynamos.
Running Ice-cream Freezers.
For Carpe-beating Machinery.

ADDRESS:
PALMER & REY,
405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal.

WALTER BAKER & CO.

The Largest Manufacturers of PURE, HIGH GRADE COCOAS AND CHOCOLATES On this Continent, have received HIGHEST AWARDS from the great Industrial and Food EXPOSITIONS In Europe and America.

Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or other Chemicals or Dyes are used in any of their preparations. Their delicious BREAKFAST COCOA is absolutely pure and soluble, and costs less than one cent a cup.

SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE.

WALTER BAKER & CO. DORCHESTER, MASS.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE.

FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

PLEASANT Profitable Employment AT HOME. No experience or capital required. A month and expenses to the right parties. $50 Address for particulars M. A. THOMPSON, Stockton, Cal. (Mention this paper.)

MEN Dr. LIEBIG & CO. Special Doctors for Chronic, Private and Wasting Diseases.

Dr. Liebig's Invigorator the greatest remedy for Seminal Weakness, Loss of Manhood and Private Diseases, Overcomes Prematurness and prepares all for marriage life's duties, pleasures and responsibilities; $1 trial bottle given or sent free to any one describing symptoms; call or address 400 Geary St., private entrance 405 Mason St., San Francisco.

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY, which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. WOODS & CO'S.
"CASTLEWOOD" KENTUCKY BOURBON
CARTAN, MCCARTHY & CO.
SOLE AGENTS, AND DISTRIBUTORS
SAN FRANCISCO

INCUBATORS

Send for Catalogue. W. C. Beach, Ripon, Cal.

PALESTINE CORN

Is hard to beat. Can be planted till June. Yields about 2,000 lbs. corn and 1½ tons excellent fodder per acre on dry land. Can be harvested with combined harvester. Send $1 per acre for seed desired. Address: SACRAMENTO RIVER NURSERY CO., WALNUT GROVE, CALIF.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. 25 CTS.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE IS THE BEST. FIT FOR A KING.

$5. CORDOVAN, FRENCH & ENAMELLED CALF. $4. $3.50 FINE CALF & KANGAROO. $3.50 POLICE, 3 SOLES. $2.50 $2. WORKINGMEN'S. EXTRA FINE. $2. $1.75 BOYS' SCHOOL SHOES. LADIES. $3. $2.50 $2. $1.75 BEST DONGOLA. SEND FOR CATALOGUE. W. L. DOUGLAS, BROCKTON, MASS.

Over One Million People wear the W. L. Douglas $3 & $4 Shoes

All our shoes are equally satisfactory They give the best value for the money. They equal custom shoes in style and fit. Their wearing qualities are unsurpassed. The prices are uniform,—stamped on sole. From $1 to $3 saved over other makes. If your dealer cannot supply you we can.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free. Full description, prices, etc., AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma. BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

★ ASK YOUR DRUGGIST FOR ★

IMPERIAL GRANUM

IT IS ★ THE BEST FOOD FOR NURSING MOTHERS, INFANTS AND CHILDREN

★ JOHN CARLE & SONS, New York. ★

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING

For sale by all Druggists, 25 cents a bottle.

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVII. NO. 1. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JUNE 21, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1286.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$1.00
Six Months	2.00
Three Months	1.25
One Month	50
Single Copies	10

HIS LAST ADDRESS.

Following the Surrender of Rob't E. Lee.

LINCOLN'S LAST TWO SPEECHES.

He Spoke With Very Little Attempt at Oratorical Manner or effect—Immortal Words.

President Lincoln's two last public addresses were made from the historic central window in the second story, front, of the White House, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, April 10 and 11, 1865. On Sunday morning, the 9th, the day on which Lee surrendered, the President had returned from City Point and Richmond to Washington. At 5 o'clock on Monday evening some two or three hundred persons, acting upon a rumor circulated through the city, assembled in front of the White House. The President had been out to ride in his carriage, as usual, in the afternoon, and returned about the time they began to come together. After he had entered the house it was reported that the family were at dinner, and that he would not speak. The people, however, were unwilling to disperse, and, in excellent humor, continued to wait for the President, says a writer in the Chicago Inter Ocean.

At length, unwilling to disappoint the people together, he came. It was the first time I had seen him. I heard no elaborate paper which the next evening to a larger place, and which is preserved among his important papers; yet, the impromptu and somewhat reluctant speech on Monday evening, in which his purpose was to reciprocate the genial greeting of his hearers, but to utter nothing otherwise significant, afforded a far more interesting presentation of the personality of the man than the more formal address afterward. He came forward brisk and cheerful, offhand and elastic, as from a good dinner, and exceedingly well satisfied with the condition of things in general. There was a dash of exuberance in his manner. It would seem to one seeing and hearing him to have been the happiest day, the culmination of his life. The strongest impression made was the fullness of his satisfaction. It was not manifest in anything obtrusive, but was a simple, solid, thoroughgoing satisfaction, apparent in every feature and movement. He spoke with a good quality of voice and with a clear, distinct and deliberate articulation. Standing before the large window he did not seem as tall as he would elsewhere. His movements and gestures had much freedom, elasticity and force, and his countenance beamed with cordiality, as if he were speaking with old acquaintances, all of which made him seem younger than we had expected him to appear. A shrewd intelligence as of one long accustomed to read men, gleamed from his relaxed features and almost laughing eyes. At the same time there was a quiet and unpretentious air of self-reliance which was unmistakable. One who had [illegible] Mr. [illegible] and vigor of mind and then and there conscious of having done well and succeeded in his work. The mobile and expressive lips which spoke these well-remembered words to us as we looked up from near the steps of the White House thirty-seven days before had uttered the immortal words: "With malice toward none; with charity for all," and four days and a half later were sealed in death.

On the next evening he read at the same window, at a later hour, from a manuscript, his last formal address, with which the world is familiar. He wore glasses while reading. Candles were held on both sides, which flared a good deal. As he appeared there was quite loud cheering, which was continued for perhaps two minutes. He glanced a little nervously down over his glasses as if awaiting the time when they would be quiet enough for him to read, one finger rubbing the under surface of his chin as he waited. His tones were common reading tones, somewhat monotonous. He spoke with little attempt at oratorical manner or effect. At one point he laid his finger upon his upper lip, somewhat as a boy might do reading his composition at school. Mrs. Lincoln and some other ladies stood at a side window. Some conversation was overheard while the reading was going on, which seemed to annoy the audience, eliciting some uncomplimentary expressions. I seem to have a faint shadow of recollection of ill-omirous expressions, in undertone, in the crowd near where I stood, indicative of revengeful hate toward the reader, whose words came down to us from the window above. The reading ceased at length, and there passed from public speech an orator whose words will be remembered as long as any spoken by man.

WIVES AND DAUGHTERS.

"It is marvelous, the ignorance that even the most intelligent, refined women show when they are placed on duty in the sick room," says an eminent physician. "They seem to think that if they choke down the patient's throat the medicine I prescribe at the time prescribed; if they keep the room darkened and move about in a sepulchral fashion, that they have accomplished the Alpha and Omega of nursing. Too many of them fail to bring their dainty, sweet, tender, thoughtful womanliness into play."

A thrifty housewife says she keeps a denim bag suspended at the back of her bedstead into which she puts every stray feather which escapes from the pillows during the daily bed-making. At house-cleaning time the contents of the bags are emptied into the pillows again and kept plump and light. This is straining New England thrift to a fine point.

It may be a bit of an exaggeration, but they tell us that on light summer jackets and duck suits the buttons are as big as soup plates. Of course it is impossible to wear more than two or three of them.

Never in fastening the waist of a frock begin anywhere except with the top button or hook and eye. It will not set decently unless this rule is followed —invariably.

[illegible] of the season among wheelmen making "a century" [illegible] each a cyclometer [illegible] and each 100 [illegible] her cap. One record for last summer.

[illegible] science to the housewife [illegible] cup containing a [illegible] which registers the [illegible] beverage it contains.

[illegible] statement has been [illegible] public school cooking [illegible], who says boys learn the principles of cooking with much greater facility than girls, while a chafing dish teacher assures us that a bachelor can be initiated into the mysteries of a Welsh rabbit or lobster Newburg in one lesson, while women are bunglers.

A New Hampshire minister and his wife have just passed through the ordeal of their 45th donation party and now he is talking of going into another business.

Mrs. Li Chang wife of China's viceroy, lives in great splendor on the banks of the Pei-Ho, surrounded by song birds, peacocks, aquaria, pottery, gems, botanical collections and 1000 attendants and servents. She has 2000 coats, 1200 pairs of "trouserettes" and 500 fur robes. Her feet are so small that she is unable to walk more than a few steps, but twice a day she bathes and takes an airing in a coolie sedan. Finally, she dresses her hair in 50 ways.

A joint committee of American and English women, advocates of women's rights, has been at work six years studying the Bible, to ascertain if the Scriptures declare man to be the master and that woman should obey him. These students have got through the pentateuch and report progress. They find a contradiction in the first and second chapters of Genesis, the one representing woman as coequal in birth and dignity with man, the other as taken from the rib of man as an afterthought and to minister to his comfort and pleasure.

Women may not require the warning, but "dago" is a word which should be dropped from everyone's vocabulary. The Italians object to it on the score that it is a combination of all the worst oaths in their language.

"The fatter women get," said the late Monsieur Worth, "the crazier most of them grow in their desire to wear white. If they can only squeeze themselves into white satin they're happy."

They are talking of reviving the whipping post for wife beaters. Why not at the same time make a contemporary of the ducking stool for the protection of henpecked husbands?

[illegible] of the [illegible] applause, [illegible] by the gen[illegible] humorous twinkle of the eye and the good-natured manner with which the above words were spoken.)

"I said to a larger audience this morning what I desire now to repeat. It is this: That I supposed in consequence of the glorious news we have been receiving lately there is to be some general demonstration either on this or tomorrow evening, when I will be expected, I presume, to say something. Just here I will remark that I would much prefer having this demonstration take place tomorrow evening, as I would then be much better prepared to say what I have to say than I am now or can be this evening. (A voice. "And we will then have heard from Johnston.")

"I therefore say to you that I shall be quite willing, and I hope ready, to say something then, whereas just now I am not ready to say anything that one in my position ought to say. Everything I say, you know, goes into print. (Laughter and applause.) If I make a mistake (A voice: "You haven't made any yet) it doesn't merely hurt me, it hurts the country. I therefore ought at least to try not to make mistakes. If, then, a general demonstration be made to-morrow evening, and if it be agreeable, I will endeavor to say something and not make a mistake, without at least trying carefully to avoid it. (Laughter and applause.) Thanking you for the compliments of this call, I bid you good-evening."

This brief address exhibits many of the characteristics of the martyr President which are now well known to the world. His bow as he retired was free, elastic and even graceful. There was more of the suave in his manner on this occasion than the representations of him generally made would imply. A stranger would have had no doubt that he was a superior man in respect to intelligence, self reliance and force. He appeared as a common man, but of uncommon penetration

UNCLE SAM'S CURIOS.

The Work of a Government Naturalist.

EXPEDITION TO THE HIGH SIERRA.

Gathering Specimens for the National Collection at Washington—Where the Golden Eagle is Found.

A collecting naturalist's life is a strange one, embracing, as it does, almost constant travel, combined with an intimate knowledge of the lives and habits of the animals and plants which surround him. It is more common nowadays to find the collector roaming the mountains and valleys of this State than to run across the traditional fur-trapper, whose only aim is to get the animals in the pelt that will bring the highest price. Not only is the naturalist's work more varied, but it is more instructive. He is not looking for fur-bearing animals, alone, but takes whatever comes his way, from a grizzly to the tiniest field mouse.

Nearly every year sees new expeditions sent out by the Government to study the fauna and flora of hitherto unexplored sections of the country and report on them. From these reports many of the conclusions as to the character of the products to be raised in these locations are drawn so that a minimum amount of time need be expended by the settler in ascertaining whether or not certain products may be raised profitably. So the Government collector must be a close observer of nature and of his surroundings, and above all must not be afraid to take careful notes of all he sees. All the specimens collected are sent to the United States National Museum in Washington, where they go to make up one of the world's greatest collections of plants and stuffed animals.

In 1891, after finishing three months' work in the desert, a party of us, mostly regular employes of the National Museum, were sent up into the Sierra Nevada in the region of Mount Whitney. Here a barometric station was established, and a log house was built to protect the instruments from the storms which are so severe in the mountains. After a climb of nearly 7,000 feet up the side of the mountain the camp was made along the banks of Cottonwood creek at an altitude of about 10,500 feet. It makes no difference to a naturalist whether he has just arrived or not, it is always his duty to get to work immediately. Often before making a permanent camp he sets his traps. These usually consist of two kinds. For the larger animals, and especially those that are carnivorous, steel traps of various sizes are employed. These are usually baited with birds or small mammals, such as squirrels, or even the bodies of mammals previously skinned. If the trap is not set at the mouth of the animal's burrow, it is placed either along some well-beaten trail or else is fastened to a tree. For the smaller mammals, chiefly rodents, small tin traps are used. These traps are usually set promiscuously, wherever a favorable spot is found, generally near a decayed log or a pile of brush where the smaller animals may take shelter. When not placed in the runways the smaller traps are baited with grain or bits of meat, for even rodents are often tempted by a morsel of bacon or a bit of "jerkie."

In the Sierra a great variety of animals may be found, most of them differing widely from those lower down in the mountains. If one gets high enough and the locality be favorable, woodchucks are not uncommon, while on the eastern slopes there are still many mountain sheep left. These are best hunted with the rifle, and an Indian guide who knows the country is an invaluable assistant. A side trip was made by our party over to the Inyo range in the Mojave desert, and with the aid of the Indians ten fine specimens of these splendid animals were secured. They favor the open, rocky slopes, where a little feed may be found among the bowlders. Sometimes, when disturbed they will start a veritable avalanche of rolling bowlders, which thunder down the mountain's side, tearing through the brush and breaking off good-sized trees.

One of the most interesting little animals of the high Sierra is the little chief hare, or Lagomys, as the naturalists call it, a little animal about the size of a large gopher, much resembling a tiny rabbit in shape and the texture of its fur. Its ears are nearly round, while it is entirely without a tail. This rare animal inhabits the immense granite slides away up the mountain side, where it is almost too high for trees to grow. Sometimes a hunter may wait for hours for it to come out, and find, after all, that it has been watching him from the top of a rock not fifty yards away. The cry of the animal is much like the bleat of a goat, shrill and sharp, yet deceptive as to distance. Even when the collector succeeds in shooting one, there is not one chance in three of his getting the specimen, as it usually wiggles down among the bowlders which lie piled one upon the other to a depth of twenty or thirty feet.

From the foot of the mountains on the eastern side up to the timber line, there are four kinds of chipmunks. Lowest down and extending up into the pinon belt, is the little white-tailed chipmunk of the desert. He is seldom found higher than this semi-desert zone. Next come two slightly larger species, one of them larger than the chipmunks ordinarily seen. They are of a reddish color, with alternate black and white stripes down the back and sides. This species is quite common, and reaches almost to the timber line, where a very small form is found, lighter and duller in coloring, but just as active, in spite of living in a region of almost eternal snow. Nearly all the four kinds are comparatively tame, except the little white-tailed desert squirrel, which is exceedingly shy.

All over the pine woods in this region may be seen trees barked on one side by porcupines. The porcupines are very shy, and it is almost impossible to get anywhere near them.

One of the rarest animals in this part of the mountains is the great snowshoe rabbit, with feet utterly out of keeping with his body. The reason of these exaggerated "trotters" is that a large surface is needed to keep the animal from sinking in the snowdrifts, through which he must make his way during the winter.

These high altitudes bring with them many strange and beautiful birds, though as a rule the plumage is not as bright as lower down, where it is warmer. Probably the strangest bird to those unacquainted with it is the dipper, or water ouzel—a small, slate-colored bird, with a bobtail, which it twitches nervously whenever it alights. It has the power of going under water and walking along the bottom, where it searches for the small worms that make up its food. I was never more surprised in my life than when, having shot at one of these strange creatures, I ran up to the water's edge to get my specimen and found it walking over to the other side of the stream on the bottom under three feet of water. The feathers of the bird were found to be oily and very close, much as with the duck, and in this way it was able to make its strange journeys without fear of getting wet.

The crossbill is an interesting bird on account of the peculiar position of the upper and lower mandibles. These are completely crossed and the strangest thing about it is that it is due entirley to their manner of twisting open the pine cones on whose nuts it feeds. This crossing is really only an acquired physical character, as the very young are found to have bills as straight as any of the ordinary birds.

Up in these mountains the great golden eagle is found. It is not an unusual occurrence to hear a roar as of a passing storm and to find one of these grand birds gliding with the rapidity of lightning just above the tree tops. Here, too, now and then the great California vulture may be seen, hunting carion. It is not as nearly extinct as is generally supposed.

The mere noting the presence of these strange birds and animals is not the only work of the naturalist. After the specimens are gathered, those to be kept must be carefully measured and skinned, and after labeling must be dried. Usually the collector has a chest with trays fitting one on top of the other, in which the smaller specimens are pinned to dry, their feet stretched out before and behind. When dry they are taken out, packed each in a little roll of cotton and shipped to Washington. Larger skins are rolled up and stuffed when they arrive. The boxes of skins are always sent by mail with the Government frank on them. The naturalists have funny tales to tell of opposition by some country postmasters to sending more than four pounds of matter through the mail. One old fellow absolutely refused to handle a box about four feet long and was only made to do so under threat that he would be held responsible for it and in case it did not arrive in time trouble would be forthcoming. As soon as a naturalist has worked out a place pretty well he packs up his goods, either on a pack saddle, or, when practicable, in a wagon, and moves to a new locality. In this way he is ever changing from one scene to another and ever learning new facts about nature. He may stay in one place a day or a month, according to the prospects for good work. Most naturalists prefer to avoid settlements, as their traps are less apt to be molested when no one is about who knows their business. Often the Indians will steal them, while frequently, when in a hostile country, constant watch must be kept that the camp is not surprised by the redskins. Most naturalists mark their traps with a little bit of rag tied to a bush near by, but after practice very often a man will have fifty traps out without a mark. However, a collector usually prefers to be on the safe side and sure of getting his traps again. One of the greatest pests that the collector has to deal with is the ordinary tree ant. Hardly is a small mammal caught before these voracious little pests begin their work. Often but a short time after daybreak I have found half of a rare specimen entirely eaten by the busy ants.—F. W. Koch.

A would-be smart lawyer asked a witness, an old lady, if she thought people would have teeth in heaven. She said she could not answer that definitely, but she thought they would. One thing was certain, she added: "People would have teeth in the place alloted to the wicked, and she could prove it by Scripture." "How can you prove it?" said the lawyer." Why," she replied, "the Scripture says that the wicked shall be turned into utter darkness, where there shall be 'weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth;' and how could they gnash their teeth if they did not have any?" The attorney did not proceed any further on that line of examination.

Copenhagen is to have its Eiffel Tower in a park outside the city, which will command a fine view of the environs, the Baltic, and the adjoining coast of Sweden. It will only be 430 feet high, but it stands on a hill 90 feet above the sea. There will be three platforms, and the whole structure will be lighted by eletricity.

A majestic ox head which formerly adorned the agricultural building at the fair is now doing duty in the window of a Madison avenue butcher.—Chicago Tribune.

LONDON LIFE.

The Retirement of Miss Braddon From Literature.

WOMEN WRITERS OF GREAT NOTE.

A Live Miss Tanqueray and a Dead Mrs. Ebb-Smith—Costumes Seen in Drawing Rooms.

The announcement of the retirement of that veteran novelist, Miss M. E. Braddon, from the ranks of our active writers brings with it, aside from a genuine regret at the loss to the reading public, also the reflection that of the many women novelists still at work most of the best known of these are a long way past their first youth. Mrs. Humphrey Ward, for instance, though comparatively young in the literary world, is certainly past the meridian of her life. So, too, is Helen Mathers (Mrs. Reeves), who has grown sons; then there is Mrs. Walford and Mrs. Hungerford ("The Duchess") and Mrs. Stannard ("John Strange Winter"). In the stronger and more modern style of literature that does not necessarily mean three volumes and a happy ending Mrs. W. K. Clifford is another example of a woman in the zenith of her literary ability who has left her fortieth milestone a long way behind her. Among other and younger women, however, who have attained literary fame no one is more charming, more fresh and more thoroughly au fait with the affairs of the day than John Oliver Hobbes (Mrs. Craigie, the brilliant young American novelist.

With Mrs. Craigie, among the younger generation of women writers, may also be mentioned the much talked of Sarah Grand and Mrs. Vere Campbell, whose "problem" novels and versatility of description and dialogue are much admired. But to hark back to my opening thought—not to be able to look forward to a "new book" by Miss Braddon—will be a distinct loss to many. In these days of "weird women" and "women who dare" to do anything and everything the healthy tone of her most sensational scenes could never be harmful to any one. Now, when literary garbage is glossed over by fin de siecle veneer, a good, healthy novel with a "mystery" beginning in its first chapter and unraveled in its last, is a distinct gain. And while speaking of "weird women" could anything be more dolefully tragic than the suicide in London of Mrs. Ebb-Smith, a lady of excellent birth, who, it is said, became unsettled in her mind because of the production of Mr. Pinero's play, "The Notorious Mrs. Ebb-Smith," at the Garrick Theatre a few weeks ago. It is said that the Mrs. Ebb-Simth of real life wrote and called upon Mr. Pinero several times begging him to change the name of the heroine of his drama, as she had a morbid dread of her name being connected with the play. Mr. Pinero, however, saw no reason why his latest creation should not be called "Mrs. Ebbsmith" as well as "Mrs. Jonesmith." The superstitious people are now going round shaking their heads and declaring that "the play is doomed!"

By the way, one of the stall holders at a recent fashionable bazaar held in aid of a Paddington Children's Hospital, was a "Miss Panqueray." If Mrs. Ebb-Smith in the flesh, was mentally deranged by the appearance of her "puppet" namesake, truly Miss Tanqueray might in some way be affected by the temporary disappearance of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray."

This Paddington bazaar (apropos of Miss Tanqueray) was "opened" by the Countess of Warwick (Lady Brooke) who looked superbly handsome in a beautiful dress of "eminence" purple, the bodice of velvet with sequin trimmings, the skirt of silk crepon. A black chiffon ruffle and a black toque with jet ospreys, giving the finishing touches, while a magnificent spray of English and Parma violets was worn on the corsage.

One of the features of the season will be the wide, outstanding stiffened lace collar, after the fashion of those worn during the period of Henri IV. These collars will adorn alike evening bodices and capes and cloaks. They look particularly well on the latter, to which they impart quite a regal air. A lovely cloak of black satin lined with Japanese blue brocade has three small capes set into one of these picturesque collars, beneath which reposes, offering some sort of support, a full ruffle of chiffon liberally bunched with roses. These "Henri Quatre" collars are also being employed on gowns for the next drawing room (to take place, by the way, in May) when their use will at least take off the "naked" appearance of a low gown in broad daylight.

Butterfly bows, butterfly bonnets, bodices capes collars and slippers are all the "go" over here; though most of the articles named display anything but a distinct resemblance to the gay-winged insect. The latest idea is the butterfly bouquet of which it is gratifying to learn the Duchess of York heartily approves." It will probably supersede the "shower" posy of past seasons and be the vogue at the May drawing room. To be coomplete it should have a corsage spray and shoulder knots to match. The specimen floral bunch of this pattern that was sent to the Duchess of York was made of her favorite flowers. The spreading sides or wings of the butterfly were all made of lilies of the valley with their natural foliage; the center portion was of pink roses; a few feathery fronds of asparagus fern veiled the whole with its delicate green giving an effect not unlike the buttefly's delicate feelers.

A long loop and two ends of broad soft ribbon hung down below, one streamer being in very narrow stripes of pink and white the other in soft tones of green and white with a tinge of pink on the reverse side of the ribbon. The idea can of course be carried out with any flowers and with wide or narrow streamers to taste.

That French people are of the opinion that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery is evidently the case from the tone of the following paragraph which I clip from the "Gaulois." "Five o'clock teas that imported English custom are becoming host Frenchified this year. Instead of tea, esses offer their guests tapioca-boillon-boudier. It is less English and much better." There is a delicate blending of Anglo-American custom about this announcement that is as delicately redolent of Parisian diplomacy as it is of a gratified palate.

As women have taken to football, cricket, golf, hunting, jumping and running as every day amusements, men evidently feel that time hangs heavy on their hands. It is probably this lack of appropriate broadmindedness that has driven them to the hitherto feminine relaxation of "sewing parties." Bachelors now, so I am informed by a certain smart young club man of the "Oscar Wilde set," now ask each other to tea, and bring their sewing. As they can't very well make their own undergarments, and as neither hats or caps need "trimming," the needlework indulged in by masculine hands is, so I am informed, the darning of their smartest evening socks! This new departure is made a little more agreeable to the old-fashioned ideas of propriety when it is understood that these darning parties had their origin in the kindly thought of a woman who felt sorry for young bachelors of her acquaintance who were continually in "rags." She sent out the invitations to some men whom she knew, and on the cards were written the words, "Ye who attend bring all your old socks with you."

When the men arrived they were ranged in a neat and expectant row around the room, provided with darning needles and yarn and sat busily to work to learn the whole art of darning; and it is said that they take very kindly to their new occupation, and that their progress is exceptionally rapid.

The "woman of the future" has a happy prospect before her. No longer will "hubby" fly to the club and the theatre when the shades of night gather around, but, under the genial ray of the domestic lamp, he will sit peacefully down to his embroidery or bend mustache and beard above the delicate mysteries of knitting, tatting or crochet work.

A chaperone is an indispensable portion of an English girl's equipment for the fashionable world. But even here times are changing and habits are growing a little more lax. A few years ago, for a young lady to be seen walking either in the park or the street alone would have been considered a grave and serious cause for shoulder shrugging, and shocked expressions. Nowadays, however, debutantes wander in the park unattended by mamma or elderly female friends or relation.

Girls who live in Mayfair and Belgravia walk in the park quite naturally after church, just as they used to in the private gardens of their squares while mamma very often goes straight home. Moreover, whereas up to lately there was always some pretense that "mamma was sitting further up the row," or that "we are here with Lady-so-and-so," now there is no pretense at all, and the young ladies have no objection to be escorted home afterward. The Sunday "Park Show" is gradually becoming known as the spinsters' advertisement.

The costumes to be seen on "Park Parade" have not as yet breathed any of the joyful promise of spring. Last Sunday morning was favored with a bright sun and a cold wind, which, between them, dried the gravel in the park, so that it was possible to promenade with comfort. The result was that there was one of the most crowded parades of the year. People were sitting along the line and on the lawn almost as if it were summer, though their costume would have dispelled, any illusion on that subject, if any existed, for furs were still worn to a considerable extent, and there is a great deal of warmth in the heavy long cloaks which so many people wear nowadays. One lady wore an enormous cart-wheel hat, which was so completely stacked with violets that it looked like an immense bouquet of Parma violets, about a yard and a half in circumference. This may be regarded as the extreme end of the craze for violets in the headgear, which has been so marked during this winter. Perhaps this will be followed by the disappearance of violets altogether, and let us hope that with them will go the big hat.—Anne Morton Lane, in Mail and Express.

Freeborn county, Minn., is the banner creamery county in that State. It has twenty two co-operative separator creameries (and one skim station), operating forty-six operators. Seven of the factories have been built this season. They are very evenly distributed throughout the country, fifteen towns boasting of one each, four having two each, and only one town having none, though tributary to five plants, all of which are near its border lines on its several sides.

"No," said smallwort. "I hardly feel justified in saying that Peppers is inordinately vain, but when a fellow has a music box in his room, arranged to play 'Hail to the Chief' as soon as he opens the door, what is one to think of him?"—Cincinnati Tribune.

"Wives should never conceal anything from their husbands," says a writer. If this device was carried out it would create a revolution in few nine pockets.

GREEN FRUIT RATES.

A Large Reduction May Now be Expecced.

COMPETITION OF THREE RAILROADS.

Fast Ventilator Car Service in Opposition to the Refrigerator System—Arguments Offered.

The refrigerator companies now engaged in the transportation of California fruit to the Eastern markets will find themselves called upon this summer to meet a vigorous competition from two unexpected sources. The advent of the Armour Packing Company in the fruit transportation business, and the effect on refrigerator charges resulting therefrom, have been the subjects of various newspaper articles during the past few weeks. The fact became known yesterday that the Southern Pacific Company intends to become a competitor in the business heretofore controlled exclusively by the refrigerator companies. The railroad company, in the past, has been content with the earnings derived from the transportation of the cars owned and operated by the refrigerator companies, and has permitted the refrigerator companies to do all the business with the shippers and growers. The Southern Pacific has now tired of seeing the refrigerator companies share among themselves all the revenues from the profitable traffic, and is preparing to establish a fast fruit line of its own. In conjunction with the Union Pacific and the Chicago and Northwestern railroads, it will inaugurate a fast fruit line between California and Chicago about the middle of June. Between 1,200 and 1,500 ventilator cars are now being built in the East for the purpose.

The arrangement entered into by the three roads will deprive the refrigerator companies of a large share of the business. The Southern Pacific will furnish 500 cars and the other two roads will furnish their quota. They are ventilator cars of the newest design, and will enable the companies, it is estimated, to handle between 4,000 and 5,000 carloads of green fruit at a cost which is not to be met by the refrigerator companies. The cost of refrigeration being eliminated from the expense of getting the fruit to the Eastern markets, the Southern Pacific Company expects to be in a position to offer rates to shippers and growers which will bring it all the business it can handle. Heretofore the fruit-growers in California have not taken kindly to the ventilator car for the reason that the service was not fast enough to get the fruit to market in good condition. They have preferred to pay the extra cost of refrigeration to avoid the risk of having the fruit spoil before it reached its destination. The railroad companies have agreed on a time card which they believe will insure the successful operation of their ventilator cars between California and Chicago. The time will be five days between Sacramento and Chicago. A train will leave Sacramento every night at midnight while the green fruit season lasts. During June, and until the fruit crop ripens sufficiently to warrant the daily service, trains will be run but twice a week. It is thought that by the 1st of July, at the latest, there will be enough ripe fruit to insure the profitable maintenance of a daily service.

The Southern Pacific will carry the trains to Ogden in forty-five hours, and the other two roads have agreed to make the time over their roads sufficiently fast to insure a five days' service to Chicago.

The railroad company does not expect to handle cherries in its ventilator cars, or any other fruit which will not stand transportation without refrigeration. That branch of the business will be left to the refrigerator companies. The company expects, however, to handle not less than 4,000, and possibly 5,000 carloads of other varieties of fruit during the season, including peaches, pears, apples, plums and possibly apricots. The Southern Pacific Company is preparing to educate the fruit-growers to the advantages of the new fast fruit line.

The principal arguments to be offered in favor of the ventilator car service will be the fast time and reduced cost. The dead weight in a refrigerator car loaded with fruit is just twice the paying weight of fruit. In a ventilator car the dead wieght is about one-half and the paying weight is one-half. The cost of hauling dead weight is reduced in the ventilator car, and the cost of refrigeration, amounting to $125 a car on a long haul across the continent, is also saved.

The refrigerator companies are now earnestly engaged in trying to solve the important question of how to meet the competition inaugurated by the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific and the Chicago and Northwestern railroads. The companies have decided that they will have to make material reductions in their refrigerator charges or suffer the loss of an important percentage of the business. G. H. Appel, manager of the California Fruit Transportation Cpomany, says that the refrigerator companies are now working on their rate schedules for the coming season, and that the fruit-growers may expect a material reduction from the charges assessed last y[illegible] Chronicle.

Dick—"W[illegible] I though[illegible] Tom—[illegible] ing[illegible]

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland.,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 21 1895

At the last session of the Legislature Assemblyman Tibbitts of Amador introduced what is known as the Alternate Jurors Act. The bill passed and now stands as Chapter 213 of the session's laws. By this the judge to try a case may, by order duly entered, direct two extra jurors to be drawn in the same manner as the preceding panel of twelve were selected, except that the prosecution has but one peremptory challenge and the defense two. They are placed with, and treated as a part of the jury during the trial. Should one of the regular panel become sick, or die, he is discharged and one of the alternates is drawn to fill the vacancy; the other in like manner would fill a second vacancy. At the close of the trial, if they have not been needed, they are discharged and the panel of twelve decides the case. This is known as the "Italian Jury System" and will prove useful in protracted trials where the sickness or death of a juror would lead to a new trial. Judge Conley of Madera county is the first to put the act into effect in the Cain murder trial.

At the rate the campaign of education on the money question is progressing, before the national conventions are held a year hence the mass of people will have far more intelligent opinions on it than they have now. The people want no more panics, and they will vote for no policy that will bring on a panic or a financial revolution. An era of prosperity is opening and with the improvement of business the discontent that impels the disappointed to attribute all their ills to those who are temporarily commissioned to manage the people's affairs will pass away and give them clearer and more unbiased views of these fundamental questions, which are not political, but scientific. The people can be trusted to vote rightly, when they have an opportunity to learn the truth of the questsons involved.

When a gang of six men, working one harvester that cuts a swath forty two feet wide, can harvest, cut and sack a hundred acres of grain a day, as a gang is doing near Tracy, the cost of production of wheat or barley is reduced very materially, especially when one considers that horses to pull this great machine can be purchased for a cent a pound. At the prices that horses can be purchased now both the seeding and harvesting of grain will be reduced below what it was ever before known in the world And notwithstanding the prices paid in America for labor to run these great agricultural machines, wheat can be raised at a less cost per bushel here than in India, Russia or Egypt, where men get but a few cents per day.

A little bad luck has come to the valley road in the wreck of the steamer Washtenaw in the straits of Magellan. The Wastenaw was bringing 2000 tons of steel rails and would have arrived this week, but the builders of the road say that this will not delay work, as other rails are now on the way, and if necessary shipments will be made overland. The contract for ties is signed and reports from all the engineers in the field are encouraging. The project is now on a practical basis and henceforth work rather than talk will be the order of business.

A canvass has been made of the Republican press of Kansas and out of 102 papers it was found that seventeen are in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ration of 16 to 1, while eighty-five stand squarely on the money plank in the last Republican platform. This does not look as though Kansas Republicans could be relied upon to help in the battle for the white metal next year.

The abolition of the sugar bounty by the late diabolical Democratic congress so completely "ruined" the beet sugar industry that the Chino ranch people announced the largest acreage of beet planting and the prospect of more sugar making at the factory this year than occured in any year previous. And it is also announced that a beet sugar factory will surely be established at Anaheim—to be similarly "ruined."

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

MARK

ETED CLOTHING
NT GUARANTEED.
CISCO - CALIFORNIA.

CUT FODDER.

An Illinois Farmer's Experience With a Corn Husker and Fodder Shredder.

The following experience is related by an Illinois farmer in a letter to American Agriculturist:

About a year ago a neighbor and myself secured a corn husker and fodder shredder. This machine was set so that the fodder could be elevated to the haymow of a barn. Fodder was hauled from the field on low wheeled wagons, run through the husker and the shredded material stored in one bent of my barn. The carrier being 28 feet long one man was able to place the fodder as it came from the machine. A great amount can be stored in a small space. Last season I put 312 shocks 12 hills square in a section of my mow 26 feet wide, 18 feet long and 8 feet to where the roof touched the side of the barn.

Low wheeled wagons are a great advantage in hauling. We rigged them up ourselves. One is made from a set of binder trucks coupled so it will be 18 feet long. The other two consist of old wagons, the wheels of which were replaced by low ones. On these we built racks without bows. Five to eight shocks are hauled at a load. The fodder is fed to the machine much as wheat or oats. We begin this work when the ears are dry enough to crib. No attention is paid to dry weather, for by proper handling and little tramping on the load only a few blades are lost. At the machine all loose fodder is carefully cleaned up. A rope running from front end of rack to rear keeps the load in place when the wagon is in motion.

Last winter 20 acres of good corn cared for in this way furnished sufficient roughness for wintering 20 head of cows and horses. Nothing is wasted. Of course the pithy wood parts of the stalk are not eaten, but this makes excellent bedding and absorbs liquid manure. We cut fodder for our neighbors at the rate of 5 cents per husked bushel, which is equivalent to $2 or $2.50 per acre. Many thrashers now have machines, and a goodly number of farmers in the vicinity are having their feed prepared in this way. This enables them to sell much of their straw and hay. This shredded fodder also sells for $7.50 per ton. Some farmers intend to bale and ship it.

Life In Japan.

"It is a curious, but accepted truth," comments the wife of a naval officer who has resided a number of years in Japan, "that Americans, as a class, do not long stand up against Japan life. There is something in the air, or something lacking in it, which is peculiarly trying to us. So many naval officers serving a three or six years' duty there have come home with an incurable complaint that it is common talk in the service. Two admirals have died of abcess of the liver after several years' residence there, and other officers have had their health seriously impaired under similar conditions. I never was seriously sick in my life till I got out to the island empire, and throughout my whole stay I fought something. The English residents do not seem to suffer as we do, which is also a commented upon fact."—New York Times.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of M. V. BARNES, An Insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of M. V. Barnes, the above named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from her debts, and that Saturday, the 20th day of June, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the Court room of said Court, at the court house in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and she be discharged from all her debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
[SEAL.] By W. M. WILLS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st, A. D. 1895.

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of JOHN BARNES, An Insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of John Barnes, the above named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, and that Saturday, the 20th day of June, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court room of said Court, at the Court-house in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and he be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
[SEAL.] By W. M. WILLS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st A. D. 1895.

NOTICE.

Whereas, the consent in writing of the holders of two thirds of the capital stock of the Lone Pine Canal Company, a corporation, to change the principal place of business of said corporation from the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, to the town of Lone Pine, in said county and state, is on file herein. Notice is hereby given that the principal place of business of said Lone Pine Canal Company, will be at the town of Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on and after January 26th 1895.

By order of the Board of Directors.

DAVID HOLLAND, Secretary.

NEW FEE BILL.

CHAPTER CCVII.

An Act to establish fees of county, township and othe. officers, and of jurors and witnesses in this State.

[Approved March 28, 1895.]

The People of the State of California represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The following county, township, and other officers shall charge and collect the following fees.

COUNTY CLERK.

On the commencement of any action or proceeding in the Superior Court, except probate proceedings, or on appeal thereto, to be paid by the party commencing such action or proceeding, or taking such appeal $5 00

On the filing of a petition for letters of administration, testamentary, or guardianship five dollars, to be paid by the petitioner; provided, that at the time of filing the inventory and appraisement in any such proceeding there shall be an additional deposit of one dollar for each additional thousand dollars of the appraised valuation, in excess of three thousand dollars.

On filing the petition to contest any will or codicil 3 00

On the appearance of any defendant, or any number of defendants answering jointly to be paid upon filing the first paper in the action by him or them 2 00

On placing any action, except a probate proceeding, or default case, on the calendar for trial or hearing, to be paid by the party at whose request such action or proceeding is so placed 2 00

For every additional defendant appearing separately 1 00

The foregoing fees shall be in full for all services rendered by such Clerk in the cause, to and including the making up of the judgment roll.

On the filing of any notice of motion to move for a new trial in any civil action or proceeding, the party filing same must pay to the Clerk, in full for all services to be rendered in connection with said motion, except as hereinafter in this section provided 2 00

For issuing an execution or order of sale in any action 1 00

In all proceedings begun or acts performed prior to this Act becoming a law, such and charges as were provided by the law at the time such proceedings were begun or acts performed.

The Clerk shall also charge and collect the following fees and compensation not above provided for:

For any copy of any record, proceeding or paper on file in the office of the Clerk relating to any civil action pending in said Court, when said copy is made by him, per folio 10

For each certificate of the Clerk, under seal of the Court 25

For filing each claim in probate or insolvency proceedings 15

No fees shall be allowed or charged by the Clerk for services rendered in any criminal case.

For services rendered by the Clerk, not in connection with civil actions or proceedings in Court, he shall charge and collect, for the benefit of the county, the following fees:

For issuing marriage license, one half to be paid to the County Recorder 2 00

For filing and indexing articles of incorporation 1 00

For filing and indexing certificates of copartnership 1 00

For filing and indexing all papers to be kept by him, other than papers filed in actions or proceedings in court, and official bonds and certificates of appointment, each 25

For issuing any license required by law, other than marriage licenses 1 00

For examining and certifying to a copy of any paper, record, or proceeding prepared by another, and presented for his certificate, fifty cents, and one cent per folio for comparing the said copy with the original.

For making satisfaction of or credit on judgment 25

For receiving and filing remittitur from Supreme Court .....

For administering each oath, without certificate, except in a pending action or proceeding 50

For taking any affidavit, except in criminal cases 10

For taking and approving each undertaking and the justification thereof, except in criminal cases 25

For searching records or files, for each year 50

For taking acknowledgement of any deed or other instrument, including the certificate 50

For filing notices of appeal and appeal bonds, each 25

SHERIFF.

For serving any process, writ, order, or paper, except as hereinafter provided, required by law to be served by the Sheriff 50

For serving a writ of attachment, execution, or order for the delivery of personal property 1 00

For taking any bond or undertaking 50

For serving an attachment or execution on any ship, boat, or vessel 3 00

For keeping and caring for property under attachment or execution, such sum as the court may fix, provided, that no greater sum than two dollars per day shall be allowed to a keeper when necessarily employed.

For a copy of any writ, process, or paper actually made by him, when required or demanded according to law, per folio, ten cents; provided, that when correct copies are furnished to him for use, no charge shall be made for such copies.

For advertising sale of property and posting notice, exclusive of cost of publication, or furnishing notice for publication, each 50

For publication of notice in newspaper, the reasonable cost of publication, subject to the approval of the Court.

For serving writ of possession or restitution, putting a person in possession of the premises, and removing the occupant 1 50

For subpoenning witness, including copy of subpœna, each 25

For summoning trial jury of twelve or less 2 00

For each additional juror 10

For traveling in the service of any paper required by law to be served, for each mile actually and necessarily traveled, one way only, fifteen cents, when such travel can be made by rail, in other cases, twenty-five cents. No constructive mileage to be allowed.

For collecting money on execution, with or without levy, one per cent on the first thousand dollars or less, and one half of one per cent on all sums over one thousand dollars.

For executing and delivering Sheriff's deed 1 50

For executing and delivering certificate of sale 50

For transporting prisoners to county jail, actual cost of such transportation.

For executing and delivering any other instrument, per folio .....

RECORDER.

For recording every instrument, paper, or notice required by law to be recorded, per folio 50

For indexing every instrument, paper, or notice, for each name 10

For filing every instrument for record, and making necessary entries thereon 10

For each certificate under seal 20

For every entry of discharge, credit, or release on the margin of record, and indexing same 25

For searching the records of his office, for each year 50

For abstract of title, for each conveyance or incumbrance 25

For recording each map or plat where same is copied in book of record, for each course 50

For recording each map or plat, where same is not copied in a book of record 50

For figures or letters on maps or plats, per folio, ten cents; provided, that the fees for recording any map shall not exceed fifty dollars.

For taking acknowledgement of any instrument 50

For recording marriage license and certificate, to be paid by County Clerk 1 00

For recording transcript and all services in extraordinary cases 1 00

For recording each mark or brand 50

For administering each oath or affirmation, and certifying the same 25

For filing, indexing and keeping each paper not required by law to be recorded 25

The Clerk, Sheriff, and Recorder shall account for all fees in this section provided for, and the Clerk, Sheriff and Recorder, unless otherwise provided by law, shall pay the same to the County Treasurer on the first Monday of the month following their collection, as provided in this Act.

County officers must, and township officers may, demand the payment of all fees in civil cases, in advance.

SECTION 2. No fees or other compensation shall be paid for certificate of declaration to become a citizen of the United States, and for making a record thereof, or issuing a certificate of citizenship to become a citizen of the United States, or for making a record thereof; and no fees or other compensation shall be paid for filing the statement and affidavit of a committee or candidate voted for at any public election held within the State; and this section shall apply to all the counties in the State.

SECTION 3. All Acts or portions of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect immediately.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, to all persons having business with the offices of Clerk, Sheriff or Recorder for the County of Inyo that the above provisions of the Fee Bill are mandatory, and will be strictly enforced.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk and Recorder.

Independence, Cal., June 3, 1895.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, California. Location of Canal, near Lone Pine, Inyo County, Cal.

NOTE—There are delinquent upon the the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 8, levied on the 27th day of April, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders, as follows:

Names.	No. Cert.	No. Sh's.	Am't
T. C. Boland	3	500	$ 75 00
T. C. Boland	4	200	30 00
T. C. Boland	18	500	75 00
T. C. Boland	19	200	30 00
J. A. McKenzie	11	700	105 00
E. Robinson	1	500	75 00
E. Robinson	2	200	30 00
J. J. Gum	12	200	30 00
P. H. Mack	17	300	45 00
Fred Spear		75	11 25
R. C. Spear		75	11 25
D. Holland		50	7 50

And in accordance with law, and an order of the Board of Directors, made on the 27th day of April, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary will be sold at public auction, at the office of the said Company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on Saturday, the 22nd day of June 1895, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. of said day, to pay said delinquent assessment thereon together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

DAVID HOLLAND, Secretary.

POSTPONEMENT.

The above sale is postponed to 2. P. M. of June 29th 1895

By order of the Board of Directors.

DAVID HOLLAND, Secretary.

Notice.

Pursuant to an order of the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County Cal. passed on the 5th day of April, 1895, the attention of the public is called to the following sections of the County Government Act of 1893:

SECTION 41. The Board of Supervisors must not hear or consider any claim in favor of any person, corporation, company, or association against the County or District Fund, unless the same be itemized, giving names, dates, and particular services rendered, character of process served, upon whom, distance travelled, where and when, character of work done, number of days engaged, materials furnished, to whom, and quantity and price paid therefore, duly verified as to its correctness and that the amount claimed is justly due, is presented and filed with the Clerk of the Board within a year after the last item of the account or claim accrued. This section, as to itemizing, shall not apply to services rendered under section one hundred and forty-eight; provided, that such services are substantially stated, with their value, and verified as above. If in case of any claim, which requires itemizing, the bill be not itemized, they shall cause notice to be given to the claimant, or his attorney, of that fact, and give time to have the claim itemized and reverified.

SECTION 42. No accounts must be passed upon by the Board, unless made out as prescribed in the preceding section and filed by the Clerk at least one day prior to the session at which it is asked to be heard.

NOTICE is hereby given that any claim which fails to comply with the above sections will be returned for correction, and consideration thereof laid over until the next succeeding regular meeting of the Board.

By order of the Board of Supervisors.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk of said Board.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

H. E. Wilkinson Plaintiff, vs. Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

The people of the State of California send greeting to Atlanta Wilkinson, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now and heretofore existing between plaintiff and defendant upon the ground of the defendant's wilful desertion of plaintiff, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein, which complaint is hereby made a part of this summons.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to Court for the relief demanded in said complaint, viz: For a judgment dissolving said bonds of matrimony.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 10th day of April, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The co-partnership heretofore existing between R. W. Thomas of the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, and T. W. Hill of the same place under the firm name and style of "Thomas and Hill" heretofore conducting a general merchandising business at the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, is this day dissolved by the mutual consent of the said R. W. Thomas and the said T. W. Hill.

Witness our hands and the seals this 6th day of February, 1895.

R. W. Thomas
Thomas W. Hill

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the 'INDEPENDENT' Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc. given careful and prompt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. mining law.

Brown & Wills,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery
All kinds of dental work done according to latest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING IN ANY STYLE.
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Administrator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PROPOSED NEW ROAD —IN— DIST. NO. 3.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to law and an order of the Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, made and entered on the 3 day of April, 1895 any and all non-consenting land owners and all others interested are hereby notified to appear before said Board on Saturday, the 6th day of July, 1895 at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. and then and there show cause, if any there be, why a new County Road, hereinafter described should not be laid out and established as follows, to wit:

Commencing at section corner on township line, between Townships 9 and 10 South, Range 34 East: Sections 33 and 34; thence running North, Magnetic Variation 15 deg. 15 min. E.

Set stake 20 feet East of section corner and set stake 20 feet West of section line for a 40 ft width of road; thence:

Over land of Frank Fitzgerald.

1 North. 20.00 To S. E. corner of L. Blakes land; set stake 20 feet east and set stake 20 feet west of line as outside of 40 foot roadway.

60.00 To South-west corner of E. H. Blake E. H. Blake on west side and J. D. Shaw on east side; set stake 20 feet on west side, and set stake 20 feet on east side.

80.10 To section corner to Sections 28, 27, 33, 34, set stake 20 feet east in field of J. D. Shaw, set stake 20 feet west, on section line between Sections 27 and 28, T. 9 S. R. 34 E. M. D. M.

2 North.

3 North. 20.00 To N. W. corner of J. D. Shaw, J. D. Shaw on east side, and H. H. McMurry on west side. Set stakes 20 feet east and set stakes 20 feet west of line.

60.00 To south line of J. J. Stewart, Charles Stewart on west side, and J. L. Cornell on the east side of the line; set stake 20 feet on east side and set stake 20 feet west of line.

80.00 To center of Joseph Jewett Stewart, J. J. Stewart on west side, and J. J. Stewart on east side.

Thence west on line between Sections 21 and 28.

4 West. 20.00 To west line of J. J. Stewart on lands of Joseph Jewett Stewart to south east corner of Mrs. J. B. Stewart.

60.00 To east bank of the Miller and Blake ditch.

60.00 To center of the west bank of the Blake and Miller ditch.

Mrs. J. B. Stewart on north side and J. W. McMurry on south side. Set stake 20 feet north on west bank of ditch to north side of Road and set stake 20 feet south on west bank of ditch as south side of road.

5 West. 65.00 To meadow of Mrs. J. B. Stewart.

80.10 To section corner to sections 3, 29, 21, 28, over land of Mrs. Stewart.

20.00 To north-east corner of Indian John Campbell's Homestead.

24.00 To Big Pine ditch.

42.20 To old county road from Independence to Big Pine. Mrs. J. B. Stewart on north side and John Campbell (Indian) on south side. Set stake 40 feet north on land of Mrs. Stewart; and set stake 20 feet south on land of Indian John Campbell.

JOSEPH SUSLEY, Surveyor.
S. G. GREGG, Viewer.
JAMES JONES, Viewer.

Field Notes of a survey of a public road in Road District No. 3.

The proposed route South from the South and the commencing at the point of Commencement of Petition 19th day of January, 1894.

Commencing at Section corner on township line between Townships 9 and 10 South, Range 34 East M. D. M. to Sections 33 and 34 thence running East Mag. Var. 15 deg. 15 min. E.

6 West 20.00 Twenty chains on Section to the Northwest cor. of James Herod's land over land owned by F. Fitzgerald and Geo. Gilson, thence

7 South 80.09 Over land owned by James Herod and George Gilson, thence

8 S. 45 deg. E. Over G... 21.69 to the J...

9 South ...

March 30th, 1895.

By order of the ...

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT in pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, in money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and after TUESDAY, the 8th day of July, 1895, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest and estate of John Allen Hannah, deceased, by operation of law or otherwise acquired other than or in addition to the estate of said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain tracts or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the S. E. quarter and the South half of the south west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 16 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the South-eastern corner of the south east quarter of North east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 48-100; thence North-east following the meanderings of the bed of Rock Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence; thence following said Edwards street along the West line to the place of beginning, six and 80-100 acres, being lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots Nos. 2, 3, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29, in the town of Independence, in the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence on file in the office of the county Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the property of said John A. Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots Nos. 3 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence on file in the office of the County Recorder of said County.

Two hundred feet undivided of the following described land, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, commencing at a point twenty-seven and twenty-seven-tieths (12 9-20) rods North of the general corner of the north west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South west quarter of the South east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South west quarter and the South east quarter of Section No. twenty-one (21), West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and eleven-twentieths (68 11-20) rods, thence West twenty-three (23) rods, thence North westerly along a small branch or wash to a point twenty-four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North east quarter and the South east quarter, and the South west quarter and the North east quarter of the South west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, containing in the three East eighty (80) rods of the above beginning, containing thirty acres. Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned, at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney at Independence, Cal., or delivered to the Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent of purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM E. HUNTER,
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah deceased.

Dated, Independence, Cal., February 16th 1895.

SAVE YOUR SHOES
A... A...

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for outdoor parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Carpet Weaving.
MRS. J. R. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.
PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER
We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kind of carpet and rag weaving.
Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.
First class work guaranteed at low prices.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Fire arms repaired and based.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone
FRED BURKHARDT.

S... Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.
PAT. APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Jobbing
AND
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROP'R.
Horseshoeing ..... $2 00 for Oxen
For particulars, call at Lone
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1894, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence, Saturday ..... January 5th
" ..... February 9th
" ..... March 9th
" ..... April 6th
" ..... May 4th
" ..... June 1st
" ..... June 30th
" ..... August 3rd
" ..... August 31st
" ..... October 26th
" ..... November 23rd
" ..... November 30th

THOMAS C. BOLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND RHINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, JUNE 21 1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman	GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman	CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge	GEO. M. GILL
Sheriff	ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk	DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney	P. W. FORBES.
Assessor	P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer	W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner	I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed)	JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools	S. V. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist	FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist	A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist	J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist	J. J. STEWART.
5th Supervisor Dist	FRANK FITZGERALD.

Religious Services

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .66⅞
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5½
Pig lead	3 90

BORN.

FREE—Near Citrus, June 13, 1895, to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Free, a son.

To-morrow is the longest day of the year.

Mrs. F. Rhine is expected home the first of next week.

Reports say Bishop has near a dozen bicycles already.

Ben T. Williams went to Bishop last Wednesday morning.

Bishop will also celebrate the Fourth with exercises and sports.

Scott Broder was down from Fish Springs early in the week.

John Baxter has been quite ill again. He was some better this morning.

Some claims in Mazourka still continue to pay under the dry-washer process.

Ripe peaches and apricots are reported at several places in and near Independence.

BUTTER from the Fairview creamery can be obtained from H. Levy.

[illegible] Blood and Arth[illegible] the Mod[illegible]

[illegible] the Lone [illegible] sponed one [illegible]

[illegible] are going to have some [illegible] if there is going to be any [illegible] a day too soon.

County Clerk Hession is laid up for repairs. He thinks that a good dose of mowing machine would prove beneficial.

George Gillain, Henry Malone, J. N. Rose, C. W. Faller and John Commetti came down from Fish Springs yesterday.

Geo. Lewis has finished his first run of ore from his new mine at Fish Springs. He will resume work again in about a month.

Phil Cartier started for Butte, Mont., last Tuesday. He had previously spent over a year in that country and thinks well of it.

John Baxter sent a basket of handsome peaches to this office this morning. The fruit is ripening very rapidly and he will be able to fill all orders.

The Fourth of July will be celebrated in the small towns all over the State this year. San Francisco will try to eclipse all former celebrations ever held there.

The attention of all parties having bills to present to the Board of Supervisors is again directed to the published notice relative thereto. Don't overlook it.

Pasted a dime on a sheet of paper and send to Crocker & Ames, 619 Montgomery St., San Francisco, for Ames's Shoe Protector, the wonderful saver of shoes.

Neil McLean started for Gold Mountain yesterday with his big team to get a load of [illegible] pipe for the Independence Water Co. [illegible] pipe will be laid the full length of Edwards [illegible] pipe now [illegible] street to replace the 4 inch [illegible]

S. G. [illegible]den Esq. of Bishop has accepted the [illegible] on of the Committee on Arrangements in [illegible] occasion here on the [illegible] Committee has [illegible] arrange everything so as to enable the visitor to spend a pleasant day. As will be seen by the programme printed [illegible] numerous interesting features are proposed.

Through The Sierras.

A party of students from the State University at Berkeley arrived at Independence last Monday. They came up Kings River from the other side and crossed the water shed of the Sierra Nevadas' through Kearsarge pass directly west of here. It is early in the season to cross at that point and they found the air very cold at an altitude of over twelve thousand feet. They came all the way on foot with two pack animals, having passed over snow twenty feet deep in crossing the summit. They say the lakes were frozen over solid, and in coming from the summit to town they killed three rattlesnakes. They are of the same party who were here a year ago. After remaining here a day they left for the Mt. Whitney country. The party consisted of Messrs. Corbett, Corey and LeConte. Mr. Corbett is professor of mathematics, and Mr. Corey is electrician at the University. Mr. LeConte visited this section about five years ago and made a very useful map of the Sierras, giving the various trails, mountain peaks, lakes etc. which was published by the Sierra club. He is now engaged upon a new map which will be more comprehensive, and will correct a few errors in the old one. The young men are accomplishing a vast deal of good in the annual trips through the high Sierras. They are observant and intelligent and will bring to the notice of the world the unrivelled grandeure of the Mt. Whitney region.

Attempt At Murder.

On Thursday afternoon Henry Cole, a blacksmith at Hot Springs, was brought up from Coleville by Constable Crawford and lodged in the County jail on two charges of assault with a deadly weapon with an intent to kill, he having shot at T. B. Rickey and a young man named Olds at Sayers', junction of the Sonora and Antelope roads, during a sale of sheep to satisfy a judgment in favor of Kirman & Rickey on Monday last, for sheep trespass. Cole, with a pistol, fired at Mr. Rickey, the ball whizzing past his head, and then turned and shot at Olds, who also escaped unhurt, and before he could repeat his shooting, Charles W. Rickey, son of T. B. Rickey, procured a stick and knocked Cole senseless for a moment, when he was disarmed and put under arrest. There was a bitter feeling among some of the sheepmen and matters looked serious for a time, but after Cole's arrest, quiet was restored. Cole waived an examination before Justice Carney, at Coleville, and was remanded to answer to the Superior Court, bail being fixed at $20,000. As the case will soon come to trial, we refrain from further comments, not wishing to prejudice the case.
—Bridgeport Chronicle Union

Pat Reddy Injured.

We note in some of our exchanges the following account of a mishap befalling the well known lawyer: Patrick Reddy, the attorney, met with an accident on Market street yesterday afternoon. He was crossing from the Crocker building toward the Grand Hotel, and when in the street found himself between two cars going in opposite directions. At this moment W. Starke endeavored to board one of the cars while it was in motion, and in doing so accidently struck Mr. Reddy and the latter was felled to the ground. In falling his head struck one end of the car steps and inflicted a painful scalp wound. Policeman Tracy escorted Mr. Reddy to a drug store, where the wound was dressed temporarily. Mr. Reddy was then taken to his home 2717 Pacific avenue, where he was attended by the family physician.

Coolgardie

Rich new Goldfields being constantly found in Coolgardie gold fields, West Australia, is an accessible one, reached by steamer to Fremantle, then rail to Southern Cross and team or stage to destination. The trip to Australia on one of the Oceanic Steamship Company's fine steamers via Honolulu, Samoa, and New Zealand is a pleasure sailing the day long. Rates to Cape Town, Africa. Map of Coolgardie district and mines reached by the Oceanic Steamship Company is mailed free to any address by the O. S. S. Co. 138 Montgomery St., San Francisco.

Estray.

There came to my place about July 1st, 1894, one white and red cow, about five years old, branded N C on right hip. The owner is notified to pay the charges and take his property away, or she will be sold according to law.

JAMES HINES.

Two carloads of lumber came down on Monday's train for the new mill to be built at the Hirsch mine. In all about sixty thousand feet of lumber will be used. The mill will be located on the Inyo Canal and a tramway will be built from the mine to the mill. This work will keep a number of men employed and will help the times here considerably.

There is another rumor of a change of time on the C. & C. which will bring us about fifteen hours closer to San Francisco. This will mean a night train from Hawthorne, and consequently some inconvenience in that respect, but a vast improvement in our mail facilities.

The Sunday school pic-nic at the Fort last Tuesday was a pronounced success. The little folks had plenty of ice-cream, cake and other good things, and diverse amusements furnished them plenty of entertainment.

The party of University men who recently crossed the Kearsarge trail, report that two bands of sheep had crossed the trail before them. As the snow is very deep they must have had a hard job.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Rives arrived at Independence last Monday and will make their home in Inyo. Mr. Rives is Superintendent of the Hirsch mine and expects to have a residence erected at the works soon.

Come to the Fourth of July and bring your children with you. Remember that it comes but once a year, and you cannot inculcate a spirit of patriotism in their youthful minds in any better manner.

Norm. Mairs came down from Long Valley yesterday. He says that the stock are doing exceptionally well this year. There is an abundance of feed.

To The Public.

I have been informed that parties at Independence have been selling poor butter as my production. My butter is put up in squares with the words, "Fairview Creamery" in capital letters, stamped across the face. It is always wrapped in butter parchment and packed in boxes bearing the creamery stamp. Butter prepared in any other way without stamp or wrapped in cloth is not genuine. I have been using my stamp for over two years, and not a square ever leaves the factory without being printed.

W. D. ROBERTS

Round Valley, May 31, 1895.

Ten Dollars Reward

The above reward will be paid for information as to the whereabouts of the following described stock, which were lost at Rose Springs, near Haiwai, on May 15. One bay horse branded J. One bay horse branded AR. One bay mare branded JH. One gray mule branded X. One black horse-mule branded P. The finder will please communicate with thi this office or with A. W. Elbeshutz, Independence, Cal.

The sale of the Fair wheat, which took place in San Francisco last week, was the largest transaction of the kind ever held in the State. There were 179,600 tons of wheat which sold for $17 per ton or $3,053,200.

NOTICE OF MEETING OF BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, will meet as a Board of Equalization on MONDAY, JULY 1, 1895.

At the office of the said Board, in the town of Independence, to examine the assessment book and equalize the assessment of property in said County for the year 1895, and will continue in session for that purpose until the business of equalization is disposed of.

D. J. HESSION,
Clerk of the Board of Supervisors.

Independence Celebration.

JULY FOURTH 1895.

MORNING EXERCISES.

Prayer	S. W. ALBONE.
Song, "Red, White and Blue"	CHOIR
Instrumental music, Mrs. F. E. DESMOND.
Oration	S. G. SNEDEN Esq.
Song, "Star Spangled Banner"	CHOIR
Recitation	BLANCHE BUNNEY
Song	IRMA WEBB
Duet—Violin and Piano
Miss ETTA WOOD and Miss HELDA HARRIS.
Recitation	BIRDIE LEVY.
Song, "America"	MEDLEY.

AFTERNOON SPORTS.

Girls Race, 10 years and under	$2 50
" " over 10 and not over 14	3 00
Boys Race, 10 years and under	2 50
" " over 10 and under 14	3 00
Potato Race, free for all	5 00
3-Legged Race	3 00
Sack Race	3 00
Indian Pony Race	5 00
Chinaman's Race	2 50
Tug of War, Married vs. Single Men	5 00
Saddle Horse Race, free for all	20 00

☞ Entrance fee, $2 50; 3 to enter, 2 to start. Entry book now open with Secretary B. H. Yandell; closes 12 M., July 4, 1895.

GRAND BALL IN THE EVENING.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix, at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ALLIE R. BROWN.
Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased.

Dated February 15 1895.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administratrix.
aug3 5

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.

☞ First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

BIG PINE HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL

New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates

☞ Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modoc Cal.

FOR SALE.
THE WHITNEY HOUSE

—The only hotel in—

LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL

Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address

MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor

The newest Style

OF

Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc.

AT

L. WOOD
CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get the

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

[Official.]

Notice To Tax-Payers.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT I have received from the Auditor of the County of Inyo, State of California the Assessment Roll for the year A. D. 1894-5, that the taxes on all personal property secured by real property and one-half the taxes on all real property, will be due and payable on the first Monday in October and will be delinquent on the last Monday in November next thereafter, at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto fifteen per cent will be added to the amount thereof; and that if said one-half be not paid before the last Monday in April next at six o'clock p. m. an additional five per cent. will be added thereto; that the remaining one-half of the taxes on all real property will be payable on and after the first Monday in January next and will be delinquent on the last Monday in April next thereafter at six o'clock p. m., and that unless paid prior thereto five per cent. will be added to the amount thereof; that all taxes may be paid at the time the first installment as herein provided is due and payable.

A. M. GIVEN,
Tax Collector.

oct5 td

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED DRESDEN WARE.

BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER, General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.	From Mound House No. 1		To Mound House No. 2
	Leave—		Arrives—
Mound House	10:50 a. m.		5:20 p. m
Wellington	11:25 a. m.		4:45 p. m
Wabuska	1:40 p. m		2:28 p. m
Hawthorne	Ar. 5:00 p. m		Lv. 11:00 a. m
	No. 3.		No. 4
	Leave—		Arrives—
Hawthorne	6:00 a. m.		7:25 p. m
Luning	7:1[illegible] a. m.		6:15 p. m
Sodaville	7:50 a. m.		5:35 p. m
Mina	8:50 a. m.		4:35 p. m
Sodaville	9:10 a. m		3:50 p. m
Benton	1:30 p. m		11:50 a. m
Bishop Creek	3:10 p. m.		9:50 a. m
Alvord	5 p. m		8:55 a. m
Independence	5:55 p. m.		7:25 a. m
Lone Pine	6:20 p. m		6:50 a. m
Keeler	Ar. 7:00 p. m.		Lv. 6:00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles), Bodie (35 miles), Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's tri-weekly stages (leave Luning Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downieville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma, Alida valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (2 miles), Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles).

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

A. W. Elbeshutz
Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH
FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave,
WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS
at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeler,
MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS
at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER,
Propr.

JOHN B. CLARKE,

Successor to John Clarke,

—PROPRIETOR—

John Clarke's Bishop Stables,

BISHOP, CAL.

First-class Turnouts of Every Kind
Fine horses and Carriages.
horses Boarded for any Time
Best of Care and Attention

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, Cal.

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.

Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.

O. I. MAIRS Pro
feb12tf

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS. WATCHES.
Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

☞ All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
0-m RENO, NEV.

BUSINESS ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.
Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, on the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.
O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

INDEPENDENCE
MEAT MARKET,
J. C. BOTTER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

☞ Orders supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.

j19-tf

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

☞ Buyers and consumers should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1894.
j19tf

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE, INYO Co. Cal.

Dealer in
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies

PROVISIONS

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

BELL'S Flouring Mills
A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT [illegible] FLOUR

Having added [illegible] to our [illegible]

The U. S. Government Tests Show the Absolute Superiority of Royal Baking Powder.

(Data from the latest Official U. S. Government Report on Baking Powders, Department of Agriculture, Bulletin 13, page 599.)

ROYAL is placed first of the cream of tartar powders; actual strength, 160.6 cubic inches of leavening gas per ounce of powder.

Every other powder tested exhibited a much lower strength than the Royal, the average being 33 per cent. less.

Every other powder likewise showed the presence of alum or sulphuric acid.

The claim that this report shows any other powder of superior strength or purity has been denounced as a falsehood by the Government officers who made the tests.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL ST., NEW-YORK.

STILL DISSATISFIED.

"There's one thing to be said in favor of the pugilists that go on the stage, said Mrs Meekton. "You never hear of them quarreling and bickering like tenors and leading men."

"No, replied her husband, "nothing seems to go as we expect it to. The actors all want to fight and wont act and the fighters all want to act and wont fight."—Washington Star.

Weinstock, Lubin & Co

400 to 412 K St.,

Sacramento, Cal.

Largest General Retail House on Coast.

Wearing Apparel of all kinds for men, women, and children; Dry Goods, Shoes, Hats, Millinery, Valises, Furniture, Carpets, Crockery, Notions, Stationery, Silverware, Toys, Household Supplies, etc.

Catalogue Free.

A handsome illustrated catalogue about our goods and prices sent free to any address. Tens of thousands of customers find it profitable and satisfactory to buy through this book.

TERMS CASH.

Enclose money for goods with order, and if to be sent by mail allow for postage. Any balance left over will be returned.

If interested in any of the items below, order promptly, giving item number.

A171. India Silks for dresses and waists, sun fast colors and will wash; black, cream, cardinal, and navy blue; 22 inches wide. Special price, 25c yard.

A172. Misses' and children's pebble grain button Shoes, with box toes, stout soles and spring heels. Just the thing for school or play. Sizes 5 to 8½, 65c; sizes 9 to 11½, 75c; sizes 12 to 2, 90c. These prices are much below regular value.

A173. Women's stainless black cotton Hose, good quality. Price, 10c pair.

A174. Women's balbriggan Vests, low neck and short sleeves. Not a mean vest in any particular, although the price is only 11c.

A175. Ventilated Corsets for summer wear, cool and comfortable; sizes 18 to 30. Price, 50c.

A176. Horn bones, good quality, 10 inches long. Price, 8c dozen.

A177. Women's black Hose Supporters, gored belt, with original Lindsay patent button fastening. Price, 12½c.

A178. Women's ready made Duck Suits, navy blue, tan or light grounds; Blazer jacket and full skirt; sizes 32 to 42 inch bust. Price $1.75 suit.

A179. Shirt Waist of black Sateen, 34 to 42 inch bust. Special value at 44c.

A180. Chamois fibre for sleeve lining, 35c yd.; gray or black silesia for skirt lining, 8c yd.; heavy silesia for waist lining, 15c yd.

A181. Ecru scrim, 38 inches wide. Price, 6¼c yd.

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN & CO.,
10 Sacramento, Cal.

BRAVERY OF AFGHANS.

The courage and undaunted boldness of the Afghans will bear comparison with that of any nation, and many are the instances of personal bravery known to British officers. There lives in the Yusufzai country an old chieftain, the hero of many fights, who now enjoys a well-earned pension, with the village manor as a reward for honorable service, and who on more than one occasion risked his life to save that of his commanding officer.

The present editor of the London Evening Globe records with gratitude the fact that thirty years ago his life was saved by Afzal Khan, the recent envoy to the Cabul court. Major Wigram Battye, whom I burried at Jellabad, fell on the battlefield of Fattahabad in the conquest of Afghan territory, but they were Afghan soldiers of his own regiment who stood over his dead body to protect it from insult. The missionary Tuting was attacking the faith of the Moslem in the streets of an Afghan city, when his life was attempted by an assassin, but it was his Afghan servant who saved the preacher's life even in the midst of popular tumult.

Colin Mackenzie, one of the Cabul prisoners of 1842, often told the story of that Afghan chivalry which protected the lives and honor of English ladies in the excitement of a national rebellion. Nor are they slow to appreciate the quality of bravery in others. In the frontier war of 1863, a young English officer was deserted by his native sepoys and for some time held his [illegible] the midst of a crowd of [illegible]. When the brave [illegible] covered with [illegible] had cut [illegible] the in- [illegible] English- [illegible] is

Richard Green's Escape.

By WILLIAM M'KENDREE BANGS.

CHAPTER II.

When Richard Green awoke the next morning the sun was well up and his room was flooded with light. Rising quickly he walked to the window and looked out. Out, perhaps half a mile from the shore, the surf was breaking gayly upon a reef, the spray springing high and sparkling in the sun. Beyond, moving in a long, easy swell, with only a white sail here and there to vary its monotony or to make more vivid the surrounding blue, stretched the great sea to the horizon. Within the reef lay Joosten's broad and lazy boat, the dancing waters of the lagoon slowly flowing by it, and sometimes splashing up to playfully caress its white, smooth sides.

Already the coolies were busily engaged in unloading from it the few stores its owner had found time to purchase the day before. Richard, thus recalled to the work-a-day world, hastily dressed himself and was soon down stairs.

On the lower floor he found working in the room which he supposed was the office the young man who had called Mr. Joosten out the night before to see the man.

"Good morning," this young man greeted him with. "My name is Hackett. The old gentleman is about outdoors somewhere. Are you an Englishman too?"

"No," Richard answered. "You are, I presume."

"Yes."

"Have you been in exile long?"

"No, and I do not intend to be much longer. In a little while longer I shall be on my way to home and civilization. I came on a visit some months ago, and here I have staid and staid, but I hardly know why except that I like them."

"It's a long way to come visiting," Richard said smiling.

"Yes; but I wanted to go all over the world, and you see the old lady is a relative of mine."

"Oh, indeed!"

"Yes; and then the old man—queer old party—had trouble with his man, and I have been trying to help him out. I hate these books already—I don't know anything about them, either. Do you?"

"No, of course not."

"Oh, I mean bookkeeping."

"Not much; but I remember that an old friend of mine once told me that a bookkeeper only needed to know how to tell the truth and tell it."

"Well, that isn't always easy. But, I say, let's go out and look about. Don't you want to see what the place looks like? Breakfast is a long way off yet. They have it late, you know. The old man doesn't seem to know the difference. They say it is bad to work before fortifying the inner man; but, pshaw! nothing can make work endurable. Let us go."

Hackett yawned lazily and shut his books and led Richard toward the front door. Richard looked about him, interested. About the house grew a few large and beautiful palm trees and there were many tropical flowers, but the foliage had been thinned and was kept in order. A little way off were the storehouses and the quarters of the men, all gray and weather beaten. The house itself was a large, square structure two stories only in height. It had been painted white, but now it was dingy and in many places the paint had peeled off; but, nevertheless, wherever a window was open, within there was a suggestion of neatness and comfort. As they went out Richard noticed that, although the veranda was now all open to the light and air, the posts which supported its roof were fitted with heavy wooden shutters.

He held in his hand a long handled spade.

"These are very heavy and solid," he said.

"Yes, you see they have great storms here, but I am very glad they have them," Hackett continued, as he looked about him cautiously. "These coolies are a bad lot. Mr. Joosten is too easy with them. I think, between you and me, he is more than half afraid of them."

"That is rather bad."

"Yes, but the old lady has pluck enough for half a dozen. She is true through and through—but here he comes!"

[illegible], as he joined them, spoke some cheerful words of greeting; but Richard thought he detected signs that the affairs of the old man still found Richard wondered a little what such a man should have gained such a share of fortune's favors, and why any burden had been willing to place upon shoulders so unfit a one. But Joosten was more subjected to circumstances than men are, and the courage of his wife had never failed them. Otherwise, he would long before have given up the contest. Now, his wife helped him to believe that in a few years more they would be rich enough to live where and as they pleased.

During all that day, and indeed during many days, Mr. Joosten was occupied in showing Green what work he would have to do and in making him acquainted with the large establishment in all its parts. Mainly, it seemed to Green, he showed him what difficulties he would have to contend with, how active and hardworking he would have to be; but the young man was not easily discouraged and he foresaw no great hardships. To be sure, he was conscious that he knew nothing of the practical methods of growing sugarcane or making sugar, which, as he learned at once, was Mr. Joosten's chief business; but he was assured by the old gentleman that practical knowledge was not needed by him. He would soon know enough to see whether the small bosses shirked their work or not, and if he did that and kept the accounts in good order nothing more could be asked of him.

To Green it seemed as he met the men at work that they looked at both Mr. Joosten and himself with ill concealed dislike; but he laughed his fears away and thought that Hackett's alarming words had had a greater effect upon him than they should have had.

But before long there was unmistakable evidence that trouble of some sort was brewing. Mr. Joosten seemed helpless, and Richard Green himself was hardly enough familiar with the men and the situation to easily decide what was best for him. From the watchful eye of Mrs. Joosten nothing could be hidden, and although she did not urge Joosten to any definite action she encouraged them all.

"A little firmness and energy will settle it all when the time comes," she said to Richard.

"What is it you fear then?" Richard asked her.

"Oh, I hardly know. Nothing perhaps; but no one can tell how these men will act."

"Can anything be done in the meantime to make us safer?"

"I dare say it is not necessary."

But Green was determined that they should not be caught altogether unprepared, and he saw that such firearms as there were about the house were in proper condition. Then he remembered the heavy shutters with which the veranda could be closed in. These he closed and locked himself every night, except those at one end. He thought that that open end might be defended. It was fortunate that these precautions were taken, for before many nights word came to them while they were at supper that the men demanded to see Mr. Joosten.

"Promise me you will not yield anything, Hans," Mrs. Joosten said to her husband. "If you do we shall always live in fear. No one can tell what they will ask next."

"It shall be as you wish," he promised, but plainly Mrs. Joosten was fearful that all would not be as she would have it, and Green and Hackett followed Mr. Joosten out upon the veranda. This, closed in upon all sides but one, was like a long, narrow room dimly lighted by a lantern hanging to the roof near the open end. Gathered at that end, without and about the steps, there were perhaps a dozen men, while one was standing by Mr. Joosten talking quickly to him and gesticulating violently. This man was one who had charge of one of the small gangs into which the men were divided. Green had noticed him before for the sullen and vicious way in which he had looked at them when he had been going about the plantation with Mr. Joosten. Now he held in his hand a long handled spade, and he seemed, as nearly as Green and Hackett could understand him, to be demanding that Richard should be dismissed and that his predecessor should be reinstated.

"The same thing they asked before," Hackett whispered.

"Yes; they do not seem to have grown any fonder of me," Green answered, smiling, careless of the danger, if there was any. He and Hackett were standing well back in the shadow, and it is doubtful if the man with Mr. Joosten saw them. At all events, at this moment he made so threatening a gesture toward Mr. Joosten that Green, stepping quickly forward, lifted him from his feet and flung him bodily forth among his comrades. There was a murmur among them, but Hackett had followed, and he now bade them be off before worse should befall them. This sudden and unexpected show of decision must have disconcerted them, for they seemed to melt into the night, so quickly did they disappear.

"Well, old man," said Hackett, as he put his hand familiarly on Richard's shoulder, "that was well done. But, I say, I did not know you were so strong."

"Oh, but he was a very little fellow," Richard answered. "That was a rebellion easily quelled."

Green now carefully closed and locked the shutters remaining open, Mr. Joosten looking on the while almost in astonishment. He was almost overwhelmed at the quickness of the two young men. He gasped once or twice, and then, as he recovered his breath, they went in to Mrs. Joosten, and he could only say:

"It is very troublesome, all very troublesome."

"Come, Hans," she said, "do not be worried. Tell me all about it," she added, turning to Richard.

She was very angry and indignant as he told her of the early part of the interview, but when Hackett broke in and told her how Richard had treated the spokesman, she laughed and enjoyed it.

"That was good," she said. "Treat them in that way and we will not have any trouble; but when we are afraid of them, why, then"——

As they separated for the night she smiled approvingly at Green and he felt that he had won her good will at any rate. That Mr. Joosten was pleased he was not so sure.

The next morning soon after breakfast the gentle, slowgoing horse Mr. Joosten had set apart for Green's use was brought to the door, and he was about to start on the round of the plantation, which was now one of his daily duties.

"You are not going today?" Joosten asked him in surprise.

"I meant to, of course. Why not?"

"Why, it will not be safe to go among the men after last night."

"I think you are mistaken," Green responded. "It would not do now to fail to go. They would be sure to believe that I was afraid. I really think I ought to go."

"Yes," Mrs. Joosten interrupted. "Mr. Green is surely right. He must go."

Then she led Richard Green to one side and she said to him:

"But you will be very careful, very quick. You are armed, are you not?"

"Yes."

"That is right; but you must be very careful."

"You are very kind," Richard replied. "But I do not think there is any danger."

"Shall I not go with you?" Hackett asked, as Green mounted his horse.

"No. Then they would be certain of my fear. And what should I do after you are gone?"

"Just as you like, old fellow; but, of course, you are not in any danger. Throw that chap over the fence if you get a chance. It will be only good exercise for you."

And while they were laughing Richard rode away, but Mr. Joosten shook his head as though he thought they were all very foolhardy. As Richard trotted slowly on, he thought of the situation and of its many dangers, and as he turned a corner so that he was hidden from those at the house he examined carefully his revolver. For a minute, may be, he wished that he had not been so resolute, and that he had permitted Hackett to accompany him; but soon he was influenced by the quiet of the surroundings.

At last he came to the great field wherein the coolies were working. The men were gathered in little groups, some loading the wagons, others with their sugar knives—short, sharp knives fastened at right angles to their handles—were at the edge of the growing cane, while far off to the right perhaps half a dozen were grouped about a man whom Richard quickly recognized, even at the great distance, to be the man he had so unceremoniously thrown from the veranda the night before. Richard rode directly toward the group. The men separated as he came near, but stood sullen and silent.

"Come, why are you not at work?" he asked.

(To be continued.)

Wool—"I don't see how a dealer can afford to iron all the silk hats he sells." Van Pelt—"Has to do it; they'd last too long if he didn't."—Harlem Life.

"Miss Robbins sings like a bird, doesn't she?" Mr. Blank—"No; they stop singing sometimes."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

SUMMER ACTIVITIES.

If one were to attempt to enumerate and classify the sports of summer, he would have a large job on hand, but at a glance we know that thousands are engaged in these pastimes of land and water. The use of physical and muscular exertion is immense, and as a result the rough usage brings about sprains, hurts, bruises, wounds and cuts, for which the greatest and surest cure is St. Jacobs Oil. All sportsmen know and acknowledge this, as also raisers and trainers of fine horses, and breeders of fine cattle. It is the sportsmen's best reliance and is kept on hand accordingly.

Mother—How is it that you get so many bad marks at school? Little Johnny—Well, the teacher has got to mark somebody, or else folks will think she ain't attending to her business.

BEWARE OF OINTMENT FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAINS MERCURY.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

☞ Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

A government with sound sense will have honest dollars.

A TERRIBLE VISITANT.

Pain is always a terrible visitant, and often domiciles itself with one for life. This infliction is preventible, in cases of rheumatism, by a timely resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which checks the encroachments of this obstinate and dangerous malady at the outset. The term "dangerous" is used advisedly, for rheumatism is always liable to attack the vital organs and terminate life. No testimony is more conclusive and concurrent than that of physicians who testify to the excellent effect of the Bitters in this disease. Persons incur a wetting in rainy or snowy weather, and who are exposed to draughts, should use the Bitters as a preventive of ill effects. Malaria, dyspepsia, liver and kidney trouble, nervousness and debility are also among the ailments to which this popular medicine is adapted. For the infirmities, soreness and stiffness of the aged it is highly beneficial.

The advanced woman in England has taken to discussing the question of long engagements before marriage.

Piso Cure is a wonderful Cough medicine.—MRS. W. PICKERT, Van Siclen and Blake Aves., Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 26, 1894.

The crocodile's egg is about the size of that of the goose.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

WE GIVE AWAY

Absolutely free of cost, for a LIMITED TIME ONLY,

COUPON No. 114

The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, By R. V. Pierce, M. D., Chief Consulting Physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, a book of over 1,000 large pages and 300 colored and other illustrations, in strong paper covers to any one sending 21 cents in one-cent stamps for packing and postage only. Over 680,000 copies of this complete Family Doctor Book already sold in cloth binding at regular price of $1.50. Address: (with stamps and this Coupon) WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

YOUNG WOMAN YOU CAN MAKE MONEY BALING hay with a good Hay Press. Write us for information.

BICYCLES—We sell all the best first-class Bicycles. Write for Catalogue.

I. J. TRUMAN & CO.,
236 Bush Street, San Francisco, Cal.
Please mention this Paper when writing.

Ladies Hats We have bought out a millinery establishment—largest in town; lots of old fashioned hats and too many late styles for our trade. The following prices per dozen will buy them: 25, 50, 75, $1, $1.25. The cheapest are old style, the best mostly late style. Send for them or send 2c stamp for full particulars to Smith's Cash Store, 418 Front Street, San Francisco, Cal.

GOOD FOR EVIL.

ADOLF CERNY FULFILS AN OLD WORLD PROPHECY.

Poor Bohemian Struggling for Existence in a Chicago Coat-making Establishment Wins $15,000 Through the Honduras National Lottery—Assists the Descendants of Aristocrats.

One of those peculiar stories of fact so closely allied to romance that one must wonder as one reads came out a few days ago when Adolf Cerny, a poor Bohemian tailor who has toiled and struggled for years, was notified that fortune had suddenly made him rich through the February drawing of the Honduras National lottery (Louisiana State lottery). He had held a one-fifth ticket of No. 66,544, and it had drawn the capital prize of $75,000 and Adolf Cerny was worth $15,000.

The story lies not in the fact of a poor man suddenly becoming wealthy, for the history of the Honduras National lottery is brilliant with such happy tales, but it lies in the individual history of Cerny, through whose agency a strange prophecy came true.

Adolf Cerny has been living at 74 Emma street. He has four brothers in this country and seven in Bohemia. He is about 35 years of age and has worked for John Harper, the custom coat maker, at 186 Fifth avenue.

The great-great grandfather of Adolf Cerny was the one who made the prophecy so many years ago. As a young man he had been a handsome, daring fellow, unimpressed by the hauteur of the continental aristocracy, and when the daughter of a great family touring through his country was attracted to the strong, courageous guide, and before the tour was over had gladly accepted his love, he made bold, applied to the parents for a chance to so distinguish himself that he might become worthy the hand of one who returned his love. Furiously he was turned upon and would have been beaten had not his strength prevailed, and then in the torment of wounded pride and ridiculed love turned and cried:

"You have broken my heart, but some day my children shall hold their hands to be kissed by your children."

And now in far-off Bohemia the two families live side by side, each equally poor, equally humble, and the first act of Cerny's upon collecting his $15,000, which is a vast fortune in Bohemia, through the American Express Company, was to write the dear ones at home, sending a comfortable draft, with instructions to help the neighbors whose ancestors had spurned his ancestors.—Chicago, Ill., Dispatch, April 8th.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Ely's Cream Balm QUICKLY CURES COLD IN HEAD

Price 50 Cents.

Apply Balm into each nostril. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

ELY'S CREAM BALM CURES COLD IN HEAD CATARRH HAY-FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE ELY BROS. NEW YORK

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE.

FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

PLEASANT Profitable Employment AT HOME. No experience or capital required. A month and expenses to $50 the right parties. Address for particulars

M. A. THOMPSON,
Stockton, Cal.
(Mention this paper.)

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to

DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY,

which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

ASK YOUR DRUGGIST FOR

IMPERIAL GRANUM

IT IS THE BEST

FOOD

FOR

Dyspeptic, Delicate, Infirm and AGED PERSONS

JOHN CARLE & SONS, New York.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc. AGENTS WANTED.

PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal.
BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

S. F. N. U. No. 674. New Series No. 21.

SPRING MAKES ME TIRED

To many people Spring and its duties mean an aching head, tired limbs, and throbbing nerves. Just as the milder weather comes, the strength begins to wane and "that tired feeling" is the complaint of all.

The reason for this condition is found in the deficient quality of the blood. During the winter, owing to various causes, the blood becomes loaded with impurities and loses its richness and vitality. Consequently, as soon as the bracing effect of cold air is lost, there is languor and lack of energy. The cure will be found in purifying and enriching the blood.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest and best spring medicine because it is the greatest and best blood purifier. It overcomes that tired feeling because it makes pure, rich blood. It gives strength to nerves and muscles because it endows the blood with new powers of nourishment. It creates an appetite, tones and strengthens the stomach and digestive organs, and thus builds up the whole system and prepares it to meet the change to warmer weather.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is a medicine upon which you may depend. It is the only true blood purifier prominently before the public eye today. It has a record of cures unequalled in the history of medicine. It is the medicine of which so many people write, "Hood's Sarsaparilla does all that it is claimed to do." You can take Hood's Sarsaparilla with the confident expectation that it will give you pure blood and renewed health. Take it now.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Is the Only True Blood Purifier

Prominently in the Public Eye Today.

"DON'T BORROW TROUBLE." BUY

SAPOLIO

'TIS CHEAPER IN THE END.

MALARIA! DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY. Three doses only. Try it.

Insist on ARM AND HAMMER SODA in packages

BEWARE of imitation trade marks and labels.

ARM AND HAMMER

Costs no more than inferior package soda—never spoils the flour, keeps soft, and is universally acknowledged purest in the world.

Made only by CHURCH & CO., New York.
Sold by grocers everywhere.
Write for Arm and Hammer Book of valuable Recipes—FREE.

Hercules

GAS OR GASOLINE

Engines

Workmanship the very best.
Always Ready, a boy can start them
No double or false explosions.
They Oil Themseves

A FEW USES TO W[illegible]

For Wood-w[illegible]
For Bea[illegible]
For Hoi[illegible]
Running [illegible]
Running S[illegible]
Bottling
Sawing Co[illegible]
Running Ch[illegible]
Sawing [illegible]
Pumping
Running E[illegible]
Running Paint [illegible]
Running Electric Mo[illegible]
For Printing Machinery.
Running Sewing Machines.
For Electric Light Dynamos.
Running Ice-cream Freezers
For Carpe-beating Machinery.

ADDRESS:
PALMER & REY
405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal.

CABLED POULTRY, GARDEN AND RABBIT FENCE the best in the market; also CABLED FIELD AND HOG FENCING, STEEL WEB PICKET LAWN FENCE, STEEL WIRE FENCE BOARD; a full line of steel gates, steel posts and rail, steel web picket tree, flower and tomato guards. Catalogue Free.

De Kalb Fence Co., 100 High St., De Kalb, Ill.

JNO. WOODLOCK, PACIFIC COAST AGENT, 26 Beale St., San Francisco, Cal.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

LOST Forever The money you have paid for rent is lost to you. By our plan, we loan, improve, build or purchase the house, lot, or both, anywhere you may reside or select it. It is deeded to you. You occupy it and pay monthly rent to us, until the amount due is paid. In case you die the debt is paid. Men of push can represent us everywhere. Association Bldg., 208 Mason St., room 7, San Francisco, Cal. Stamp for prospectus, etc. Inducements for monthly investments are equally profitable.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP - FOR CHILDREN TEETHING - For sale by all Druggists, 25 cents a bottle.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. WOODS & CO'S.
"CASTLEWOOD" KENTUCKY BOURBON
CARTAN, MCCARTHY & CO.
SOLE AGENTS, AND DISTRIBUTORS
SAN FRANCISCO

PALESTINE CORN

Is hard to beat. Can be planted till June. Yields about 2,000 lbs. corn and 12 tons excellent fodder per acre on dry land. Can be harvested with combined harvester. Send $1 per acre for seed desired. Address: SACRAMENTO NURSERY CO., WALNUT GROVE, CALIF.

INCUBATORS W. C. Beach, Ripon, Cal.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVII. NO. 2. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JUNE 28, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1287.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$1.00
Six Months	2.00
Three Months	1.25
One Month	50
Single Copies	10

MINERAL LAND.

The Absorption of Titles Under Uniform Rulings.

CALIFORNIA MINERS PROTEST.

Cases Cited Where Railroad Claims Were Favored by the Commissioner—Classification of Land.

A. H. Ricketts of San Francisco, as the representative of the California Miners' Aassociation, recently had an interview with the President and presented a petition of his clients respecting the patenting of valubale mineral lands in California to the land-aided railroads in three non-mineral grants.

Mr. Ricketts in the petition called attention to the fact that the absorption of the mineral land lying within the limits of the railroad grants is accomplished under the pretense that such lands are agricultural in character, a proceeding in which they are assisted by the rule promulgated by the Land Department of the United States on the 9th of last July. He said that when a combined effort is made to save such portions of the public domain by citizens in general their protests are dismissed without a hearing, on the ground that they are altogether too vague and indefinite to warrant any consideration by the Land Office, although the rules aforesaid provide that: "Any suggestion as to the mineral character of such lands is sufficient to cause a hearing to be ordered." For illustration Mr. Ricketts cited the dismissal of protests forwarded from Roseburg, Or., against selections of the railroad companies, where the same was signed by nearly 200 citizens, including clerks, judges of courts, county surveyors and commissioners, professional men, miners and farmers. Yet by a letter dated March 6, 1895, this portest was dismissed, because the Commissioner held that there were no allegations therein as to the character of each forty-acre subdivision mentioned, but the Commisioner afforded no opportunity to the protestants to remedy this so-called technical defect, and on the 20th of last month this land, embracing 100,000 acres, was approved for patent. The protests are thus disregarded as too vague to be even considered by the Land Department, but an affidavit of the land agent of the railroad company, which is admittedly the rankest kind of hearsay evidence, is sufficient under the rules to make the land involved prima facie agricultural in character and cause such patent to be issued therefor. It would appear that the Land Department is moving with unseemly haste in divesting the Government of its title to the lands situated within the limits of the railroad grants, and in depriving citizens of the Un[illegible] States of their legal rights to expl[illegible] occup[illegible]

E[illegible] d [illegible]tes [illegible]he [illegible] be [illegible]der [illegible]neral [illegible] Mon- [illegible]ent has [illegible]e matter [illegible]ental to the [illegible] There are now [illegible] the gold belt of Cali- [illegible] selections aggregating [illegible] acres, and in the petroleum belt of that State a railroad selection aggregating 6,330.34 acres, and all these lands are subject to patent as agricultural lan[illegible]der the rules of July 9, 1894, without regard to their true character.

It is tue that the California Miners' Association has caused protests to be filed against these selections, but from the precedent established in the Roseburg, Or., case these protests will probably be dismissed without hearing as too vague to be considered and but serve to accelerate the speed of the Land Department in approving such lists for patent.

The apparently indecent haste of the Land Department in the Roseburg case, continued Mr. Ricketts in his argument, is only paralleled by the unwonted activity of the railroad companies of California in applying for patents since the promulgation of the rules of July 9, 1894. The premises considered, it was impossible for the protestants in the Roseburg case to have received due notice of dismissal. This means that they were unjustly deprived of their day in court and that the Oregon and California Railroad Company was improperly assisted in securing title to what at least 200 people believed was mineral land and reserved by Congress from its grant.

The work of designing and setting apart agricultural lands in the mineral regions being left under the law to the United States Geological Bureau and upon the Secretary of the Interior, the California Miners' Association respectfully asks the President's aid to refer this matter to the honorable Secretary of the Interior for appropriate action, to the end that the rules of July 9, 1894, and the practice of the Land Department may be made to conform to the statutes and decisions of the courts; that pending such action the President should order the immediate suspension of all proceedings in the matter of railroad selections and patents to lands situated in California, and that in default of speedy action by the honorable Secretary of the Interior such order of suspension be made to continue until Congress shall pass upon the matter.

Mr. Ricketts seemed very well pleased by the manner in which the President received him, and is confident of success. "Mr. Cleveland," he said, "seemed very much interested in my arguments on behalf of the miners, and intimated that he would do all in his power he possibly could to relieve them. He seemed surprised by some of the statements made, and seemed to be willing to issue an order to restrain the patenting of the mineral lands to the land grant railroads should the case warrant it."

Mr. Cleveland promised to look carefully into the matter and do what he could to straighten things. At the President's request, Mr. Ricketts will remain in Washington for a short time and enlighten him on any point which may need fuller explanation, as the time for the interview was short and matters could not be discussed at length. The President will refer the matter to Secretary Smith, should he favor the arguments, and have immediate action taken.

HENRY CLAY AT WHIST.

"One of my boyhood recollections," said General Wade Hampton, "refers to Henry Clay. He was a frequent visitor at my father's house in South Carolina. Both Clay and my father were ardent whist players, and nothing was more to their minds than the collection of a brace of gentlemen equally addicted to whist, and then the quartet would play for hours. While the name of whist might serve to imply a game where silence reigned, my father and Clay didn't play whist that way. They exulted audibly over a success, and did not hesitate when they were playing as partners to violently point out mistakes the other had made, and attributed defeat to the other's ignorance and utter lack of natural intelligence. Indeed, on occasions particularly trying, they were even known to apply hard names to one another. This they did in no slanderous spirit, but to brighten up and sharpen the wits of the other to the improvement of the play," says the Chicago Times-Herald. As they were sitting down to a game as partners one evening Clay remarked:

"'It's a great outrage the way we talk to each other, and my idea now, at the outset is for each of us to put up $20 to belong to the one who is first called hard names by the other. If you assail me the money is mine; if I forget myself you take it.'

"My father readily agreed. He felt in a mild, agreeable mood. He was confident he would never again be a prey to the slightest impulse to speak harshly to his dear friend Clay. And, besides, it was his recollection that Clay was the man who raged and did all the loud talking. So my father cheerfully placed the $20 on top of Clay's. He thought it would be a good lesson to the blue-grass orator to lose it. As they proceeded with the game Clay made some excessively thick-headed and ill-advised plays. He led the wrong cards; he trumped the wrong tricks he did everything idiotic in whist that he well could. My father's blood began to boil. As he and Clay lost game after game his wrath ran higher and higher. Still he bit his lip and suffered a silence. It went on for hours, until Clay made some play of crowning imbecility which lost him and my father the eleventh game. Flesh and blood could stand no more. My father sternly pushed the $40 over to Clay.

"'Why,' said Clay, opening his gray eyes with a look of innocence and amazement, 'why do you do that? You haven't said a word.'

"'No,' retorted my father, 'but I'm going to tell you, sir, that you are the most abject idiot, the most boundless imbecile that ever dealt a hand at whist. Yes, sir; I repeat it, you are the——fool I ever met in my life.'"

ODDS AND ENDS FROM ABROAD.

The land of fire, Terra del Fuego, is about to be visited by a Swedish expedition under Porf. Nordens Kijold, and the exploration of the country is to be thorough. Perhaps it will hereafter yield interesting reading, as not much attention has been paid to that part of the world, and there are a few risks and even perils to be encountered by those who stray away from their protecting vessels.

The shipping agents of all the Brazilian ports are complaining bitterly of the damage resulting from the recent quarantine regulations imposed upon vessels arriving from the River Plate, which practically prohibit mail steamers from calling for intermediate cargo.

No less well informed a newspaper than the "Court Journal" of London is authority for the following: "It is said that the Prince of Wales has set his face against the custom of 'tipping,' and that society will, of course, follow his example. This means either a considerable increase in the salaries of domestics or a revolt of the great untipped."

The "Nene Hessische Volksblatter" publishes an account of the gallant rescue of a drowning woman by Prince William of Hesse, half-brother of the late Grand Duke. The Prince was walking along the shore of the River Woog when he saw a woman throw herself into the water, with the intention of committing suicide. Without hesitation his Royal Highness immediately sprang in after her, and with great difficulty and at considerable risk to his own life succeeded in bringing her safely to the bank. After the Prince had placed the woman in safe hands he hurried to the town and fetched her husband.

Jones—"Are you cutting the sensational articles out of that paper before taking it home to your wife and daughters?"

Green—"No; I'm cutting out the millinery advertisements."

The long expected indictment of Chairman James Brown of the Stockton Board of Supervisors has been returned by the Grand Jury. It is in connection with the new San Joaquin County Hospital frauds.

GHOST STORIES.

Penetrating the Mysteries of the Other World.

INTEREST IN THE SUPERNATURAL.

It is Claimed that Ghosts Have Been Photographed—Saul's Visit to the Witch of Endor.

Man, as a reasoning and inquiring being, naturally seeks to know what lies beyond the reach of vision, to penetrate the mysteries of the other world. Anything supernatural has an abiding interest for the most intellectual natures. The London Psychical society, numbering Gladstone and Ruskin among its honorary members, and among its active Alfred Russell Wallace, one of the world's foremost naturalists, presents a good example of this fact. Its success in exposing the humbug of Mme. Blavatsky does not prevent it from indorsing what it considers genuine instances of the supernatural. In its reports it is claimed that ghosts have been photographed, and several authentic cases of coincidental apparitions are noted. In his latest Monday lecture Mr. Joseph Cook says: "When cases of this kind (the supernatural manifestation which Miss L. M. Alcott, narates in her 'Diary' as appearing to her mother and herself at the time of Mme. Niedieksr's death) occur age after age, from the time of Herodotus downward, it is safe to assume that there may be something true in these phenomena."

He might have gone much further back into history, and cited Saul's visit to the witch of Endor to summon up the spirit of Samuel and the fearful vision of Elipahz in the book of Job. The literature of the supernatural is extensive and interesting, but our limits forbid anything more than a brief summary of the more interesting of its incidents. Roughly speaking, they are divisible into four classes—apparitions and haunted localities, dreams giving warning of danger or death, disturbances among the dead themselves and remarkable dreams and supernatural occurrences.

Of the first class it is doubtful if a more remarkable instance could be found than the well authenticated one which furnished Bulwer-Lytton with the materials for his story. "The Haunters and the Haunted." The details were vouched for at the time by two well known English clergymen. The house stands (or stood) in Berkeley square, London. In a bedroom, the night before a wedding was to take place, a housemaid was continuing late preparations for the bride's reception next day. Just as midnight struck the sleeping household was roused by piercing shrieks, and the woman was found lying at the foot of the bed in strong convulsions. Her eyes were fixed on one corner of the room, and she was in an agony of terror. The others could see absolutely nothing unusual. She was taken to St. George's hospital, where she died next day. The expected bridegroom, who arrived that day, declared his total disbelief in "ghosts," and insisted on sleeping alone in that room to see what would come of it. Despite all remonstrances he did so, and with exactly the same result. The most awesome part of the story is that, incredible as it would be but for the testimony of witresses, both victims refused to say a word in description of what they had seen. Each declared the sight was to horrible even to mention. The house was never again occupied.

A more recent example, combining both the haunted house and the apparition, is that of the premises known as Hotwells, near Bristle, England.

The premises were eventually destroyed to make room for other buildings, as the original and all succeeding tenants left in dismay. The supernatural noises were heard by all concerned on each occasion, and were like the out cries of several persons being murdered.

The supernatural appearance was that of a huge black dog, which ran furiously out of the house, ridden by a monster of unknown kind, but resembling an ape. So late as 1869, a generation after the building had been destroyed, the apparition was seen.

Of the second class of appearances, the historic case of Lord Tyrone and Miss Hamilton may be cited. Intimate friends in childhood, they were educated as deists, and exchanged promises that the one who should first die would appear to the other and declare what religion was approved by God. Miss Hamilton became Lady Beresford, and one night while in bed was startled by the appearance of Lord Tyrone at her bedside. He told her of his death two days before, and that, being permitted to keep his agreement with her, he now affirmed the truth of revealed religion. He then foretold several important things which would happen to her, and being asked for a sign of his supernatural character, that on awakening in the morning she might not think it all a dream, touched her left wrist with his hand. The muscles at once shrank and withered, and during the rest of her life she wore a black ribbon to hide the scar. The various predictions made were afterward fulfilled to the letter, and she died on her 47th birthday, after summoning friends, to whom she related the whole tale. Scott's poem of the Eve[illegible] St. John is founded on this very [illegible]ory, which is part of the history [illegible] the two noble Irish families of Ty[illegible]ne and Beresford.

The third class, of disturbances among the dead themselves, would seem to stretch human belief beyond the breaking point, yet there are two well authenticated instances related of which. One is of the middle of the seventeenth century. A strong antipathy existed between the wife of an English land-owner in Lincolnshire and her brother-in-law. After her death he came to live with his brother, the squire, but died within a year. His antipathy to the dead woman broke out in his last moments, and he warned the clergyman in attendance that if he were buried in the same vault as she had been "the living as well as the dead should hear of it." The horrified auditor did not reveal this warning until two days after this. The burial was in the family vault.

That very night a fearful sound as of enemies struggling for the mastery in combat, accompanied by piercing shrieks, was heard from the vault by presons living near by. The story was carried to the squire, who ordered the vault opened, when a most shocking scene was presented to view. The coffin of the lady and that of her daughter, who died the year before were lying in a far corner of the vault, the young girl's across that of her mother, and close by was that of the brother-in-law. It had originally been placed upon the block stands usually so employed, but now it stood erect, though its weight had required six men to carry it into the vault before. The coffins were restored to their former positions and the door again securely fastened and a watchman posted outside. That night and every night the same fearful disturbance occurred, nor was it stopped until a brick wall had been built to effectually separate the third coffin from the other two.

Of the fourth and last class the most remarkable is the story of Lady Anne Grimstone, wife of Sir Samuel Grimstone of Gorhambary, Hertforshire, England. As her tombtstone records, she died Nov. 22, 1713. She was, strangely for a woman, an atheist, and reaffirmed her principles while dying, adding: "If there is a God, and I find it so, seven ash trees shall grow out of my tomb." As any visitor to the churchyard of Tewin, in the diocese of St. Albans, may see for himself, seven ash trees have sprung up, interlacing the iron railing round the tomb and disjointing the stone work of the tomb itself, which was firmly united by iron pins.

Though supernatural occurrences are not wanting on this side the Atlantic, we have space for only one case. There stands near Fayetteville, N. C., a ruined house, once the abode of a wealthy but cruel planter in antebellum days. He married a young and pretty woman, the daughter of a selfish father, who forced her to the act. She had promised to marry a humbler lover, and her jealous husband soon began to ill treat her, finally chaining her to the floor of a vacant room. Her lover entered the house by stealth, released her, and the two fled on his white horse. Discovered and pursued by the enraged husband, mounted on a black one, there was a headlong race for a mile, to where, at a bend in the road stands a huge oak tree. As the lover's steed tried to turn the bend he slipped, fell, and threw them against the tree. Both were instantly killed. An instant later the black horse went down in a heap over the white one's body. The rider's neck was broken, three corpses and two crippled horses lying in a radius of twenty feet. Nearly forty years have passed, and every night those whose nerves are steady enough to visit the spot can hear the hoof beats, slow and regular at first, then a shout, followed by a shriek from the riders of the first horse, and then the fierce race begins, only to terminate in a crash at the great oak tree, followed by silence. Many have heard and witnessed the phantom race, but none have cared to repeat the experience, or to visit the "haunted Morrison place" after dusk.

To what do all these instances—well authenticated, be it remembered—of supernatural events point? It is easy to disbelieve anything mysterious, but events like these were testified to by John Wesley in the last century, Sir Walter Scott in 1818 and (of all men) by the Quaker William Howitt in 1840. Such men are not witnesses to be doubted. We can only fall back upon Hamlet's familiar words:

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in our philosophy."

CALIFORNIA FRUIT ABROAD.

The London News says California has given the world an enormous supply of fruit, which by recent improvements in transportation is able to reach Europe in a good, wholesome condition. The News describes the process of drying prunes, giving California sunshine credit for doing the work well after the fruit is prepared and laid on wide linen strips upon the ground. The prunes thus preserved are carefully packed and sent to all parts of the world. California orchardists are just beginning to realize the value of the fruit industry. The fact that fresh fruit has not always returned remunerative prices has raised the question if the markets within our reach were not oversupplied. But in its peserved form the markets of the world are within our reach.

"How will you have your eggs cooked?" asked the waiter.

"Make my difference in the cost of 'em?" inquired the cautious customer with the brimless hat and faded beard.

"No."

"Then cook 'em with a nice slice o' ham," said the customer, greatly relieved.

The Umatilla Indian chiefs Peo and Young Chief have returned from Washington, where they interviewed Secretary Hoke Smith and Indian Commissioner Brown. The chiefs report that the Secretary promised to pay them the $200,000 due from the sale of lands in cash, instead of building houses for them.

If some mortals were not deceitful they would be at war continually.

STOUT PEOPLE.

Corpulence is Generally Considered as a Disease.

PHYSICAL CULTURE EXERCISE.

Bicycle Riding a Most Effectual Anti-fat Exercise—Bread Should be Eaten Very Sparingly.

One of the penalties which humanity suffers for some of the privileges of a high state of civilization is the taking on of flesh till it becomes a burden; and only in recent years has this condition been recognized in its true nature as a disease of a grave character, bringing in its train many painful complications. The chief producing cause of obesity is over-indulgence in fat-producing foods—the sweets, pastries, rich entrees and tempting warm breads, which occupy so important a place on our lavish tables. With the means for providing so elaborate a cuisine comes also, to a great many lives, comparative freedom from care. Exsitence for these seemingly fortunate people seems to be padded on all sides against the friction of the petty daily worries and trials which wear others to skin and bone. Carriages and horses tempt them to forego all exercise and cheat them into the belief that if they religiously take the air every day they are doing all that health requires. When the victim of this over-assimilation of food is in the early stages of the disease, her mistaken friends congratulate her upon her plumpness, and think her the picture of good health; but insiduously there creeps over her a trying consciousness of weakness and weight combined; and though there seems nothing really the matter with her, life is sown with daily pin-pricks of unnamable discomforts. Ere long the plumpness becomes a burden of flesh, and even the most necessary duties of life, those which we cannot delegate to others, become a wearisome exertion, sometimes even requiring fortitude to perform them. Taken betimes, before the disease has assumed, as it were, a chronic nature, very trifling changes in the habits of life will arrest its progress; later, however, nothing short of heroic measures will suffice. At the first indication of the abdomen's taking upon itself a disagreeable prominence, accompanied by a sensation of uncomfortable fullness after eating, and often with shortness of breath, it is advisable to make a slight change of diet.

Bread should be eaten very sparingly, and only of the coarse kinds. No white bread should be eaten unless cut very thin and toasted brown. It is best to drop all cereals, and also the root vegetables, potatoes, turnips, carrots, etc., and beans and peas. Of course sweets are tabooed and it is well to erase chocolate from the list of liquids. All drinks should be taken in moderation, but a goblet of hot water a half hour before meals will hasten the cure. The only meats that are under the ban are veal and pork, and the latter is unfit to be eaten at any time excepting by those working hard at manual labor. Eat as freely as appetite prompts of fruits, both fresh and dried, and all green vegetables, especially salads. Nuts and raisins, figs, and dates, ices and jellies can be varied for dessert, so you will not miss the harmful pastries cakes and puddings. But eating is not all; though very important it is only one part of the regimen. Night and morning you must take exercises that will work off the abdominal fat and give firmness to the tissues. The following are all good for the purpose, and will help to make and keep the body lithe and supple: Raise the arms straight above the head, palms together; expand the chest with a deep inspiration, rising at the same moment upon your toes and taking five or six steps across the room; expel the breath as you drop your arms and come down upon your heels. Repeat from eight to ten times. With the arms above the head as before, bring them down in a sweeping curve till the finger-tips touch the floor in front of your toes. When this is properly done, with pliant body, the whole spine curves over link after link. Avoid haste in all exercises, and repeat to the point of slight fatigue, not beyond that. With the arms hanging lifeless from the shoulder—technically called "decomposed," or "devitalised"—bend the body sidewise as far as possible, first to the right, then to the left; repeat as before. With the arms in same position and keeping the feet firmly on the floor, twist the body as far as you can turn it from right to left and vice versa; this performs the same office for the internal organs that wringing wet clothes does in the laundry; it stimulates them, and expels stagnant juices. Lie flat on your back, either on the floor or on a cane-seated couch—something that will not give beneath you—and, with arms at your side, raise yourself to a sitting posture without touching anything to asasist you. The trunk of the body forms the fulcrum, and this exercise greatly stimulates the intestines to perform their duty. Standing upon one foot, raise the other up so the knee will come as closely as possible to the body; lift each leg thus five or six times consecutively, with vigor, and alternate the motion with both legs, repeating five times. In addition to these physical culture exercises a walk should be taken every day. Of course, if totally unused to exertion of walking you will have to begin with care, taking only a short walk; but, from the first, do not saunter. This is an emphatic caution; for as long as one foot is put with dragging reluctance before the other, the whole purpose of the walk is defeated, and weariness alone will result. Take long, free steps, giving a slight spring from the ball of the foot, which should touch the ground just imperceptibly before the heel. With such a step the weight of the body is carried without perceptible fatigue, for it is balanced in perfect harmony; and the motion is as pleasant and exhilarating as that of dancing. All the muscles are gently but effectually stimulated, and their continued exercise in this manner will strengthen and render them firm. Care must be taken, however, not to go too far and become over-tired. There is a healthy fatigue derived from walking which encourages sound, restful sleep, from which you will waken ready for a longer walk; for in this the ability to do increases with the doing.

Bicyle riding is another most effectual anti-fat exercise, and an odd fact when enumerating the benefits derived from it, which at first seem contradictory, is that it is beneficial both to the thin and the coruplent. Rightly considered, this is the keynote of its advantage; it is the very perfection of a healthful exercise, encouraging all the organs of the body to the normal performance of their functions, hence the over-thin take on flesh, while those who are burdened with it experience a most gratifying reduction of it, and glow with pride as pound after pound disappears. Baths, followed by massage, are also an effectual aid in the reduction of flesh; and of all forms the Turkish bath is much the best, for the abundant perspiration it induces carries off more rapidly than any other means the waste and effete matter from the body. It no doubt may seem a harsh criticism to tell people who pride themselves on the regularity of their one hot bath a week that they are never clean; but it is a truth that cannot be disputed, and after the first Turkish bath they would themselves be convinced of it. There is no other means so efficacious for producing the most perfect condition of physical cleanliness. The very free perspiration purifies the blood and strengthens the skin—one of the vital organs—to a lively exercise of its important functions. In advanced stages of the disease, the matter of diet will require more self-denial; all breads, faranaceous and cereal foods, milk, butter, and cheese, sweets of all sorts, and the vegetables enumerated above must be rigidly shunned. Simply a moderate quantity of lean beef and mutton or fish, with aperient fruits—dates, figs, prunes, apples, etc.,—and tomatoes, stewed or raw, or any of the so-called greens, spinach, beet-tops, cowslips, and dandelions, and fresh salads must form the menu; and abstemiousness cannot be too strongly recommended. All the rules given for exercise and bathing apply, of course, but bicycle ridding will be found specially efficacious; and two or three Turkish baths a week will arrest the disease and hasten the restoration of a healthful normal habit.

THE TYPE-WRITER'S MISTAKE.

In the Upper West Side, above the fire line, lives a comely typewriter with a glorious wealth of hair of the hue that Titian loved, and a nose of that peculiar conformation best described in the poet's phrase as "tip-tilted like the petals of a flower." She is employed in one of the big office buildings down town, where six elevators are apparently inadequate to accommodate the little city of tenants and their callers. They are crowded, packed and jammed all day long. On the sixth floor of this fifteen-storied building an old curmudgeon of a lawyer has his office. He is a man of the earth-earthy. There is nothing poetic or idealic in his make-up. He, too, lives on the Upper West Side above the fire line, and he rides down nearly every morning on the same elevated train as the tyewriter with the Titian hair and the complexion all peaches and cream. He boards the train at 135th street, and she at 125th. Usually both get seats. Sometimes, when a care-worn woman gets on below Forty-second street, when the train is crowded, the girl gives up hers, but old curmudgeon never. Women with heavy babies, or cripples on crutches, or even pretty women do not appeal to him. He has paid for his ride, and has a seat, and possession is nine points of the law.

For nearly a year now the typewriter has been perplexed at what she looks upon as a sort of Jekyll and Hyde streak in the old lawyer's character. On the train he is sour, morose, selfish. Arrived at the big building in which his office is located, he displays a noticeable solicitude for the convenience of the people waiting to be whisked skyward in the elevators. She has noticed that he always permits others to get into the car ahead of him, in fact, urges them with a deferential wave of the hand. "After you, sir! After you, miss!" and he gets in last.

After puzzling her dear little brain for several months over this peculiar contrast in character, the maid with the Titian hair spoke to the elevator boy. It is a matter of regret that his philosophical although somewhat slangy explanation knocked the philosophy of duality into smithereens. He knew the old gentleman from long experience.

"You are slow," he said, as he stood with his hand on the wire cable, dead slow. Ain't you on? D'ye think his jaglets doesn't know his little book? Well, say he does. Look. He wants the best of it in the elevated and he gets it, doesn't he? He wants the best of it in these elevators, and he gets that, too. How? Why, he piles in everybody ahead of him into the elevator car, and he gets nearest the door by goin' in last. Then he gets out fust'. See? Goin' up? All aboard!"

The typewriter with the Titian hair pouted and wondered why she hadn't thought of it before.

It is said that in London there are no fewer than 10,000 professional musicians of various grades, and that more than half of them are women.

WEAPONS OF WAR.

Uncle Sam's Soldiers to Have a New Rifle.

ORDERS ISSUED TO THE SOLDIERS.

The Krag-Jorgensen Rifle Soon to Be Distributed—Pointers on How to Handle the Weapon.

The members of the State military companies have been looking forward to the time when they will lay aside the old Springfield musket and receive in its stead the new Krag-Jorgensen magazine rifle with which the United States soldiers are being armed. The citizen soldiers of this State have made remarkable scores at the targets with the Springfield, and they are desirous of trying their marksmanship with a weapon using smoekless powder and sending a 30-calibre steel jacket bullet a distance of two miles. They will be obliged to wait for many months, and possibly a year or two, before the Government will issue the new rifle to the State military companies. A number of army officers believe that it may be more than two years before this death-dealer will be issued outside of the regular army.

The first organzation to receive the new army rifle on the Pacific Coast is the First Infantry Regiment stationed at Angel Island. The soldiers of this regiment will receive the Krag-Jorgensen rifle soon, and the crack shots will indulge in target practice with their new arms as soon as the supply of ammunition will warrant.

In appearance, construction and operation it is similar to the Lee magazine rifle now used by the naval reserves. The rapidity with which the weapon can be fired causes the barrel to heat to a great degree, in fact to such an extent that those making the first experiments in rapid firing burned their hands. In order to inform the soldiers to whom the new rifle is being distributed the Secretary of War has issued the following instuctions regarding the weapon, when heated by rapid firing:

After fifteen rounds fired rapidly (ten or more a minute) the piece should be handled only by the stock, handguard, or metal parts in rear of the chamber, as the barrel becomes uncomfortably hot about this time, though the rear sights and bands will not be found so until from thirty to thirty-five rounds have been fired.

In slow firing (at the rate of three or less a minute) the barrel of the piece should not be handled after from seventeen to twenty rounds. After forty rounds fired at this rate, handle the arm only by the wooden parts and those metal parts in rear of the chamber. If the leaf of the rear sight is raised during this firing (as it probably would be), the sight can be adjusted, if done quickly, even after a hundred rounds, without fear of burning the hand.

Two hundred rounds, probably the maximum amount to be carried by any soldier, or even as many as he can possibly carry, can be fired rapidly without injury to the arm, other than the charring of the wooden parts in contact with the barrel.

If it be necessary or desirable to cool the barrel more rapildy than it would when exposed merely to the air, remove the bolt, depress the muzzle until nearly vertical and pour in water very slowly at first until steam is no longer formed, when it can be poured rapidly. In service the canteen or cup could be used for this purpose. Owing to the large amount of water necessary to cool a heated rifle—from four to six quarts being required—artificial cooling would not ordinarily be practicable in the field. There is little to be gained, even if employed, as after 200 rounds one can handle the piece by the stock without burning the hand.

The soldier will soon learn to handle the piece carefully after any firing, no matter how little, and artificial cooling by water should not ordinarily be practiced, as it may prove injurious to the barrel.

Note—The barrel of the Springfield rifle, caliber 45, using black powder, becomes too hot to handle (above the lower band) after about thirty (30) rounds fired at the rate of seven a minute. In other words, it appears to take twice as many rounds in the old rifle as in the new, to bring the barrel to about the same temperature. Until further orders, the following spare parts only will be issued to companies to be kept on hand for the repair of the United States magazine rifle and carbine: Main springs, magazine springs, sear springs, cut-off springs, stocks. In case of damage to other parts of the rifle, such parts—if they can be detached without further injury to the arm—will be sent, properly marked for identification, to the commanding officer, Springfield Armory, with a statement of the circumstances under which the damage was incurred. If found advisable, the damaged parts will then be ordered replaced. Company commanders should exercise a careful supervision of all dismounting and assembling of the arm, particularly in cases where any part is injured. The authorized dismounting and assembling by the soldier, described in the rules for the management of the rifle, should be confined to what is necessary only for instruction under proper supervision, or for the necessary cleaning of the arm.

Up to the present date the War Department has issued 15,750 of the new rifles. By the end of the present year the entire army will be supplied. After the infantry is armed the ordnance Department will issue carbines of the same pattern to the artillery and cavalry. The soldiers at the Presidio will not secure their carbines until the 1st of September.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 28 1895

The San Francisc Chronicle says: There is probably no truth in the story that China is negotiating with American Capitalists to secure the 200,000,000 taels of silver that will be required to pay the war indemnity exacted by the Japanese. American capitalists would be slow to embark in a financial scheme of this nature, because they cannot be assured that they would have the Government back of them in case China failed to meet her obligations. The people who loan the sum China requires must be in a position that will command the fear of Chinese officials. Americans cannot stand on such a footing, for the simple reason the public sentiment in the United States would be opposed to the employment of the power of the Government to collect a private debt.

It is well that the Memphis Convention did not adopt the plan of the extremists to form a seperate silver party. Those in favor of this measure should have a little patience, especially since the indications are that the Democratic convention will declare for free silver. Judging from appearances and reports, bimetallism is gaining rapidly in favor where little was known or thought about it before, and the West and South are quite solid for silver. A vigorous campaign of education in the East will result in changing the views of many who are now unfavorable or indifferent to the white metal. Altogether the outlook is very promising and it is likely that the bimetallists will win the fight which is sure to be made for the control of Democratic National Convention. An independent party movement at this time would be unwise.

The McKinleyites are perplexed because instead of being killed by the new tariff law, the tin plate industry is booming. This completely justifies the argument made for the reduction of the McKinley tariff on tin plate. It shows that if an industry is worth following, it can get along and prosper without an enormously high tariff. In the evolution of commercial conditions all industries will finally become established on a natural basis, when prices will be regulated by the laws of trade and not by Congress. The beet sugar industry, whose ruin was vociferously predicted by the McKinleyites, is flourishing without a bounty, taken out of the peoples pockets and put into the coffers of the sugar trust.

A San Francisco Judge is indignant with a grand jury which presumed to criticise him, as it did ordinary mortals. Why a grand jury should not investigate the conduct of a judge, if there is thought to be grounds for an investigation, just as readily as the Sheriff or any other public official, it is not easy to see. In fact judges should be held to the strictest accountability and the grand jury, representing the people, should hold them to a course that if not above criticism will deserve only commendation.

It is estimated 300,000 persons will leave New York for Europe the present year. About 60,000 will go first class, 40,000 second class and 200,000 in the steerage. The total expenditure, not including passage money, is roughly placed at $100,000,000.

Two big Cleveland factories yesterday gave their employes notice of an increase in their wages. This all occurs under a tariff law that the McKinleyites said would pauperize American labor.

The large canal in Germany connecting the Baltic and North seas, was opened to the ships of the World last Friday, under appropriate military display.

Remember there is not one lottery ticket in a thousand that is worth as much as a cigarette.

The Southern Pacific Company are now running trains between Pasadena and Santa Monica.

The Ukiah stage was held up last week, and the express box robbed of $1,200.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

TRADE MARK

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING
EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.
FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

A LITTLE THING.

Such a little thing hides the sun, sweetheart,
Such a little thing hides the sun,
A sudden cloud or a wall of mist,
And we moan "The day is done!"
Such a little thing hides the sun, sweetheart,
The top of waving tree,
A summer shower, of the sunshine born,
A mist that dips in the sea.

Such a little thing hides the sun, sweetheart,
But isn't it joy to know
That the sun still shines behind the clouds;
That the soft, warm winds will blow
Till the wall of mist shall be blown aside
And the shadows flee away,
And the sun behind the western hills
Gives pledge of a brighter day!
—Florence A. Jones in Minneapolis Housekeeper.

KID GLOVES.

Interesting Facts About the Skins Which Cover or Adorn the Hands.

Barefooted boys and hens form a curious partnership in the making of a pair of fine gloves.

They work together in preparing the skins for the hands of the fashionable woman who rushes to the stores every time a new shade of glove is announced.

Thousands of dozens of hens' eggs are used in curing the hides, and thousands of boys are employed to work the skins in clear water by treading on them for several hours.

When a woman buys a pair of gloves, she thinks of her purchase as "kids." If the clerk who sold her the "kid" gloves knew the secrets of the glove-making business, he might surprise his fair customer by telling her that those beautiful, soft, smooth fitting "kid" gloves came from the shoulders and belly of a 3-weeks-old colt whose neck was slit on the plains of Russia, and whose tender hide was shipped with huge bundles of other colts' hides to France, where they were made up into "kid" gloves, or he might with equal regard to the truth tell her that those gloves in the other compartment once darted from tree to tree in South America on the back of a ring tailed monkey. And if he made the rounds of the store and could distinguish one skin from another he could point out "kid" gloves made from the skins of kangaroos from Australia; lambs or sheep from Ohio or Spain or England; calves from India, muskrats from anywhere, musk oxen from China and other parts of Asia; rats, cats and Newfoundland puppies.

But the little Russian colt, the four footed baby from the plains where the Cossacks live, the colt from the steppes of Siberia, where horses are raised by the thousand, supply the skins which are the favorites at present with the glovemakers. Experts say that the colt-skin makes a better, stronger, finer glove than real kidskin, and as the colt is a little fellow only 3 weeks old when he is killed but a small amount of skin can be made into gloves, so that the price is about as high.

But, after all, the real kid, the lively infant of the goats which live in France, Switzerland, Spain and Italy, furnishes the best, finest and most expensive gloves, and nearly 10,000,000 kids are sacrificed every year in order that women and men may cramp their hands in wrinkleless, delicate hued gloves.—Chicago Record.

Klotschiessen—What Is It?

Under the title of "A Game We Might Play," the Marquis of Lorne in Good Words puts in a plea for an open air winter pastime in the low countries of northern Europe which has for centuries enjoyed a sort of national reputation. It is a rough sort of golf, played without clubs or holes, is inexpensive and can be played by two single opponents or with two on a side. The article contains a very picturesque description of a match between two villages in Friesland, at which the writer was present, and conveys a striking impression of the popularity of the game and of the spirited emulation which it awakens. It is pointed out that in England there are many districts, especially in the east of the island, which are peculiarly well adapted to the game, there being in these parts much flat land where winter makes the ground hard. Wherever these conditions exist, there, we are told, the "klotschiessen," or "clotshot" game can be played with advantage.—London News.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of
JOHN BARNES,
An Insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of John Barnes, the above-named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts; and that Saturday, the 29th day of June, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court-room of said Court, at the Court-house in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and he be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
[SEAL.] By W. M. WILLS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st A. D. 1895.

NOTICE.

Whereas, the consent in writing of the holders of two thirds of the capital stock of the Lone Pine Canal Company, a corporation, to change the principal place of business of said corporation from the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, to the town of Lone Pine, in said county and state, is on file herein. Notice is hereby given that the principal place of business of said Lone Pine Canal Company, will be at the town of Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on and after January 26th 1895.

By order of the Board of Directors.
DAVID HOLLAND, Secretary.

NEW FEE BILL.

CHAPTER CCVII.

An Act to establish fees of county, township and othe. officers, and of jurors and witnesses in this State.

[Approved March 28, 1895.]

The People of the State of California represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The following county, township, and other officers shall charge and collect the following fees.

COUNTY CLERK.

On the commencement of any action or proceeding in the Superior Court, except probate proceedings, or on appeal thereto, to be paid by the party commencing such action or proceeding, or taking such appeal	$5 00
On the filing of a petition for letters of administration, testamentary, or guardianship five dollars, to be paid by the petitioner; provided, that at the time of filing the inventory and appraisment in any such proceeding there shall be an additional deposit of one dollar for each additional thousand dollars of the appraised valuation, in excess of three thousand dollars.
On filing the petition to contest any will or codicil	3 00
On the appearance of any defendant, or any number of defendants answering jointly, to be paid upon filing the first paper in the action by him or them	2 00
On placing any action, except a probate proceeding, or default case, on the calendar for trial or hearing, to be paid by the party at whose request such action or proceeding is so placed	2 00
For every additional defendant appearing separately	1 00
The foregoing fees shall be in full for all services rendered by such Clerk in the cause, to and including the making up of the judgment roll.
On the filing of any notice of motion to move for a new trial or any civil action or proceeding, the party filing same must pay to the Clerk, in full for all services to be rendered in connection with said motion, except as hereinafter in this section provided	2 00
For issuing an execution or order of sale in any action	1 00
In all proceedings begun or acts performed prior to this Act becoming a law, such and charges as were provided by the law at the time such proceedings were begun or acts performed.
The Clerk shall also charge and collect the following fees and compensation not above provided for:
For any copy of any record, proceeding or paper on file in the office of the Clerk relating to any civil action pending in said Court, when said copy is made by him, per folio	10
For each certificate of the Clerk, under seal of the Court	25
For filing each claim in probate or insolvency proceedings	10
No fees shall be allowed or charged by the clerk for services rendered in any criminal case.
For services rendered by the Clerk, not in connection with civil actions or proceedings in Court, he shall charge and collect, for the benefit of the county, the following fees:
For issuing marriage license, one half to be paid to the County Recorder	2 00
For filing and indexing articles of incorporation	1 00
For filing and indexing certificates of copartnership	1 00
For filing and indexing all papers to be kept by him, other than papers filed in actions or proceedings in court, and official bonds and certificates of appointment, each	25
For issuing any license required by law, other than marriage licenses	1 00
For examining and certifying to a copy of any paper, record, or proceeding prepared by another, and presented for his certificate, fifty cents, and one cent per folio for comparing the said copy with the original.
For making satisfaction of or cite it on judgment	25
For receiving and filing remittitur from Supreme Court	50
For administering each oath, without certificate, except in a pending action or proceeding	50
For taking any affidavit, except in criminal cases	50
For taking and approving each undertaking and the justification thereof, except in criminal cases	50
For searching records or files, for each year	50
For taking acknowledgement of any deed or other instrument, including the certificate	50
For filing notices of appeal and appeal bonds, each	25
SHERIFF.
For serving any process, writ, order, or paper, except as hereinafter provided, required by law to be served by the Sheriff	50
For serving a writ of attachment, execution, or order for the delivery of personal property	1 00
For taking any bond or undertaking	50
For serving an attachment or execution on any ship, boat, or vessel	3 00
For keeping and caring for property under attachment or execution, such sum as the court may fix, provided, that no greater sum than two dollars per day shall be allowed to a keeper when necessarily employed.
For a copy of any writ, process, or paper actually made by him, when required or demanded according to law, per folio, ten cents; provided, that when correct copies are furnished to him for use, no charge shall be made for such copies.
For advertising sale of property and posting notice, exclusive of cost of publication, or furnishing notice for publication, each	50
For publication of notice in newspaper, the reasonable cost of publication, subject to the approval of the Court.
For serving writ of possession or restitution, putting a person in possession of the premises, and removing the occupant	1 50
For subpoenaing witness, including copy of subpoena, each	25
For summoning trial jury of twelve or less	2 00
For each additional juror	10
For traveling in the service of any paper required by law to be served, for each mile actually and necessarily traveled, one way only, fifteen cents, when such travel can be made by rail, in other cases, twenty-five cents. No constructive mileage to be allowed.
For collecting money on execution, with or without levy, one per cent on the first thousand dollars or less, and one half of one per cent on all sums over one thousand dollars.
For executing and delivering Sheriff's deed	1 50
For executing and delivering certificate of sale	50
For transporting prisoners to county jail, actual cost of such transportation.
For executing and delivering any other instrument, per folio	10
RECORDER.
For recording every instrument, paper, or notice required by law to be recorded, per folio	10
For indexing every instrument, paper, or notice, for each name	10
For filing every instrument for record, and making necessary entries thereon	20
For each certificate under seal	25
For every entry of discharge, credit, or release on the margin of record, and indexing same	25
For searching the records of his office, for each year	50
For abstract of title, for each conveyance or incumbrance	25
For recording each map or plat where same is copied in book of record, for each course	10
For recording each map or plat, where same is not copied in a book of record, for figures or letters on maps or plats, per folio, ten cents; provided, that the fees for recording any map shall not exceed fifty dollars.	50
For taking acknowledgement of any instrument	50
For recording marriage license and certificate, to be paid by County Clerk	1 00
For recording transcript and all services in estray cases	1 00
For recording each mark or brand	50
For administering each oath or affirmation, and certifying the same	25
For filing, indexing and keeping each paper not required by law to be recorded	25

The Clerk, Sheriff, and Recorder shall account for all fees in this section provided for, and the Clerk, Sheriff and Recorder, unless otherwise provided by law, shall pay the same to the County Treasurer on the first Monday of the month following their collection, as provided in this Act.

County Officers must, and township officers may, demand the payment of all fees in civil cases, in advance.

SECTION 2. No fees or other compensation shall be paid for certificate of declaration to become a citizen of the United States, and for making a record thereof, or issuing a certificate of citizenship to become a citizen of the United States, or for making a record thereof; and no fees or other compensation shall be paid for filing the statement and affidavit of a committee or candidate voted for at any public election held within the State; and this section shall apply to all the counties in the state.

SECTION 3. All Acts or portions of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect immediately.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, to all persons having business with the offices of Clerk, Sheriff or Recorder fo the County of Inyo that the above provisions of the Fee Bill are mandatory, and will be strictly enforced.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk and Recorder.

Independence, Cal., June 3, 1895.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, California. Location of Canal, near Lone Pine, Inyo County, Cal.

NOTICE—There are delinquent upon the the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 8, levied on the 27th day of April, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders, as follows:

Names.	No. Cert.	No. Sh's.	Am't
T. C. Boland	3	500	$75 00
T. C. Boland	4	200	30 00
T. C. Boland	18	500	75 00
T. C. Boland	19	200	30 00
J. A. McKenzie	11	700	105 00
E. Robinson	1	500	75 00
E. Robinson	2	200	30 00
J. J. Gunn	12	200	30 00
P. H. Mack	17	300	45 00
Fred Spear		75	11 25
R. C. Spear		75	11 25
D. Holland		50	7 50

And in accordance with law, and an order of the Board of Directors, made on the 27th day of April, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary, will be sold at public auction, at the office of the said Company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on Saturday, the 22nd day of June, 1895, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. of said day to pay said delinquent assessment thereon together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

POSTPONEMENT.

The above sale is postponed to 2. P. M. of June 29th 1895

By order of the Board of Directors.
DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

POSTPONEMENT.

The above sale is postponed to Saturday, July 13, at 2 o'clock P. M.

By order of the Board of Directors.
DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

Notice.

Pursuant to an order of the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County Cal. passed on the 5th day of April, 1895, the attention of the public is call d to the following sections of the County Government Act of 1893:

SECTION 41. The Board of Supervisors must not hear or consider any claim in favor of any person, corporation, company, or association against the County or District Fund, unless the same be itemized, giving names, dates, and particular services rendered, character of process served, upon whom, distance travelled, where and when, character of work done, number of days engaged, materials furnished, to whom, and quantity and price paid therefore, duly verified as to its correctness, and that the amount claimed is justly due, is presented and filed with the Clerk of the Board within a year after the last item of the account or claim accrued. This section, as to itemizing, shall not apply to services rendered under section one hundred and forty-eight; provided, that such services are substantially stated, with their value, and verified as above. If in case of any claim, which requires itemizing, the Board do not hear or consider the same because it is not itemized, they shall cause notice to be given to the claimant, or his attorney, of that fact, and give time to have the claim itemized and reverified.

SECTION 42. No account must be passed upon by the Board, unless made out as prescribed in the preceding section and filed by the Clerk, at least one day prior to the session at which it is asked to be heard.

NOTICE is hereby given that any claim which fails to comply with the above sections will be returned for correction, and consideration thereof laid over until the next succeeding regular meeting of the Board.

By order of the Board of Supervisors.
D. J. HESSION,
Clerk of said Board.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The co-partnership heretofore existing between R. W. Thomas of the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, and T. W. Hill of the same place under the firm name and style of "Thomas and Hill" heretofore conducting a general merchandising business at the town of Big Pine, Inyo County, California, is this day dissolved by the mutual consent of the said R. W. Thomas and the said T. W. Hill.

Witness our hands and the seals this 6th day of February, 1895.

R. W. Thomas
Thomas W. Hill

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of
M. V. BARNES,
An Insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of M. V. Barnes, the above named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from her debts, and that Saturday, the 29th day of June, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court room of said Court, at the Court house, in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and she be discharged from all her debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
[SEAL.] By W. M. WILLS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st, A. D. 1895.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc. given careful and promt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY--AT--LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases

Brown & Wills,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery
All kinds of dental work done according to latest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING IN ANY STYLE, SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administrator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PROPOSED NEW ROAD
—IN—
DIST. NO. 3.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to law and an order of the Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, made and entered on the 3rd day of April, 1895 any and all non-consenting land owners and all others interested are hereby notified to appear before said Board on Saturday, the 6th day of July, 1895, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. and then and there show cause, if any there be, why a new County Road hereinafter described, should not be laid out and established as follows, to wit:

Commencing at section corner on township line, between Townships 9 and 10 South, Range 34 East, to Sections 33 and 34; thence running North, Magnetic Variation 15 deg. 15 min. E.

		Set stake 20 feet East of section corner and set stake 20 feet West of section line for a 40 ft width of road; thence: Over land of Frank Fitzgerald.
1 North.	20.00	To S. E. corner of L. Blakes land; set stake 20 feet east and set stake 20 feet west of line as outside of 40 foot roadway.
	60.00	To South-west corner of E. H. Blake E. H. Blake on west side and J. D. Shaw on east side; set stake 20 feet on west side, and set stake 20 feet on east side.
	80.10	To section corner to Sections 28, 27, 33, 34, set stake 20 feet east in field of J. D. Shaw, set stake 20 feet west, on section line between Sections 27 and 28, T. 9 S. R. 34 E. M. D. M.
2 North.
3 North.	20.00	To N. W. corner of J. D. Shaw, J. D. Shaw on east side, and H. H. McMurry on west side. Set stakes 20 feet east and set stakes 20 feet west of line.
	60.00	To south line of J. J. Stewart, Charles Stewart on west side, and J. L. Cornell on the east side of the line; set stake 20 feet on east side and set stake 20 feet west of line.
	80.00	To center of Joseph Jewett Stewart, J. J. Stewart on west side, and J. J. Stewart on east side. Thence west on line between Sections 21 and 28
4 West.	20.00	To west line of J. J. Stewart on lands of Joseph Jewett Stewart to south east corner of Mrs. J. B. Stewart.
	60.00	To east bank of the Miller and Blake ditch.
	60.20	To fence on the west bank of the Blake and Miller ditch. Mrs. J. B. Stewart on north side and J. W. McMurry on south side. Set stake 20 feet north on west bank of ditch to north side of Road and set stake 20 feet south on west bank of ditch as south side of road.
5 West.	65.00	In alfalfa meadow on Mrs. J. B. Stewart.
	80.10	In section corner to sections 20, 29, 21, 28, over land of Mrs. Stewart
	20.00	To north-east corner of Indian John Campbell's Homestead.
	24.00	To Big Pine ditch.
	42.20	To old county road from Independence to Big Pine; Mrs. J. B. Stewart on north side and John Campbell (Indian) on south side. Set stake 20 feet north on land of Mrs. Stewart; and set stake 20 feet south on land of Indian John Campbell.

JOSEPH SELY, Surveyor.
E. GREGG, Viewer.
JAMES JONES, Viewer.

Field Notes of a survey of a public road in Road District No. 3.

The proposed route South from the South and the commencing at the point of Commencement of Petition 19th day of January, 1894

Commencing at Section corner on township line between Townships 9 and 10 South, Range 34 East M. D. M. to Sections 33 and 34; thence running East Mag. Var. 15 deg. 15 min. W.

6 East	20.00	Twenty chains on Section the North-west cor. of J. Herod's land over land owned by E. Fitzgerald & Geo. Grimes, thence
7 South	80.00	Over land owned by James Herod and George Grimes thence
8 S. 45 deg. W.	21.00	Over Government land to the North-west corner of James O'Conner's land, thence
9 South	20.00	On section line over land owned by James O'Conner at the County road running from Independence to Big Pine.

JOSEPH SELY,
County Surveyor
Inyo County.

March 30th, 1895

By order of the Board of Supervisors.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.

Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Carpet Weaving.

MRS. J. F. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.
PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER

We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kinds of carpet and rug weaving.

Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished, at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.

First class work guaranteed at low prices

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.

Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone.

FRED BURCKHARDT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT in pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY the 8th day of March 1892, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 10 South Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the South east corner of the south-east quarter of North-east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 98-100 feet to North-east following the meanderings of the bank of the Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence thence following said Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, six acres 80-100 acres; also lot No. 4 in Block No. 2 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29, in the town of Independence, the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead, or lode, situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "La Dispricada Lode."

That certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura State of California, commencing at a point twelve and nine-twentieth (12 9-20) rods south of the general corner of the North west quarter and the North-east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South-west quarter and the South-east quarter of Section No. one (1), in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and eleven-twentieth (68 11-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North-westerly along a small branch or swale to a point twenty-four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North East quarter and the South east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North east quarter of the North-west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West; running thence North forty-four and eleven twentieth (44 11-20) rods thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres: Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased.

Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th

★ YOUR ★ SHOE ★ OUR ★ SHOE

tector... make the ... long as the ... any ordinary shoe, and to save from 20 to 60 times its cost in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.

PAT. APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.

PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROP'R.

Horseshoeing ..... $2 00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1894, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday	January 5th
"	February 9th
"	March 9th
"	April 6th
"	May 4th
"	June 1st
"	June 30th
"	August 3rd
"	August 31st
"	October 26th
"	November 2nd
"	November 31st

THOMAS C. BOLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND BRINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, JUNE 28 1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman ..... GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman ..... CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge ..... GEO. M. GILL
Sheriff ..... ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk ..... DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney ..... P. W. FORBES.
Assessor ..... P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer ..... W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner ..... I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed) ..... JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools ..... S. W. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist ..... FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist ..... A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist ..... J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist ..... J. J. STEWART.
5th Supervisor Dist ..... FRANK FITZGERALD.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .66⅞
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5¼
Pig lead	3.90

BORN.

ELIJAH—Near Bishop Cal., June 19, 1895, to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Elijah a daughter.

MARRIED.

HAMPTON—Williams—At Bishop, Cal. June 20, 1895, by Rev. C. L. Logan, H. C. Hampton and Miss Alice Williams.

H. Levy is re-flooring his bar-room.

School Superintendent Austin is in town to day.

Ben F. Hudspeth will leave for the city in about a week.

Regular meeting of Inyo Lodge F. & A. M. to-morrow evening.

J. C. Miller of Big Pine spent the middle of the past [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] sin suffering from rheumatism.

[illegible] visitors have recently come down to this summer. [illegible] visit the fishing grounds

P. H. Mack [illegible] Thursday morning from a trip [illegible] and Darwin.

Mrs. M. McSweeny has gone to San Francisco for a short visit, leaving last Thursday morning.

Last Tuesday Judge Virden of Mono County decided the Broder-Conklin suit in favor of Conklin.

The Inyo Canal Company of Carson Nevada has levied another assessment of 10 cents per share.

The army worm, locust, and grasshopper are doing a considerable amount of damage in some of the coast counties.

The sky was overcast with clouds all day yesterday, no rain falling, however. The weather to-day is very pleasant.

District Attorney Forbes spent a couple of days at Bishop prosecuting a criminal complaint in the Justice's court.

C. S. Meroney came up from Keeler last Tuesday morning. It is understood that he has a position at the Hirsch mine.

The Board of Supervisors meet in regular session next Monday. They will also meet as a Board of Equalization.

The Holiness band arrived in town last Tuesday and are encamped north of the Lark & Kehoe place in the north end of town.

Miss Lena Thompson returned from Keeler on Tuesday morning where she had been visiting with her friend, Mrs. W. M. Richards.

Tickets for the grand ball at the Agricultural Pavilion on July Fourth can be obtained at any of the business houses in town.

Road, Poll, and Hospital Taxes will be delinquent after next Monday and one dollar additional as penalty, will be attached to each.

Pasted a dime on a sheet of paper and send to Crocker & Ames, 619 Montgomery St., San Francisco, for Ame's Shoe Protector, the wonderful saver of shoes.

Hawthorne is to have a grand Fourth of July celebration. A baseball game between local nines will be the leading attraction.

Weather Summary, Week Ending June 27, 1895.

Highest barometer, 29.956 date, 22nd.
Lowest " 29.754 " 26th.
Highest tempeaature, 95.0 date, 23, 24, 25.
Lowest " 64.3 date, 22nd
Mean " 78.3 for week.
Average dew point, 29.8
Average humidity, 19.0
Total precipitation, 0
Prevailing direction of wind, NW
Highest velocity and date, 32, N. 27.
Number of clear days, 6
" " partly cloudy days, 0
" " cloudy days, 1.
" " rainy days (.01 or more rain) 0.

H. E. WILKINSON, Observer.

Coolgardie.

Rich new finds are being constantly reported from Coolgardie gold fields. Coolgardie, Australia, is an accessible point, reached by steamer to Fremantle, thence by rail to Southern Cross and team to destination. The trip to Australia on the fine steamers of the Oceanic Steamship Company via Honolulu, Samoa, and New Zealand is pleasure sailing the day long. This line tickets passengers to Cape Town, South Africa. Map of Coolgardie district and Pacific ports reached by the Oceanic Steamship Company is mailed free to any address by the O. S. S. Co. 138 Montgomery St. San Francisco.

Constable W. E. Smith came down from Bishop last Tuesday bringing with him a man named Conners who was sentenced to sixty days in the County jail for battery. He will be tried later on a charge of selling whiskey to Indians. It appears that there was a big jamboree at Pleasant Valley last week and during the orgies an Indian known as "American Joe," was killed. So far as we can learn it is not known whether he was killed by Conners or by other Indians.

The Band of Holiness reached Independence last Tuesday and have set up their tent north of the Reddy place. The program thus far has been to load up a 'bus with three men and six women who compose the "band" and drive through the streets in the evening singing Salvation Army songs, and inviting everybody to the tent to listen to discourses on religious topics. They expect to hold forth here for some time and then move on north

It is reported that Pete Laberge and Dave Pobst have been very successful in working their placer mine at Mazourka Canyon. For quite a while they took out about an ounce per day. The ground is not yielding quite so well now but they are still taking out good wages. S. W. Austin has been mining in the same gulch just above the Laberge claim, and expects to return there about a week hence.

A. J. Davis came in from the Alabama Hill last Wednesday. He says steady progress is being made in the quartz mines but no placer mining is being done there at present. Schroder & Basto have just started on a twenty day run, and when they finish Davis & McIntosh will start on a run of about the same size.

Supt. Rives is pushing work very rapidly at the Hirsch mine. A large force of men are at work grading the ground for the new mill and other buildings and upwards of sixty thousand feet of lumber is on the ground for erecting the tramway, mill and other necessary buildings.

A. F. Sewell of the Selby Smelting Company has been visiting the various mining camps in this county. There has been considerable complaint in regard to the company named among the miners in this vicinity and this fact may have something to do with his visit.

[illegible] J. S. Templin of Denver spent last week [illegible] Darwin and Cerro Gordo investigating mining properties at those places. Mr. Templin [illegible] mining man and it is [illegible] make favorable reports of [illegible] of the mines examined.

[illegible] who did not see the moon last Tuesday night missed another [illegible] the time the moon disappeared behind the mountains the evening star, Jupiter seemed to be attached to its edge.

D. C. Lane, owner of the Sorba mine, has gone to Pomona to spend the Fourth. Mr. Lane is shipping about three tons of ore a day which will net about one hundred dollars a ton.

Don't neglect to have your bills in proper shape for presentation to the Board of Supervisors, which meets next week. See notice published else where.

George Meads came down from Bishop with [illegible] team the first of the week on his way to [illegible]. Rudolph Schober is expected next week.

John A. Stroud and Fred Scott of Selma, Fresno county are visiting at Independence. Mr Stroud represents a life insurance company, and will make a canvass of the entire county.

The exercises on the morning of the Fourth will consist of numerous interesting features. Don't fail to be present.

Murphy brought down several Big Pine checks with him but as yet he has failed to cash any of them.

To The Public.

I have been informed that parties at Independence have been selling poor butter as my production. My butter is put up in squares with the words, "Fairview Creamery" in capital letters, stamped across the face. It is always wrapped in butter parchment and packed in boxes bearing the creamery stamp. Butter prepared in any other way without stamp or wrapped in cloth is not genuine. I have been using my stamp for over two years, and not a square ever leaves the factory without being printed.

W. D. ROBERTS

Round Valley, May 31, 1895.

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS, DESIGN PATENTS, COPYRIGHTS, etc.

For information and free Handbook write to MUNN & CO., 361 BROADWAY, NEW YORK. Oldest bureau for securing patents in America. Every patent taken out by us is brought before the public by a notice given free of charge in the

Scientific American

Largest circulation of any scientific paper in the world. Splendidly illustrated. No intelligent man should be without it. Weekly, $3.00 a year; $1.50 six months. Address MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS, 361 Broadway, New York.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

Adolph Gerckens Plaintiff, vs. Annie J. Gerckens Defendant.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Annie J. Gerckens, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain judgment against you and a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the plaintiff and defendant as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 18th day of June, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. W. BENNETT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

NOTICE OF MEETING OF BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, will meet as a Board of Equalization on MONDAY, JULY 1, 1895.

At the office of the said Board, in the town of Independence, to examine the assessment book and equalize the assessment of property in said County for the year 1895, and will continue in session for that purpose until the business of equalization is disposed of.

D. J. HESSION.
Clerk of the Board of Supervisors.

Independence Celebration.

JULY FOURTH 1895.

MORNING EXERCISES.

Prayer ..... S. W. ALBONE.
Song, "Red, White and Blue" ..... CHOIR.
Instrumental music, Mrs. F. E. DENSMORE.
Oration ..... S. G. SNEDEN ESQ.
Song, "Star Spangled Banner" ..... CHOIR.
Recitation ..... BLANCHE BUNNEY.
Song ..... IDMA WEBB.
Duet—Violin and Piano .....
Miss ETTA WOOD and Miss HULDA HARRIS
Recitation ..... BIRDIE LEVY.
Song, "America" ..... MULTITUDE.

AFTERNOON SPORTS.

Girls Race, 10 years and under	$2 50
" " over 10 and not over 14	3 00
Boys Race, 10 years and under	2 50
" " over 10 and unper 14	3 00
Potato Race, free for all	5 00
3-Legged Race	3 00
Sack Race	3 00
Indian Pony Race	5 00
Chinaman's Race	2 50
Tug of War, Married vs. Single Men	5 00
Saddle Horse Race, free for all	30 00

☞ Entrance fee, $2 50; 3 to enter, 2 to start. Entry book now open with Secretary B. H. Yandell; closes 12 M., July 4, 1895.

GRAND BALL IN THE EVENING.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNDERSIGNED, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix, at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ALLIE R. BROWN.
Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased.

Dated February 15, 1895.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administratrix.
aug3 5t

REWARD.

TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

[illegible] ary 2nd 1895.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.

☞ First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

BIG PINE HOTEL.

BIG PINE · CAL

New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates

☞ Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modoc Cal.

FOR SALE.
THE WHITNEY HOUSE

—The only hotel in—

LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL

Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address

MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor

The newest Style

OF

Fashionable Clothing Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOD
CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS
WALNUTS
TOYS!

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, "PRESTON" WARE.

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get the

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

Notice To [Official] Tax-Payers.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT I have received from the Auditor of the County of Inyo, State of California, the Assessment Roll for the year A. D. 1894-5, that the taxes on all personal property and on real property secured by real property, will be one-half the taxes on all real property in October next and payable on the first Monday in October; and that the remaining one-half will be added thereto and payable on the first Monday in April next and will be delinquent on at six o'clock p. m. on the last Monday in April next thereafter, thereto fifteen per cent. and that unless said one-half be paid before that time a further additional five per cent. will be added thereto; and that if said one-half be paid prior thereto five per cent. will be added to the amount thereof; that all taxes may be paid at the time the first installment as herein provided is due and payable.

A. M. GIVEN,
Tax Collector.

oct5 td

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First Class and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER, General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1		To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Mound House	10.50 a. m.		5.20 p. m.
Dayton	11.25 a. m.		4.45 p. m.
Wabuska	1.40 p. m.		2.30 p. m.
Hawthorne	Ar. 5.00 p. m.	Lv.	11.00 a. m.
	No. 3.		No. 4.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Hawthorne	6.00 a. m.		7.25 p. m.
Luning	7.15 a. m.		6.15 p. m.
Soda Springs	7.50 a. m.		5.35 p. m.
Belleville	8.40 a. m.		4.35 p. m.
Candelaria	9.40 a. m.		3.50 p. m.
Benton	1.30 p. m.		11.50 a. m.
Bishop Creek	5.10 p. m.		9.50 a. m.
Alvord	.05 p. m.		8.55 a. m.
Independence	4.35 p. m.		7.25 a. m.
Lone Pine	5.20 p. m.		6.10 a. m.
Keeler	Ar. 7.00 p. m.	Lv.	6.00 a. m.

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (33 miles), Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's tri-weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Allda Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (9 miles), Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles)

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

RESTORE YOUR EYESIGHT

Cataracts, scum or films can be absorbed and cured never returned without the knife or risk. Diseases of the eye can be cured by home treatment. We proved it. Hundreds convinced. Our illustrated pamphlet "Home Treatment for Diseases of the Eye" is free to everybody who asks it. "Cataracts, Glasses Fails, N.Y.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave, WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeler, MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER, Propr.

JOHN B. CLARKE,

Successor to John Clarke,

—PROPRIETOR—

John Clarke's Bishop Stables,

BISHOP, CAL.

First-class Turnouts of Every Kind

Fine horses and Carriages.

horses Boarded for any Time

Best of Care and Attention

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, Cal

New House
New Furniture.
Low Rates.

Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.

O. I. MAIRS Prop

feb12tf

BIG TOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

INDEPENDENCE

MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

☞ arties supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.

j19-tf

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

☞ Buyers and consumers should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
j164tf

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO Co. Cal.

Dealer In GENERAL MERCHANDISE, GROCERIES MINERS Supplies

PROVISIONS

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

BELL'S Flouring Mills

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS. WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

☞ All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

0-m RENO, NEVADA

One Grocer has been found who says he will not handle

Royal Baking Powder!

And the reason he gives is of interest to every housekeeper. It is that he can make more money selling the other baking powders! He says he can buy all other powders at from 20 to 50 per cent. lower price than Royal, while he sells them at the same price. That means when the housekeeper buys some powder other than the Royal she pays the same price, but gets a powder costing to make and worth only half as much.

It is a fact that the Royal Baking Powder is made from more highly refined, purer, and more wholesome ingredients than any other baking powder. Most of the others are made from alum. All of them contain adulterants or impurities. Absolutely pure cream of tartar and soda, as used in the Royal, cost more than impure cream of tartar and alum; hence the greater cost, as well as greater value, of the Royal.

The grocer who says he will not handle Royal Baking Powder because he can make more profit upon other powders proves to the consumer, most conclusively, the superior value of the Royal over all other brands.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL ST., NEW-YORK.

The Kremlin of Moscow contains the crowns of Poland and all the other kingdoms and principalities, which Russia has overthrown.

Weinstock, Lubin & Co

400 to 412 K St.,

Sacramento, Cal.

Largest General Retail House on Coast.

Wearing Apparel of all kinds for men, women, and children; Dry Goods, Shoes, Hats, Millinery, Valises, Furniture, Carpets, Crockery, Notions, Stationery, Silverware, Toys, Household Supplies, etc.

Catalogue Free.

A handsome illustrated catalogue about our goods and prices sent free to any address. Tens of thousands of customers find it profitable and satisfactory to buy through this book.

TERMS CASH.

Enclose money for goods with order, and if to be sent by mail allow for postage. Any balance left over will be returned.

If interested in any of the items below, order promptly, giving item number.

A182. Washable Chambray waists in pink, light blue, or black and white mixtures, yoke back, large sleeves and stud fastenings; 32 to 42 in. bust. Price, 75c.

A183. All wool Ladies' Cloth in brown, tan, gray or garnet, 50 in. wide. Price, 36c yd.

A184. New rough straw dude Hats for women and misses, in latest Tallyho shape, white, black or navy blue straw, with ribbon band binding to match. Price, 75c each.

A185. Striped Wash Silk in delicate soft tinted colorings, width, 20 in.; requires six yards for a women's waist. Price, 35c yard.

A186. The very popular and genuine La Blache Face Powder, white, flesh or pink. Price, 25c a box. Usually sells for twice as much.

A187. Stout "Rough and Ready" pebble leather shoes for school or play, solar tips, spring heels. Price, sizes 5 to 8, $1.00; sizes 8½ to 11, $1.10; sizes 11½ to 2, $1.35; postage, 8c.

A188. The Kayser black silk gloves, with double finger tips that will outwear the rest of the glove. Price, 50c.

Send for our beautiful Catalogue (lilac and gold cover), and with hundreds of illustrations of summer goods. Sent free to any address.

A189. Brown linen Shoe Bags, with four pockets, stamped for outlining. Price, 25c.

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN & CO.,
11 Sacramento, Cal.

A great deal has been said of late about the great value of fresh market bones properly cut up for poultry food. While looking about for some reason why this food should be so valuable, I came upon Dalton's Physiology which is standard authority, and from this learned that the different parts of ordinary market bones contain in abundance the ingredients which make up the growing chicken; also almost the identical substances and in wonderully close proportion to the different parts of the complete egg, the shell, the yolk and the white.—E. B. Backus.

Hicks—"They tell me that you and your neighbors were quite generous with that tramp last week; that you fed him and clothed him in fine shape."

Wicks—"You see we thought he was a brother Mason from the signs he gave us. It was only after awhile that we found he was only a deaf mute."

LOOK OUT FOR BREAKERS AHEAD

when pimples, eruptions, boils, and like manifestations of impure blood appear. They wouldn't appear if your blood were pure and your system in the right condition. They show you what you need—a good blood-purifier; that's what you get when you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It carries health with it. All Blood, Skin and Scalp Diseases, from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula, are cured by it. It invigorates the liver and rouses every organ into healthful action. In the most stubborn forms of Skin Diseases, such as Salt-rheum, Eczema, Tetter, Erysipelas, Boils and kindred ailments, and Scrofula, it is an unequaled remedy.

Richard Green's Escape.

By WILLIAM M'KENDREE BANGS.

Something was muttered in reply which Richard did not understand, and then the group quietly dispersed and the men went slowly to work. Green waited a few minutes, and then turning his horse he started to ride slowly away. The others were at work quietly, and Green, as he went his round, saw no reason to apprehend further trouble, and although the men looked at him sullenly he reported when he arrived at home that all was going smoothly. For several days his experience was similar, and on every day when he first arrived at the field he found a group around this man whom he came to believe was the one who made all the trouble. When he approached this man now, he spoke sharply to him and bade him peremptorily to keep at work. The man always obeyed, but sullenly. At last one day when he had spoken even more sharply than usual he turned to ride away, but before he had gone more than a few feet a stone or a heavy clod of earth struck his horse and made him for the moment unmanageable. Richard hastily shook the stirrups free, and while he endeavored to regain his control of the frightened animal with one hand, with the other he sought his pistol; but then he was himself struck by another stone and he fell heavily to the ground.

As he fell his wrist slipped through the reins, but his right hand, with its fingers already touching the handle of his pistol, was under him. Before he could extricate it the men were upon him. They aimed vicious blows at him with their knives, but Green was quick and active and he fenced cleverly with his feet. His feet and legs were badly wounded, but he prevented them from striking him in any vital part. He realized his danger and knew that the unequal contest must soon end, and he felt that it could end in only one way; but he was determined to fight as long and as zealously as he could. If only he could get his right arm free! If only he could get his pistol!

His shoes were badly cut; his trousers were in ribbons. One of the scoundrels, bolder than the rest, had cut a great gash in his upper leg. Weak already from loss of blood and fatigue, he was almost in despair, but then his horse, which had stood restless, started. But before he broke quite away Richard, holding fast to the reins, was half lifted, half pulled, upon his knees. Then the man whom Green held most responsible for all the trouble rushed at him with a muttered imprecation, but his pistol hand was now free. Raising his weapon quickly he fired. The man fell quivering, and as Green again cocked the pistol the others hastily retreated. Green staggered to his feet and then fell unconscious.

Hackett had resented Green's expressed wish that he should not accompany him, and day by day he followed him at a distance, ready to offer assistance when it should be needed. As Richard's fears were lessened, as time went on, and no threatening demonstration was made, Hackett's fear grew greater, for he believed that they were waiting only a more convenient time. Now, luckily, he reached the field in time to hear Richard's pistol shot, and to see his horse run wildly away. Hackett tried to hurry on, but the field was much broken and his progress was slow. Fortunately, the horse knew Hackett, and as he approached, now walking, he permitted himself to be easily caught. Hackett mounted him quickly and rode on toward Green. He reached him just in time, for although the men who had attacked him, now thoroughly cowed, were all at work, the other laborers had heard the shot, too, and they had run from all quarters of the field to where the trouble was. Finding there the dead body of their comrade, they might have done Green harm; but as Hackett dismounted, and, kneeling by the fallen man took from his hand the revolver, they fell back also, and Hackett, unmolested, lifted Green's limp and bleeding body upon the horse and started homeward.

During the journey Green made no sign of life, and when they reached the house Hackett, with Mr. Joosten's help, carried him to his room and put him in bed. Mr. Joosten could do little but murmur of the trouble; but his wife, always equal to any emergency, controlled her feelings and soon restoratives were given Green and he was made as comfortable as possible in the circumstances. Green recovered consciousness, but a fever set in and he was delirious. For many days it seemed doubtful whether or not he could recover, but at length he began to mend and at the end of six weeks he was well enough to be about.

Hackett lifted Green's limp and bleeding body upon the horse.

Soon now he would be all right and able to work and his immediate troubles would be over. But his worst trouble, as it seemed, was only about to begin, for one day as he sat upon the veranda idly talking with Mrs. Joosten, they saw a strange boat far out upon the sea making toward the opening in the reef. Slowly it sailed toward them in the light wind, and finally came to anchor in the lagoon just before them. Then some men got into the small boat at her stern and rowed toward the landing. They looked at the men with a wondering welcome, for visitors were unusual and almost unknown; but presently the men landed.

As the men came near they bowed to Mrs. Joosten, and then one of them said to Richard:

"You are Richard Green?"

"Yes."

"I must ask you to go with us, then."

"Indeed?" answered Richard. "Where, and why?"

"I must arrest you. Here is my warrant."

"Arrest me?" Richard said in astonishment, as he took the document and looked at it blankly. "What is it for?"

"For the murder of a coolie."

"For murder? This is too good," he said, turning to Mrs. Joosten; but she was very indignant and spoke strongly of the outrage, as she considered it.

"Madam, you must not blame us. We have no choice. The law must protect even these poor laborers."

"I suppose so," she answered; "but you might be in better business."

Richard was soon ready, and then, turning to Mrs. Joosten, he said:

"You have been very kind to me. I shall never forget it. And this, it cannot amount to much."

Hackett went with them, and he, acting under the directions of Mrs. Joosten, engaged a lawyer and saw that many little comforts were placed at Green's disposal. The case came on for trial quickly, and the jurors were drawn with little difficulty—with altogether too little difficulty to please Hackett. There were few witnesses to be examined and the trial was soon over. After the arguments of the lawyers had been made Hackett spoke to Richard.

"I say, old man," he said, "I think they are going to convict you."

"What?" answered Richard in astonishment. "How can they? They will not dare to. I do not see how they even dared to accuse me."

"Do not be alarmed. We will get you off in some way. But these rascals are all cowards. Judge, jury, lawyers—all of them. Your lawyer is too."

"But what does it mean?" asked Richard. "What have they to fear?"

"They fear the coolies. The chief men among them have insisted that you shall be punished. These cowards are afraid of them. I wish we had a few men of Mrs. Joosten's force."

The jury did not take long to deliberate. As they came in Richard looked closely at them, but they avoided his eye. It was as Hackett had foreseen. When asked their verdict the foreman responded "Guilty," and Richard Green was a convicted murderer.

CHAPTER III.

"I say, old man, are you awake?"

Matters looked dark for Richard Green. When the jury declared him guilty he was for the time so crushed that he took little interest in what happened afterward in the courtroom. For some reason which he perhaps understood, his lawyer asked that sentence be deferred a few days, and Richard was spared that ordeal. He was taken back to the same narrow cell in the dark jail. Through all the evening he lay in a stupor, only dimly conscious of his surroundings, but at length he fell into an uneasy sleep.

In the morning when he awoke it was some time before he realized all that had happened. Then he laughed aloud. It was pretty good, he thought, that he had been convicted of a murder far off on the other side of the world. His elation was of short duration, for he soon felt that even at the best his position must be a very serious one. He did not believe that the verdict would stand, but he knew that it might take a long time to secure for him a new trial, and that even then they would probably find him guilty of something and imprison him for may be many years.

Richard's thoughts became gloomier and gloomier, and as the few objects in his cell became less and less distinct as the day came toward its close, he almost wished that the coolies had quite killed him. He was surprised that Hackett had not visited him. "Has he deserted me?" he asked himself, but he could not believe that that was possible.

At length, when all was dark and Green believed that the jail had all been locked up for the night, he heard the sound of many voices, and it seemed to him, too, that there was a struggle, but it was not of long duration. Soon his door was unlocked and he heard Hackett's voice in the darkness.

"I say, old man, are you awake?"

"Yes," Richard answered. "What is the matter?"

"Dressed?"

"No."

"Hurry then. We'll have you out of this in short order."

"Good!" said Richard. "I am willing enough to be out."

Dressing himself as quickly as he could he followed Hackett out into the corridor. At the end of it were perhaps half a dozen men, one of whom held a lantern. By its dim light Richard saw the jailer and one or two of his assistants lying bound and gagged upon the floor. Not a word was spoken till they were all in the open air. There the others left them, and Hackett and Richard hurried on together.

"Well," said Hackett, "you didn't think we were going to let any such injustice as that stand, did you?"

"I hardly had time to think," Richard answered.

"Oh, but it was easy!" Hackett said, laughing. "I could almost have done it alone."

"I hope you haven't put yourselves in any danger."

"Oh, there is no fear. We are too many, and too important, too, some of us."

"But what are we to do now?"

"You are to go a-sailing. Fast schooner, going to San Francisco. Was to sail this morning. Yankee skipper, sharp, very. We induced him to wait till tonight. You get aboard and off you go."

"This is all very kind of you."

"Nonsense. Mrs. Joosten said we owed that much to you. She planned it. Splendid woman that, I tell you."

"Well, thank her for me, anyway."

"You can do that yourself. She'll be waiting to see you off. But come this way."

Hackett now led the way through the deserted streets until they came to the water's edge. There, waiting for them, was a small rowboat. On the shore stood two or three people, and among them Mrs. Joosten.

"Ah, you were successful," she said quickly, as Hackett and Richard joined them. "I was so afraid that it could not be done."

"I feel a hero," Hackett responded. "You told me to bring him, and behold!"

"That was good. You shall tell me all about it later. Well, Mr. Green, you must go. I shall not be happy till I know you are on board and out of the harbor. Goodby! I am so sorry we led you to such trouble. Goodby!"

As Richard shook hands with her she drew him quickly to her and kissed him, for the man's danger and pluck had endeared him to her.

"Goodby!" she said again. "I wish so you could stay on with us. You would have become like a son to us. But hurry. Goodby."

"Goodby," echoed Hackett, "I am going home soon. I will look you up."

Then, as he remembered that he knew nothing of Richard's future, he added, shouting as Richard hurried to the boat, "You must send me word of your whereabouts."

In a minute the boat was gliding smoothly and quickly over the water and in another Hackett and Mrs. Joosten were swallowed in the darkness and Richard never saw them afterward. Again he was alone in the world with strangers.

When they reached the schooner the captain was anxiously looking for them. He was in a great hurry, and the little boat which had brought Richard and the others from the shore was barely in its place before the anchor was raised, and without waiting to lift it to the cathead the sails were set and in the favoring breeze the vessel was on its way.

"Well, young man," said the captain to Richard, "You had a close shave, but here we are on the way to 'Frisco."

"It was close, was it captain? May I ask your name?"

"Davis. And yours they tell me is Green. I think you had a very close shave. But you're all right now."

"Won't they try to have me brought back?"

"No; bless you, no! The authorities know you were not guilty of anything. They'll be glad to be rid of you."

"There's some comfort in that," Richard replied, laughing; "but my trial and conviction were a great shame—a great outrage."

"That's true," rejoined the captain, "but you can't help it. The less you think about it the better, I say."

"How long will it take us to reach San Francisco, captain?"

"I don't know. It depends on wind and weather. Are you in a hurry?"

"No," Richard answered doubtfully. "I suppose not."

"Anyway," said the captain, "we can't hurry things any by staying up all night. Come, I'll show you your quarters."

He led Richard below and showed him the bunk in the small cabin he was to occupy.

"We don't do much in the passenger line, but I guess you can make this do. They wanted to have me take you with me, and they made it worth while. There's a chest of yours that young fellow—what's his name, Hackett?—brought on board for you, and there are some books and things the old lady sent for your comfort."

"That was very kind of them," Richard answered as he opened the trunk Hackett had brought on board and found in it clothing and necessaries. "They meant to have me get on board or lose my belongings, did they not?"

"Of course we knew you would get on board. Why not?"

Later, when Richard examined more carefully his clothing, he found that Mrs. Joosten with kind thoughtfulness had placed in one of his pockets a small sum of money, enough, he thought, to start him well upon his journey toward home and the quiet he now wished for as much as he had longed for them before wished to escape them.

Altogether, Richard Green felt that he had reason to be grateful to Mrs. Joosten and to Hackett, and he was.

THE END

One may know what he wants at present, but he does not know what he is going to want after he gets it.

I cannot speak too highly of Piso's Cure for Consumption.—MRS. FRANK MOBES, 215 W. 22d St., New York, Oct. 29, 1894.

Mrs. Houser—Will you be out to-night? Houser—Yes, if I hold some measly hands as they have been dealing me in that poker game.

F. M. Peter, leading cost play-books. Country querade costumes, wigs and [illegible]. 729 Market St., S. F. masquerade balls a specialt[illegible]

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one needs [illegible] Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the [illegible] as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's [illegible] Pile Ointment is prepared only for [illegible] Every box is warranted. [illegible] by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per [illegible] Sold by Druggists [illegible] & Co., Wholesale Agents, San [illegible]

ACUTE DYSPEPSIA.

SYMPATHETIC HEART DISEASE OFTEN ATTENDS IT.

The Modern Treatment Consists in Removing the Cause.

(From the Republican, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.)

Mrs. V. Curley who has resided in Clarence, Iowa, for the past twenty-two years, tells an interesting story of what she considers rescue from premature death. Her narrative is as follows:

"For ten years prior to 1894 I was a constant sufferer from acute stomach trouble. I had all the manifold symptoms of acute dyspepsia, and at times other troubles were present in complication—I did not know what it was to enjoy a meal. No matter how careful I might be as to the quality, quantity and preparation of my food, distress always followed eating. I was despondent and blue. Almost to the point of insanity at times, and would have been glad to die. Often and often I could not sleep. Sympathetic heart trouble set in and time and again I was obliged to call a doctor in the night to relieve sudden attacks of suffocation which would come on without a moment's warning.

"My troubles increased as time wore on and I spent large sums in doctor bills, being compelled to have medical attendants almost constantly. During 1892 and 1893, it was impossible for me to retain food, and water brashes plagued me. I was reduced to a skeleton. A consultation of physicians was unable to determine just what did ail me. The doctors gave us as their opinion that the probable trouble was ulceration of the coats of the stomach, and held out no hope of recovery. One doctor said, 'All I can do to relieve your suffering is by the use of opium.'

"About this time a friend of mine, Mrs. Symantha Smith, of Glidden, Iowa, told me about the case of Mrs. Thurston, of Oxford Junction, Iowa. This lady said she had been afflicted much the same as I had. She had consulted local physicians without relief, and had gone to Davenport for treatment. Giving up all hope of recovery, she was persuaded by a friend to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The result was almost magical.

I was led to try them from her experience, and before many months I felt better than I had for a dozen years. I am now almost free from trouble, and if through some error of diet I feel badly, this splendid remedy sets me right again. I have regained my strength and am once more in my usual flesh. I sleep well and can eat without distress. I have no doubt that I owe my recovery to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I only wish that I had heard of them years ago, thereby saving myself ten years of suffering and much money."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

She (haughtily)—Did I hear you call my father a pirate? He (rubbing his coat tails)—I merely said that he was a free booter.

BEWARE OF OINTMENT FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAINS MERCURY.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

He (after the ball)—I hope you have had a pleasant time? She—Oh, delightful! I'm completely exhausted.

A TERRIBLE VISITANT.

Pain is always a terrible visitant, and often domiciles itself with one for life. This infliction is preventible, in cases of rheumatism, by a timely resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters which checks the encroachments of this obstinate and dangerous malady at the outset. The term "dangerous" is used advisedly, for rheumatism is always liable to attack the vital organs and terminate life. No testimony is more conclusive and concurrent than that of physicians who testify to the excellent effect of the Bitters in this disease. Persons incur a wetting in rainy or snowy weather, and who are exposed to draughts should use the Bitters as a preventive of ill effects. Malaria, dyspepsia, liver and kidney trouble, nervousness and debility are also among the ailments to which this popular medicine is adapted. For the infirmities, soreness and stiffness of the aged it is highly beneficial.

Linsey—Time is money. Miss Caustic—I must be deeply in your debt. You have spent a good deal of it with me.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Ker-Chew!

The first symptom of a cold should never go unheeded. Pneumonia or Consumption often start with an ordinary cold. PAIN-KILLER will cure a cold before it settles or after it settles; but the common-sense way is to use it at once. It is an infallible remedy for Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, Bronchitis, and all troubles arising from a cold. Keep it by you for an emergency. When you are in distress always remember that

ONE THING IS CERTAIN, PAIN KILLER KILLS PAIN.

Dose—One teaspoonful in a half glassful of water or milk (warm if convenient).

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Providence, R. I.

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mont., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement, "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, Pastor Central Pres. Church, Helena, Mont.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from Colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents, at Druggists; by mail, 50 cents. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., N. Y.

S. F. N. U. No. 67[illegible]

WOMEN ONLY KNOW

How much they suffer when nervous, weak and tired.

Nervous prostration is a lingering, racking, living death to those afflicted, though wholly incomprehensible to others. The cause of this condition is impure and insufficient Blood.

Make the blood pure, give it vitality and it will properly feed the nerves and make them strong. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures nervousness because it acts directly upon the blood, making it rich and pure and endowing it with vitality and strength-giving power. No other medicine has such a record of cures. Thousands write that they suffered intensely with nervousness and were cured by this great medicine. The building-up powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are wonderful. Even a few doses are sufficient to create an appetite, and from that time on its healing, purifying, strengthening effects are plainly felt. The nerves become stronger, the sleep becomes natural and refreshing, the hands and limbs become steady, and soon "life seems to go on without effort," and perfect health is restored. Such is the work which Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing for hundreds of women today.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Makes Pure Blood.

"IT IS IGNORANCE THAT WASTES EFFORT." TRAINED SERVANTS USE

SAPOLIO

MALARIA! DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY. Three doses only. Try it.

Hercules

GAS OR GASOLINE

Engines

Workmanship the very best.
Always Ready, a boy can start them
No double or false explosions.
They Oil Themseves

A FEW USES TO WHICH THE HERCULES CAN BE PUT:

For Wood-working Machinery.
For Bean-cleaning Machinery.
For Hoisting-works in Mines.
Running Machine Shops.
Running Shoe Factories.
Bottling Soda Water.
Sawing Cord-wood.
Running Churns.
Sawing Lumber.
Pumping Water.
Running Elevators.
Running Paint Mills.
Running Electric Motors.
For Printing Machinery.
Running Sewing Machines.
For Electric Light Dynamos.
Running Ice-cream Freezers
For Carpe-beating Machinery.

ADDRESS:
PALMER & REY
405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal.

LOST The money you have paid for [illegible] Forever lost to you [illegible] our plan. [illegible] improve, build or purchase the [illegible] lot, or both, anywhere you may reside [illegible] lect it. It is deeded to you. You occupy [illegible] and pay monthly rent to us, until the amount due is paid. In case you die, the debt [illegible] Men of push can represent us everywhere. Association Bldg., 208 Mason St., San Francisco, Cal. Stamp for prospectus. Inducements for more [illegible] ments are equally [illegible] CO. [illegible]s of [illegible]

A SURE CURE FOR PILES. Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY, which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

YOUNG WOMAN YOU CAN MAKE MONEY BALING hay with a good Hay Press. Write us for information. BICYCLES—We sell all the best first-class Bicycles. Write for Catalogue. I. J. TRUMAN & CO., 236 Bush Street, San Francisco, Cal. Please mention this Paper when writing

FRAZER AXLE GREASE BEST IN THE WORLD. Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from oil. GET THE GENUINE. FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

PLEASANT Profitable Employment AT HOME. No experience or capital required. Earn a month and expenses to $50 the right parties. Address for particulars M. A. THOMPSON, Stockton, Cal. (Mention this paper.)

THE BEST IN AMERICA
W. G. WOODS & Co's.
"CASTLEWOOD" KENTUCKY BOURBON
CARTAN, McCARTHY & Co.
SOLE AGENTS, AND DISTRIBUTORS
SAN FRANCISCO

PALESTINE CORN
Is hard to beat. Can be planted till June. Yields about 2,000 lbs. corn and 12 tons excellent fodder per acre on dry land. Can be harvested with combined harvester. Send $1 per acre for seed desired. Address: SACRAMENTO RIVER NURSERY CO., WALNUT GROVE, CALIF.

HERCULES
Gas or Gasoline Engine.
Your Wife can run it. It Cannot Explode. No Batteries or Electric Spark.
PALMER & REY, San Francisco, Cal. and Portland, Or.

MEN Dr. LIEBIG & CO. Special Doctors for Chronic, Private and Wasting Diseases.
Dr. Liebig's Invigorator, the greatest remedy for Seminal Weakness, Loss of Manhood and Private Diseases, overcomes Prematureness and prepares all for marriage life's duties, pleasures and responsibilities; $1 trial bottle given or sent free to any one describing symptoms; call or address 400 Geary St., private entrance 405 Mason St., San Francisco.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING - by all Druggists, 25 cents a bottle.

Their delicious, pure and soluble. SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE. WALTER BAKER & CO. DORCHESTER, MASS.

★ HIGHEST AWARD ★ WORLD'S FAIR.
IMPERIAL GRANUM IS ★ THE BEST ★ PREPARED FOOD
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
★ JOHN CARLE & SONS, New York. ★

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS if you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business. 48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc. AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS
A MILD PHYSIC.
ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.
A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

INCUBATORS
Send for Catalogue. W. C. Beach, Ripon, Cal.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVII. NO. 3. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JULY 5, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1288.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.00
Three Months	1.25
One Month	50
Single Copies	10

LIFE ON A RANCH

Is Often Fraught With Hardship and Danger.

WAGON THE COW-PUNCHER'S HOME.

When Caught in a Blizzard During Winter It Is Almost Impossible to Avoid Being Lost.

Probably every man who has had a ranch in the west has received a multitude of applications from people who wish to get on that ranch. Most easterners seem not to know that a cowboy's business requires special training, and that a hardy, vigorous young fellow without any training can no more start in off-hand as a cowboy than he could start in off-hand as a carpenter. Moreover, a man who isn't a good cowboy is worse than a nuisance, because the average cowboy needs ten horses for his work, and if the doesn't do the work the ten horses are wasted.

A man to be proficent in the business must be not only a good horseman, but must be able to rope well, to read brands, to understand cattle, and must have a good knowledge of plainscraft. Ordinarily the work does not imply long continued physical exertion, like the work of a wood chopper, but it is often very monotonous and it is also often fraught with hardship and danger.

Nevertheless, in the spring, summer and early fall the life is a very exciting and pleasant one for those who have mastered the work. There is an attraction in the wild, lonely country, and the entire freedom of an existence spent mostly on horseback. After one gets used to it, the rough little shack seems comfortable enough, and for much of the year the ranch wagon is the cow-puncher's home. To many a hardy, vigorous fellow the round-up is ordinarily rather a picnic. The men are fed well, and though they do not have much sleep yet the easiest of all forms of labor is sitting in the saddle and the long rides in the morning to gather in the cattle, and the furious galloping and chasing round the herd, when cutting out the beef steers and cows and calves in the afternoon possess a great charm for men fond of vigorous exercise and of life in the open. Of course even in summer there are unpleasant experiences. A stampede at night in a thunderstorm is usually too exciting to be agreeable, and fighting fire is very wearing work, while there is always a liability to misadventure. A man may have now and then to make a dry camp; he may get injured by an unusually vicious horse, or be damaged in the rush of a stampeded herd, or be drowned in the quicksands of some treacherous plains river. Still, take it a[illegible] whole, in good weat[illegible] pleasant [illegible]

[illegible] work is [illegible]. The [illegible]e in [illegible]s, are [illegible]re very [illegible] of stand[illegible]d does not [illegible] shorter. In [illegible]ants a tent; but [illegible]ter a twenty-four [illegible] toss the damp [illegible]d-ground and [illegible]eep [illegible] of course, the tarpaulin [illegible] out most of the wet, but [illegible] not keep out all; and then some nights there is a heavy snowfall and when you throw back the tarpaulin in the morning the snow gets down the back of your neck, and much dexterity is needed while drawing on your boots and trousers not to let the snow get into the blankets. The ground is like iron after the heavy frosts; and though the horses, being worn down and thin, are much less lively and vicious than in spring, yet if they do "act mean" they are more liable to slip and hurt themselves, and more apt to hurt their rider if they throw him.

Early in December the last of the season's work ends. Most of the cowboys are discharged, and they may then go into town or build a little shack and hunt for a livelihood or stay around the ranches, doing any odd job that turns up for their board. A few, however, are kept on to ride lines and keep track of the cattle in the snow. These men must needs be of vigorous constitution and thoroughly able to grapple with every exigency of plains life, for they are certain to have some pretty rough experiences before spring if the winter is at all severe.

In riding lines each man has a definite beat. Of course in good weather the task is a perfectly easy one. The rider lets his pony jog along until he comes to the end of his beat. If any cattle have crossed the line he sees their tracks and following rounds them up and drives them back into the country where it is desired they shall range during the winter. If no cattle come near the line he simply goes to the end of his beat and comes back again, but if a blizzard catches him he may find it an almost impossible task to avoid getting lost. All landmarks are shrouded from sight, and while the blizzard is in its height it is out of the question to make head against it. Of course, if the day is a very bad one the rider won't go out at all; but often he has to take his chances, and the snow may begin to fall and the wind to blow just when he is at the farthest point of his beat; then back he comes over the long stretch of sand colored, lifeless prairie sward as fast as his pony can go. The snow comes first in puffs, and little drifts—not the soft flakes of an eastern snowstorm, but fine ice dust, which feels almost like sand when blown against the face. Heavier and heavier grow the gusts, thicker and thicker the snow clouds, and finally the storm moans and shrieks, and drives the icy flakes in almost level lines. The rider is then lucky if he can find his camp. Unless he knows exactly where he is and unless the landmarks are very conspicuous, it is out of the quesiton for him to do so. The only resource is to drift before the storm exactly as the cattle do, until he finally strikes some sheltered place, under the lee of a big rock in a hollow where there is a bunch of thick timber. Here he will dismount, tie his horse (which shelters itself all that it can and then stands with drooping head, tail toward the wind) and himself cower down under the horse blankets in the most sheltered spot he can find. There is no small difficulty in lighting a fire, and, indeed, unless the shelter is good such a feat is impossible. Without any fire, if the cold is at all intense, the man's chances for life are not good, but often the blizzards blow over almost as quickly as they arise. As a rule the cow-puncher who is very shifty and full of expedients turns up at the home ranch or the line camps a couple of days later, perhaps a little frost bitten, and certainly very hungry and uncomfortable, but not materially the worse for wear.

However, there are occasions when even veteran plainsmen succumb. A year ago last winter two men thus died in a blizzard not very far from my ranch. They had stopped at a horse camp, and while there a terrific storm blew up. After a time there came a lull, and the men thought the storm had broken. Accordingly they rode off, intending to make a ranch on the Deadwood trail, far to the south. Not long after they had started the blizzard again began with increased fury. For weeks nothing was heard of the men. Then a rider hunting up strayed stock came across the body of one of them beside the body of his horse. They had been drifting before the storm until they finally came to a wire fence. By this time the man, in the effort to keep himself from freezing, was walking, and he must have got separated from his horse, which was a little distance from him. Both were brought up by the wire fence exactly as cattle are brought up, and there they stood and froze to death precisely as cattle do under similar circumstances. The man stood with his hands on the top most wire, leaning forward, and in this position he had remaind from the moment that the last spark of life flickered out in his breast until he was found. The horse had fallen down. The other man never was found, but his horse was discovered by a round-up wagon which went down on the Cannon Ball river, about 150 miles off. One day the saddle band was joined out on the prairie by a horse with something queer on its back. The animal was very wild and difficult to approach, though it seemed weak, and it was sometime before the cow-puncher got their ropes on it. Its bridle was torn off. The saddle still held, but it had been shifted and come down underneath it, and the cinches had cut deeply unto the back. It was taken off and the horse driven along with the saddle band, but it did not live to reach home, for one morning it was too weak to rise and the round-up wagon left it.

The same winter five cowboys, who were caught in a terrific storm on the divide between the Beaver and the Little Missouri, nearly met a similar fate. They became completely turned round and were finally obliged to camp in a little valley, where they found shelter in some timber. They had nothing to eat and they stayed in this camp that night and all the next day, fearful lest if they ventured out they would not again find a place where they would be safe from the blizzard. After the second night hunger began to tell on them, so that they felt they had to make a move. The storm still raged fitfully, but in one of the lulls a cow-puncher went off about a mile and suddenly recognized a familiar landmark, by which he knew that they were in the head of a valley which went down by the P. K. ranch. They at once saddled up and rode down the valley and before they had gone three miles they came to the ranch.

Adventures of this sort are not uncommon incidents in the life of every ranchman in the northern cattle country and before any man takes up the business he should be sure that he has the courage and the constitution to stand the terrible strain of ranch work in winter weather.—Chicago Record.

WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Wendell Phillips was a friend of General Butler, and was fond of attacking Lincoln and everybody else in responsible positions, in that most trying period for those in authority at Washington, the War of the Rebellion. Mr. Phillips cared nothing for the Union; he could see nothing but the Goddess of Liberty weeping over the shackled slave. Judge Hoar resented these attacks on men whom he knew and respected, and the breach was not narrowed by a bitter rhetorical attack of Phillips on the Judge himself. Ralph Waldo Emerson sided with the Judge, and when Phillips presently lectured in Concord, and wished to call on Emerson, the poet refused to receive him. Phillips died first. Some one, probably not a resident of Concord, meeting Judge Hoar, asked if he meant to attend the funeral. "No," answered the Judge, "I don't; but I approve of it." This need not be taken to imply that the Judge nursed malice after the death of his enemy. It was simply his humorous way of putting everything. The constant use of his wit was a habit he could not lay aside for a moment's notice. It recalls Horne Tooke's irreverent bon mot, "Do you never go to church, Mr. Tooke?" asked the Archbishop. "Never," was the grave reply, and Tooke added: "Not that I mean to say that there is any harm in it."—Worcester Gazette.

SCINTIFIC NOTES.

What Science and Industry Does for Us.

A NEW USE FOR COTTONSEED MEAL.

Influenza Cracking the Voices of Vocalists—Apparatue for Humidifying the Air of Mills.

Prof. E. W. Scripture of Yale university, where psychological subjects are now given special attention, has been doing valuable work with the new apparatus called the pendulum chronoscope or pendulum timer, designed for recording the time occupied by the various operations of the mind. Some of the tests of this instrument made at a recent demonstration by Prof. Scripture were most interesting. Skilled pianoforte players know that one of the main essentials to a smooth and artistic performance is the ability to press any required number of keys exactly at the same instant. This is much more difficult than is generally believed, but the timer will bring the musician nearer to it than any instrument yet devised. A well-known pianist was asked by Prof. Scripture to preside at the piano. He was told to move both hands at the same time in pressing the keys. He was quite sure that he had done so until the reading of the timer was taken; this showed that his left hand was fifteen thousandths of a second behind the right. To obtain this record a telegraph key was put under each of the performer's hands. Connected to these was an apparatus including a large spark coil and two metal recording points, which rested on a revolving drum. The drum was covered with smoked paper. The moment each key was pressed a spark was made from its pointer and the distance between these parks was told off in thousandths of a second by a tuning fork adjustment. The pianist was told to press the left-hand key when he heard a bass note in a telephone held to his ear. He believed that he pressed the key the instant the note came. An arrangement was at hand by which a mark was made on the drum at exactly the moment the tone occurred in the telephone. On comparing this with the record made by the key it was found that the moment of pressing the key was far behind the sounding of the tone—on an average not less than .200, or one-fifth of a second. The length of time occupied by mental action was very much increased in the next test, in which the player was told to press the left-hand key when he heard a bass tone and the right-hand key when a high tone was sounded. Here he had to discriminate between two things, and then to choose between two acts. In a similar manner the psychologist can ascertain the time occupied by any given effort throughout the whole domain of mental life. For instance, supposing it is wished to measure the time taken in associating two ideas. The experimenter shouts some word, for example, "house," into a telephone, which carries the word to another person in a distant room. This person shouts back the first thing he thinks of, say, "street." The two telephones are so arranged that they make records on the drum where these words are uttered. The time between the actual shouting of the word "house" and that of the word "street" represents the time lost by the mental processes that were going on in the second person. The operation of the pendulum timer is not confined to sound, and a very elaborate series of tests is being made by Perf. Scripture for the purpose of determining many hitherto unknown phenomena connected with sight and touch. The pendulum timer was made under the supervision of Prof. Scripture for Prof. C. B. Bliss, who proposes to publish the results of a large number of measurements on mental time he is now taking.

A South Carolina physician has discovered a new use for cottonseed meal. He says that it is a valuable article of human food, and it is not by any means bad eating. His first idea of using this meal as an article of diet was suggested by his young nephew who, after looking at the feeding of the cows, took to eating the cottonseed meal from the feed bins. No restriction was laid upon the youngster, who for two years thrived well on this singular food. This led to experiments being tried in the kitchen, and one-third of the cottonseed meal was mixed with two-thirds white flour or cornmeal and baked or fried, either as batter or dough. The mixture cooked well, and possessed a rich, nutty flavor very pleasant to the palate. Cotton-seed meal is very rich in albuminoids, or the nitrogenous elements (flesh and blood formers), as compared with the starch and fat elements (heat-producers,) possessing a nutritive ratio of one to one, while that of the whole wheat is one to six. It is well known that Graham flour, which contains all parts of the wheat, is almsot a perfect food, more nearly meeting all the requirements of the human body than does any other natural product. The mixture of cottonseed meal with cornmeal and white flour gives a composition almost identical in composition and nutritive ratio with wheat. In many states cottonseed meal is produced in such quantities as to sell for 1 cent a pound. The same states will buy annually millions of dollars' worth of meal and flour at an average of 1½ cents a pound.

Although the store of human knowledge on the subject of the attributes of colors is gradually growing, and we have even gone as far as to differentiate the sounds caused by the falling of a ray of sunshine on clo[illegible] ious tints, comparatively little is yet known of the physiological effect of color on human beings. The votaries of the "blue-glass craze," which came into vogue some years ago, who firmly believed that a bath in a flood of colored light was the finest restorative that tired and ailing humanity could have recourse to, may possibly have been wiser in their generation than those who derided them. Whatever the effect of colored light on individuals may finally be determined to be, its influence on plants is now unquestionably proved. The use of glass of a green tint has for half a century been one of the peculiar characteristics of the plant houses at Kew gardens, near London. In 1889 the experiment was made of substituting white glass for green in the east wing of the tropical fern house. This was the result of the observation of the successful cultivation by an amateur horticulturist of ferns with full exposure to the light. The improvement in the growth of the plants was remarkable. In 1892 a portion of the west wing was also reglazed, and the new temperate fern house was wholly glazed with white glass. The result has been so markedly beneficial that it has now been determined to abandon entirely the future use of green glass.

England is in the throes of the influenza, and while the nation generally is trying to find out how it is that the doctors do not seem to know anything about it the great army of vocalists who have suffered from the scourge are lamenting their lost voices and asking how they can be wooed back. So prevalent has been this plague among musicians that the absentees from it have reached at some entertainments the formidable proportion of 30 per cent. One of its effects is aphonia, an affliction from which amateur vocalists enjoy a remarkable immunity, but which, with cruel perversity, harasses and disables the professional singer. The matter assumed such a serious phase that it has been taken up by a musical journal which has prescribed a course of treatment calculated to rehabiltate and reawaken the lost voices. The voiceless vocalist is told that "cod-liver oil would be beneficial to take, and a stimulating liniment, such as hartshorn and oil, should be applied externally, with inhalations of turpentine, fir-wood oil or creosote, a damp cloth being placed over the head so that perfect inhalation of the medicated steam is insured. This treatment, with absolute rest of the voice and patience, will prove beneficial unless some organic defect is the cause, but medical advice is desirable if possible."

A writer in an industrial journal calls the attention of cotton manufacturers to the necessity of securing improved apparatus for humidifying the air of their mills. He says that while in Europe many kinds of machines have for some years past been employed for this purpose, in this country the antiquated method of introducing vapor steam into the different departments has held its ground. The advantage of injecting warm, soft air into any apartment of a mill where the air is cold and full of electricity is well understood by the manufacturer. Incidentally it is very conducive to the comfort of the employes, and work people who are not comfortable will not give the same returns as those who are. It is estimated that an increase of at least 5 per cent. can be gained in labor in cotton mills by humidifying the air and a further 10 per cent. can be obtained by the same means in the actual product of the mill. To accomplish this work without injury to the health of the operative or damage to machinery from dampness has been made the subject of much study and experimenting, and many machines of greater or less suitability have been devised. The perfect humidifying machine has yet to appear.

There are so many smokers in the world that any new recipe for cleaning pipes is sure to find readers. The Mexican gypsy has a simple way. Filling the pipe-bowl with aguadiente, he stirs the liquid until it is thick with the reeking nicotine and then throws it down his throat with a smack of the lips that tells of supreme gusto. This is economical, but not so desirable to people who are not Mexican gypsies as the following, which was sent to a leading journal, "not as a scientific discovery," but because it might be "of use to those scientific men who are smokers": A shallow cork—or still better, a rubber stopper—through which a hole is bored large enough to enable it to fit tightly on the nozzle of a soda-water siphon, is fitted into the bowl. The nozzle is inserted, the mouth-piece directed into a vessel, about a wine glass of soda forced through and the pipe is clean.

The popular idea that trees keep on steadily adding to their growth year in year out has been overturned by the observations of M. Mer, a French forester. He says that the weather affects the growth of trees as it does that of vegetables. In the dry summer of 1893 the firs of the Vosges grew less than usual both in height and diameter. A similar effect was produced by the exceptionally cold, wet summer of 1888. The dry spring of 1892 only diminished the growth in length, and the dry autumn of 1887 only checked the growth in thickness. In short, there are good, bad and middling years of growth, and M. Mer thinks that foresters will do well to give the matter a great deal more study than has ever been devoted to it.

A new worm has been discovered in the prune orchards of the Healdsburg Valley. It is what is commonly called the hook worm and subsists upon the leaves of prune trees. The growers are preventing the pestilence by wrapping tar-coated papers around the trunks of the trees and by this means they hope to free [illegible] from molestation by the [illegible]. Calumia Courier.

TURNPIKE ROADS.

The Most Substantial Turnpike Roads Ever Built.

WHEN TOLL GATES WERE ERECTED.

Appropriations Made by Congress to Construct and Keep in Repair Old-time Roads.

The proposition to connect San Francisco and San Jose by a great boulevard, and the probability that when this is accomplished a second boulevard from the Garden City to Oakland will be constructed, bring to mind the first great attempt in this country to construct a mighty thoroughfare for travel and traffic. This was the great National boulevard which in the early days of the century united the East with the sparsely settled plains and valleys west of the Alleghanies.

This road, 130 miles in length, commenced at Cumberland in Maryland, the head of navigation on the Potomac River, passed through the Laurel hills, a spur of the Aleghanies, through the Panhandle of Virginia, and joined the Ohio River at Wheeling. It was on the line of the old military road laid out by George Washington in 1752 and passed near the site of Fort Necessity, the scene of his first and only defeat.

It was one of the best and most substantial turnpike roads ever built in this country, and cost the Government of the United States nearly $1,750,000.

It was to be expected that the opening of such an excellent road, easy, direct and free to the use of any and all, without cost or charge, would attract to it an immense amount of travel but all the expectations which could have been previously entertained of the vast amount of travel and traffic which would pass over the National road were trebly verified by the result. It was the main thoroughfare over which passed a panorama of passengers, freight, produce and live stock almost beyond the ability of one's imagination to conceive. There were the stage coaches carrying the mails and passengers, loaded to their utmost capacity from the first, and constantly increasing in number from that time until the opening of the railroads banished them forever. By these conveyances all the prominent public men of the West and many of those from the South, Presidents-elect from Tennessee, Ohio and Louisiana, on their way to inauguration; Presidents in office, passing to and fro between the city of Washington and their Southwestern homes; Senators, members of Congress, and numberless officials of lesser degree, all making the National road their highway to and from the National capital. Then there were the long lines of Conestoga wagons (prairie schooners), laden on their eastward trips with flour, whisky, bacon and other produce, and returning west with loads of iron, salt and every kind of merchandise, their numbers being swelled on the return to the West by the addition of equally numerous trains of the same kind of wagons, freighted with the families and household effects of emigrants from the East bound in quest of new homes beyond the Ohio. Besides these the road was crowded with various descriptions and kinds of wagons, laden and unladen, with horsemen and private carriages innumerable. But the passengers on foot outnumbered and outate them all. The long line of hogs, cattle, sheep and horses working their way no the hoof by the month to an Eastern market was alomst endless and countless. They were gathered in from the Wabash, the Scioto, the Muskingum and the Ohio valleys, and the men, all tired and dry and hungry, had to be cared for at a great cost, for it was like feeding an army every day and night. To furnish food and other accommodation for all this vast throng of travelers, brute and human, a great number of public houses were needed and these sprang up immediately along the road. The number of public houses of all kinds which the National road brought into existence was fully equal to one for each two miles of its entire length, from Cumberland to the Ohio. The keepers of these houses, as well as the wagoners and drivers of stages, and, in fact, the greater part of the population, along the route, looked upon the Cumberland road as one of the chief of earthly blessings, and would have regarded with affright the idea of its ever being abandoned or superseded by other avenues or modes of travel.

It may be of interest to note the width, grade and manner of construction as shown by the specifications of the work required from the contractors, among which was included the following, viz: The natural surface of the ground to be cleared of trees and other wooden growth, and also of logs and brush, the whole width of sixty-six feet, the bed of the road to be made even 32 feet in width, the trees and stumps to be grubbed out, the graduation not to exceed five degrees in elevation and depression, and to be straight from point to point, as laid off and directed by the superintendent of the work. Twenty feet in width of the graduated part to be covered with stone, eighteen inches in depth at the center, tapering to twelve inches at the edges, which are to be supported by good and solid shoulders of earth or curbstone, the upper six inches of stone to be broken so as to pass through a ring of three inches in diameter, and the lower stratum to be broken so as to pass through a seven-inch ring. The stone part to be well covered with gravel and rolled with an iron-faced roller four feet in length and made to bear three tons in weight. The acclivity and declivity of the banks at the side of the road not to exceed thirty degrees.

It was a general belief that the substantially built road with its firm foundation of packed stone would remain smooth and serviceable for at least a quarter of a century, but the result proves the fallacy of this belief. In five years from the time of its opening the ceaseless beating of hoofs and the never-ending roll and crush of heavy wheels had worn its solid bed so that in places it was almost impassable. Appropriations were made by Congress and extensive repairs were made, but it was of short duration.

It became evident that the road would be a perpetual and ever-increasing expense to the Government, without producing any income to pay for repairs. It had been built for the purpose of satisfying Ohio and the West generally, and thus preventing that section from fostering projects of secession from the Union. But that danger was past and the road had become a heavy burden upon the Government.

In 1829 General Jackson was inaugurated President of the United States and the principles of the Democratic party became the rule of public policy. The States' rights doctrine of that party demanded the transfer of the National road from the general Government to the States through which it passed, which were Pennslyvania, Maryland and Virgina. While the United States could not erect tollgates and collect tolls, the States would have the power to do so and thus secure a revenue from the road to keep it in preservation. Acts passed the Assemblies of these States in 1831-32 and in July, 1832, a decision by the Government caused the road to be effectually repaired throughout its entire length, it then to be ceded to the three States. All repairs were completed and the States assumed possession in 1835.

Toll gates were erected and collection of tolls commenced. This had the effect to clear the road of the immense droves of livestock which had passed over it and also brought upon the road very heavily built wagons with wheels nine inches broad, drawn by six and eight horses. A former resident on the line says: "I have frequently seen from forty to fifty great Conestoga six-horse teams carrying from five to six tons each, picketed around over night (at one of the roadside taverns) in the yards and around the commons and all the other taverns equally full at the same time." Scarcely a day passed that did not see the main streets of the principal towns on the road crowded from end to end with these immense wagons each of which had about one-half the capacity of the modern railway-car. On the road between these towns they passed in continuous procession.

In 1835 an "Adams Express" was running over the line. It was started in that year by Alvin Adams. Malttoy & Holt started what was known as the "Oyster Line." Three years later a light mail-pouch carrying drafts, paper money, and short printed slips was sent through by a messenger on horseback. It was the fastest overland mail in America. After these mounted messengers were withdrawn a number of light mail carriages to carry through mail and making very few stops were put on. These formed what was known as the "Monkey Box Line." The passenger traffic over the route was immense and constantly on the increase until the business of the road received the death blow by the opening of the railroads across the Alleghanies, and from December, 1852, the business of the old road suddenly and rapidly declined. Travelers to and from the West were diverted to the new routes and easier modes of conveyance, the Western mails were sent by other routes, and the stages were withdrawn from this, the number of broad-wheeled freight wagons was gradually silenced along the rock-laid bed, and by rapid degrees the National highway lost its importance, and instead of being the only easy mode of travel became, as it is today, merely an avenue of local use.

In contrast to this old road is that one which is interesting every Californian who wishes for the advancement of our State. It will be built through a section of country of special beauty, lined on either side with beautiful homes, productive orchards and vision of fruits and flowers almost beyond the conception of an Eastern visitor. At other points one can discern the foot hills and the Sierras, thus gaining the views of both mountain and plain. One will be also impressed with the richness and variety of the panorama which will be spread before the eyes of all who travel along this, one of the greatest achievements of our modern time.—Austin N. Hungerford, in Call.

A special to the World from San Salvador says: A revolution is reported to be in progress in Honduras. This Government has hurried troops to the border between the two republics to prevent intrusion upon the territory of this country and to preserve strict neutrality. Precautions have been taken to prevent parties leaving San Salvador for Honduras. A report comes from Honduras that fourteen prisoners captured by the Government forces have been shot. Another report is that four officers were killed by the soldiers of their commands at Santa Tecla.

Young Physician (diagnosing a case)—In the first place, sir, you must drink less coffee. Patient—I never drink any coffee at all, sir. Young Physician (considerably annoyed)—Well, you ought to.

Fashionable Philanthropy.—English man—Why is it you Hamericans copy the Hinglish?

American—We are in hopes you Englishmen will see how it looks and get disgusted with yourselves.

WOES OF BACHELORS.

The Treatment They Received in Ancient Times.

SINGLE MEN WERE HEAVILY FINED.

In Sparta They Were Beaten by Women—Were Taxed Under the First Republic.

When a proposal was made not so long ago to tax the bachelors of France, as they were taxed in the days of the first republic, the fact was recalled that republics generally have been hard upon the celibates. The wise Plato condemned the single men to a fine, and in Sparto they were driven at stated times to the Temple of Hercules by the women, who there drilled and castigated them in true military style.

The ancient Romans, too, were severe with their bachelors, who were made to pay heavy fines; and, worse than that, for, after the seige of Veil, Camillus is recorded to have compelled them to marry the widows of the soldiers who have fallen in the war.

Again, in the time of Augustus, the married men, all other things being equal were preferred to the single men for the public offices. Then the Roman who had three children was exempted from personal taxes and the bachelors not only had to pay them but were prevented from inheriting the property of any one not a Roman citizen.

Coming to more recent times we have several instances of a like kind recorded for us by a recent writer on the subject. In the French settlement of Canada for example the single men that they might be forced to marry were subjected to heavy taxation and to restrictions on their trade, and movements generally.

Those who were married were dealt with on the other hand in a generous spirit. Not only were they provided with a good wife and a comfortable home but they were rewarded according to the number of their offspring. The father of ten children for instance was pensioned for life at the rate of 300 livres a year. If he had twelve children he had 100 livres a year more and the amount ran up to 1,200 livres a year when fifteen children blessed the union.

About the close of the seventeenth century the local authorities of Eastham in Massachusetts, voted that every unmarried man in the township should kill six blackbirds or three crows yearly as long as he remained single producing the scalps in proof and as a penalty for not obeying the order, he was forbidden to marry until he had made up all arrears.

The requirements here were almost nominal; but it was somewhat different in Maryland, where half a century later the colonial Assembly imposed a tax of 5 shillings yearly upon all bachelors over thirty—as well as upon widowers without children—who were possessed with $300.

At home we were not quite so severe when William III chose to single out the bachelors for special enactments. In those days any commoner who remained single at 25 years had to pay a shilling fine yearly, and the amount was increased with rank or title. A Duke was supposed to be a special offender in not taking a wife, and had to pay for his whim to the extent of £12 10s per annum. It is thus evident that the fact was recognized that the prosperity of the country depends upon its married citizens.—Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.

THE REVENGE OF A CAT.

Blossom is a big gray cat. She has been in the family for seven years, and her mistress thinks she was fully 10 when she came uninvited and took possession. Her charms made her welcome, and visitors, as a rule, pet her to her heart's satisfaction. Still, she shows her loyalty to her mistress by many feline felicities, says the Boston Transcript.

One day a young man came for a short visit. He was an inveterate tease. As there was no one else for a victim, he took Blossom in hand, in spite of pleadings and protestations. Her ears were greeted with the strange terms, "Old rascal," "Scapegrace," "Tramp" and kindred names, until the astounded cat did not know what had come to her. Her pretty ways disappeared, she fled from his approach and hid wherever she could till he was out of the house. One morning she was missing for some hours, and was not to be found in any of her hiding places. A loud cry from the chambermaid revealed her whereabouts. Blossom had revenged herself on her visitor's night shirt, which lay in tatters on the floor. Pussy was scolded and every one was cautioned to keep the door shut. In vain! The cat would find her way in and hide till the chambermaid was through for the day, and then the claws went to work, first on the visitor's own clothes if any could be found, and then on the pillow cases. The young man tried to soothe her feelings, but she would have none of him, and he was glad to cut short his visit. Blossom quickly recovered her usual demeanor, and has never been known to destroy anything from that day to this.

"There is a chance for everybody," said the preacher to the stranger. "Look up and be hopeful. Cast away your cares and you can find salvation." "No," replied the stranger sadly, "I can't find salvation." "Everybody who seeks can find," said the preacher. "Why cannot you?" "Oh," cried the stranger, bursting into tears, "I can't find anything. I'm a New York detective." Texas Siftings.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 5 1895

San Francisco, June 29.—Judge Ross, in the United States Circuit Court to-day, sustained the demurrer of Mrs. Leland Stanford in the suit commenced by the general government against the estate of the late Senator Stanford for the recovery of moneys on account of the Central Pacifi Railroad debts. The court sustained the demurrer on the ground that individual stockholders were not liable for the debts of the corporation and while the government was given time in which to file an amended complaint, it is understood that to-day's decision practically kills the case. The decision in favor of Mrs. Stanford in the government suit against the Stanford estate for $15,000,000 is considered a complete victory for the defendant. Judge Ross intimated that the law did not favor the action of the government. He held that the Central Pacific was in every way amenable to the laws of California. These laws making stockholders liable for debts of corporations did not effect Stanford, as the stockholder liability acts were passed after the government made the contract with the Central Pacific.

It costs something to make astronomers. There is a lively little row between the Regents of the State University and Prof. Holden of the Lick Observatory, and the fact is developed that it costs $25,000 a year to run the observatory, $20,000 of which is paid by the State on account of the University and, also that fifteen pupils of the University have received instruction there since 1888. This figures a total of $160,000 for giving fifteen boys a smattering of astronomy; and the regents aver that it is a smattering. The principal part of their astronomical education they aver was given at the University. Now if it costs half, or even a quarter as much more, to give that part of the education, it will appear that it costs California some money to make an astronomer. Would Ben Franklin say it was paying to much for the whistle.

The report that Japan wi l seek in the United States one or more warships of the latest American types is intrinsically probable because consistant with the genius of that remarkable people. Foreign critics without a single exception have agreed that the efficiency per tonnage displacement attained by the American battleships and armored cruisers exceeds that achieved by any other designers. Such ships built in the United States will cost Japan more per ton than if constructed abroad, but the difference is fairly compensated in other directions. With these ships for models, Japan will proceed with her programme of home construction with confidence and assured success.

A call for a silver convention, to be held at San Francisco, August 19th, has been issued. Each county in the State shall be entitled to be represented by five delegates at large and one delegate for every 500 voters. It has been suggested that mass meetings of bimetallists be held in each county upon Saturday, August 3, 1895, for the purpose of electing delegates. Interested parties are requested to correspond with George P. Keeney, Mills building, San Francisco, who will furnish all necessary information.

A lot of Eastern financial quacks are to be sent through the wilds of the woolly West to instruct the people on "sound money." Inasmuch as there are not many National banks in the woolly West, the people out here are not seeking instruction from Wall street, not that Wall street is not a great instructor, for it has taught too many of our statesmen to enter the broad path that leadeth to distruction. No, the West wants no education on "sound money."

The Populists of Iowa at their recent convention in Des Moines resolved that the Government should issue unlimited irredeemable paper money. A nice scheme that. These men really pretend to believe that if the Government would grind out money by the mill process, everybody would have as much money as everybody wants, with no more exertion than anybody now makes.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

Adolph Gerckens Plaintiff, vs. Annie J. Gerckens Defendant.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Annie J. Gerckens, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain judgment against you and a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the plaintiff and defendant as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 18th day of June, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. W. BENNETT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNDERSIGNED, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix, at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ALLIE R. BROWN.
Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased.
Dated February 15, 1895.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administratrix. aug3 5t

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will presen he same by the first of each month and ayment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modo Cal.

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of JOHN BARNES, An Insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of John Barnes, the above-named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from his debts, and that Saturday, the 29th day of June, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court-room of said Court, at the Court-house in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and he be discharged from all his debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
[SEAL.] By W. M. WILLS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st, A. D. 1895.

NOTICE.

Whereas, the consent in writing of the holders of two thirds of the capital stock of the Lone Pine Canal Company, a corporation, to change the principal place of business of said corporation from the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, to the town of Lone Pine, in said county and state, is on file herein. Notice is hereby given that the principal place of business of said Lone Pine Canal Company will be at the town of Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on and after January 26th 1895.

By order of the Board of Directors.

DAVID HOLLAND, Secretary.

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS, DESIGN PATENTS, COPYRIGHTS, etc.
For information and free Handbook write to MUNN & CO., 361 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Oldest bureau for securing patents in America. Every patent taken out by us is brought before the public by a notice given free of charge in the

Scientific American

Largest circulation of any scientific paper in the world. Splendidly illustrated. No intelligent man should be without it. Weekly, $3.00 a year; $1.50 six months. Address MUNN & CO., PUBLISHERS, 361 Broadway, New York City.

MARRIAGE GUIDE
260 PAGES. Illustrated. in Cloth and Gilt Binding, 25c money or stamps. Same, paper cover, 25c. This Book contains ALL the curious, doubtful or inquisitive want to know. Full of very interesting and valuable information. HEALTH BEAUTY and HAPPINESS are promoted by its advice. Who may Marry, who not, why, Medical Aid, when necessary, etc. Sent free in plain envelope. 50 Wonderful PENPICTURES, in colors. Young or old, married or single, sick or well, should read. Sent free by mail. WHITTIER, St. Louis, Mo. CUT THIS OUT AND SEND WITH ORDER.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S
TRADE MARK
PATENTED MAY 20 1873
COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING
EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.
FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

NEW FEE BILL.

CHAPTER CCVII.

An Act to establish fees of county, township and othe. officers, and of jurors and witnesses in this State.

[Approved March 22, 1895.]

The People of the State of California represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The following county, township, and other officers shall charge and collect the following fees.

COUNTY CLERK.

On the commencement of any action or proceeding in the Superior Court, except probate proceedings, or on appeal thereto, to be paid by the party commencing such action or proceeding, or taking such appeal	$5 00
On the filing of a petition for letters of administration, testamentary, or guardianship five dollars, to be paid by the petitioner; provided, that at the time of filing the inventory and appraisement in any such proceeding there shall be an additional deposit of one dollar for each additional thousand dollars of the appraised valuation, in excess of three thousand dollars.
On filing the petition to contest any will or codicil	3 00
On the appearance of any defendant, or any number of defendants answering jointly, to be paid upon filing the first paper in the action by him or them	2 00
On placing any action, except a probate proceeding, or default case, on the calendar for trial or hearing, to be paid by the party whose request such action or proceeding is so placed	2 00
For every additional defendant appearing separately	1 00
The foregoing fees shall be in full for all services rendered by such Clerk in the cause, to and including the making up of the judgment roll.
On the filing of any notice of motion to move for a new trial or any civil action or proceeding, the party filing same must pay to the Clerk, on bill for all services to be rendered in connection with said motion, except as hereinafter in this section provided	2 00
For issuing an execution or order of sale in any action	1 00
In all proceedings begun or act performed prior to this Act becoming a law, such and charges as were provided by the law at the time such proceedings were begun or acts performed.
The Clerk shall also charge and collect the following fees and compensation not above provided for:
For any copy of any record, proceeding or paper on file in the office of the Clerk relating to any civil action pending in said Court, when said copy is made by him, per folio	10
For each certificate of the Clerk, under seal of the Court	25
For filing each claim in probate or insolvency proceedings	15
No fees shall be allowed or charged by the Clerk for services rendered in any criminal case.
For services rendered by the Clerk, not in connection with civil actions or proceedings in Court, he shall charge and collect, for the benefit of the county, the following fees:
For issuing marriage license, one half to be paid to the County Recorder	2 00
For filing and indexing articles of incorporation	1 00
For filing and indexing certificates of copartnership	1 00
For filing and indexing all papers to be kept by him, other than papers filed in actions or proceedings in Court, and official bonds and certificates of appointment, each	25
For issuing any license required by law, other than marriage licenses	1 00
For examining and certifying to a copy of any paper, record, or proceeding prepared by another and prepared by him, certificate, fifty cents, and the cent per folio for comparing the said copy with the original.
For making satisfaction of order or judgment	25
For receiving and filing remittitur from Supreme Court	50
For administering each oath, without certificate, except in a pending action or proceeding	10
For taking any affidavit, except in criminal cases	25
For taking and approving each undertaking and the justification thereof, except in criminal cases	50
For searching records or files, for each year	50
For taking acknowledgement of any deed or other instrument, including the certificate	50
For filing notices of appeal and appeal bonds, each	25

SHERIFF.

For serving any process, writ, order, or paper, except as hereinafter provided, required by law to be served by the Sheriff	50
For serving a writ of attachment, execution, or order for the delivery of personal property	1 00
For taking any bond or undertaking	50
For serving an attachment or execution on any ship, boat, or vessel	3 00
For keeping and caring for property under attachment or execution, such sum as the court may fix, provided, that no greater sum than two dollars per day shall be allowed to a keeper when necessarily employed.
For a copy of any writ, process, or paper actually made by him, when required or demanded according to law, per folio, ten cents, provided, that when correct copies are furnished to him for use, no charge shall be made for such copies.
For advertising sale of property and posting notice, exclusive of cost of publication, or furnishing notice for publication, each	50
For publication of notice in newspaper, the reasonable cost of publication, subject to the approval of the Court.
For serving writ of possession or restitution, putting a person in possession of the premises, and removing the occupant	1 50
For subpoenaing a witness, including copy of subpoena, each	25
For summoning trial jury of twelve or less	2 00
For each additional juror	10
For traveling in the service of any paper required by law to be served, for each mile actually and necessarily traveled, one way only, fifteen cents, when such travel can be made by rail, in other cases, twenty-five cents. No constructive mileage to be allowed.
For collecting money on execution, with or without levy, one per cent on the first thousand dollars or less, and one half of one per cent on all sums over one thousand dollars.
For executing and delivering Sheriff's deed	1 50
For executing and delivering certificate of sale	50
For transporting prisoners to county jail, actual cost of such transportation.
For executing and delivering any other instrument, per folio	10

RECORDER.

For recording every instrument, paper, or notice required by law to be recorded, per folio	10
For indexing every instrument, paper, or notice, for each name	20
For filing every instrument for record, and making necessary entries thereon	25
For each certificate under seal	50
For every entry of discharge, credit, or release on the margin of record, and indexing same	25
For searching the records of his office, for each year	50
For abstract of title, for each conveyance or incumbrance	50
For recording each map or plat where same is copied in book of record, for each course	50
For recording each map or plat, where same is not copied in a book of record	50
For figures or letters on maps or plats, per folio, ten cents; provided, that the fees for recording any map shall not exceed fifty dollars.
For taking acknowledgement of any instrument	50
For recording marriage license and certificate, to be paid by County Clerk	1 00
For recording transcript and all services in estray cases	1 00
For recording each mark or brand	50
For administering each oath or affirmation, and certifying the same	25
For filing, indexing and keeping each paper not required by law to be recorded	25

The Clerk, Sheriff, and Recorder shall account for all fees in this section provided for, and the Clerk, Sheriff and Recorder, unless otherwise provided by law, shall pay the same to the County Treasurer on the first Monday of the month following the collection, as provided in this Act.

County officers must, and township officers may, demand the payment of all fees in civil cases, in advance.

SECTION 2. No fees or other compensation shall be paid for certificate of declaration to become a citizen of the United States, and for making a record thereof, or issuing a certificate of citizenship to become a citizen of the United States, or for making a record thereof, and no fees or other compensation shall be paid for filing the statement and affidavit of a committee or candidate voted for at any public election held within the State; and this section shall apply to all the counties in the State.

SECTION 3. All Acts or portions of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect immediately.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, to all persons having business with the offices of Clerk, Sheriff or Recorder for the County of Inyo that the above provisions of the Fee Bill are mandatory, and will be strictly enforced.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk and Recorder.

Independence, Cal., June 3, 1895.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, California. Location of Canal, near Lone Pine, Inyo County, Cal.

NOTICE—There are delinquent upon the following described stock on account of assessment No. 8 levied on the 27th day of April, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders, as follows:

Names.	No. Cert.	No. Sh's.	Amt
T. C. Boland	3	500	$ 7 50
T. C. Boland	4	200	30 00
T. C. Boland	18	500	75 00
T. C. Boland	19	200	30 00
J. A. McKenzie	11	700	105 00
E. Robinson	1	500	75 00
E. Robinson	2	500	50 00
J. J. Gunn	12	200	30 00
P. H. Mack	17	500	15 00
Fred Spurr		75	11 25
R. Scott		75	11 25
D. Holland		50	7 50

And in accordance with law, and an order of the Board of Directors, made on the 27th day of April, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary, will be sold at public auction, at the office of the said Company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on Saturday, the 22nd day of June, 1895, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m., to pay said delinquent assessment thereon together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

DAVID HOLLAND, Secretary.

POSTPONEMENT.

The above sale is postponed to 2 P. M. of June 29th 1895.

By order of the Board of Directors.
DAVID HOLLAND, Secretary.

POSTPONEMENT.

The above sale is postponed to Saturday, July 13, at 2 o'clock P. M.

By order of the Board of Directors.
DAVID HOLLAND, Secretary.

Notice.

Pursuant to an order of the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, Cal., passed on the 5th day of April, 1895, the attention of the public is called to the following sections of the County Government Act of 1893:

SECTION 41. The Board of Supervisors must not hear or consider any claim in favor of any person, corporation, company, or association against the County or District, unless the same be itemized, giving name, dates and particular services rendered, character of process served, upon whom, distances travelled, where and when, character of work done, number of days engaged, what rate per day, to whom, and quantity and price paid thereof, duly verified as to its correctness and that the amount claimed is justly due, is presented and filed with the Clerk of the Board within five days after the last item of the account or claim accrued. This section, as to itemizing, shall not apply to services rendered; nor to section one hundred and forty-eight; provided, that such services are substantially stated, with their value, and verified as above. If in case of any claim, which requires itemizing, the Board or the Clerk or Counsel shall find the same be not itemized, they shall cause notice to be given to the claimant, or his attorney, of that fact, and give time to have the claim itemized and reverified.

SECTION 42. No account must be passed upon by the Board unless made out as prescribed in the preceding section and filed in the Clerk's office one day prior to the session at which it is asked to be heard.

NOTICE is hereby given that any claim which fails to comply with the above sections will be returned for correction, and consideration thereof laid over until the next succeeding regular meeting of the Board.

By order of the Board of Supervisors.
D. J. HESSION,
Clerk of said Board.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The copartnership heretofore existing between [illegible] Thomas and T. W. Hill of the firm of Bishop Creek Brewery, [illegible] Inyo County, California, carrying on a general business at Bishop Creek, in said County, is this day dissolved by mutual consent. All persons indebted to said firm are requested to make payment to T. W. Hill, and persons having claims against said firm will present them for payment to the undersigned.

Witness our hands at Bishop Creek, Inyo County, California, this 6th day of February, 1895.

R. W. Thomas
Thomas W. Hill

NOTICE BY CLERK ON APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of M. V. BARNES, An insolvent Debtor.

Notice is hereby given to all the creditors of M. V. Barnes, the above named insolvent, who have proved their debts, that said insolvent has this day applied to this Court for a discharge from her debts, and that Saturday, the 29th day of June, A. D. 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court room of said Court, at the Court house, in Independence, County of Inyo, has been fixed as the time and place for said creditors to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said insolvent's application should not be granted, and she be discharged from all her debts, in accordance with the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court this 31st day of May, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.
By W. M. WILLS, Deputy Clerk.

Dated May 31st, A. D. 1895.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the INDEPENDENT building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc. given careful and prompt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing. Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY--AT--LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN R. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. Land Office.

Brown & Wills.
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery
All kinds of dental work done according to most improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drug store

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING IN ANY STYLE.
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Demaree, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.
Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administrator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PROPOSED NEW ROAD
—IN—
DIST. NO. 3.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to law and an order of the Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, made and entered on the 3d day of April, 1895 and upon petition of the land owners and all others interested are hereby notified to appear before said Board on Saturday, the 6th day of July, 1895, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. and then and there show cause, if any there be, why a new County Road hereinafter described should not be laid out and established as follows, to wit:

Commencing at section corner on township line, between Townships 9 and 10 South, Range 34 East, to Sections 33 and 34; thence running North, Magnetic Variation 15 deg. 15 min. E.

		Set stake 20 feet East of section corner and set stake 20 feet West of section line for a 40 ft width of road; thence: Over land of Frank Fitzgerald.
1 North.	20.00	To S. E. corner of L. Blakes land; set stake 20 feet east and set stake 20 feet west of line as outside of 40 foot roadway.
	60.00	To South-west corner of E. H. Blake E. H. Blake on west side and J. D. Show on east side; set stake 20 feet on west side, and set stake 20 feet on east side.
	80.10	To section corner to Sections 28, 27, 33, 34, set stake 20 feet east in field of J. Shaw, set stake 20 feet west.
2 North.		on section line between Sections 27 and 28, T. 9 S. R. 34 E. M. D. M.
3 North.	20.00	T. N. W. corner of J. D. Shaw, J. D. Show on east side, and H. H. McMurry on west side. Set stakes 20 feet east and set stakes 20 feet west of line.
	60.00	To south line of J. J. Stewart, Charles Stewart on west side, and J. L. Cornell on the east side of the line; set stake 20 feet on east side and set stake 20 feet west of line.
	80.00	To corner of Joseph Jewett, Stewart, J. J. Stewart on west side, and J. J. Stewart on east side. To place west angling between Sections 21 and 28.
4 West.	20.00	To west line of J. J. Stewart on lands of Joseph Jewett Stewart to south east corner of Mrs. J. B. Stewart.
	60.00	To east bank of the Miller and Blake ditch.
	69.20	To be on the west bank of the Blake and Miller ditch. Mrs. J. B. Stewart on north side and J. W. McMurry on south side. Set stake 20 feet north on west bank of ditch to north side of Road and set stake 20 feet south on west bank of ditch as south side of road.
5 West.	65.00	Enter meadow of Mrs. J. B. Stewart.
	80.10	In section corner to sections 20, 29, 21, 28, over land of Mrs. Stewart.
	20.00	To north-east corner of Indian John Campbell's Homestead.
	24.00	To Big Pine ditch
	42.20	To old county road from Independence to Big Pine. Mrs. J. B. Stewart on north side and John Campbell (Indian) on south side. Set stake 20 feet north on land of Mrs. Stewart, and set stake 20 feet south on and of Indian John Campbell.

JOSEPH PHESELY Surveyor.
S. G. GREGG, Viewer.
JAMES JONES, Viewer.

Field Notes of a survey of a public road in Road District No. 3

The proposed route South from the South and the commencing at the point of Commencement of Petition 19th day of January, 1894.

Commencing at Section corner on township line between Townships 9 and 10 South, Range 34 East M. D. M. to Sections 33 and 34 thence running East Mag. Var. 15 deg. 15 min. E.

	6 East	20.00 Twenty chains on Section to the Northwest corner of James Blake's land, over land owned by E. Fitzgerald and Geo. Graham, thence
	7 South	80.00 Over land owned by Fitzgerald and George Graham, thence
	8 S. 45 deg. W.	21.00 Over Government land to the Northwest corner of James O'Conner's claim, thence
	9 South	20.00 On section line over land owned by James O'Conner at the County road leading from Independence to Big Pine.

JOSEPH PHESELY,
County Surveyor
Inyo County.

March 30th, 1895.

By order of the Board of Supervisors.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY.
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.

Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Carpet Weaving.
MRS. J. F. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.
PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER
We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEW COMBINATION SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kind of carpet and rag weaving.
Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.
First class work guaranteed at low prices

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the oldstand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone
FRED BURCKHARDT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY the 8th day of March 1895, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah, deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 10 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the South-east corner of the south-east quarter of North-east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 98-100; thence North-east following the meanderings of the bed of the Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence; thence follow Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, containing 80-100 acres; also lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all consisting what is known as the Reddy Place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 26, in the town of Independence, the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead or lode, situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "La Dispuesta Lode."

That certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura, State of California, commencing at a point 8 varas west from the south-east corner of the south-west quarter of Section No. twenty (12 9-20) rods south of the quarter corner of the south-west quarter of the North-east quarter of Section No. twenty (12) and the South west quarter and the south-east quarter of Section No. one (1) in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and eleven-twentieth (68 11-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North-westerly along a small branch of swale to a point twenty four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North-east quarter and the South-east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North-east quarter of the North-west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West; running thence North forty-four and eleven-twentieth (44 11-20) rods; thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres: Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at George's Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale is all so made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER,
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased.

[illegible] Cal., February 11th [illegible]

[illegible] rector is [illegible] make the sole [illegible] long as the remainder of any ordinary shoe, and to save from 20 to 60 times its cost in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.
PAT. APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES
YOUR SHOE

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ... PROP'R.
Horseshoeing .... $2 00 for Cash
For particulars, call at Lee
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1894, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday	January 5th
"	February 9th
"	March 9th
"	April 6th
"	May 4th
"	June 1st
"	June 30th
"	August 3rd
"	August 31st
"	October 26th
"	November 2nd
"	November 31st

THOMAS C. BOLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND REINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, JULY 5 1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman ..... GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman ..... CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge ..... GEO. M. GILL.
Sheriff ..... ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk ..... DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney ..... P. W. FORBES.
Assessor ..... P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer ..... W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner ..... I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed) ..... JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools ..... S. V. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist ..... FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist ..... A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist ..... J. R ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist ..... J. J. STEWART.
5th Supervisor Dist ..... FRANK FITZGERALD.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .66¾
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5½
Pig lead	3 90

DIED.

DIAZ—At Lone Pine, June 29, 1895, Joseph, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. A Diaz

A. W. D. Carroll of Lone Pine spent the week in town.

The Fourth is over, now for the fishing grounds in the Sierras.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Holland came up from Keeler yesterday morning.

Miss Grace Collins of Bishop is visiting friends and relatives here.

The first crop of Alfalfa hay was all in the stack before the Fourth.

Billy Loughery came in from Darwin and spent the Fourth in town.

Phil Mitchell came in from Darwin and spent the Fourth at Independence.

Charley Collins came down from Bishop last [illegible] from [illegible] built. [illegible] shop [illegible] of [illegible] creamery [illegible] Eaton will start [illegible] mountain [illegible]

[illegible] Meroney has accepted a position [illegible] keeper for the mining company operating at the Hirsch.

Frank Eder has returned to Lone Pine from Santa Barbara where he has been working for some time.

Pasted a dime on a sheet of paper and send to Crocker & Ames, 619 Montgomery St., San Francisco, for Ame's Shoe Protector, the wonderful saver of shoes.

The regular meeting of Inyo Lodge F. & A. M will be held to-morrow night, the statement that it would be held a week ago being an error.

W. T. Grant of Olancha came in last Monday and spent the Fourth here. Billy is looking well, and his friends hope he will accept salvation.

The Supervisors have been busy all the week examining the assessment roll. The business of the meeting will not be completed before next Wednesday.

Dave Johnson returned to Independence on Monday after a residence of nearly two years in Missouri. He says Inyo is a good country to stay with.

J. G. Dodge came up from Lone Pine Wednesday, returning the same day. He says most of the farmers have their first crop of hay cut.

H. E. Wilkinson received a telegram this morning announcing the fact that Professor Willis L. Moore has been appointed chief of the Weather Bureau department.

The citizens of Liberty District celebrated the Fourth with appropriate exercises. We have not yet received a report of the proceedings but hope to obtain it for next week.

Graham Laws, son of Assistant Superintendent R. J. Laws, of the C. & C. R. R. and Roadmaster McBride came to Independence on Saturday evening and remained over Sunday.

Neil McLean started for Gold Mountain on Tuesday morning after the pipe for the Independence Water Company. He was unable to haul it on his first trip as his wagon was not long enough to carry it.

Dr. J. D. Blair has been appointed School Trustee for this District by Superintendent Austin. County Clerk Hession, who received the majority of the votes cast at the election held for that purpose, was first appointed but as his official duties would interfere with his duties as trustee he declined the appointment.

The Fourth.

We regret that the limited time allows but a short resume of the Fourth of July celebration yesterday. Many incidents of the day that are deserving of special mention are necessarily omitted for this reason.

The day opened bright and clear with a delightful breeze in the morning. The Committee decided not to fire the usual salutes in the morning but the boys kept the fire-crackers going quite steadily. A few visitors arrived from Fish Springs and Big Pine on Wednesday evening and some on the train Thursday morning from the Keeler country. Lone Pineers, of whom there were a good many, came by stage and private conveyance, arriving here quite early in the day.

The exercises in the pavilion commenced at 10 o'clock a. m. before a large and patriotic audience, and were carried out in a manner that could not be improved upon. S. G. Sueden Esq. of Bishop delivered an oration that was listened to with close attention and was highly interesting. It dwelt mainly upon the facts that gave our mighty nation birth, and these were given in a lucid, clear manner. The violin and piano duet by Misses Hulda Harris and Etta Wood was indeed fine and called forth an encore and much applause. Misses Birdie Levy, Blanche Bunney and Irma Webb acquitted themselves most creditably in their respective parts and the singing was much above the average.

The sports began at 2 o'clock with a race for girls under 10 years old, won by Hattie Moore. For girls under 14 years was won by Blanche Bunney. Lulu Robinson falling and receiving a painful bruise on her arm while in the lead. Boys 10 years and under resulted in a victory for Howard Mairs after a close finish with Milt Levy. Boys under 14 years, Paul Mairs. Harry Bert succeeded in taking the potato race and the sack race was gathered in by Charley Ross. Three Indian ponies made things lively for our dogs, one or two being run over in the melee, and Poco Bill landed his mount first in a blaze of glory. Two Chinamen waddled about seventy yards in great shape, and it has been suggested that it could have been greatly improved by having a Japanese race in the rear. The tug of war between the married men and single men was won by the latter, it taking two pulls to decide it. There was considerable good natured squabbling and one or two prospective fights, but the affair was finally satisfactorily adjusted. There were five entries in the saddle horse race which was won by Quinn. This ended the programme for the day, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The grand ball in the Pavilion was well attended and a most enjoyable evening spent. Excellent music was furnished by the Harmony Orchestra, and at midnight first-class suppers were spread at the Independence Hotel and Norman House.

There were no disagreeable features to mar the general pleasure of the day and young and old alike experienced a most enjoyable occasion.

The Fourth At Citrus.

The patriotic citizens of Citrus celebrated the Fourth yesterday in good style. In all there were eight races and various other games and amusements that contributed to the interest of the occasion. The races for girls were won by Misses Davis, Lawrence, Lottie Beale and Amy Lawrence. The free for all race was won after a close contest by Will Vaughn. A special race for a purse of fifteen dollars was run by Lou Gird and C. Johnson was won by the former after a close, hard struggle. After the sports were completed an interesting programme of songs and recitations was rendered and the day closed with cheers for "old glory." Citrus cannot boast so large a population as San Francisco and a few other places, but for patriotism, liberality and general good time it gets there with both feet. To the energy and good nature of Charlie Johnson, the capable section boss of the C. & C., belongs much of the credit of the good time enjoyed.

A. P. Kilpatrick of the Bishop Flouring Mills came to Independence last Monday and remained till yesterday morning. In the past year there has been a large quantity of wheat stamped from this valley to Reno and flour returned. Mr. Kilpatrick is endeavoring to stop this practice and have the flour made at home. It is for the best interests of the country that he should succeed in his efforts.

A. J. Gould came in from Darwin last Saturday morning, where he has been mining for many years past. He is totally blind and in indigent circumstances and is being cared for by the County at present, allowance having been made by the Board of Supervisors.

G. W. Andrews, Inspector of U. S. Land Offices, arrived at Independence last Friday evening and left next morning, being called by telegram to Denver. Mr. Andrews examined the affairs of the local office as far as he was able in the limited time and found everything in good order.

Mrs. Martha Stewart (née Dodge,) arrived at Lone Pine last week after an absence of two years in Missouri. Her husband, Charley Stewart, is expected to arrive at Lone Pine as soon as he has completed some contracts he is at work upon in the East.

Miss Eugenie Meysan arrived home at Lone Pine on Tuesday morning after a residence of several years in Los Angeles. In company with her sisters, Mrs. F. Fitzgerald and Miss Aleine Meysan, she spent the Fourth at Independence.

Coolgardie.

Rich new finds are being constantly reported from Coolgardie gold fields. Coolgardie, Australia, is an accessible point, reached by steamer to Fremantle, thence by rail to Southern Cross and team to destination. The trip to Australia on the fine steamers of the Oceanic Steamship Company via Honolulu, Samoa, and New Zealand is pleasure sailing the day long. This line tickets passengers to Cape Town, South Africa. Map of Coolgardie district and Pacific ports reached by the Oceanic Steamship Company is mailed free to any address by the O. S. S. Co. 158 Montgomery St. San Francisco.

SUPERVISORS PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY, July 1, 1895.
10:30 o'clock A M.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, met in regular session at above stated time pursuant to law.

Present, Supervisors F. Shaw, A. C. Freeman, J. J. Stewart and F. Fitzgerald.

Absent, J. R. Eldred.

Chairman Fitzgerald presiding.

Minutes of preceeding meeting read and approved.

Communication of Tax Collector A. M. Given on file, being under consideration.

The County Auditor in accordance with Section 3805 of Political code was, Ordered to cancel upon the Assessment Roll of 1894 the following Duplicate Assessment to wit:

Charles Chinovich.
E. J. Graham.
W. S. Morton.
Charles A. Skinner.

Board adjourned to meet at 1:15 o'clock p. m. as Board of Equalization.

1:15 o'clock P M.

Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, State of California, met as a Board of Equalization, pursuant to law and adjournment.

Present, Supervisors Shaw, Freeman, Eldred, Stewart and Chairman Fitzgerald presiding.

1:30 o'clock P M.

Board adjourned as Board of Equalization to meet immediately as Board of Supervisors.

Ordered that O. I. Mairs be paid the sum of $30 per month for the care and support of A. J. Gould, an indigent blind person until such farther time as the Board could make other arrangements for the care and support of the said A. J. Gould and it is further ordered that the Auditor draw monthly his warrant for the sum of $30 in favor of O. I. Mairs from Hospital Fund.

Application of M. Whooley an indigent person, asking for a monthly allowance of $10 being under consideration, it was ordered that the Auditor draw his warrant monthly in favor of Frank Shaw for the sum of $10 to be applied to the support of said indigent person.

Ordered, that the Auditor draw warrant monthly in favor of J. J. Stewart for the sum of $10 as an allowance for Mrs. John Wilson, an indigent person.

Resignation of W. O. Meroney, Justice of the Peace of First Township on file being under consideration the same was accepted.

Petition of citizens of First Township praying for the appointment of Robert O'Neal to the office of Justice of the Peace in and for the First Township to fill vacancy occasioned by the resignation of W. O. Meroney granted and Clerk instructed to issue certificate accordingly.

3:30 o'clock P M.

Adjourned to meet immediately as Board of Equalization.

Board convened immediately as Board of Equalization all members present.

The Board having received from the County Assessor the Assessment Roll for the year 1895, proceeded to the examination of the same.

Board adjourned to meet Tuesday, July 2, at the hour of 8:30 o'clock a m as Board of Equalization.

FRANK FITZGERALD,
Attest: D. J HESSION, Chairman.
Clerk.

TUESDAY, June 2, 1895.
8:30 o'clock A M.

Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, met at above stated time pursuant to adjournment.

Present, Supervisors Shaw, Freeman, Eldred, Stewart.

Chairman Fitzgerald presiding.

Minutes of preceeding meeting read and approved.

Board proceeded to the examination of the Assessment Roll.

11:30 o'clock A M.

Board adjourude to meet as a Board of Equlization at the hour of 1 o'clock P M.

1:15 o'clock P M

Board met at above stated time as Board of Equalization and continued with the examination of the Assessment Roll of 1895.

4:40 o'clock P M.

Board adjourned to meet Wednesday, July 3, 1895, at the hour of 8:30 a m. as Board of Equalization.

FRANK FITZGERALD,
Attest: D. J. HESSION, Chairman.
Clerk.

WEDNESDAY, July 3, 1895.
8:45 o'clock A M

Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, met at above stated time as a Board of Equalization, pursuant to adjournment.

Present, Supervisors F. Shaw, A. C. Freeman, J. R. Eldred, J. J. Stewart and Chairman F. Fitzgerald presiding.

Minutes of preceeding meeting read and approved.

Board proceeded with the examination of the Assessment for the year 1895.

At 11:40 o'clock a m Board adjourned to meet at the hour of 1:15 o'clock p m, as Board of Equalization.

1:15 o'clock P M.

Board reconvened at above stated time, all members present as before.

Board proceeded with the examination of the Assessment roll.

4:45 o'clock P M.

Board adjourned to meet Friday, July 5, 1895, at 9:30 o'clock a m, as a Board of Equalization.

FRANK FITZGERALD,
Attest: D. J. HESSION, Chairman.
Clerk.

To The Public.

I have been informed that parties at Independence have been selling poor butter as my production. My butter is put up in squares with the words, "Fairview Creamery" in capital letters, stamped across the face. It is always wrapped in butter parchment and packed in boxes bearing the creamery stamp. Butter prepared in any other way without stamp or wrapped in cloth is not genuine. I have been using my stamp for over two years, and not a square ever leaves the factory without being printed.

W. D. ROBERTS
Round Valley, May 31, 1895.

Financial Report

Ben. H. Yandell, Secretary of the Fourth of July Committee furnishes the following statement of receipts and disbursements:

Receipts—
Town subscriptions	$ 68 00
Race entries	12 50
Ball	55 50
	136 00
Disbursements—
Race purses	62 50
Sundry expenses	10 00
Ball expenses	51 00
Hall rent	10 00
Door-Keeper	2 50
	136 00

Weather Summary, Week Ending July 4, 1895.

Highest barometer, 28.999 date, June 28.
Lowest " 29.607 date, July 2.
Highest Temperature 90.2 date, June 30
Lowest " 55.2 date, July 4.
Mean " 73.2
Average dew point 26.8
" humidity 20.8
Total precipitation .00
Prevailing direction of wind, SE
Highest velocity and date, 26, SE. July 3.
Number of clear days 5.
" " partly cloudy days 1.
" " cloudy days 1.
" " rainy days (.01 or more rain) 3.

H. E. WILKINSON.
Observer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.

☞ First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

BIG PINE HOTEL.
BIG PINE · CAL

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates

☞ Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

FOR SALE.
THE WHITNEY HOUSE
—The only hotel in—
LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL

Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address
MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

Pioneer
Livery & Feed Stables
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the sound or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor

The newest Style
OF
Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc
AT
L. WOOD
CASH STORE
A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.
Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.
CANDIES,
PEANUTS
WALNUTS,
TOYS!
THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get the
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, "DRESDEN" WARE.

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,
We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.
THOMAS & HILL

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER, General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1	To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House	10.50 a. m	5.20 p m
Dayton	11.25 a. m.	4.45 p m
Wabuska	1.40 p m	2.30 p m
Hawthorne	Ar. 5.00 p. m	Lv. 11.00 a. m
	No. 3.	N. 4.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Hawthorne	6.00 a. m.	7.25 p m
Luning	7.10 a. m.	6.15 p m
Sodas Springs	7.50 a m.	5.35 p m
Belleville	8.10 a m.	4.35 p m
Candelaria	9.40 a. m.	2.50 p m
Benton	1.30 p m	11.50 a m
Bishop Creek	3.10 p. m.	9.50 a m
Alvord	.05 p. m	8.55 a. m
Independence	4.35 p. m.	7.25 a m
Lone Pine	5.20 p. m.	6.40 a m
Keeler	Ar 7.00 p. m.	Lv. 6.0 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (3 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's tri-weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Allda Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (9 miles), Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles)

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine. Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
88 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

ESTORE YOUR EYESIGHT

Cataracts, scars or films can be absorbed and paralyzed nerves restored, without the knife risk, diseased eyes or lids can be cured by home treatment. "We proved it." Hundreds convinced. Our illustrated pamphlet, Home Treatment for Eyes, Ears, free. Inquire of anybody who is. "The N.Y." Glens Falls, N.Y

A. W. Eibeshutz
Independence, Cal.
—DEALER IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for
Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:
Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.
REGULAR LINE
—FROM—
Mojave To Keeler.
FINE COACH FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful
Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave,
WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS
at 3:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeer,
MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS
at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER,
Propr.

JOHN B. CLARKE,
Successor to John Clarke,
—PROPRIETOR—
John Clarke's Bishop Stables,
BISHOP, CAL.

First-class Turnouts of Every Kind
Fine horses and Carriages.
horses Boarded for any Time
Best of Care and Attention

NORMAN HOUSE,
Independence, - Cal
New House
New Furniture.
Low Rates.

Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.

O. I. MAIRS Prop
feb12tf

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS. WATCHES.
Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the
LARGEST AND BEST STOCK
of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

☞ All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to
HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
0-m RENO, NEVADA

BUSINESS ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.
Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, on the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.
O. H. Hill, Prop'r.
A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

INDEPENDENCE
MEAT MARKET,
J. C. ROSPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including Beef, Mutton, Pork, Sausage.

☞ arties supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.
j19-tf

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,
INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
....Consisting of....
GROCERIES.
PROVISIONS
Tobacco, Cigars,
WINES AND LIQUORS
FLOUR & GRAIN
Together with an Assortment of
DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING
ETC., ETC

☞ Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere
E. CHENOT.
Inde, Cal., March 9, 1894.
41 6m

A. K. EUGLEY,
BIG PINE, INYO Co. Cal.

Dealer in
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies
PROVISIONS
&c., &c., &c.
A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

BELL'S Flouring Mills
A. N. BELL, Prop.
TRY BELL'S
EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR
Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out flour that is
Equal to the Best
Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.
Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

ROYAL Baking Powder is absolutely pure and healthful, composed of the best ingredients, and of the highest strength. It is impossible to make a purer or stronger baking powder.

—San Francisco Board of Health.

"What's this," said the detective as he laid down an old copy of a newspaper; "another wealthy and influential citizen disappeared?"

"Oh, never mind about that," replied the chief of police; he'll turn up all right as soon as this income tax flurry is over."

Weinstock, Lubin & Co

400 to 412 K St., Sacramento, Cal.

Largest General Retail House on Coast.

Wearing Apparel of all kinds for men, women, and children; Dry Goods, Shoes, Hats, Millinery, Valises, Furniture, Carpets, Crockery, Notions, Stationery, Silverware, Toys, Household Supplies, etc.

Catalogue Free.

A handsome illustrated catalogue about our goods and prices sent free to any address. Tens of thousands of customers find it profitable and satisfactory to buy through this book.

TERMS CASH.

Enclose money for goods with order, and if so be sent by mail allow for postage. Any balance left over will be returned.

If interested in any of the items below, order promptly, giving item number.

A 190. Women's white lawn Waists, with double ruffle over shoulder, the ruffle embroidered in colors. Price, 75c.

A 191. Bates' celebrated white Bed Spreads, for double beds, handsome designs. Our special price 90c.

A 192. Striped wash Silks, soft and lustrous, in pink, blue and fancy stripes; six yards will make a stylish waist. Price 25c yd.

A 193. At a price below value we offer ladies' good quality muslin Drawers, with yoke bands, tucks and 2-inch embroidery ruffle. Price, 38c; postage 4c.

A 194. Pink, blue or brown apron Ginghams, at 4c yd.

A 195. We have just 900 women's and misses' black cotton Mitts, imported by us direct from Germany, to sell at the special price of 12c per pair.

A 196. Boys' heavy cotton knee Pants, dark colors, ages 4 to 13. Price, 19c each.

A 197. Women's fast black cotton Hose, spliced heels and toes, 3 pairs for 50c. Superior quality for the money.

A 198. Fast colors in women's black or tan cotton Gloves, all sizes. Price, 15c pair.

A 199. Men's white laundried Dress shirts, best Wamsutta muslin bosoms, reinforced. Special value. Price, 72c.

A 200. Men's elastic Suspenders, wire buckles, braided ends, with drawer supporters. Price, 15c; postage, 3c.

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN & CO.,
12 Sacramento, Cal.

CHESS AS A DISSIPATION.

Mr. Blackburne, the English chess champion, regards the game as a dangerous intellectual vice which is spreading to rather an alarming extent. Discussing the matter, after a game with Mr. Bardeleben recently, he said "I know a lot of people who hold the view that chess is an excellent means of training the mind in logic and shrewd calculation, prevision and caution. But I don't find these qualities reflected in the lives of chess players. They are just as fallible and foolish as other folks who don't know a rock from a pawn. But even if it were a form of mental discipline, which I doubt, I should still object to it on the ground of its fatal fascination. Chess is a kind of mental alcohol. It inebriates the man who plays it constantly. He lives in a chess atmosphere and his dreams are of gambits and the end of games. I have known many an able man ruined by chess. The game has charmed him and as a consequence, he has given up everything to the charmer. No, unless a man has supreme self-control it is better that he should not learn to play chess. I have never allowed my children to learn it for I have seen too much of its evil results. Draughts is a better game if you must have a game."

"'Wanted—reliable men,'" read Mrs. Bascom from the advertising columns of the paper. Then she raised her glasses upon her forehead, looked severely at her husband, and remarked: "And the world'll wait a considerable number of centuries yet before it gets 'em."

The sixth annual convention of the State Railway Commissioners met at Washington, D. C., last week. Delegates from the Association of Railway Clerks participated in the discussions.

Oxen and sheep fatten better in company than when kept alone.

PROSPECTIVE MOTHERS

and those soon to become mothers, should know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its tortures and terrors, as well as of its dangers to both mother and child, by aiding nature in preparing the system for parturition. Thereby "labor" and the period of confinement are greatly shortened. It also promotes the secretion of an abundance of nourishment for the child.

MRS. DORA A. GUTHRIE, of Oakley, Overton Co., Tenn., writes: "When I began taking Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, I was not able to stand on my feet without suffering almost death. Now I do all my housework, washing, cooking, sewing and everything for my family of eight. I am stouter now than I have been in six years. Your 'Favorite Prescription' is the best to take before confinement, or at least it proved so with me. I never suffered so little with any of my children as I did with my last."

Alhambry Jane's Wedding Outing

By MARY KYLE DALLAS.

"It's been on three weddins already."

"Aunt Becky," says Alhambry Jane sometimes when we air sitting up chamber sewing, "I don't think if I should live to be as old as Methuselum I should ever forget what an awful time I had on my wedding outing. Sometimes I wake up in the night and feel as ef I should expire just thinking it over." When she makes them remarks I don't encourage her to go on; 'tain't good for her.

"Never grind things over, and ollers shet the doors behind you, Alhambry," I says. "In this here vale of tears suthin another is bound to concur. I believe just so much trouble is rationed out to you, and what you've had you won't hev again."

"But a body's wedding outing is said to be the blissfulest time o' life," says Alhambry.

"So it is in theorems, Alhambry," says I; "but mostly never in practition. New unions is usually the most uncomfortable parties on a train of keers. She's afeard nobody won't know she's a bride, and he's skeered for fear they'll be found out. She acts foolish and he acts stiff. His ma has made him feel awful, cryin and wishin he may be happy, as ef she know'd he couldn't. Mostly they go one way and their trunks another, he loses his keys and checks and she leaves her bag into the rack."

"Oh, such things you could laugh at," says Alhambry, "but what happened to me was worse than ever happened to anybody before."

"Alhambry Jane," I tell her, "you don't know all that has happened. Some has been burned up or collided and carried to their predestinations without no heads on."

I talked so, but twixt you and me, Alhambry Jane and Neptune did have a most awful time, and so you'll think when I tell you all about it.

That old hair trunk that Great-granper Rusk sots so much by was at the bottom of the trouble. 'Twas a beautiful trunk, too, fust off. You've seen that kind stored away in garrets, likely. Jest the color of an Alderny cow, with leather bands and brass nails and brass handles, and a name in brass nails on the side. "Rusk" was on this one, and a hasp as big as that on a barn door, and a great key to lock it with. This one was lined with blue paper with gilt stars onto it. Great-granper Rusk had bought it fur him and his companion when they started onto a wedding tower in eighteen hundred and four, and his daughter, Alhambry's grandmother, had took it when she was married and went to Niagara, and Alhambry's mother took it onto her outing, and Alhambry's pa took it to Washington when he went there in war times. Alhambry's oldest sister, Hetty, never forgot that, because her pa put her into it fur fun while he was packing it (it held all creation and wern't never full), and bein abstractive by natur forgot all about it and locked her up. Wouldn't hev found her until he got to Washington ef her granmer hadn't insisted onto it she heard the kitten mewin inside. So, behold, 'twarn't the kitten, 'twas Hetty most smothered and skeered to death.

Well, since that time it had lived up garret mostly with carpet rags into it. Sometimes you'd find kittens there ef the cover had been left up. 'Twas mighty handsome still, and Great-granper Rusk, goin on fur ninety-four, used to take company up to see it and pint out its beauties. 'Twas jest as good as new, only it had lost one handle and the blacksmith had put a leather one onto it, and it looked a little like it needed hair restoratives since the moth year. Kinder a plague of moths that came on Ciderville one spring and devoured all the furs and woolens.

Well, 'twarn't only what I expected, when jest as soon as the wedding was talked of and it was decided that Alhambry and Neptune Belcher would have an outing, that Great-granper Rusk should up and say:

"Things hes got to be done good fur Alhambry. Don't spare nothin fur the gal. She is a favyrite of fixy things. She shill have my big hair trunk to travel with. Folks shill see that she comes of people that's had things. There ain't a trunk like that to be found nowhere now. Fetch it down, James Peter, and dust it out fur your sister. What you grinin about, James Peter?"

"Only smilin to think how pleased sister'll be," James Peter says. He was clerking it down in New York and knew more about new styles in trunks than Great-granper Rusk did.

"Very well, my son," says the old gentleman; "do as I say and fetch it down.

So James Peter up and fetches it. I kin hear it bumpin on the garret stairs now, and granper he went to look at i standin in the spare bedroom.

"It's been on three weddin's already," says he; "this will be the fourth. Wh is that pumpin outside, I wonder?"

"Guess neighbor Jones is borrying a bucket of water," sez I, but I knowed 'twarn't the pump. I knowed it was poor little Alhambry sobbin fit to kill herself, and I slipped out into the porch and found her cryin as if her heart would break, her head hid in the ivy vine.

"Alhambry," says I, "I understand your feelin's, but you had orter been prepared for it, and rubbin your nose and forehead into the pison ivy won't help you none."

"I don't care," said Alhambry. "I don't care what becomes of me if I've got to go on my wedding trip with Noah's ark for a trunk, and "Rusk" on it like it was a baker's wagon. You've heard ma talk about how she felt when she had to take it, and it's worse now."

"I've heard your ma retail her sufferin's," says I, "but she lived through them. So will you."

"No, I shan't," says Alhambry; "I'd rather be took for anything than a crank. I won't have that thing poked onto me. Ef I had a relationship that had any detachment for me they'd rise up in my offense when I most need 'em. You can carry on when you're a mind to, Aunt Becky; why air you dumb and motionless now?"

"Alhambry Jane," says I, "your great-granper in nat'rally quite an elderly, aged, old gentleman, and sot. Fur to be conterdicted fur the first time in his ninety-oneth year might be fatal. Moreover, though I'm not mercenarious, I don't advise a family that ain't more forehanded than they wish to be offending a great-granper with property to leave behind him, and that has already had evil influenzes brought to bear in regard to leaving it to charitable constitutions instead of his own ancestors. What is a trunk, however wounding to the fashionable inspirations of the heart, to a few thousands to start life with? Be carm, Alhambry Jane, and say to yourself, what can't be cure must be insured, and you and Neptune will be thankful hereafter."

Well, Alhambry Jane felt to feel that I was judgmatical in most things, and she washed her face in the tin basin outside the kitchen door and went in. Her eyes looked like poached eggs, but the rest of the family knowed why, and great-granper's eyes wern't overly good and he didn't notice.

Only Alhambry Jane's pa, who is kinder abstractive, kept lookin puzzled and sayin:

"I had orter tell Alhambry about that there trunk or suthin, but I can't remember what it is."

Poor Alhambry. I used to hear her cryin and moanin in her sleep after that, and I'd go in and shake her, and she'd say: "Oh,-Aunt Becky! I had a nightmare. I thought great-granper Rusk's old hair trunk had got up and was sottin on my chest." Or else she was a dreamin that she was settin at the winder of one of them fixy taverns they have down to York, and seen the colored waiters histin the trunk in and all the fastidicle company larfin at it. And once she thought all her outside clothes had to be put into it because it was so big, and she was obleged to walk up Broadway in nothin; but thoughts of that old hair trunk kerved lines into Alhambry Jane's noble brow that week that never was defaced, and ain't this minute. But she didn't say nothin, and time went on like a relentless jugglenot and fetched on the wedding day.

There wus no gret calamitudes fur as I know, only great-granper felt like he'd enjoy helpin make the fruit cake, and, his eyesight bein kinder repaired, he took a piece of brown soap for some citron, and sliced it up and stirred it in, and the evenin of the weddin her pa went up garret to read suthin another about the tariff and forgot about comin down until most too late, and then appeared at the door in his old flannel dressin gown, sayin, "You and Neptune is sottin up ruther late, darter," as they used to do courtin nights when he thought Nep ought to go hum. But everybody there knowed he was abstractive, so there wern't no need to mind so much as Alhambry did.

The minister beginnin to christen the young couple instead of marryin 'em wern't nothin neither, only Alhambry's sensitudes is so delicate, and when the other folks all snickered she cried and made herself look like she was peelin onions for the rest of the evenin. I've noticed that it's those that feels things most they happen to oftenest. But things might have been wus at Alhambry's weddin, even her travelin suit. Seems as ef it was a natral derangement of Providence that when two is wed his clothes should fit too good and hers shouldn't fit at all. A bride's travelin frock always makes her look as ugly as she kin accordin to her gifts that way, and though Alhambry Jane was right pretty sometimes in an old caliker with the sleeves tucked up, hangin out the washin, in her case her white weddin gown was more unbecoming than her gray traveling suit, ef that was possible.

But what does such things matter if the young couple is happy and don't know it. On what slender chains hangs our joys or our sorrer. While they wus biddin us goodby great-granper says to Neptune:

"Nep, you kin do me a favor down in York. My old friend Captain Peeler was down to see me yesterday, and he was showing me his watch that was presented to him by the passengers for his gallant conduct in a case of shipwreck and unhitched it from his chain and left it behind. Now I want you should take it to him. Just put it in your pocket. He's at the Astor House."

"All right, granper," says Neptune, and buttoned it up, never guessin what trouble it would bring.

"Goodby," says pa; "seems to me there wus something I meant to say about that there trunk, can't remember what it wus though."

Then they wus off and we all throwed rice and old shoes. We didn't know until afterward how some of the rice got into Alhambry's eye, nor how pa's slipper hit Neptune on the nose, which was by nature a turn-up, and changed it fur the time bein into a fine Roman, only red. Such is life. But they got safely to the depot and to that "great and wicked city, New York," as our dominie calls it.

Alhambry thought her troubles over when she saw the old hair trunk in a alcove in her room, nobody seemin to have took no notice of it. So did Neptune. Her eyes was smartin and his nose was achin, but they just sot to and waltzed around the room together like they was at a ball.

"Nep, dear, don't let's go no farther," says Alhambry. "New York is lovely. Don't let's travel, and we needn't have no more tortures about granper's old hair trunk."

"Ally, darling, it's a good idea," says Neptune. They sat down and looked at the trunk and laughed.

"Oh, Nep!"

"Queer old thing," says Alhambry.

"I wonder what your pa wanted to remember about it?" said Neptune.

"We'll never know," said Alhambry, "nor pa, neither."

Then they went and sot on the trunk for fun, kicking with their heels. Sometimes I think there is evil influenzes in unannermate objects.

It wus while she was sottin on that trunk that it come into Alhambry's mind to say:

"Nep, your hair is real red when the sun shines onto it."

Somehow he wasn't best pleased.

"Do you know," sez he, "that I was told that when I first began to pay attention to you you made fun of my hair."

"Why, what an idea," says Alhambry.

"I was told so. Spriggy Bell told me," said Neptune.

"Oh, pshaw! I did pass a remark," said Alhambry. "But 'twarn't that."

"Daresen't tell me what it was," said Neptune.

"Yes I do, now," said Alhambry. "I said you was real nice looking. And the only fault I could find was that your hair was too red."

"Ah!" said Neptune. "Well, it's so, it is."

"But I don't mind it at all now," said Alhambry. Ef she'd gone on and said she thought it was lovely all might hev been right, but it was fated to be otherwise. Neptune got kind of gloomy and riz up and walked to the windy and whistled a dead march, and Alhambry went and laid down on the sofy and shut her eyes. The seeds wus sowed fur what came afterward.

Pretty soon there was a most awful sound. Alhambry said she thought the help had broke all the dishes, but it was only the gong for dinner. It was a splendid dinner, and they cheered up and went out to see a theater afterward.

Alhambry can't remember what theater it was, but it was a real handsome play, and the young gentleman that was keepin company with the young lady was just too elegant for anything, and every time Alhambry saw him come in she couldn't help saying, "Oh, Nep! isn't he lovely!"

Now, Nep, he didn't feel to admire him so much, and he didn't like to have Alhambry, neither, so says he:

"Alhambry, I rather guess your a favyrite of black hair, for all you married a man with red."

"Perhaps I am, ain't you?" says she.

"No, I ain't, or I'd have got a black haired wife," says Nep.

"You talk like looks was everything," says Alhambry.

"So they seem to be," says Nep. "The way you've been goin on about that black haired chap that struts like our old turkey, seems to me it ain't correct for a married lady."

"If I can't look out of my eyes because I'm married," says Alhambry, "it's rather funny."

"I'll take the same privilege then," says Neptune. "You're lookin at that chap because he's handsomer than I am. Well, that girl on the stage is handsomer than you, Alhambry, an I'm goin to look at her all evening. Just see how taper her waist is, and what big eyes she has, and how yellow her hair is. I wish you had hair like that, Alhambry; golden hair."

"It's a wig," says Alhambry.

"That's all envy," says Neptune, and he kept staring at the girl, and saying how pretty she was, until Alhambry couldn't stand it any more. She knew he was doin it out of revenge. But she felt her chin beginning to pucker, and when her chin began to pucker she was gone. And pretty soon she began to sob. She couldn't stop herself, and the more she tried the more she cried. At last Neptune had to take her out and home, and she couldn't stop all the way, and they detracted lots of attention in the cars, and one old gentleman that didn't know they was married folks, but thought they was beaux, says to Alhambry; says he:

"Miss, I'm old enough to be your gran'ther," says he, "and if you need pertection, ask fur it."

"She's with her husband, sir," says Neptune. "I guess that is pertection enough;" and Alhambry says:

"And you'd better mind your own business, you horrid old thing."

Nep said afterward that he never felt so mortified in all his born days.

After they got back to the tavern they had a real bad time of it, and Alhambry told Nep that he could get a divorce and go and propose to that thing in the golden wig if he wanted to.

It was her fault to begin with, going on about black hair and mustachers. Our sect is unreasonable on such subjects, I must confess, but Nep hadn't been married long enough to hold out, and finally he owned up and said that he didn't think anybody was as pretty as his own precious Ally, an 'specially not a painted up ac-to-ress of forty, and she got quiet and laid down onto the sofy, and Nep tried to think what he could do to cheer her up, and he remembered she was a great favorite of ice cream, so he thought he'd go down and get her some.

So he slipped away, locking the door behind him and taking the key. The keys had tags on 'em with the numbers of the rooms, and he just looked at his to remember it, and saw it was number nine. He got the ice cream mixed—strawberry and vanilla—and up stairs he went again and along the passage, and found number nine. Didn't seem as if he locked the door good after all, it opened so easy, and there was the room just as he'd left it, the gas turned down low and all a kind of mysterious twilight, and Alhambry on the sofy. And he shuts the door and goes up as easy and kneels down along side of her and says:

"Open your mouth and shut your eyes, Tootsy. Zere, isn't zat dood?" and popped a spoonful of ice cream into her mouth, which was open.

(To [illegible])

LIKE AN OPIATE.

"Pittsburg makes me more tired than any other city in the world," said a theatrical man yesterday, who has been all over the globe. "I don't mean in the sense of the popular slang phrase, 'you make me tired,' but state it as a physical fact. There is something in the atmosphere of Pittsburg that induces sleep, good and long. Traveling men and theatrical folk, generally, when questioned on the subject, will tell you they lose more time in sleeping in Pittsburg than in any other city they visit. Now, in my case for instance, I can go about the country and find myself refreshed in body and mind after five or six hours sleep. But in Pittsburg eight or nine hours' rest does not seem to suffice, for you get up feeling drowsy. It is a general experience, and you can verify my theory by talking to traveling men.

"In all my wanderings I never found a city where a person can do with so little sleep as in Paris, France. Three or four hours' rest there is all that any able-bodied man requires. There is some peculiar condition of the atmosphere that causes this. Another strange fact regarding Paris is that in treating nearly all disease the time required for bringing them under subjection is a little more than half that required across the channel in England or in America. It is peculiarly adapted for good results in therapeutics.

"Perhaps the great amount of sulphur in the atmosphere here accounts for the strange effect upon people. Doctors admit that the presence of sulphur in the atmosphere makes people afflicted with throat or lung trouble drowsy. But the strange influence of Pittsburg's climate making people sleepy is general and not confined to any one class."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

On W. Fadden's ranch, near Sumas, Wash., there is a stump forty-eight feet in circumference two feet above the ground, and thirty-seven feet in circumference six feet above the ground. The stump is hollow, and has an average inside diameter of about nine feet.

The slayers of two outlaws in Oklahoma have been kidnaped and, it is believed, lynched.

HOW'S THIS!

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligation made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Price, 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists. Testimonials free.

She—Engaged to two girls at the same time! Well, what are you going to do about it? He—O, I'm all right; but what are they going to do about it?

LIKE A SIEVE.

The chief function of the kidneys is to separate from the blood, in its passage through them, of certain impurities and watery particles which make their final exit through the bladder. The retention of these, in consequence of inactivity of the kidneys, is productive of Bright's disease, dropsy, diabetes, albuminuria and other maladies with a fatal tendency. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a highly sanctioned diuretic and blood depurent, impels the kidneys when inactive to renew their sifting function, and strain from the vital current impurities which infest it and threaten their own existence as organs of the body. Catarrh of the bladder, gravel and retention of the urine are also maladies arrested or averted by this benign promoter and restorative of organic action. Malaria, rheumatism, constipation, biliousness and dyspepsia also yield to the Bitters, which is also speedily beneficial to the weak and nervous.

A Georgia editor throws Whittier aside and writes: "The gladdest words of tongue or pen are these: 'Insert my ad again!'"

For Whooping Cough Piso's Cure is a successful remedy.—M. P. DIEFER, 67 Throop Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 14, 1894.

Inquiring Child—Papa, why do people cry at weddings? Father (abstractedly)—Most of them have been married themselves.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

IN ADVANCED YEARS

Hood's Sarsaparilla is often of great value in giving the strength so much desired. Mr. W. G. Wyman of Saratoga, Cal., had a large bunch, called a tumor, on his right breast. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla which gave him new life and vigor and the pain and all traces of tumor have wholly disappeared. He says: "Five bottles did the work. It is literally true,

Hood's Sarsaparilla

cures. We also think Hood's Pills the best."

Ely's Cream Balm WILL CURE CATARRH

Price 50 Cents.

Apply Balm into each nostril. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

FIRE-WORKS!

BUY DIRECT from the only MANUFACTURERS on the Coast. We make a specialty of 4th July displays. Send for Catalogue.

CALIFORNIA FIREWORKS CO.
219 Front Street, San Francisco.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP - FOR CHILDREN TEETHING -
For sale by all Druggists, 25 cents a bottle.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc., AGENTS WANTED.

PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal.
BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to

DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY, which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

★ ASK YOUR DRUGGIST FOR ★

IMPERIAL GRANUM

IT IS ★ THE BEST ★ FOOD FOR INVALIDS

★ JOHN CARLE & SONS, New York. ★

YOUNG MAN YOU CAN MAKE MONEY BALing hay with a good Hay Press. Write us for information.

BICYCLES—We sell all the best first-class Bicycles. Write for Catalogue.

I. J. TRUMAN & CO.,
236 Bush Street, San Francisco, Cal.
Please mention this Paper when writing.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE.

FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

S. F. N. U. No. 676. New Series No. 23.

NO DIRT OR SMOKE.

Your Wife Can Run it. Hercules Gas or Gasoline Engine.

Palmer & Rey, S. F., Cal. and Portland, Or.

PURE ARM AND HAMMER

BEWARE of imitation trade marks and labels. is the whole story about in packages. Costs no more than other package soda—never spoils flour—universally acknowledged purest in the world.

ARM AND HAMMER SODA

Made only by CHURCH & CO., New York. Sold by grocers everywhere.

Write for Arm and Hammer Book of valuable Recipes—FREE.

"HE THAT WORKS EASILY, WORKS SUCCESSFULLY." [illegible] WITH

SAP[illegible]

MALARIA! DO YOU FE[illegible] ache? Does ev[illegible] MOORE'S [illegible]

Three doses only. Try it.

Hercules GAS OR GASOLINE Engines

Workmanship the very best.
Always Ready, a boy can start them
No double or false explosions.
They Oil Themseves

A FEW USES TO WHICH THE HERCULES CAN BE PUT:

For Wood-working Machinery.
For Bean-cleaning Machinery.
For Hoisting-works in Mines.
Running Machine Shops.
Running Shoe Factories.
Bottling Soda Water.
Sawing Cord-wood.
Running Churns.
Sawing Lumber.
Pumping Water.
Running Elevators.
Running Paint Mills.
Running Electric Motors.
For Printing Machinery.
Running Sewing Machines.
For Electric Light Dynamos.
Running Ice-cream Freezers
For Carpe-beating Machinery.

ADDRESS:
PALMER & REY
405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal.

CABLED FIELD and HOG FENCE, 24 in. to 58 in. high; CABLED POULTRY FENCE, 24 in. to 68 in. high. STEEL WEB PICKET LAWN FENCE, 18 in. to 50 in. high. STEEL WIRE FENCE BOARD and ORNAMENTAL STRIP. Steel Posts, Steel Rail, Steel Gates and Steel Tree, Flower and Tomato Guards. We manufacture a full line of Wire Fencing, Gates and Posts, and solicit your patronage. Catalogue Free. De Kalb Fence Co., 100 High St., De Kalb, Ill.

JNO. WOODLOCK, PACIFIC COAST AGENT, 26 Beale St., San Francisco, Cal.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.

FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVII. NO. 4. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JULY 12. 1895. WHOLE NO. 1289.

INYO INDEPENDENT

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$1 00
Six Months	2.50
Three Months	1 25
One Month	50
Single Copies	10

HIS 300 ANXIOUS WIVES.

Should the Ameer of Afghanistan Die They Would All Be Shot.

There is a certain village in the Midlands where the illness of the ameer of Afghanistan has been followed with painful anxiety. The reason is to be found in the following curious, but, I believe, perfectly authentic story: Some years ago an enterprising young tailor left the village in question and went abroad to seek his fortune. He eventually found his way to Kabul. Here great luck awaited him. He obtained the patronage of royalty and became the poole of Afghanistan. He had left a sweetheart behind in England, and, as soon as he found himself on the road to fortune he sent for the damsel to join him. She came, but here fortune deserted the tailor. His intended bride in her turn obtained the patronage of royalty, with the result that she eventually became one of the 300 wives of Abdurraham.

This, however, is only the first act of the tragedy. It is undertsood that, by the laws of Afghanistan, when the ameer dies, the whole of his 300 wives must be shot. The laws of the Afghans are as immutable as those of their ancient neighbors, the Medes and Persians, and the whole of the little Midland village where the ameer's English wife was born and where her parents are still living has been during the past week or two in a high state of excitement over the possible fate of the young lady. Fortunately the ameer seems better now, and it is to hoped, if only for the sake of his wives, whatever their nationality, that the improvement may continue. In the meantime cannot diplomacy do anything for the young woman? At his time of life, and with a gouty habit to boot, I should have thought Abdurrah might have been induced to get along with 299 of them. If, however, he must have a round number in the family circle, perhaps an exchange might be negotiated.—London Truth.

A SLICK HOTEL BEAT.

As a Schemer He Could Give the Clerk Points and Not Half Try.

The fellow had no baggage when he registered first at the Markham House Saturday, but had a very glib tongue and told such a plausible story that he was permitted to register and given a room. He was well dressed and a very pleasant spoken fellow, and his bill for extras soon assumed startling proportions. The hotel people became alarmed, and after he had been there several days a party stopping there told them he was a beat. The clerk fixed up a scheme, and that evening he got into the fellow's room on some pretext after he had retired, and calmly gathering up the fellow's coat, vest and pants told him they could be redeemed at the office for the amount of his bill.

The fellow's nerve did not desert him even in this extremity. He borrowed a mackintosh coat from the clerk which reached to his heels, which he put on over his underclothing, in order to go after some money, and walked to the Kimball House, where he boldly registered and was shown to a room, leaving word that when his baggage arrived it was to be kept until he got up in the morning.

At about 8 o'[illegible] morning he came [illegible] aking a great [illegible] y, in which [illegible] 5 cash [illegible] paid [illegible] notorious fellow [illegible] n house, [illegible] es and [illegible] Chattanooga

[illegible] Ambergris.

[illegible] floriferous, fatty [illegible] floating upon the surface of the o[illegible] or upon shore, where it has been cast by the waves. It is known to be a morbid secretion of whales, but whether it is found in their bodies irrespective of species or age or whether in the stomach or intestines is not certainly known. The best authorities are of the opinion that it is formed only in the intestinal canal of the sperm whale (Physeter macrocephalus).

Lumps of this curious substance range in weight from one-half ounce to 100 pounds and upward, the largest lump known to history weighing 182 pounds, and was sold by a petty oriental monarch to the Dutch East India company over 100 years ago. The season's take of ambergris by American whalers seldom averages 100 pounds for the whole fleet. In 1892 it was only 87 pounds, and in 1889 but 73. These figures will not seem so small when it is known that the 73 pounds taken in the year last named had a market value of $23,200.—St. Louis Republic.

The Pope's Choir.

The finest choir in the world is that of St. Peter's, in Rome, known as the pope's choir. There is not a female voice in it, and yet the most difficult oratorios and sacred music are rendered in such a manner as to make one think that Adelina Patti is leading. The choir is composed of 60 boys. They are trained for the work from the time they get control of their vocal cords, and some of the best singers are not over 9 years old. At the age of 17 they are dropped from the choir.—Rome Letter.

"It seems to me that you want an unreasonably high price for this joke," said the editor. "But," said the famous humorist, "it is an Irish bull. And when you consider the present high price of beef you must see that I am demanding nothing more than ruling rates."—Cincinnati Tribune.

Christopher Schramm of Denver was acquitted on the charge of murder in the District Court, the jury being out three hours. He killed Edward W. Murphy, his tenant, in a quarrel over certain repairs that were needed. Schramm's plea was self-defense.

RUSSIA TO SOUDAN.

Missive Which a Crane Brought to Slatin Bay.

ANOTHER BIRD AS A MESSENGER.

An Albatross Takes the Account of a Shipwreck to Western Australia—A Most Remarkable Story.

Slatin Beys, the former Governor of one of the Egyptian provinces in the Soudan, who escaped from his long imprisonment at Omdurman a few months ago and has recently arrived in Egypt, brought home a remarkable story of the killing of a crane on the upper Nile which bore around its neck a written message that had come all the way from Europe. One day in December, 1892, Slatin was summoned to the palace of the Khalifa Abdulla, successor to the Mahdi. The Khalifa handed to him a small metal capsule.

He said it contained some papers, and the Khalifa commanded Slatin to open the capsule and interpret the writing if he could.

The white prisoner unscrewed the cap and took out two small slips of paper, each about the size of a visiting card. The short message on these papers was written in German, French and English. It said that the capsule had been fastened to the neck of a crane that had been bred on the estate of Herr-Falz-Fein at Tskanea Nova, in the province of Taurida, South Russia. The crane had been released in Russia in June or July, 1892. The exact date of the release was given, but as Slatin, was not permitted to copy or retain the writing, and depends upon his memory, he cannot more definitely fix the date. The message requested the future captor of the crane to send particulars of the date and place to Herr Falz-Fein.

This bird was the common European crane, Grus cinerea, standing about four feet high, ashen gray in color, with face and neck nearly black. It is well known that it breeds in marshes in Europe and Asia and migrates far south to warmer climes upon the approach of winter. This particular bird, doubtless with many of his fellows, crossed over to Africa and flew south about 1,500 miles up the Nile, where he was killed in the Mahdist province of Dongola. This was in November, 1892, about five months after the bird had been released. Released while the weather was still warm, it is probable that it did not immediately start from Europe on its long journey, and it is not likely that it would travel much further south. It had probably reached the southern limit of its journey when it fell victim to a Mahdist hunter, who, of course, was greatly surprised when he saw the metal tube depending from the bird's neck. He took the prize to the Emir of Dongola. As that official's territory is on the northern border of the Mahdist domain, where he has had many a brush with the Egyptian troops just north of him, he is constantly on the qui vive for any news that may come from the north. But not a man in his province could read this mysterious message and so the Emir, knowing that the Khalifa had a number of European prisoners at Omdurman who could, doubtless, interpret the writing, dispatched a messenger in hot haste over the great southern desert to deliver the capsule to the Khalifa, 800 miles away. The journey was made by camels, and the Mahdist capital was reached about a month later. On April 2 last Slatin wrote to Herr Fal-Fein, informing him of the recovery of his message and of the unusual events that had made a bird the bearer of a communication from Europe to Central Africa.

Probably no more remarkable story of this sort has ever been recorded, if we except the unparalleled incident of 1887, when a brief message, tied around the neck of an albatross, was borne for thousands of miles across the watery wastes of the Indian Ocean and the Southern Pacific; and upon its providential delivery warships of two nations were at once put in motion on a work of humanity. The story, taken from the dry official records of the day, is worthy of perpetuation as the most wonderful instance where the unconscious efforts of a bird have played a most important part in a tale of human misery.

Late in 1887 the British Embassador in Paris informed the French Government that a message had been received from the Governor of West Australia announcing that on September 22 a dead albatross had been found on the beach at Freemantle. Around the bird's neck was fastened a small piece of zinc which had been scratched in French:

Thirteen shipwrecked men took refuge upon the Crozet Islands.

August 4, 1887.

The Crozet Islands are four or five little specks of land rising in the Indian Ocean far south of the usual track of vessels. No wonder the story excited incredulity. As a rule, only an occasional whaler goes as far south as the Crozets. It was, indeed, a wonderful series of fortunate events if castaways on those far-off islands had found a winged messenger which, unconsciously exerting in their behalf his far-famed powers of endurance on the wing, had carried their tidings over thousands of miles of sea with few opportunities to rest on the way, and had finally dropped dead, probably of exhaustion, on the shores of a civilized land.

However, the tidings were official and the French Government could not doubt that this albatross, with its important message, had been found at Freemantle, which is one of the largest towns in Southwestern Australia. Was the message genuine, or was it the work of a practical joker? Was any French vessel missing? The day that the communication from the British Embassador was received it was distributed among the Paris newspapers. The next morning it was spread broadcast over France and before another day elpased came a letter from Bordeaux which gave additional interest and probability to the story. The shipping-house of Bordes & Son wrote that they had reason to fear that the thirteen sailors on the Crozets were the crew of their three-master Tamaris, which had sailed many months before for New Caledonia in the Pacific. She was some time overdue. Her owners had expected her to take a course not far from the Crozet Islands, and her crew numbered thirteen persons.

The French Minister of Marine lost no time in sending orders to the commander of the naval division of the Indian Ocean to dispatch the transport Meurthe as soon as possible to the Crozets to search for the castaways. The British Government also decided to take part in the search, and her Majesty's ship Thalia, which was about to leave England for Australia, was ordered to go out of her course to call at the Crozet Islands.

It was not until the early spring of 1888 that it was possible to give the sequel of this romance of the sea. The French transport Meurthe, after returning from her search, steamed into the harbor of Diego Suarez, Madagascar, and here her captain wrote his report. He said that he first touched at the little island of Cochous, one of the four Crozets. He found no person there, but there was ample evidence that the island had recently been occupied. There were the remains of camp fires, biscuit boxes and other debris, all quite fresh in appearance; and under some stones that had been piled in a heap to attract attention was a piece of paper, on which had been written in French with a lead pencil:

The iron ship Tamaris of Bordeaux, with thirteen men in the crew, went ashore on the island of Cochous during a heavy fog. Some time after she got clear and floated off, but three hours later she filled and sank. The crew escaped in two small boats to the island, taking with them 100 kilogrammes of biscuit. The crew have lived on Cochous Island nine months, and, their food being exhausted, they are about to set out for Possession Island.

September 30, 1887.

The transport at once went to Possession Island, eighty miles away, across a stretch of sea that is always rough and choppy. Not a trace was found of the shipwrecked men. At East Island, another island in the group, some American whalers who had been there for some weeks said they had neither seen nor heard anything of the castaways. All the other islands in those waters were visited without result. For some months hope was entertained that the men had been picked up by some passing whaler, but at last there could be no doubt that they were lost in the attempt to make the perilous passage to Possession Island.

Of course the 250 pounds of biscuit with which they had reached the island of Cochous was only a small part of the provisions they required during their nine months on that desolate rock. As one of the shipwrecked crew on the Cozets had done, they doubtless existed largely on penguin flesh and eggs and fish. It is not probable that they would have starved if their courage had held out a little longer until relief came. But they knew that there was not one chance in many thousands that the man-o'-war bird, to which they had entursted their brief message, would carry it safely and quickly thousands of miles to the civilized world. They little dreamed that, eight days before they set out from the uninviting rock where they had lived so forlornly the bird had finished his wonderful flight and told the world of their unhappy situation. Few stories of the animal kingdom equal in pathetic interest that of this strong-winged bird, whose happy fulfillment of the mission entrusted to him set two nations at work to rescue men in sore distress.

THE RIGHT HAND.

"I wish I were ambidextrous," remarked a young woman who was seated at the glove counter of a Woodward-avenue store. "I wear out so many right-handed gloves before those of the left hand that a pair would last nearly twice as long if the wear were more evenly divided between the two." "Couldn't you begin now?" asked the young woman who was fitting on the gloves.

"No," was the sorrowful inflection; "I've tried, and taken several tumbles in consequence. I always use my right hand to open doors, to swing myself on a street car, to clutch railings, to carry parcels and my umbrella, and hold up my gown, until my left hand has become almost useless. I couldn't save myself from falling with it."

"It is the same with all ladies," said the glovefitter in a tone intended to be comforting.

"Yes, that is the worst of it. I can't see what parents and instructors are thinking of to overlook, as they do, the value of the left hand. My right hand, because of the extra work it performs, is half a size larger than its mate. Have you noticed it?"

"Oh, yes, indeed; we try all ladies' gloves on the right hand first," said the girl as she fitted that useful member.—Detroit Free Press.

The City Council of Napa has denied the petition of L. Grothwell for a franchise to run an electric railway, telegraph and telephone lines thorugh the town. The members of the Council thought he asked too much.

THE "TRILBY" FAD.

What the Lines of the Feet Tell.

HOW WOMEN STUDY THEIR FEET.

What a Palmist, Who is Supposed to be as Wise as Solomon Himself, Says—Ambition Signs.

To have one's foot modeled in marble is the vogue. A number of society women are doing so—when they happen to have pretty feet.

Probably "Trilby" has made every woman seriously regard her uncovered pedal extremities from an artistic standpoint. Writers have long enthused over the hand worthy to be perpetuated in marble, but it took a latter day nineteenth century genius to impress upon the gentler sex "that a real, live, bare human foot could be such a charming object to look at."

This present investigation by smart women as to the suitability of such modeling brings a startling fact to light; one hinted at before, but never faced; that the fin de siecle girl hasn't good-looking bare feet. She will have them, she tells you, and points with pride to the round-toed, flat-heeled calf walking boot. But that does not help her in the present difficulty of responding to the fashionable call for plaster casts of the foot in its confessed state of ungainly excresences and perverted outlines.

Many a belle, who has confidently put forward on the avenue or at social functions a dainty, bien chasesse member wonders in horror if a plaster cast of it would be as much admired. However, she consoles herself with the reflection that sandals have not come in, that she can refuse to have a cast on exhibition if it is ungainly, and her well-made boots yet remain things of beauty.

The Parisian and London women have lost their hearts to this foot-modeling. A half-dozen society ladies in New York have had impressions taken of their unbooted member, but until the result of their daring is ascertained it is spoken of behind closed doors.

Apropos of this new fashion in bare feet investigation I asked Cheiro if in his studies of character expressed in physical outlines he had found aught of import in the shape of the foot.

He said that his attention had been called to the significant part these useful extremities played in character reading when living in southern Persia. The Arabs there go sandaled and one finds the foot in a primitive, untrammeled condition. The feet being unfettered for generations the shape becomes more and more in accordance with the personality.

The following points, he remarked, help to determine temperament or disposition by the walking members.

In the first place, the big toe not clinging, as it were, to the others, is a sign of independence of spirit. It is especially noted among the wandering tribes of Arabs, who have never and will never give up their freedom to either the shah or the sultan. An instance of this feature is nearer home, for the Indian foot always shows the big toe detached, especially among the Apaches. With the characteristic of independence is also closely allied a spirit of cruelty. This mark, however, is turned by civilization. Today the woman's foot with space between the two first toes indicates individuality, pride and resolution—amounting to obstinacy if the space is very wide.

If the big toe is elevated or raised above the others when the foot is placed flat on the ground, it is generally accepted as a sign of great ambition, a desire for power and position. It is distinctive among races noted for pride and commanding spirit. The Spartan and Roman matrons had such toes, Cleopatra must have owned this feature, and Semiramide and Judith. Bernhardt has such a sign and Louise Michel. It is as indicative of able domination and individual power as a large nose or haughty black eyes.

The toe that clings to the others, on the contrary, denotes a more easily influenced person, one submissive to authority, sometimes individual in temperament, but usually too mentally indolent to assert oneself. A woman possessing this mark in proper environments is all right, and in wrong surroundings all astray; generally a chameleon-like nature that changes color to suit the ground.

The second toe should be longer than the others to denote an artistic temperament. Here sentimentalism dwells and romance and imagination. If the large toe is strong and broad the inclination toward idealism will be checked by a good amount of practical sense. In the purely artistic foot the little member of the five should curl inward; its arching upward denotes a passionate nature. The women of southern countries are noted for this distinction.

A high, arched instep is well known to point to a sensitive, high-bred nature, whose sensuary nerves are impressionable and all qualities in keeping with hereditary influences. But make no mistake. These first named characteristics belong to the slender type of foot. The arched instep of a fat, short foot, which an E last is required to cover, denotes coarseness more than sensitiveness. Its owner is usually egotistical, vain—if she has beauty—and devoted to flattery.

Again, look well to the heel. To be well shaped it should have a slight arch to the ankle. This shows breeding. The variety commonly known as "spur heel" is considered plebeian. Its presence from an artistic standpoint spoils the longest, slenderest foot, but its indication of disposition is not bad. True, it points to harmless contentiousness and a jay-bird quality of garrulity, but its owner is apt to be clever and an excellent judge of men, women and affairs.

The nails index the same conditions of health on the foot as on the hand. "Short" ones denote lack of good circulation, and those extremely long a delicacy of lungs or throat.

The fashionable study of feet and the craze for their modeling has yet to be named. Happy is the woman who finds that her unshod foot is free from "all these grewsome, boot-begotten abominations," so that she can safely call in the modeler. It is whispered that one fashionable woman, who has lent her name to clever short stories, has allowed her cast in her boudoir, and that it is "an inspiration of shape and color, all made up in delicate length and subtly modulated curves and noble straightness and happy dimpled arrangements in innocent pink and white."

What a shame the public can't be allowed in to see!—Harrydele Hallmark.

CURIOUS CASE OF RABIES.

There was an exciting experience with a mad dog on the farm of J. M. Fall, nine miles east of Albia, last week. Mr. Fall had sixty head of short-horn steers in one lot, 100 head of fat hogs in another and several fine head of horses in another, and was just preparing to market the hogs and cattle.

The 4th day of April a large dog broke into the stock pens and bit ten head of steers, twenty head of hogs and two fine horses. A hired man on the place, Fred Frey, who was making his home with the Falls, procured a gun and went out to kill the dog. When young Frey entered the pen where the dog was mutilating the cattle, the brute made a rush for him, but, quickly stepping out and closing the gate, Frey placed the muzzle of the gun through the fence and shot the dog dead.

Two house cats were observed licking the blood of the dead dog, and within twenty-four hours they died with the rabies. A few days later young Frey attended church with Falls' family, and during the services was taken violently sick, and before he could be taken home was a raving maniac. So violent was the young man that it required two strong men to hold him until a physician could be summoned. He frothed at the mouth, went into the wildest paroxysms at the sight of water and uttered shrieks and cries that resembled the bark and snarl of a dog.

The physicians pronounced the young man suffering from an aggravated case of hydrophrobia and beyond human help. The next day he died in agony. The young man was not bitten by the dog, was not even touched by the mad brute, and the attending physicians pronounced it the strangest case that has ever come under their observation. The fat cattle are dying with the rabies, and the horses and hogs have at different times shown signs of hydrophobia. Mr. Fall believes that he will lose nearly all of his fine stock.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A SENSE OF HUMOR.

Last night, as I was hurrying through Washington street, I met two of the headquarters detectives walking along with a young negro between them. It was easy to see that he was under arrest, yet as I passed he laughed merrily, and said:

"Good evening, Mr. Smith."

"Good evening," I replied, though I did not recognize the voice or the face of my Senegambian acquaintance.

Yesterday afternoon, when I went into the barber shop, the negro porter began to laugh heartily. "Saw you out pretty late last night, Mr. Smith," he said.

Then I knew that Sam, the porter, was the prisoner of the night before. He proceeded to explain that he had been arrested by mistake and honorably discharged. He had been suspected of committing a burglary in Olean, but had no difficulty in proving that he was in Buffalo on the night of the crime.

"I am glad to hear you got free, Sam," I said, "but what were you laughing about so heartily when I met you?"

"I was chucklin' to think of the joke I had on them fool detectives. Heah they had been to the trouble of comin' to my house at midnight, wakin' me up and hustlin's me off to the police station. Of cohse, I knowed all the time as I wasn't the fellah they wanted, but they didn't know it, so the laugh was on 'em."

A keen sense of humor is a great consoler at times.—Buffalo Express.

At the towel counters in the large shops are now sold scrub cloths of loosely woven hemp, excellent for mattings and oil-cloths. Cotton dust cloths of yellow cotton flannel are also purchasable nowadays. These are better even than the much-valued chamois skin, which they considerably resemble. An admirable dust cloth is one of the large gray squares of bandanna cloth, which a few of the largest shops keep for occasional purchase by a dusky "aunty" or "marm" who still uses the plantation head-dress.

A CLEVER INVENTION.

One of the cleverest inventions ever patented is the machine for sticking common pins in the papers in which they are sold. The contrivance brings up the pins in rows, draws the paper in position, crimps it in two lines, then at a single push passes the pins through the paper and sets them in position.—Philadelphia Ledger.

At the adjournment of court he received the congratulations of friends.

CROP PROSPECTS.

The Cool Weather has Greatly Improved Them.

THE REPORTS FROM MANY COUNTIES

In Some the Hay is Better than Ever Known and Fruit and Grain in Fine Condition.

The pleasant cool weather of the past week has been beneficial to crops throughout the State. The report of Director Barwick of the weekly weather and crop service shows an encouraging improvement in the condition of fruits and cereals.

As compared with the normal temperature for the week ending on Monday there was a heat deficiency at all points except Fresno and Red Bluff. A slight deficiency of precipitation everywhere except at Los Angeles, where there was an excess.

From the Sacramento Valley the information gathered is of a favorable nature. In Tehama county range feed is getting scarce and stock is being driven higher up in the mountains, but all crops are doing well. At Vina the best hay crop made in years is being harvested. Haying is also in full progress in Glenn, with grain and fruit looking splendidly. Similar reports came from Butte, Sutter and Sacramento counties, though in Yuba the rivers continue high and hope of saving alfalfa on bottom lands has been abandoned. Apricot trees in Yuba county are barren of fruit, owing to frost and wind, but hay is coming on rapidly. Wheat on low lands is spoted, and this is true also in Solano county, but here hay and fruit are in good condition. The cold spell in Contra Costa county several weeks ago did more damage than was at first supposed. Prunes, apricots and Bartlett pears and almonds suffered so that the yield will be light.

In the Berryessa valley section of Napa county the desiccating north winds of the last week have ripened the hay crop somewhat prematurely, from present appearances, though, the grain crop promises to be an unusually large one. The hay crop will be very little above the average. Haying will soon begin.

A good crop of apples and a fair crop of peaches will be gathered in Sonoma county, though the Saleways are affected by curl leaf. Pears will be light, prunes and canning plums medium. At Forestville cherries are dropping badly, and the weather has been cold for ripening strawberries. The berry crop will be large, and hop yards are in fine shape.

In the Santa Clara valley cherries are ripening rapidly and picking will soon begin. There will be a large crop. A small worm is doing damage to barley. In Santa Clara county the prune crop will be an average one and there will be an abundance of peaches.

In the San Joaquin valley the first three days of last week were excessively warm, but the latter part of the week was favorable to all growing crops. Particularly was this true in San Joaquin and Stanislaus counties. In the latter the wheat crop, except that sown early, will be a failure. In Madera the weather has been favorable for all crops.

Fresno county reports that all early sown wheat is in firm condition; grapes promise a heavy yield; prunes are dropping; peaches abundant and of fine quality. The raisin crop will be larger than last year and the apricot crop a little lighter, but of better quality.

Tulare county sends in glowing reports. The crops will equal if not exceed any yield within the last twelve years. Around Porterville the hay and grain will be heavier than ever known in that locality. At Tulare City, though, the heat has hurt the grain, but the hay crop will be large. Fruit will be short.

High temperatures in Kern county has caused grain to mature rapidly and haying is in progress. All crops are doing well.

In Southern California hot weather has injured late sown crops, but haying is in progress and the crop a good one. Ventura has suffered from foggy weather and lack of sunshine. There will be a good crop of corn and beans. Warm, clear days have prevailed in Orange county, with foggy nights. The cutting of barley will begin next week. There is a large acreage and a good yield. Cut worms are doing considerable damage in San Bernardino county to apricots, peaches and even oranges. Riverside reports a larger apricot crop than usual. San Jacinto farmers are busy cutting wheat and alfalfa for hay and most of the grain will be cut for that purpose. In San Diego a very large corp of apples will be picked. Hay has cured quickly and well.

The coast counties give a good report of themselves. In Humboldt there will be an immense crop of fine fruit. In Mendocino cool winds have dried the ground and retarded the growth of corn, hops and other summer crops. The weather has been most favorable for all crops in Santa Cruz county. The apple crop does not promise well, but there will be a heavy crop of apricots and cherries. In San Benito no material damage has been done to grain or fruit by the hot weather, and in Monterey, where it was supposed that the grain would be badly injured, there will be three-quarters of a crop. Fruit of all kinds is doing well in San Luis Obispo.

The foothill and mountain counties have escaped frost generally. Crops are looking well and the people begin to feel safe. In Siskiyou the outlook is very bright. Crops have improved wonderfully in Shasta and more than an average crop of fruit is assured.

The crop prospects of Lake county are as good as they have been in many years. From all sections there comes the same report, that grain and fruits of all kinds are coming forward, abundant in quantity and excellent in quality. The effect of the late frosts on the young fruit in some localities was noticeable, but in no sense was it a damage. The weather has been much warmer than the same date last year, and a good crop of hay is assured, while the fruit crop will average a good one. The highest and lowest temperatures were 89 and 45. At Rocklin the week's weather has been good for haying. The grain is looking well. Peaches are a good crop, while the plums and pears are dropping. At Roseville the hay is nearly all cut and the quality and quantity is up to the average. Early barley is nearly ripe. Late grain is heading with prospects of a good crop. Fruit is doing well, and also all kinds of early vegetables.

MONEY IN THE BANKS.

Inasmuch as Washington is not generally regarded as a city of great business activities, and as there are not many citizens of great wealth, it will probably surprise most readers to learn that the individual deposits in our national banks are exceeded by those of only twelve other cities in the Union.

Of course New York stands first in the list, with $302,000,000 on deposit; Boston comes next, with $101,000,000; Philadelphia ranks third, with $89,000,000, while Chicago has $66,000,000. Curiously enough, Pittsburg, with considerable less population, outranks Baltimore by $7,000,000, the former city having $31,000,000, while the latter has only $24,000,000. Cincinnati and Cleveland, the two leading Ohio cities, tie each other, with $19,000,000 apiece. St. Louis, that used to fondly talk of herself as the rival of Chicago, falls below both the Ohio cities, having only $18,000,000. Milwaukee and New Orleans have $17,000,000 and $16,000,000, respectively. Brooklyn comes next with $14,000,000. Washington shows a deposit of $10,000,000, which is equalled by that of Detroit and Kansas City. Omaha and St. Paul are a tie at $8,000,000, while Minneapolis, which claims to be much more enterprising and prosperous than her next door neighbor, has but $7,000,000.

But, even more surprising than the creditable showing of Washington, is the poor exhibit made by San Francisco, the commercial and manufacturing emporium of the Pacific coast, whose national banks are credited with only $4,000,000. None of the other cities on the Pacific coast is reported as having so much as $1,000,000, which leads to the inference that they play a pretty strong bluff financial game out in those regions.—Washington Star.

PLENTY OF JOKES.

Well, humor is the great thing, the saving thing, after all. The moment it crops up all our hardnesses yield, all our irritations and resentments flit away, and a sunny spirit takes their place. I remember exploding its American counter mine once under that grand hero Napoleon. He was only first consul then and I was consul-general—for the United States, of course; but we were very intimate notwithstanding the difference in rank, for I waived that. One day something offered the opening, and he said:

"Well, General, I suppose life can never get entirely dull to an American, because whenever he can't strike up any other way to put in his time he can always get away with a few years trying to find out who his grandfather was!"

I fairly shouted, for I had never heard it sound better, and then I was back at him as quck as a flash.

"Right, your excellency! But I reckon a Frenchman's got his little stand-by for a dull time, too; because when all other interests fail he can turn in and see if he can't find out who his father was!"

Well, you should have heard him just whoop and cackle and carry on! He reached up and hit me one on the shoulder and says:

"Land, but it's good! It's immensely good! I'George. I never heard it said so good in my life before! Say it again!"

So I said it again, and he said his again, and I said mine again, and then he did, and then I did, and then he did, and we kept on doing it, and doing it, and I never had such a good time, and he said the same. In my opinion there isn't anything that is as killing as one of those dear, old ripe pensioners if you know how to snatch it out in a kind of a fresh sort of original way.—North American Review.

BRITISH OR FRENCH.

A British subject born within the British dominions marries a British wife, also born within the British dominions. They go to reside in France, and while there a son, B, is born to them. B marries a British wife, born within the British dominions, and a son, C, is born to them in France. C, although a British subject by English law, is yet a French subject by French law, and, as such, liable to all the duties of French nationality.

Now, there are numerous instances of the above sort of circumstances in France today, and it certainly seems hard that men of British birth, educated frequently at English schools, and to all intents and purposes Englishmen, should be compelled to serve in the French army and be liable to fight against their own countrymen.—The Westminster Review.

Mexico has placed a levy on all gold and silver mines for revenue. American capital is heavily interested.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
ITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 12 1895

Dispatches give the information of the amassing at Vladivostock of 80,000 Russian troops. The natural inference to be drawn from such a movement would be that the Czar is preparing to wrest from Japan some or all of the territory she gained from China. Such a procedure on the part of Russia would undoubtedly involve other European nations. Ever since the close of the Franco-Prussian war of 1871-2 the "war cloud" has appeared with periodical regularity. However, the cloud has always passed over without materially disturbing the peace of Europe. It is quite possible that the next great war will have its inception in the East, and when the war cloud does burst it will mean the remaking of the European map.

At a meeting of the Manufacturers' and Producers' Association of California the other day the committee on new industries reported on the feasibility of raising tobacco in this State, that it could be profitably and successfully cultivated. Accompanying the report were written opinions from several tobacco manufacturers, to the effect that the samples of tobacco grown in California which they had examined could not be surpassed in quality. This authoritative statement ought to put an end to the reports regularly circulated every time the possibility of tobacco culture in this State is suggested that it is impossible because of the alleged poor quality of the weed as grown here. There is no foundation whatever for any such charge, and it is to be hoped that the growing of tobacco will become an important industry here.

An Arkansas judge holds that a married man is liable for all debts contracted by his wife before he married her. We don't believe this decision will stand, but if it does it will open up a vista of possibilities to the engaged young woman that must give it instantaneous pre-eminence as a discourager of the waning industry of marriage. A man would be justified in braking off at once with a woman who took advantage of her engagement to him to contract a lot of debts that he must pay after he marries her.

Norway is now seeking deliverance from the rule of Sweden. Naturally enough, she sends men as representatives to this country to raise a subscription fund to help out in the coming struggle. Whenever any of the old countries feel that they want liberating the United States is looked upon as a fertile field in which to raise the sinews of war. And what is more surprising is that the people appealed to always respond.

The directors of the Cotton States and International exposition have named the midway plaisance the midway heights, one of the attractions of which is to be a Mexican village. There is to be a leaning tower 300 feet high and one hundred feet out of plumb. It seems that an exposition is not considered an exposition nowadays unless it has a "midway" attachment.

"Wizard" Edison is now turning his attention to the treatment of sulphurets by electricity. He has invested in a gold mine in what is known as the Appalachian gold belt in South Carolina. He now proposes to get out whole by discovering a method of treating sulphurets by electricity. If he is successful the miners of this country will "call him blessed."

Lord Rosebery has resigned. Even the son-in-law of Rothchilds couldn't run the English government any longer on a gold basis. The country was losing all its trade with the free silver countries, and that was the greater bulk of England's foreign trade.

The new insolvency law provides that the meeting of creditors of an insolvent debtor must be held not less than eight nor more than ten days from the date of notice of adjudication. This change was made to expedite insolvency proceedings.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING
EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.
FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA.

Location of principal place of business: San Francisco, California. Location of works, Inyo, Inyo County, California.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Directors held on the 5th day of July, 1895, an assessment (No. 27) of ten cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, Room No. 12, Rotunda, Mills Building, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this Assessment shall remain unpaid on the 8th day of August, 1895, will be declared delinquent, and advertised for sale at Public Auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Wednesday, the 4th day of September, 1895, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.
W. W. SARGEANT,
Secretary.

Office—Room 12, Rotunda, Mills Building, San Francisco, California.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE WHY ORDER OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE SHOULD NOT BE MADE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of the estate of James Daley, deceased.

H. H. Howell, the Administrator of the estate of James Daley, deceased, having filed his petition herein, duly verified, praying for an order of sale of the Mayflower mine and mining claim, and the decedent's mill-site, being a portion of the real estate of said decedent, for the purposes therein set forth.

It is therefore ordered by the Judge of said Court that all persons interested in the estate of said deceased appear before the said Superior Court on Saturday, the 17th day of August, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, at the Court-Room of said Superior Court, at the Court House, in the County of Inyo, State of California, to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said Administrator to sell the said mine and mining claim and the said mill-site.

And that a copy of this order be published at least once a week for four consecutive weeks in the Inyo Independent, a newspaper printed and published in said Inyo county.

GEO. M. GILL,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Dated July 1, 1895.

[Endorsed.]

Filed July 3, 1895.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

Bennett & Forbes, Attorneys for Petitioner.

Order of Adjudication of Insolvency.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF The County of Inyo, State of California.

In the matter of Bertrand Rhine, An Insolvent Debtor.

Bertrand Rhine, having filed in this Court his petition, schedule and inventory in insolvency, from which it appears that he is an Insolvent Debtor the said Bertrand Rhine is here by declared to be insolvent. It is hereby ordered that A. M. Given, Sheriff of said Inyo County, be and he is hereby appointed Receiver of the property of said Insolvent, and that upon his giving a bond to the People of the State of California, conditioned as required by required by law, and in such sum as the Court may order, and qualifying, he take charge and possession of all of the estate, real and personal of said Bertrand Rhine Insolvent Debtor, whatsoever and wheresoever situate, except such as may be by law exempt from execution, and of all his deeds, vouchers books of account and papers, and to keep and care for and dispose of the same until the appointment of an Assignee of his estate. All persons having the same or any part thereof in his or their possession are hereby directed to deliver said property to said Receiver, and all persons owing money to said Insolvent are hereby directed to pay the same to said Receiver, and that said Receiver keep the said property, or the proceeds thereof, till the further order of this Court. And all persons are hereby forbidden to pay any debts to said Insolvent, or to deliver any property belonging to such Insolvent to him, or to any person, firm, corporation or association for his use, and the said debtor is hereby forbidden to transfer or deliver any property until the further order of this Court, except as herein ordered.

It is further ordered, that all the creditors of said debtor be and appear before the Hon. Geo. M. Gill, Judge of the Superior Court of the said County of Inyo, in open court at the court-room of said court in the town of Independence, in said County of Inyo, on the 29th day of July, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of the estates of said debtor. It is further ordered, that this order be published in the Inyo Independent, a newspaper of general circulation, published in the County of Inyo, as often as the said paper is published before the day set for the meeting of creditors.

And it is further ordered, that in the meantime all proceedings against the said insolvents be stayed.

Dated July 11th, 1895.

GEO. M. GILL,
Judge of the Superior Court.

[Endorsed.]

Filed July 11th, 1895.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. H. Mack, Attorney for Petitioner.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix, at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ALLIE R. BROWN,
Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased.

Dated February 15, 1895.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administratrix.
aug3 5t

Carpet Weaving.

MRS. J. R. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.

PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER

We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kinds of carpet and rug weaving.

Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished, at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.

First class work guaranteed at low prices

NEW FEE BILL.

CHAPTER CCVII.

An Act to establish fees of county, township and othe. officers, and of jurors and witnesses in this State.

[Approved March 26, 1895.]

The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The following county, township, and other officers shall charge and collect the following fees.

COUNTY CLERK.

On the commencement of any action or proceeding in the Superior Court, except probate proceedings, or on appeal thereto, to be paid by the party commencing such action or proceeding, or taking such appeal $5 00

On the filing of a petition for letters of administration, testamentary, or guardianship five dollars, to be paid by the petitioner; provided, that at the time of filing the inventory and appraisment in any such proceeding there shall be an additional deposit of one dollar for each additional thousand dollars of the appraised valuation, in excess of three thousand dollars.

On filing the petition to contest any will or codicil 3 00

On the appearance of any defendant, or any number of defendants answering jointly, to be paid upon filing the first paper in the action by him or them 2 00

On placing any action, except a probate proceeding, or default case, on the calendar for trial or hearing, to be paid by the party at whose request such action or proceeding is so placed 2 00

For every additional defendant appearing separately 1 00

The foregoing fees shall be in full for all services rendered by such Clerk in the cause, to and including the making up of the judgment roll.

On the filing of any notice of motion to move for a new trial of any civil action or proceeding, the party filing same must pay to the Clerk, in full for all services to be rendered in connection with said motion, except as hereinafter in this section provided 2 00

For issuing an execution or order of sale in any action 1 00

In all proceedings begun or acts performed prior to this Act becoming a law, such and charges as were provided by the law at the time such proceedings were begun or acts performed.

The Clerk shall also charge and collect the following fees and compensation not above provided for:

For any copy of any record, proceeding or paper on file in the office of the Clerk relating to any civil action pending in said Court, when said copy is made by him, per folio 10

For each certificate of the Clerk, under seal of the Court 25

For filing each claim in probate or insolvency proceedings 15

No fees shall be allowed or charged by the Clerk for services rendered in any criminal case.

For services rendered by the Clerk, not in connection with civil actions or proceedings in Court, he shall charge and collect, for the benefit of the county, the following fees:

For issuing marriage license, one half to be paid to the County Recorder 2 00

For filing and indexing articles of incorporation 1 00

For filing and indexing certificates of copartnership 1 00

For filing and indexing all papers to be kept by him, other than papers filed in actions or proceedings in court, and official bonds and certificates of appointment, each 25

For issuing any license required by law, other than marriage licenses 1 00

For examining and certifying to a copy of any paper, record, or proceeding prepared by another, and presented for his certificate, fifty cents, and one cent per folio for comparing the said copy with the original.

For making satisfaction of or credit on judgment 25

For receiving and filing remittitur from Supreme Court 50

For administering each oath, without certificate, except in a pending action or proceeding 10

For taking any affidavit, except in criminal cases 25

For taking and approving each undertaking and the justification thereof, except in criminal cases 50

For searching records or files, for each year 50

For taking acknowledgement of any deed or other instrument, including the certificate 50

For filing notices of appeal and appeal bonds, each 75

SHERIFF.

For serving any process, writ, order, or paper, except as hereinafter provided, required by law to be served by the Sheriff 50

For serving a writ of attachment, execution, or order for the delivery of personal property 1 00

For taking any bond or undertaking 50

For serving an attachment or execution on any ship, boat, or vessel 3 00

For keeping and caring for property under attachment or execution, such sum as the court may fix, provided, that no greater sum than two dollars per day shall be allowed to a keeper when necessarily employed.

For a copy of any writ, process, or paper actually made by him, when required or demanded according to law, per folio, ten cents; provided, that when correct copies are furnished to him for use, no charge shall be made for such copies.

For advertising sale of property and posting notice, exclusive of cost of publication, or furnishing notice for publication, each 50

For publication of notice in newspaper, the reasonable cost of publication, subject to the approval of the Court.

For serving writ of possession or restitution, putting a person in possession of the premises, and removing the occupant 1 50

For subpoenaing witness, including copy of subpoena, each 25

For summoning trial jury of twelve or less 2 00

For each additional juror 10

For traveling in the service of any paper required by law to be served, for each mile actually and necessarily traveled, one way only, fifteen cents, when such travel can be made by rail, in other cases, twenty-five cents. No constructive mileage to be allowed.

For collecting money on execution, with or without levy, one per cent on the first thousand dollars or less, and one half of one per cent on all sums over one thousand dollars.

For executing and delivering Sheriff's deed 1 50

For executing and delivering certificate of sale 50

For transporting prisoners to county jail, actual cost of such transportation.

For executing and delivering any other instrument, per folio 10

RECORDER.

For recording every instrument, paper, or notice required by law to be recorded, per folio 10

For indexing every instrument, paper, or notice, for each name 10

For filing every instrument for record, and making necessary entries thereon 20

For each certificate under seal 25

For every entry of discharge, credit, or release on the margin of record, and indexing same 25

For searching the records of his office, for each year 50

For abstract of title, for each conveyance or incumbrance 25

For recording each map or plat where same is copied in book of record, for each course 10

For recording each map or plat, where same is not copied in a book of record 50

For figures or letters on maps or plats, per folio, ten cents; provided, that the fees for recording any map shall not exceed fifty dollars.

For taking acknowledgement of any instrument 50

For recording marriage license and certificate, to be paid by County Clerk 1 00

For recording transcript and all services in estray cases 1 00

For recording each mark or brand 50

For administering each oath or affirmation, and certifying the same 25

For filing, indexing and keeping each paper not required by law to be recorded 25

The Clerk, Sheriff, and Recorder shall account for all fees in this section provided for, and the Clerk, Sheriff and Recorder, unless otherwise provided by law, shall pay the same to the County Treasurer on the first Monday of the month following their collection, as provided in this Act.

County Officers must, and township officers may, demand the payment of all fees in civil cases, in advance.

SECTION 2. No fees or other compensation shall be paid for certificate of declaration to become a citizen of the United States, and for making a record thereof, or issuing a certificate of citizenship to become a citizen of the United States, or for making a record thereof; and no fees or other compensation shall be paid for filing the statement and affidavit of a committee or candidate voted for at any public election held within the State; and this section shall apply to all the counties in the State.

SECTION 3. All Acts or portions of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect immediately.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, to all persons having business with the offices of Clerk, Sheriff or Recorder fo the Countyof Ino that the above provisions of the Fee Bill are mandatory, and will be strictly enforced.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk and Recorder.

Independence, Cal., June 3, 1895.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.

D. A. BENDER.
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1	To Mound House No. 2.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House	10:50 a. m	5 20 p m
Dayton	11 25 a. m.	4 45 p m
Wabuska	1 40 p m	2 38 p m
Hawthorne	Ar. 5 00 p. m	Lv. 11 00 a m
	No. 3. Leave—	N 4 Arrives—
Hawthorne	6 00 a. m.	7 35 p m
Lucing	7 10 a. m.	6 15 p m
Sodа Springs	7 50 a m	5 35 p m
Belleville	8 00 a. m.	4 35 p. m
Candelaria	9 40 a. m	3 50 p m
Benton	1 20 p. m	11 50 a m
Bishop Creek	3 10 p. m.	9 50 a m
Alvord	05 p. m	8 55 a m
Independence	4 35 p. m.	7 25 a m
Lone Pine	5 20 p. m	6 40 a m
Keeler	Ar 7 00 p. m.	Lv. 6 00 a m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturday

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (36 miles), Bodie (33 miles), Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's tri weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (9 miles), Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles)

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Lone Pine, California. Location of Canal near Lone Pine, Inyo County, Cal.

NOTICE—There are delinquent upon the the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 8, levied on the 27th day of April, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders, as follows:

Names.	No. Cert.	No. Sh's.	Am't
T. C. Boland	3	500	$ 75 00
T. C. Boland	4	200	30 00
T. C. Boland	18	500	75 00
T. C. Boland	19	200	30 00
J. A. McKenzie	11	700	105 00
E. Robinson	1	500	75 00
E. Robinson	2	200	30 00
J. J. Gunn	12	200	30 00
P. H. Mack	17	300	45 00
Fred Spear		75	11 25
R. C. Spear		75	11 25
D. Holland		50	7 50

And in accordance with law, and an order of the Board of Directors, made on the 27th day of April, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary, will be sold at public auction, at the office of the said Company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on Saturday, the 22nd day of June, 1895, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. of said day to pay said delinquent assessment thereon together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale

DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

POSTPONEMENT.

The above sale is postponed to 2 P. M. of June 29th 1895.

By order of the Board of Directors.
DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

POSTPONEMENT.

The above sale is postponed to Saturday, July 13, at 2 oclock P. M.

By order of the Board of Directors.
DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

Adolph Gerckens Plaintiff, vs. Annie J. Gerckens Defendant.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Annie J. Gerckens, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain judgment against you and a decree dissolving the the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the plaintiff and defendant as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 18th day of June, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. W. BENNETT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.

The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.

All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc. given careful and promt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases.

Brown & Wills,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery.
All kinds of dental work done according to latest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING IN ANY STYLE.
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administrator.

HOTELS.

NORMAN HOUSE,
Independence. Cal
New House New Furniture. Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.
O. L. MAIRS Pro
feb12tf

BIG PINE HOTEL.
BIG PINE CAL
New House. New Furniture. Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.
First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Cleanlicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

FOR SALE.
THE WHITNEY HOUSE
—The only hotel in—
LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL
Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address
MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

JOHN B. CLARKE,
Successor to John Clarke,
—PROPRIETOR—
John Clarke's Bishop Stables,
BISHOP, CAL.
First-class Turnouts of Every Kind
Fine horses and Carriages.
horses Boarded for any Time
Best of Care and Attention

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will presen the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modo Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY the 5th day of March 1892, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 10 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the South-east corner of the south-east quarter of North east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 98-100; thence North-east following the meanderings of the bed of the Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence, thence following said Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, six and 80-100 acres; also lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29, in the town of Independence, the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hallnah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead, or lode, situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "La Dispricada Lode."

That certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura State of California, commencing at a point twelve and nine-twentieth (12 9-20) rods south of the general corner of the North west quarter and the North-east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South-west quarter and the South-east quarter of Section No. one (1), in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardine Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and eleven-twentieth (68 11-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North-westerly along a small branch or swale to a point twenty-four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North East quarter and the South-east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North east quarter of the North west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West; running thence North forty-four and eleven twentieth (44 11-20) rods thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres: Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and alls bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah deceased.

Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th 1892.

SAVE YOUR SHOES
YOUR SHOES
long ... times and ... in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.
PAT. APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK.....PROP'R.
Horseshoeing .....$2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1894, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday	January 5th
"	February 9th
"	March 9th
"	April 6th
"	May 4th
"	June 1st
"	June 30th
"	August 3rd
"	August 31st
"	October 26th
"	November 2nd
"	November 31st

THOMAS C. BOLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND RHINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, JULY 12.....1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman .....GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman.....CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge.....GEO. M. GILL.
Sheriff.....ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk.....DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney.....P. W. FORBES.
Assessor.....P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer.....W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner.....I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed).....JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools.....S. W. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist.....FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist.....A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist.....J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist.....J. J. STEWART.
5th Supervisor Dist..FRANK FITZGERALD.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .66¼
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5¼
Pig lead	3.90

Owens river has been rising very rapidly for the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Smith were down from Big Pine last Saturday.

C. W. Craig and family will leave on Monday next for San Bernardino.

The Board of Supervisors concluded their session at noon of Wednesday.

F. W. Holbert came down from Alvord Wednesday returning yesterday morning.

BUTTER from the Fairview creamery can be obtained from H. Levy.

Pat Keys is reported to be making a very successful run of ore at Beveridge.

A meeting of the Lone Pine Canal Co. will be held at Lone Pine to-morrow afternoon.

Mrs. S. C. Mulholland has been engaged to teach the Independence school for the coming term.

Neil McLean returned from Gold Mountain Tuesday evening with a load of pipe for the Independence Water Company.

Johnnie Lubken ca[illegible] Lone Pine last Mo[illegible] in town visiti[illegible]

[illegible] twin was in town [illegible] week. Charley is im[illegible]rt received by his team [illegible] time ago.

[illegible] a [illegible]n's sheet of paper and send to Crocker & Ames, 519 Monigomery St., San Francisco, for Ame's Shoe Protector, the wonderful saver of shoes.

Dr. J. S. McQueen came down from Bishop on Friday of last week and is at the Norman House. Parties requiring dental work done should call at once.

John Shepherd has returned from his trip to Tulare county. Mrs. Shepherd and Lester have gone to San Francisco where the latter will remain and attend school

Judge Arnot is expected to arrive at Independence about the end of the month and hold Court. Legal business of all kinds is very much behind and the Judge will be kept very busy for a while.

Forty tons of freight for the new mill at the Hirsh mine came down on Wednesday's train. It consisted of two batteries, with the necessary stamps, dies, shoes, shafts, water wheel and other iron work and framing timbers.

It is said that the prospective sale of the mines at Star District has fallen through. If so it will be a matter of much regret to the people of this county. Had the sale taken place a considerable town must have been established and a profitable market for Owens Valley produce opened up.

The farmers in the Bishop country are very busy harvesting their crops. Hay cutting is nearly completed and some grain has already been cut. The hay crop of the entire Valley will not be more than average, but there will be an exceptionally heavy yield of grain.

Mrs. Lottie Osgood committed suicide at Silver Peak last Sunday by shooting herself through the heart and was buried on Monday. The deceased was well known at Hawthorne and other mining camps in Southern Nevada. Fred Osgood died of heart disease at Bodie over a year ago.

There is a good prospect of a resumption of mining activity in the Mammoth region. There is a party now at work there putting up a ten stamp mill, and a thorough test of the working quality of the ore will be made. There are a large number of mines in that vicinity and should this experiment prove successful the development of a flourishing camp may be expected.

Pleasure Parties.

As the sporting season opens up, the usual number of pleasure seekers begin to make arrangements for the enjoyment of the same. No reports have been heard yet as to how the fishing is at the different places in the mountains. Word was received from a party up at the headwateres just over the summit on the Kearsarge trail, that feed was scarce there at present, the sheep having grazed off the grass.

Last Saturday morning a pleasure party of town people left for Long Valley for a months vacation. The party consisted of Mrs. T. Webb, Misses Maud Cook, Lizzie Thompson, Annie Schabbell, Erma Webb and Mr. H. C. Cook. They left in a heavy wagon in which they will travel to Long Valley, where they will stop at the camp of Webb & Whitmore and from there they will go to Mammoth, a distance of seven miles to fish.

J. D. Mairs and W. T. Grant also left on the same day for Monache, where they will spend a week fishing. J. R. Moffett and Harold Eaton, also started last Saturday for the same place.

Still another party consisting John A. Stroud and Fred Scott of Selma, Cal. and Irving Woodin, Clifford Baxter, and Harry Burt, left last Friday morning for the head waters of King's river and vicinity.

Another party is also reported, which will visit the last named place in about two weeks, and will consist of twelve or fifteen young people from Independence and vicinity.

Meteorological Summary for Month of June, 1895, Independence, Cal.

Mean barometer, 29 89
Highest barometer, 30.12 date 17th
Lowest barometer, 29 66 date 14th
Mean temperature, 72
Highest temperature, 95 date 23, 24, 25;
Lowest temperature, 40 date 1st
Greatest daily range of temperature, 33 date 28th Least 10, date 27th
Total deficiency in Temperature during month, 122
Total deficiency in Temperature since January 1st, 68
Prevailing direction of wind, NW
Total movement of wind, 6633 miles
Maximum velocity of wind, direction, and date, 34 miles North on 7th.
Total precipitation, T.
Number of days on which .01 inch or more of precipitation fell, 0
Total deficiency in precipitation during month, .04
Total deficiency in precipitation since January 1st, .25
Number of cloudless days 23; partly cloudy days 5; cloudy days 2.
Dates of frost,

H. E. WILKINSON,
Observer Weather Bureau.

The Fourth at Lone Pine.

The Fourth at Lone Pine was enjoyed by the people who stayed home, by a few games through the day and a dance in the evening. There were two games of baseball, a game between the Saline Indians and the Lone Pine Indians and a game betweene the Local Lone Pine nine and the Lone Pine Indians, the latter nine won both games amid great applause. A few races and a dance in the evening at Carrasco's Hall closed the day.

Weather Summary, Week Ending July 4, 1895.

Highest barometer, 28.926 date, 6th.
Lowest " 29.660 date, 8th.
Highest Temperature 94.4 date, 8th
Lowest " 57.0 date, 5th.
Mean " 78.3
Average dew point 27.7
" humidity 23.7
Total precipitation .0
Prevailing direction of wind, NW
Highest velocity and date, 25, NW 9th.
Number of clear days 4.
" " partly cloudy days 1.
" " cloudy days 2.
" " rainy days (.01 or more rain) 0.

H. E. WILKINSON.
Observer.

A Tugging Appeal.

The following poetical appeal won for its author, the Editor of the Rocky Mountain "Celt," the prize of $1,000 for the best appeal poem to newspaper men to pay up their subscription:

"Lives of poor men oft remind us honest men won't stand no chance,
The more we work there grow behind us bigger patches on our pants.
On our pants once new and glossy, now are strips of different hue,
All because subscibers linger and don't pay us what is due.
Let us, then, be up and doing; send in your mite, however small,
Or when the snow of winter strikes us, we shall have no pants at all."

Coolgardie.

Rich new finds are being constantly reported from Coolgardie gold fields. Coolgardie, Australia, is an accessible point, reached by steamer to Fremantle, thence by rail to Southern Cross and team to destination. The trip to Australia on the fine steamers of the Oceanic Steamship Company via Honolulu, Samoa, and New Zealand is pleasure sailing the day long. This line tickets passengers to Cape Town, South Africa. Map of Coolgardie district and Pacific ports reached by the Oceanic Steamship Company is mailed free to any address by the O. S. S. Co. 138 Montgomery St San Francisco.

To The Public.

I have been informed that parties at Independence have been selling poor butter as my production. My butter is put up in squares with the words, "Fairview Creamery" in capital letters, stamped across the face. It is always wrapped in butter parchment and packed in boxes bearing the creamery stamp. Butter prepared in any other way without stamp or wrapped in cloth is not genuine. I have been using my stamp for over two years, and not a square ever leaves the factory without being printed.

W. D. ROBERTS

Round Valley, May 31, 1895.

The Board of Supervisors of this county has retained R. S. Miner Esq. of Bridgeport to assist the District Attorney in the prosecution of the sheep license cases.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the managment of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor

SUPERVISORS PROCEEDINGS.

FRIDAY, July 5, 1895.
9:45 o'clock A M.

Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, met at above stated time, as a Board of Equalization, pursuant to adjournment.

Present, Supervisors Shaw, Freeman, Eldred, Stewart, and Chairman Fitzgerald presiding.

Minutes of preceeding meeting read and approved.

Board proceeded to the examination of the Assessment Roll of 1895.

11:45 oclock A M.

Board adjourned to meet at the hour of 1 o'clock p. m.

1:15 o'clock P M.

Board reconvened at above stated time pursuant to adjournment.

Present, Supervisors Shaw, Freeman, Eldred, Stewart and Chairman Fitzgerald presiding.

Board proceeded with the examination of the Assessment Roll.

5:00 o'clock P M.

Board adjourned to meet Saturday, July 6, 1895, at 8:30 o'clock a. m. as a Board of Equalization.

FRANK FITZGERALD,
Attest: D. J HESSION, Chairman.
Clerk.

SATURDAY, July 6, 1895.
8:45 o'clock A M.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, met at above stated stated time as a Board of Equalization pursuant to adjournment.

Present, Supervisors F. Shaw, A. C. Freeman, J. R. Eldred. J. J. Stewart and Chairman Frank Fitzgerald presiding.

Minutes of preceeding meeting read and approved.

Board proceeded with the examination of the Assessment Roll for the year 1895.

10:00 o'clock A M

Having completed the examination of Assessment Roll for the year 1895 Ordered, that the same be accepted, whereupon the Board adjourned as Board of Equalization to meet at 10:30 a. m. as Board of Supervisors.

10:30 o'clock A M.

Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, State of California, met at above stated time as a Board of Supervisors.

Claims against the County were examined and approved as follows:

On General Expense Fund.

Charles W. Palm & Co, code citations	$ 5 00
F E Densmore, B'd of Education	10 30
Clay Hampton " " "	23 50
S W Austin " " "	17 30
Mrs. E M Clarke B'd Ed	10 30
Mrs. I H Mulholland B'd Ed	10 30
Bancroft Whitney & Co, Book	6 00
J L Bourland returned to be itemized
John Fiehman, conveying election supplies	4 50
C D Fitzgerald, specia messenger	7 50
C W Robinson, Constable Fees	69 70
Keeler Election Board	48 00

Board adjourned to meet at 1 o'clock p. m.

1 o'clock P M.

Board met at above stated time, pursuant to adjournment, all members present as before.

Board proceeded to examine and allow claims against the County as follows:

A Carlsle & Co, Election supplies	$ 63 75
F P Blaisdell, registering voters	1 75
W E Smith, Constable fees, returned to be itemized.
Geo. L Drake, Constable fees, returned to be itemized.

The time having arrived in accordance with published notice to non consenting land owners along the line of a proposed new road in Road District No. 3, the Board proceeded to swear and examine witnesses in relation thereto as follows:

Mrs. Annie Stewart sworn and examined
E H Blake sworn and examined
J W McMurry sworn and examined

Whereupon the Board continued consideration of the same until Tuesday, July 9, 1895, at 2 o'clock p. m.

The Board again proceeded to examine and allow claims against the County as follows:

On General Expense Fund.

Marks & Cohn, mdse. for Bishop branch jail	$ 11 60
W A Chalfant, printing and advertising	111 35
Mrs. R A Clarke, board prisoners	7 00
J A Partridge, painting	2 00
C J Schalten, Constable fees, returned to be itimized
A P Smith, Constable fees $53.50 allowed	47 50
J E Dunlap, Justice fees $33.00 allowed	27 00
W A Chalfant, taking testimony at Coroners Inquest $2 94, rejected
W O Meroney, Justice fees $10.50 allowed	8 15
Independence Water Co, contract for water	13 00
Mrs. F K Andrews, Interpreting	15 00
P W Forbes, traveling expenses and postage	42 75
H Rhine, Stationary	40 92
W F Matlack, repairing vault	5 00

Board adjourned to meet Monday, July 8, 1895, at 9:30 o'clock a. m.

FRANK FITZGERALD,
Attest: D. J. HESSION, Chairman.
Clerk.

MONDAY, July 8, 1895.
9:30 o'clock A M

Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California, met a above stated time pursuant to adjournment.

Present, Supervisors, Shaw, Freeman Eldred, Stewart and Chairman Fitzgerald presiding.

Minutes of preceeding meeting read and approved.

Board proceeded to examine and allow claims against the County as follows:

On General Expense Fund.

A W Eibeshutz, mdse	$ 36 65
O I Mairs, boarding prisoners	105 30
O I Mairs, Hospital Fund, conveying conveying indigent person to County Hospital	2 50
C W Craig, advertising $42.15 allowed	22 78
Cerro Gordo Election Board	36 00
Ben H Yandell, copying complaint in sheep cases	20 00
James Jeenkins, conveying election returns	5 00
H P Cartier, carpenter work	8 92
D J Hession, postage and telegraphing	30 35
I. Wood, mdse	22 90
F Lawrence, wood for Court House	160 00
A V Davidson, Justice fees	108 05
H Levy, boarding prisoners and conveying indigent person to County Hospital $36 34 allowed on General Expense fund	33 84
and on Hospital fund	2 50
A M Given, postage & expressage	17 65
Geo. Naylor, Constable fees $14.50 allowed	13 25
Georges Creek Election Board	48 00
W T Bunney, expressage & postage	11 10
Walter James, work on vault	2 00
P A Chalfant, postage & expressage and preparing Military Roll	50 75
Lone Pine Election Board	48 00
I H Mulholland, County printing	163 77

Following claims were allowed on Hos. Fund:

L Munzinger, board and transportation August Newman an indigent	8 50
Mrs. M. Lewis, contract care indigent 1 quarter per contract and excess	368 30
Henry Rhine, Hospital supplies	11 75
I J Woodin, Hospital Physician 1 quarter per contract	86 25
Charles Anthony, supplies and stage fare furnished A. J. Gould an indigent blind person	19 50
John F Daley, caring for A. J. Gould, indigent	45 00

Board adjourned to meet at 1 o'clock p. m.

1 o'clock P M.

Board met at above stated time pursuant to adjournment, all members present as before.

Chairman Fitzgerald presiding.

Military Roll of 1895, submitted by P A. Chalfant, County Assessor, was examined corrected and approved.

Petition of Charles A. Curry asking for rebate of taxes for the assessment of 1895 considered and refused.

Petition of the citizens of Bishop, Big Pine and vicinity praying that the sum of $300 be set aside out of the Bridge Fund for the construction of a bridge across Owens River at a point opposite to Black Canyon, being under consideration, Ordered laid over until next regular meeting.

Upon affidavit of A. M. Given, Tax-Collector on file herein, the County Auditor was ordered in accordance with Section 3805 of Political Code to cancel the duplicate assessment of Lizzie Yandell on the assessment roll of 1894. on the NE¼ of NW¼ NW¼ NE¼ S. 35 T. 7 R. 33.

Application of O. E. Dunwig for rebate of Taxes on property erroneously assessed being under consideration it was ordered that the Auditor draw his warrant in favor of O. E Dunwig from the Unapportioned Fund for the sum of $10.

Petition of citizens of Third Judicial Township praying for the appointment of W. M. Wills to the office of Justice of the Peace granted and Clerk instructed to issue certficate accordingly.

Upon written application of Mrs. J. G. Mitchell it was, Ordered, that the monthly allowance of $10 heretofore allowed to J. G. Mitchell, an indigent person, be discontinued.

Petition of citizens of Big Pine and vicinity praying that the monthly allowance of $10 heretofore granted to J. G. Mitchell be rescinded and also charging Supervisor J. R. Eldred with improper connection in the matter, being under consideration, Ordered, laid over until next regular meeting to afford an opportunity for investigation.

Report of S. W. Austin, County Superintendent, giving School Census and Statistics for the year 1895, was accepted and approved.

Whereupon Board adjournnd to meet Tuesday, July 9, 1895, at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

FRANK FITZGERALD,
Attest: D. J. HESSION, Chairman.
Clerk.

TUESDAY, July 9, 1895.
8:30 o'clock A M.

Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, State of California, met at above stated time pursuant to adjournment.

Present, Supervisors Shaw, Freeman, Eldred, Stewart and Chairman presiding.

Minutes of preceeding meeting read and approved.

Board proceeded to examine, and accepted and approved the monthly and quarterly report of the County Treasurer and the quarterly report of the County Auditor for the term ending June 30, 1895.

10:30 o'clock A M,

Board took a recess for 15 minutes.

The matter of employment of Special Counsel to assist the District Attorney of Inyo County to enforce the collection of Sheep License Taxes and to carry out the provisions of Ordinance No. 51, being under consideration, written agreement of R. S. Miner Esq. submitted to the Board was examined, approved, signed and executed employing said R. S. Miner as Special Counsel and fixing his retainers fee at $500, balance of compensation left to the discretion of the Board, also Ordered, that the County Auditor on demand draw his warrent in favor of R. S. Miner from the General Expense Fund in the sum of $250.

Petition of the Citizens of Road District No. 3, accompanied by Bond praying for the viewing and laying out of a new road as follows: Commencing at the Southwest corner of the NW quarter of Section 35, Sownship 12, South of Range 34 E. M. D. M. and running thence North along the Section Line and over the lands of J. G. Smith, James A. Partridge, L. A. Anger, Mrs. Lottie Anger, Ben Martin, Mr. Lafaber Joshua Robinson and A. S. Bell to the SW corner of NW¼ of NW¼ of Section 11, in Township 12 S, R. 34 E. M. D. M. Thence North-easterly across the vacant land in said Section 11, Twp. 12 S. R. 34 E. M. D. M. to the bridge on County Road at Black Rock Slough, accepted and Joseph Seeley, County Surveyor, W. M. Wills and John Alexander were appointed viewers to examine and report upon said proposed new road.

Petition of Geo. W. Huckaby for private road in road District No. 1 laid over until next regular meeting.

Board adjourned until 1 o'clock p. m. at which hour reconvened, all members present as before.

Chairman Fitzgerald presiding.

Ordered, that the monthly allowance of $10 per month heretofore granted to Emelie Thiebeaut indigent be discontinued on and after the month of July, 1895.

Ordered, that the allowance of $40 a quarter heretofore granted Kepler be raised to $20 per month and that the County Auditor draw his warrent monthly on the Hospital Fund in favor of A. C Freeman for the care and support of Mrs. Keppler, also further ordered, in addition to the foregoing allowance she shall be allowed the sum of $13 for extra care required during the past two months and that the Auditor draw his warrant on the Hospital Fund in same amount in favor of A. C. Freeman.

Petition and report of Road Viewers of proposed new road in Road District No. 3 heretofore continued, Ordered, laid over until next regular meeting for want of Funds

Whereas a certain road in Road District No. 3 County of Inyo, State of California, has been laid out and erected by D. Campbell deceased and by F. Reinhakel and by them dedicated and abandoned to the public and the same has been traveled by the public worked and used as a highway for more than 20 years which said road is described as follows to wit: A public road running East on Section line between Sections 21 & 22 on South and Sections 16 & 17 on North side in Township No. 9 South, Range 34 East, M. D. M. to and across Owens River to the South-east cerner of Section 16 over lands of Reinakle ½ mile, Mrs. Walker ½ mile, Roberts ¼ mile, and R. Blake ¾ mile on the South side and the Campbell estate ½ mile and J. C. Crocker 1 & ½ mile on the North side and 25 feet wide.

Now; Therefore the said road is hereby declared a public highway for the use of all persons, and to be worked and improved as by law provided in such cases.

Reports of Road Commissioners on file were examined and approved as follows:

Commissioner F. Shaw, Road Dist. No. 1
" A. C. Freeman, " " " 2
" J. R. Eldred, " " " 3
" J. J. Stewart, " " " 4
" F. Fitzgerald, " " " 5

Claim of A. C. Freeman, hauling stone for embankment of bridge across Owens River East of Bishop allowed on Bridge Fund in sum of $ 60 00

Claim of J. R. Eldred for repairing bridge at Black Rock and Symmes Creek allowed on Bridge Fund in sum of $ 8 00

Board adjourned to meet Wednesday, July 10, 1895, at 8 o'clock a. m.

FRANK FITZGERALD,
Attest: D. J. HESSION, Chairman.
Clerk.

WEDNESDAY, July 10. 1895.
8 o'clock a. m.

Board of Supervisors of the County of Inyo, State of California met at above stated time pursuant to adjournment.

Present, Supervisors Shaw, Freeman, Eldred, Stewart and Chairman Fitzgerald presiding.

Minutes of preceding meeting read and approved.

Petition of citizens of Big Pine and vicinity praying for a new road north of Big Pine ordered returned for correction.

Claim of George T. Rives against Road District No. 4 for lumber and labor repairing bridge across Invo Canal laid over until next regular meeting.

Communication of P. A. Chalfant relative to Maps and Plat Books ordered laid over until next regular meeting.

Claims and vouchers of Road Commissioners were examined and allowed as follows:

Frank Shaw, Road Dist. No. 1 Fund	$19 17
A. C. Freeman, Road Dist. No. 2 Fund	96 73
J. R. Eldred, Road Dist. No. 3 Fund	111 10
J. J. Stewart, Road Dist. No. 4 Fund	111 33
F. Fitzgerald, Road Dist. No. 5 Fund	89 50

The following claims for per diem and mileage of members of Board of Supervisors were presented, examined, approved by the District Attorney and warrents therefore ordered drawn on the Salary Fund as follows:

Frank Shaw	$62 40
A. C. Freeman	60 00
J. R. Eldred	56 40
J. J. Stewart	52 80
F. Fitzgerald	68 40

Adjourned for the term.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent For

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave,
WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS
at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeler,
MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS
at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER,
Propr.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS. WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
0-m RENO, NEVADA

SUEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, "DRESDEN" WARE.

The newest Style of Fashionable Clothing Dry Goods, Ladies' Wears, etc., etc at

L. WOOD CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get the
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

BIG 10P. ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, on the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

INDEPENDENCE
MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

☞ arties supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.
j19-tf

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

☞ Buyers and consumers would call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere

E. CHENOT.
Independence, Cal. March 9 1894.
j194tf

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE, INYO Co. Cal.

Dealer in
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies

PROVISIONS

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

BELL'S Flouring Mills

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

U. S. Gov't Baking Powder Tests.

THE report of the analyses of Baking Powders, made by the U. S. Government (Chemical Division, Ag'l Dep't), shows the Royal superior to all other powders, and gives its leavening strength and the strength of each of the other cream of tartar powders tested as follows:

	LEAVENING GAS.
	Per cent.	Cubic in. per oz.
ROYAL, Absolutely Pure,	13.06	160.6
ALL OTHER POWDERS TESTED are reported to contain both lime and sulphuric acid, and the best of them to be of the following strengths respectively,	12.58	151.1
	11.13	133.6
	10.26	123.2
	9.53	114.
	9.29	111.6
	8.03	96.5
	7.28	87.4

These tests, made in the Gov't Laboratory, by impartial and unprejudiced official chemists, furnish the highest evidence that the "Royal" is the best baking powder.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL ST., NEW-YORK.

Alhambry Jane's Wedding Outing

By MARY KYLE DALLAS.

My sakes, what a yell follered. Over went the cream. Smash went the saucer. Away went the spoon.

"Oh! oh! oh!" screamed somebody. Who it was Nep couldn't say, only it wasn't Alhambry; some other woman. "Help! Murder! Murder! Murder!" Next minute the room was full of folks. There was a fat lady in a big pink wrapper screaming with her eyes shut, and Nep in the middle of a crowd that wanted explanations.

"I thought she was my wife," says Nep. Couldn't think of anything else to say.

"He tried to poison me," says the fat lady; "put something in my mouth that burnt me."

"'Twarn't only ice cream," said Nep. "Tell you I thought it was my wife, and I was feeding her for fun."

Well, there was the ice cream and saucer on the floor to prove it; and, come to see, Nep had looked at the number on his key upside down, and had took 6 for 9, as a waiter explained. But the fat lady wouldn't believe him, and she just stood and called Nep everything that was dreadful, until Alhambry, hearing the noise, came running out of her room and took his part.

Seemed to him then, he said, as if his cup was full and runnin over, for when Alhambry has been crying her face puffs up most miraculous, and she looked like she was a most a dreadful inebriation.

Finally he just yanked Alhambry back to their room by her arm, and an old gentleman that had sat all the while on the stairs and smoked—most probably the fat lady's husband—he tended to her the same way, and all was carm again. But it was long before them poor critters slumbered. If they thought their trials was over they wus mistook; they was only just begun.

They didn't wake up until eleven o'clock next day, and then Neptune was as solemn as a screech owl. He wouldn't talk none, and he wouldn't go nowhere, and after awhile Alhambry got tired of it, and went to takin her things out of the trunk and puttin them inty the beaury. All of a sudden she screched out:

"Why, Nep!"

"Well?" says he.

"I've found out what pa wanted to tell me about this trunk," says she.

"Ah," says he.

"There's a flap in it," says she. "A kind of secret hiding place. Oh, Nep!"

"Well," says Nep.

"There's a pocketbook full of money here," says she. "Pa has hid it to surprise us. How kind and good. Nep, there's two hundred dollars, all in new five dollar notes."

"If there is, it's not yours," says Nep.

"Why, pa put it there to surprise us," says Alhambry. "You don't know how good and thoughtful he is yet."

"Alhambry," says Neptune, "you're just guessing. Like as not your pa has left it by mistake, or it may belong to somebody else. Don't calculate it's yours."

"Oh, I'm sure," says Alhambry, "and I'm going out to spend it all."

"Alhambry," says Nep, "as your husband, I forbid you to spend a cent of that money until you've written home to inquire."

"I don't need to inquire," says Alhambry. "Pa put it here fur me; a wedding present."

"Why, it is as plain as the nose on your face, Nep."

"Mine is pretty plain jest now," said Nep. "Worse than my red hair." Then he went to the glass and stared contemplative at himself. "I am a sight for a wedding tower!" says he.

"Oh, you look good enough," says Alhambry. But he was gloomy again, and pretty soon he went out. They'd had breakfast. Then Alhambry took the pocketbook to the windy and looked over it. It was quite an old one, but the bills was new and crisp as cowcumbers. There was some old papers in the divisions. Scraps cut out. All dated at the time her pa wus in Washington.

The spinsterhood looks at her and looks at the pocketbook.

Now down into her secret soul that girl was aweer that bein as it was her pa, he might hev left his head in that trunk, let alone his pocketbook, and never knowed nothin about it no mor'n ef he hadn't done it. Not a grain, but she didn't want to believe it, and she shoved it to one side.

"Pa wanted to surprise me," said she, "and I'll write him a letter sayin how thankful I be and how I've enjoyed spendin it." And then she put on her things and went out feelin richer than she ever did in all her born days before. As I told you, the money was all in five dollar bills, forty of 'em, real handy to spend. And she bought challys for her gown, and lace for her cape, and lots of presents for home folks, and Neptune a smoking jacket and cap; and everything she bought she had sent home to the hotel to "Mrs. Neptune Belcher," only some candies, real splendid ones that they put in a paper box for her, where she took some sody and ice cream into a confectory.

There was a real sharp featured spinsterhood behind the cash desk in that confectory, Alhambry says, and when she handed her the bill—havin nothin else, fur she spent the change as fast as she got it—that spinsterhood pitched a glance at her that wus like a kerving knife.

"Ain't you got nothin smaller?" says she, as short and snappish as you please.

"No, ma'am," says Alhambry, who was fetched up to be polite, and if others wasn't to illude it to their ignorance. "No, ma'am, ef I hed I'd have offered it, seein as I ain't traded fur no great quantity, and I know stores is generally short of change."

"H—m," says the spinsterhood, "you've got other money there."

"Yes, ma'am," says Alhambry, taking back the five and giving her another. "They're all alike though."

The spinsterhood looks at her and looks at the pocketbook, and then she beckons to a boy with a tray and whispers to him:

"Just step this way ef you please," says she, opening the door of a back parlor, "we kin be quieter here."

Alhambry felt she meant to be real polite, but she says:

"I'd jest as lieve wait here, thank you."

But the spinsterhood says, like she'd bite her head off:

"I'd a little ruther you'd sit there."

Seemed as ef Alhambry couldn't say no, and 'twasn't polite not to be willin to visit a little, however sharp folkses noses and voices was, ef they invited you so persistent. So she went in and the spinster says, "Set down." So she sot.

"It's real pleasant this morning," says Alhambry.

"Glad you find it so," says the woman.

"We've had plenty of rain," says Alhambry. "And I juss hope it will stay clear while we're travelin about."

"Mebbe you won't travel quite as fast as you expect to," says the woman, looking fust at her bonnet and then at her shoes, and sniffing.

Now, Alhambry is quite a reader, and among the stories she'd read was one of a traveler that came to a wayside tavern and was onprudent enough to take out his pocketbook and let 'em see how much money he had, and that night, after he had gone to bed, he heerd noises and suspicionated suthin another, and got up and hid in a corner, and lo and behold! a trap under the bed opened and it disappeared. 'Twas a den of murderers, and travelers was their prey. I forget how it ends, but it couldn't have been wrote unless he jumped out of the window and so escaped. But all these dreadful facts rose up before Alhambry Jane. She had showed her money too free; she'd been illured into this back parlor fur to be done away with. Like as not there was a trap under her chair. Never since she wus born had she been so deadly scared, and uttering a screech, she jumped up and ran fur the door.

"Stop!" says the spinsterhood, but Alhambry wouldn't stop. She rushed through the store and out into the street, and up that street she flowed, the spinsterhood at her heels.

"Murder!" screams Alhambry.

"Stop thief!" screams the woman, and a couple of men jest saved Alhambry from bein run over by a butcher's wagon as two policemen appeared upon the scene of conflict with drawed clubs.

I said when I began this here heart-rending noration that Alhambry's wedding outing was an awful trying one. I shan't attempt to give no description of the feelings of a lady of such delicate sensitudes on being marched like a Fourth of July procession up Broadway, her big hairpin lost and her hair down her back, one sleeve pulled out and her gathers ripped and most of the York folks follerin on behind.

When they arrived at the station house and she was marched in, her only comfort was that the spinsterhood was there, too, and she had a false front and it had got crooked. She couldn't look at her for horror, but she felt safe from bein murdered. Next thing she knew she was made to go up before a desk, and a gentleman—most probable a legal lawyer—was asking all their names, and saying to the spinsterhood:

"Do you make a charge against this woman?"

And the spinisterhood was answering:

"Yes, sir. She passed this counterfeit bill on us, and she's got others of the same kind with her. I've no doubt she's one of a gang sent out to flood the city with 'em. Minute I saw her I knew what she was. I've seen that kind, mimeny, pimeny. Butter wouldn't melt in their mouths, you'd think, till you found 'em out."

"Silence," says somebody.

"Why, you dreadful thing!" put in Alhambry. "How can you talk so? I thought you took me into the back parlor to rob and murder me. I believe you did. I've read all about such places. That money can't be counterfeit. It's as new as can be."

"Silence!" says somebody again.

"Be quiet, be quiet!" says the legal lawyer. "If you did not knew the money was counterfeit and can tell me where it came from and who gave it to you, it will be all right."

Alhambry looked at him, an awful thought arisin in her mind.

"If I tell where it came from," said she, "what would you do with the person that gave it to me?"

"He would be punished according to law," said the legal lawyer. "Speak up!"

"No," says Alhambry. "Take me away and put me into a dungeon, for never will I reveal the name!"

I know that gal, and I know the sperrit of the christened martyrs rose in her buzzum when she thought of her poor pa dragged from his home and suffering in a prison.

"No," says she to herself, "far better for all the family that it should be me."

So she says "Never" more determined than before, and folds her arms.

"It's some man," says the spinsterhood; "her kind is always connected with some man."

"Silence," says somebody.

"Your kind mostly ain't," says Alhambry.

Ef it had been her dying gasp she'd have had to say it.

Somebody says "Silence" again.

"Who gave you that money to pass? You had better tell the truth, young woman," says the judge.

"Tortures couldn't drag it from me," says Alhambry Jane. Nummore it couldn't, nor if they had used racks and thumbscrews, like they did in Fox's martyrs. I know that gal. Before I commenced norating this afflictive tale I didn't know my talons; but now I feel I have 'em. I perceed to envelope a more literary style of writing, and you mustn't be surprised when I say the plot begins to jell. That's better than "thicken;" seems to me newer too.

But Alhambry wus lookin closer, and she knowed her spouse at last.

Where all this time were Neptune Belcher? Alas, the shadder of misfortune's ebon wing had likewise fell onto him, darkening for the present all his life. Nep left the hotel that mornin sort of mad. Men is as vain as women, come to know 'em good. And he was thinking of his hair. 'Twas curly and a real lively red and become him, but he felt to wish it was black. What he'd went out for was to find Captain Peeler and give him his watch and great-granper's messages, but walkin down Broadway he noticed a hairdresser's store, with a sign, "Hair dyed artistic" into the winder, and he stopped and looked at the figgerhead revolvin slow and solemn, with black curls and mustachers onto it, and seemed to him ef he looked like that he should feel more sure of Alhambry Jane's affections. That's what he paid it onto, anyhow. So he jest stepped in and asked kinder carless, as ef it was more of a joke than anything else, ef red hair took black dye good? And they told him, "Splendid." Next thing he was in a back room, with a looking glass and a big chair, all wrapped up in a sheet, being done black. When they got through he stood amazed.

He had jetty tresses and long black mustachers with waxed ends. His side whiskers wus shaved off, and the whole confirmation of his physmahogany was altered; what, with his nose being yet swelled twice its size, he didn't know himself.

"I hope my wife will be pleased now," he sez, kinder doubtful.

"She will be sharm," sez the barber, who wus furrin. Neptune wusn't quite so sure, and it seemed tu him dyin come expensive, fur his bill was seven dollars and forty-two cents, but he chickered up as he went along. Seemed to him the ladies looked at him mor'n customary, and everybody likes to be detractive, and he was walkin along with his head in the air when who should he see but Captain Peeler trottin up street at a great rate, bound to get there, wherever it was.

"Hello!" says Nep, but the captain didn't hear, and off Nep sets at a great rate. He and the captain always skylarked when they met, and never thinking how he'd changed his looks, Nep no sooner catches up to him than he grabs his watch chain, jest fur to skeer him and hollers out:

"Hullo! You don't wear your watch no more, captain!"

Next minute down he went kersmack onto the pavement, and the captain stood over him with his big knob headed cane, yelling, "Perlice! perlice!"

"Why, cap! cap!" says Nep. "Don't you know me, cap?"

"No! Nur don't wan't to," says Captain Peeler. And there was Nep in the middle of a crowd, a perlice clutchin his collar and sayin:

"Hullo! What's up?"

"The fellow attacked me," says the captain, "and my watch is gone. See, it's unhitched from the chain."

"This it?" says the officer, pullin the captain's watch, that Great-granper Rusk had give him to give the captain, from Neptune's pocket.

"That's it," said the captain. He was nigh about as abstractive as Alhambry's pa, and hadn't missed it before. You see it didn't go, and he just wore it to show off. "That's it," says he. "I wouldn't hev lost it for no money, and twas a co-inside-ants that harf an hour after Alhambry wus walked into the station house round one corner, Neptune wus walked into it round the other.

Now, ef I could sackerfice the truth to literary effecks I should say that as soon as Neptune sot eyes upon Alhambry Jane, he exclaimed in mingled horror and delight:

"Heavens! Do I behold my newly wedded bride! What strange mischance has fetched thee hither, my Alhambry?" but he didn't.

What he did say wus:

"Thunder! that's my wife!"

"Is that your husband?" says the legal lawyer, speaking sudden to Alhambry. "He says he is."

"That my husband!" says Alhambry, turning and looking, fur as she knew, at a stranger. "That Eyetalian with wax ends to his mustaches! No; I wouldn't hev had him ef he was the only man left after the deluge." Despair had riz Alhambry's temper, and she spoke short. Now, though Captain Peeler hadn't reckynised Neptune, he knowed Alhambry at once.

"Why, Alhambry Jane," says he, "you here? Why, my lands! That's what that feller there's been tellin me. How't he was Neptune Belcher, as if I didn't know Nep. Turn up nose, red hair, side whiskers considerable redder. Why, I've just had that feller arrested for stealing my watch. Nep no more'd have stole my watch than nothin."

But Alhambry wus lookin closer, and she knowed her spouse at last.

"Oh, cappen!" says she, "it is Neptune; it is he. He's been dyin of his hair and shavin off his whiskers, but my heart reckernises him through all," says she. "What do you mean by stealin your watch? You left it tu our house. Great-granper Rusk gave it to Nep to fetch to you."

"Wall, I want to know," said the captain. "Why, 'tis Nep Belcher. What a thunderin fool I be! He come up runnin. I didn't know him from a crow and he shouted out, 'You ain't wearin no watch nowadays,' and he grabbed my chain, and I took him for a thief and knocked him down. Hadn't missed my watch, so when 'twas found in his pocket, what was I to think? Why, Nep, old boy, you and me has skylarked so often too. Why, I deserve to be keelhauled, and you on your wedding outing too. Did you see us and run arter us, Alhambry, or how was it?"

"Nuthin shall make me tell," says Alhambry; "go away and leave me to my fate."

"If you are that young woman's husband perhaps you can tell us how she comes by these counterfeit notes?" said the legal lawyer. "You seem to be respectable people. I'm anxious to be lenient, but your disguising yourself so your friends don't know you is suspicious, and I mean to sift this matter to the bottom."

"I alone am guilty," says Alhambry. "Take me, but spare the innocent."

"Here's a note I got from home, just as I was goin out, that explains it all," says Neptune. "I read it in the barber's while I was waitin to be dyed—more fool me—ef you'll cast your eye over that, jedge, I reckon you'll see we ain't nefarious characters." And the legal lawyer he took the note, and this is what he read into it:

DEAR SON-IN-LAW—I take up my pen to write you a few lines. There is something of importance concerning your Great-grandfather Rusk's old hair trunk that I ought to have communicated before I left, but I didn't remember what it was until the last minute.

Your mother-in-law is the best woman living, but she has a way of saying "I told you so," and because now and then things of greater importance make me forget lesser ones she thinks I'm continually woolgathering.

I remember once when I came home and said to her, said I, "Eliza, I can't think what all the folks are going to and from, up and down the town in their best clothes, and not a customer all day." She said, said she:

"Zebedee, ef I had knowed the time would come when you'd open up the store on Sunday and never know it, the folks all goin by to church and wonderin and thinkin you'd backslided to an extent unknown before in this county, I'd never have had you." That severe remark rankled, my son, so I'd rather your ma-in-law wouldn't know.

"This has no bearing on the case," says the legal lawyer.

"Read on and you'll find it has," says Neptune, and he went on:

What I've got to say about the old hair trunk is there is a secret hiding place in it; in that are some bank notes. If Alhambra finds them, tell her to burn them. I've meant to do so myself for years. They are counterfeit. When I was in Washington I wanted to cash a check and couldn't get identified at the bank; but I met a nice young man in the street who told me he'd cash it and welcome. He did. Those notes are what he gave me. I never mentioned it to your ma-in-law, and kindly request you to do likewise. My love to Alhambra. Don't get into dissipated habits down in the city, but remember the teaching of our pastor and your excellent parents. Yours affectionately, YOUR FATHER-IN-LAW.

"It seems genuine," says the judge.

"I'll swear to it, jedge," says the captain, handing his card to the legal lawyer. "I know the family, and I know the trunk."

"And after this perhaps you'll think your husband's advice is worth attending to," says Neptune to Alhambry, as they hooked arms, rejoicing that they was free once more.

The captain got a cab, and they went back to the tavern.

Alhambry says I'd orter call it the hotel. And there wus all the people Alhambry had bought things of, waitin with their passles, and to have other money give 'em instead of them counterfeits, and Neptune sot and paid out till he hadn't a red cent left. Then the captain loaned 'em enough to get home to Alhambry's pa's with.

The feelin's of the family on seein Neptune is beyond my power of descriptioness, but they agreed with him that it was best that he shouldn't shew himself until his hair dye had wore off and his bruises and confusions was healed sum. So he and Alhambry lived up garret fur six weeks, and Great-granper Rusk use ter read 'loud to 'em to cheer 'em up out of "Parson Tompkins' Sermons," and old "Dr. Black's Family Medicine," and the almanac, addin to their trials considerable.

The only exercise they had was going out to walk after the solemn hour of half-past eleven, when honest folks wus all abed, and once or twice got took for spooks by the tipsy folks goin home late.

Alhambry said the greatest trial she had was bein congratulated on having had such a lovely outing.

"A gre't long honeymoon like Alhambry's must be splendid," the gals said, and when she warn't round they used to wonder she didn't look no better for it. But my, it's all over, and they've gone to housekeeping and had twins and chills since. And all is well that ends well, if only a body thinks so.

THE END.

Soothing.

Doctor—Your husband, madam, is suffering from nervous prostration.

Madam—Yes, sir.

Doctor—And he needs something to quiet him. What is his business?

Madam—He is a waiter, sir.

Doctor—Well, slip a few pence into his hand every two hours during the night, and I'll call again in the morning. Good day.—London Tit-Bits.

The Mississquoi, in Vermont, took its name from the abundance of waterfowl. The word means "many ducks."

EXTRAORDINARY!

WAS THIS OCCURRENCE.

Not Merely Relief from an Insignificant Ailment, But a Human Life Involved.

The newsgatherer on his daily search for items of interest often comes across happenings of more than passing note. It was during a recent conversation with Mr. A. H. Cransby, the well-known commercial traveler, with the Cochran Lumber Company, that a reporter of the "Commercial" learned of a wonderful case. Mr. Cransby is well known in Memphis and surrounding country, and now resides at 158 Kerr street.

"Just ten years ago," said he, "my wife noticed a small lump in her breast. She thought nothing of it, but it increased in size rapidly, and soon broke through the skin, and commenced to discharge. She was put under treatment of the best physicians, but they very soon found that they could do her no good, and simply prescribed antiseptics to keep the place clean. Both her grandmother and aunt, by the way, had died with cancer, and when apprised of this fact, the doctors told me that they would not attempt to save her; that she was incurable. Although the cancer had by this time become deep seated, and her health very low, I had one of the most noted specialists of New York to treat her. After treating her awhile, this doctor admitted that the case was hopeless and further treatment useless. It is difficult to imagine how despondent we all became, knowing that she must die, and unable to give her any relief. I had spent over five hundred dollars with the best medical skill to be had, and felt that there was no further hope.

"One day I happened to read an advertisement of S. S. S., recommending that remedy for cancer, and in view of the failure of the most eminent physicians in the country, I confess I had little faith left in any human agency. However, I purchased a bottle of S.S.S. and to my delight, it seemed to benefit her; after she had taken a couple of bottles, the cancer began to heal, and astonishing as it may seem, a few bottles more cured her entirely. You can probably better understand how remarkable this cure was, when I explain that the cancer had eaten two holes in the breast two inches deep. These healed up entirely and although ten years have elapsed, not a sign of the disease has ever returned, and we are assured of the permanence of the cure, which we at first doubted.

"I certainly regard S. S. S. as the most wonderful remedy in the world, and it is truly a God-send to those afflicted with this terrible disease. Yes sir," he concluded, "you may be sure that I shall always be grateful to that remedy, for without it my home would now be desolate and my children motherless."—Memphis, Tenn., Commercial.

Mrs. Anna Annabel at Chicago, shot and killed her husband and then committed suicide. The tragedy was the result of jealousy on the part of Mrs. Annabel, because of the alleged attention shown by her husband for a young woman of Davenport, Ia. who had nursed him through an illness contracted while he was on a visit a short time ago to his parents, who live in Iowa City. Mr. Annabel was janitor of the Nyack flat building on Ellis avenue.

A Detroit man committed suicide because his first attempt at baking bread proved a failure. The "new man" doesn't start out well.—Chicago Dispatch.

I use Piso's Cure for Consumption both in my family and practice.—DR. G. W. PATTERSON, Inkster, Mich., Nov. 5, 1894.

The population of the world averages 100 women to every 100 men. Eight-ninths of the sudden deaths are those of males.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

Dr. PIERCE'S PLEASANT PELLETS

CURE SICK HEADACHE, BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, POOR APPETITE, and all derangements of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels. Of all druggists.

ONCE USED — ALWAYS IN FAVOR.

S FOR CURES SCROFULA, BLOOD POISON.

S THE CURES CANCER, ECZEMA, TETTER.

S BLOOD

S. F. N. U. No. 677. New Series No. 24.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

HOITT'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

Ira G. Hoitt, Ph. D., Master at Burlingame, San Mateo county, Cal., is one of the best schools for boys on the Pacific Coast.

The first lucifer matches were made by John Walker, at Stockton, England, in April, 1827.

LIKE A SIEVE.

The chief function of the kidneys is to separate from the blood, in its passage through them, of certain impurities and watery particles which make their final exit through the bladder. The retention of these, in consequence of inactivity of the kidneys, is productive of Bright's disease, dropsy, diabetes, albuminuria and other maladies with a fatal tendency. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a highly sanctioned diuretic and blood depurent, impels the kidneys when inactive to renew their sifting function and strain from the vital current impurities which infest it and threaten their own existence as organs of the body. Catarrh of the bladder, gravel and retention of the urine are also maladies arrested or averted by this benign promoter and restorative of organic action. Malaria, rheumatism, constipation, biliousness and dyspepsia also yield to the Bitters, which is also speedily beneficial to the weak and nervous.

When the skin of a Japanese orange is removed, the sections fall apart in acceptable mouthfuls.

HOW'S THIS!

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligation made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Price, 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists. Testimonials free.

The bubbles in champagne are caused by the liquid carbonic acid evolving into carbonic acid gas.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

I PRIZE HOOD'S

Sarsaparilla more than any remedy I have ever taken. I have never been robust and was subject to severe headaches, and had no appetite. Since taking and Hood's Pills I am a well woman, have a good appetite and sleep well. I cordially recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla.—MRS. S. M. GORHAM, Fillmore House, Fillmore, California.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills, biliousness, headache. 25c.

DIRECTIONS for using CREAM BALM.—Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostrils. After a moment draw strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages. Allays Pain and Inflammation. Heals the Sores. Protects the Membrane from Colds. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents, at Druggists, or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY, which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

FIRE-WORKS!

BUY DIRECT from the only MANUFACTURERS on the Coast. We make a specialty of 4th July displays. Send for Catalogue.

CALIFORNIA FIREWORKS CO.
219 Front Street, San Francisco.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP - FOR CHILDREN TEETHING - For sale by all Druggists, 25 cents a bottle.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. WOODS & Co's.
"CASTLEWOOD" KENTUCKY BOURBON
CARTAN, McCARTHY & Co.
SOLE AGENTS, AND DISTRIBUTORS
SAN FRANCISCO

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE. FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

YOUNG MAN YOU CAN MAKE MONEY BALING hay with a good Hay Press. Write us for information.

WOMAN BICYCLES—We sell all the best first-class Bicycles. Write for Catalogue.

I. J. TRUMAN & CO., 236 Bush Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Please mention this Paper when writing.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS

A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business. 48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc. AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

★ ASK YOUR DRUGGIST FOR ★

IMPERIAL GRANUM

IT IS ★ THE BEST ★ FOOD FOR NURSING MOTHERS, INFANTS AND CHILDREN

★ JOHN CARLE & SONS, New York. ★

WALTER BAKER & CO.

The Largest Manufacturers of PURE, HIGH GRADE COCOAS AND CHOCOLATES On this Continent, have received HIGHEST AWARDS from the great Industrial and Food EXPOSITIONS In Europe and America.

Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or other Chemicals or Dyes are used in any of their preparations. Their delicious BREAKFAST COCOA is absolutely pure and soluble, and costs less than one cent a cup.

...ERS EVERYWHERE.

...STER, MASS.

"A FAIR FACE MAY PROVE A ... GAIN." MARRY A PLAIN GIRL IF ...

SAPOLIO

MALARIA! DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY. Three doses only. Try it.

Hercules

GAS OR GASOLINE

Engines

Workmanship the very best.
Always Ready, a boy can start them
No double or false explosions.
They Oil Themseves

A FEW USES TO WHICH THE HERCULES CAN BE PUT:

For Wood-working Machinery.
For Bean-cleaning Machinery.
For Hoisting-works in Mines.
Running Machine Shops.
Running Shoe Factories.
Bottling Soda Water.
Sawing Cord-wood.
Running Churns.
Sawing Lumber.
Pumping Water.
Running Elevators.
Running Paint Mills.
Running Electric Motors.
For Printing Machinery.
Running Sewing Machines.
For Electric Light Dynamos.
Running Ice-cream Freezers
For Carpe-beating Machinery.

ADDRESS:
PALMER & REY
405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal.

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, JULY 19, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVII. NO. 5. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JULY 19. 1895. WHOLE NO. 1290.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$1.00
Six Months	200
Three Months	125
One Month	50
Single Copies	.10

A GREAT HOLE.

The Feature of the Next Paris Exhibition.

FROM ARCTIC ZONE TO TROPIC.

Ingenious Methods of Making the Hole Attractive—Where Tropical Heat May Be Found.

A great hole a mile in depth will be the most striking feature of the next Paris Exposition. It has been held essential that the exposition should have a central attraction as original and grotesque as the Eiffel Tower. Many will see a singular appropriateness in making the new feature exactly the opposite of the last.

The idea of making the deep pit is that of M. Paschal Grousset, a Deputy for Paris. His plan has been approved by the exposition authorities. Its great merit is that it will throw light on various problems of scientific interest, as well as excite the curiosity of visitors in an unparalleled way.

The hole will be altogether more remarkable than the Eiffel Tower. It will of course be many times deeper than that was high. The tower only enabled people to get a view of Paris, which was equaled, if not surpassed, by that to be had from Montmartre. Almost everybody who had gone up in a balloon or ascended a mountain had been to a greater height than the top of the Eiffel Tower. How many people have descended a mile into the earth? It is of course very fitting that the next exposition should show such an advance on the last.

The preliminary work will consist in the boring of eight vertical shafts, each beginning where the other ends. Two passenger elevators will afterwards be run in each shaft. There will be a gallery at the lower end of each.

Scientific investigation has shown that the temperature below the earth's surface falls slightly, as the effects of solar and atmospheric influence are weakened, until a depth of about sixty feet is reached. Below that it rises gradually at the rate of about one degree in seventy-five feet. The theory commonly accepted is that the increase of temperature continues to the centre of the earth, which is in a molten condition.

It has been calculated that the boiling point would be reached 10,000 feet below the surface. In the Parisian experiment the boring could be continued below the passenger shaft in order to test this theory. In any case, a temperature at least tropical is expected at the bottom of the pit.

Let us consider the details of this scheme from the point of view of the curious visitor, and learn what he may hope to see in Paris in 1900. This explanation will co operate with the luminous illustration published here in setting forth the wonders of this journey.

Before bidding farewell to the light of the sun we m[illegible] rface attractions o[illegible] will be the h[illegible] far greater [illegible] ba[illegible] and dry the Eiffel [illegible]l be [illegible]w possible to [illegible]n on the first [illegible] find solar climate [illegible]velous natural phenomena [illegible] north will be represented. [illegible] scene[illegible] will be laid on the site of the North Pole. The midnight sun will light it. There will be stuffed polar bears, seals, icicles, icebergs, a reindeer and an Esquimau sleigh, with its pack of dogs. It is probable that there are no Esquimaux near the Pole, but that is only an apparent inconsistency, as various Arctic regions are represented. Cold beer and iced drinks, not always easy to obtain in Paris, will be provided. The low temperature will, of course, be produced by artificial means.

The light throughout the shaft will be electrical. It is proposed to ventilate it thoroughly from top to bottom by an elaborate mechanism.

On the next and second gallery the visitor will find a startling contrast. The gallery and adjacent chambers are to be devoted to the amusements of all nations. This will be a most catholic gathering.

The third gallery will be given up to smokers. Here it will be possible to use tobacco in all of the principal ways known to the nations of the earth, and it is not probable that French public morality will forbid indulgence in opium.

At any rate you will be able to smoke cigars, cigarettes and pipes; Virginian tobacco, Cuban tobacco, Mexican tobacco, Brazilian tobacco, Turkish tobacco, and many other kinds. It is to be hoped that this scheme wil have the effect of elevating French taste in tobacco.

Rooms will be furnished appropriately for every form of indulgence. He who wishes to try the Persian nargileh and inhale the mild fumes of Latakieh after they have been cooled by rose-sented water may do so, seated on Oriental cushins.

The fourth gallery will lead to a series of restaurants of different nations. A bewildering variety of foods will be served, from the pie of North America to the edible dogs and birds' nests of China. Do not think this reference to pie a stale witticism, for it is a dish practically unknown to the French, and will be a revelation to them.

About the fifth gallery there will be an exhibition of mining industries. Reproductions of characteristic portions of lead, coal, iron, silver and other mines will be constructed. The tunnels, pockets and other pecularities of deep mines will enable the designers to produce some very curious effects. The sixth stopping place in this journey of wonders will bring you to the bottom of the sea, though not to the bottom of the pit. The floor will be strewn with sand, studded with rocks and coral reefs. It will be an accurate reprduction of a portion of the sea's bottom.

By a skillful coloring of the air and other ingenious devices, it will be sought to produce on the visitor the illusion that he is walking, not only at the bottom of the sea, but in the water. Huge and strange fishes suspended from above will pass over his head. The devilfish, the sea elephant and the manatee will affright him. Divers in full costume at work among sponges and coral reefs will it is thought aid greatly in producing the illusion of being under the sea.

From this you will descend to a region of mineral springs which will undoubtedly be a very attractive and refreshing place.

The natural and gradual increase of temperature will be felt in the central shaft all the way down, but in the adjoining chambers it will be moderated according to convenience or the effect to be produced.

At the bottom, however, it is intended to give visitors an example of the temperature normally prevailing at the depth of a mile below the earth's surface. It is expected that this will equal that of the equator at midsummer.

Tropical scenery will be reproduced on an elaborate scale. There palms, patches of jungle, orchids, and many sensational features of equatorial vegetation will flourish. The zoology of the same latitude will be represented by tigers, pythons, huge butterflies, parrots and other highly colored creatures.

ARSENIC EATERS.

For many years the habit of arsenic eating by the people of Styria, a duchy of Austria, has been known to the scientific world. Travelers who have passed through Styria have come back with reports on this practice, saying that the people of that country were accustomed to taking a white mineral, which was arsenic.

That this was so was denied by many, who said that the mineral taken was nothing more nor less than chalk. There was much discussion over the matter, and the subject proved itself of such interest and importance that scientific societies took the question up and investigated it, and it was pretty well proven that such a usage did exist, but not so widespread as was generally supposed. Many physicians have gone there simply to investigate this practice of arsenic eating. While some of them have found out much about the custom, others have come away no wiser than they went, owing to the secrecy which exists among those addicted to the habit. As it is against the law to obtain arsenic without a prescription from a physician, of course those who do so are anxious to keep it quiet. There are also found among the peasants of Salzburg and Tyrol those who follow the same practice. In those regions several arsenic works are situated, and the only way the employes can stand the poisonous fumes is by taking the drug internally, at first in small doses and gradually increasing the dose until the system tolerates large quantities.

It is probably from these arsenic workers that the custom spread to others, principally to the lower classes, as hunters, wood cleavers, stable grooms and charcoal burners. All forms of arsenic are taken—the pure arsenic, the red sulphide, and the yellow sulphide or orpiment.

The arsenic eaters begin with a dose about the size of a pin's head, and increase this amount gradually until they are taking a piece about the size of a pea.

The habit is generally begun at the age of 15 and continued up to the ages of 70 and 75. The users of hidri, as arsenic is known among the peasants, are generally long lived people, but, unless at the age of 50 they commence to gradually discontinue the use of it, they invariably die a sudden death, and the fact that death occasionally occurs from poisoning by hidri eating shows that even the Styrians are not invincible to the deadly effects of this drug.

The reason for this custom is asserted by some to be for their personal appearance, but the fact that the habit exists principally among the male sex disproves this. It is said by the peasants themselves that it is done to make them strong and healthy, and they really are a strong and healthy people.

Enormous quantities of the drug are taken by some of them. In one well authenticated case the man, a manager of some arsenic works, took daily a dose of 23 grains, each dose large enough to kill several men unaccustomed to its use. Another strange thing about this case is, the man began it first by taking three grains, an amount which we would consider decidedly dangerous. On several occasions he attempted to leave off taking the drug, but was made violently ill, only to recover on resuming his usual allowance.—Washington Star.

Cæsar's Wife:—"You seem ill at ease, my lord. What vexes you?" Cæsar:—"I dreamed last night, Cornelia, that the American papers, 1900 years from now, after they had got tired of Napoleon Bonaparte, began printing a lot of fake stories about me."

"Ah," said the magazine reader, contemplating his friends' new baby. "Fine child. Is is a Napoleon or a Trilby?"—Cincinnati Tribune.

BROUGHT TO LIGHT.

Curious Archæological Discoveries of Recent Years.

FOOTPRINTS OF A BY GONE RACE.

A Sword of Ancient Chaldea—Stone Gods of the Aztecs—Treasures of the Dust—Buried Tombs.

Vast and wonderful are the treasures which the spade, that humble instrument of toil, has brought to light in recent years from the ruins of cities buried beneath the dust of many centuries—buried so deep and so long ago that their very names have passed out of the records of men, and even the learned antiquarians who study over the upturned relics of by-gone times are at a loss to know where or what the link may be connecting them with modern civilization. Stranger than the strangest fiction, and more marvelous than the dreams of the poets, are the discoveries made in the underworld by the busy, patient, plodding scientists of these modern days. It is a saying that of "human mold we reap our daily bread." So has been revealed to us by the archaeologist the equally startling fact that we are literally walking day by day upon the very tombs of a buried race of men. This is true even here in America, which we are wont to think of as a new country, a virgin land, whose whole history dates back only a few brief years. As a matter of sober and scientific fact, many of the richest and rarest archaeologist "finds" of recent years have been right here under our so called "primeval forests" and the "virgin soil" of our valleys and uplands.

It was only the other day, in a rock-hewn tomb down in Southern Mexico, that there was found a bronze and hammered iron sword, bearing on its blade and handle—in rich inlaying of silver characters of record and representation of life distinctively Assyrian and Grecian. The roughly hamered iron blade showed the crudity of the early days of the iron age, but the exquisite inlaying of silver on the bronze bore testimony to the cunning of the silversmiths who wrought the weapon. To all appearances, and according to the inscriptions, it was a royal arm, for on its ample hilt it bore in horizontal lines the crowned head of its evident wearer, while below, in cuneiform characters on the blade, were apparently the title and name of the sovereign. The sword and scabbard weighed twelve pounds, of which the sword alone represented two-thirds of the total. How a Chaldean sword could find its way into the tomb in Mexico is more than any one has been able to conjecture.

All over Central and Southern Mexico there are relics of a departed race whose annals antedate even those of the Aztecs. Antiquarians have endeavored to read their history in the stones of Tula, which was the old Toltec capital, now a place of ruins. Old Tula is now overgrown and half hidden from sight. San Juan Teotihuacan also is famous for its two great earthen pyraimds, which stand out on the plain a half mile apart. One of them was dedicated to the sun, the other to the moon. The earth for miles around is filled with small images—caritas—insomuch that it seems as if these ancient people spent most of their time in making them.

A marvelous story is that which comes from Arizona, where a few months ago some prospectors in the Bradshaw Mountains came upon a cliff dwellers' village in one of the most inaccessible canyons of that range, the largest village of the kind ever yet discovered. Several of the houses were explored and large quantities of pottery and some instruments, evidently used for cultivating the soil, were found. In one the skeleton of a man, not over four feet eight inches in height, was discovered. The canyon at this place is half a mile wide, and shows evidence of having been cultivated. If this theory proves to be true, it will throw more light on the habits of this little known people. So far as known no other evidence has ever been discovered of cliff dwellers having cultivated the soil.

An Austrian student, Herr Low, who has been traveling in Central America, has recently obtained and forwarded to the Imperial Museum in Vienna twelve large stone slabs bearing foot prints in the solid rock taken from the quarry over Lake Managua, in the territory of Nicaragua.

These footprints had been overlain by eleven different layers of stone, extending to a depth of four meters, and indicating an antiquity for our race quite transcending all conjectures hitherto hazarded. They are about three-quarters of a meter square and are sunk into the stone to a depth of from eight to ten centimeters. The footprints are said to be very conspicuous, and seem to be those of three distinct persons, one of whom was a child. To what race or what age they belonged no one yet has ventured to guess.

Curious and puzzling as anything brought to light in recent years was some ancient handiwork found not long ago in making excavations for a canal connecting lakes Eustis and Dora, in southern Florida. The first excavations revealed the existence of a clearly defined wall lying in a line tending toward the southwest, from where it was first struck. The wall was composed of a dark-brown sandstone, very much crumbled in places, but more distinct, more clearly defined and the stone more solid as the digging increased in depth. The wall was evidently the eastern side of an ancient home or fortification, as the slope of the outer wall was to the west. About eight feet from the slope of the eastern wall a mound of sand was struck, imbedded in the muck formation above and around it. This sand mound was dug into only a few inches, but enough was discovered to warrant the belief that here on the northwestern shore of Lake Dora is submerged a city or town or fortification older by centuries than anything yet discovered in this portion of Florida. Small, curiously shaped blocks of sandstone, some of them showing traces of fire, pieces of pottery, and utensils made of mottled flint, were thrown out by the men while working waist deep in water. One spear head of mottled flint, five and a half inches long by one and a-quarter inches wide, nicely finished, was taken from the top of the sand mound and about four feet below the water level of the lake.

But in no part of this country, perhaps, has so many valuable "finds" been made as in the Territory of New Mexico. All this region seems to have been thickly peopled ages ago by a highly civilized race. On the highest point of the great Potrero de las Vacas of New Mexico are the most remarkable prehistoric relics that have been discovered, being no less than the gods sculptured in stone that were worshiped by the ancients. These are the statues of mountain lions carved from a volcanic rock. The images are enclosed in a rude and almost circular stone wall, in a space fifty feet in circumference, three feet in height, with an entrance projected eighteen feet toward the southeast three feet wide. The lions face directly toward the east, are two in number, separated by a space of twelve inches, and are each six feet in length, and represent a puma or mountain lion in the act of crouching for a spring. The heads of these statues are almost entirely destroyed, showing plainly the marks of the pious hammer that sought their overthrow. The legs, body and tails of the animal are better preserved, and constitute the remains of the most remarkable stone images set up for pagan worship in the territory of the United States. To these gods the Cochita Indians of the present day pay homage.

Turning now to the old world, we have to note some interesting discoveries made recently by the "men of the spade." One of these was of Planella-Setteiminin, near Pompeii, on the property of a certain M. Vincent de Prosco. A house has been unearthed that was covered at the time the city was buried, and it is said to be in a more perfect condition than any building yet discovered. It contains several large apartments, and three ball rooms, with the basins in sculptured marble, and with leaden pipes ornamented with bronze faucets. The three rooms correspond, says a writer, in describing the discovery, to the "calidarium, tepidarium and the frigidarium, which were always to be found in ancient houses of the first class. In consequence of the eruption in A. D. 79, the Pompeiian houses brought to light heretofore have been of little value from an archaeological point of view. Fortunately, however, that on the property of M. de Prosco is perfect, and archaeologists are happy over the fact. The roof measures over forty-four feet in length."

A Roman villa has been discovered near Barding, in the Isle of Wight. The external walls, as at present cleared, measure about 52x37 feet, and inclose about six or seven chambers, with passages, etc., connected, there is reason to believe, with many others. In addition to tassellated floors, remains of hypocausts, flues, fresco paintings, roofing tiles, coins, pottery and other interesting relics, there are the remains of a mosaic pavement, with a design upon it of unusual character, and one which is worthy of careful study and attention. The design, though grotesque, is doubtless symbolical, and may be connected either with the mythology of the ancients or the early introduction of Christianity. Moreover, a new chamber has been opened up, inclosing an interesting mosaic, the central design of which is a representation of Orpheus playing on the lyre and surrounded by animals, as usual. The border is an unusually good example of what is known as the guilloche pattern. Pottery, glass and cloths have been also found, among the latter several brass coins of the reign of Victorianus, A. D. 268.

The archaeological researches in Rome of recent years have thrown much light upon the life of the early Christians in that city, but no discovery has produced such interest as that of the tomb of Amplias. Says Paul in Romans xvi., 8: "Greet Amplias, my beloved in the Lord." Who was Amplias? Who were his friends? Why was he buried in that particular place? The answer to these questions are all furnished by the discovery of his tomb, and a flood of light let in upon the times of the early Roman Christians. His tomb stands in one of the catacombs, excavated in the time of Domitian, on the ground then belonging to Flavia Domitilla, his nicee. Roman history preserves the fact that Flavia became a Christian. Amplias, the friend of Paul, must have been a distinguished man. The tomb is of such a character that only the possessor of great wealth could have constructed so remarkable a resting place. Was this the work of Flavia, the niece of the great Domitian? Was it erected at the cost of his family? or by the early Christians of Rome? These questions may be answered, for the investigations are not yet concluded. All that we know at present is that there is no tomb in the catacombs that equals it for beauty of its adornments and variety of pictorial illustrations.

In conclusion brief mention may be made of a number of other interesting and valuable "finds" of recent date. Space forbids the giving of details. The earliest known statues one that has just been recovered from an Egyptian tomb. It is that of a sheik or head man of a village, is made of wood, with eyes of glass, and is evidently a portrait. It is 6,000 years old. Many hundreds of manuscripts have been recovered at Pompeii. They are charred rolls, but by the exercise of patience and ingenuity some have been unrolled and read. A skeleton of a prehistoric giant has been exhumed at the old fort in Kentucky, twelve miles below Portsmouth, Ohio. It is six feet in stature and four feet across the shoulders. Several silver ornaments were found with it. A remarkable discovery has recently been made in the Assiot necropolis. Among various objects was an entire company of wooden soldiers, some fifteen inches in height. These little figures give a complete idea of the equipment of the regular soldier in the time of the Pharoahs. The soldiers carry lances, which are precisely like those used in the Soudan today. In a prehistoric cemetery, recently uncovered at Montpellier, France, while workmen were excavating a water works reservoir, human skulls were found measuring 28, 31 and 32 inches in cicumference. The bones which were found with the skulls were also of gigantic proportions. These relics were sent to the Paris Academy, and a learned "savant" who lectured on the find says that they belonged to a race of men between ten and fifteen feet in height. Caldwell Johnson.

COMICAL ERRORS IN ADVERTISING.

It is said that a Long Island newspaper contained a hotel advertisement which read: "Special drawing-room for ladies thirty-five feet wide," and that the inn keeper found it impossible to procure boarders who could exactly fill the bill.

This was no worse than the notice in an English newspaper of "A grand piano for sale, suitable for a young lady with mahogany legs," nor the Irish lord who advertised for a valet who could "shave him while asleep."

Messrs. Koster & Bial, at the opening of their new music hall, displayed some very oddly worded posters on the fences and boardings of the city. One was to this effect:

CARMENCITA,
THE FAMOUS SPANISH DANCER.
Change of Features Every Week.

We are fully aware of this young lady's versatility as a dancer, but had no idea that her countenance possessed the mobility indicated in the advertisement.

The Boots and Shoes Weekly recently published an advertisement in display type. We guess what it meant, but this is how it read:

CORK SOLES FOR MEN AND BOYS
WITH FLEXIBLE BOTTOMS.

A Philadelphia shoemaker kept the following card in his Chestnut street window for several weeks:

LADIES, WHILE THEY LAST, $4.

They were certainly cheap at the price, so long as they lasted, but what on earth did the fair Philadelphians think of being peddled out in this heartless fashion?

It was an Irish musical instrument maker who advertised "My drums cannot be beaten," and, doubtless, he wondered why they didn't sell.

A Brooklyn real estate dealer hung out a card bearing the unattractive information: "House to let in an unapproachable locality," and, of course, nobody ever went to try and find the house.

Frequently it happens that even a correct advertisement may have its original meaning misconstrued, as instance the case of the man who walked into a store bearing the sign: "Families supplied," and inquired the price of a wife and three children.—"Jonah," in Printers' Ink.

QUEEN ELIZABETH.

To the undying credit of Elizabeth, she made a most strenuous effort to reform the state of the money of Great Britain. In 1560 she issued a proclamation wherein she declared to her subjects that she had never gained anything upon her coinages, neither had she coined any base money, and that she was determind to recover the "honor and reputation of the singular wealth that this realm was wont to have above all others." Accordingly the Tower mint was commissioned to receive base money, and in twelve months about three-quarters of a million pounds current value were coined into money of proper weight and standard.

The fumes from melting these base coins were so poisonous that many of the workmen fell ill. The medical authorities of that day prescribed a portion from a dead man's skull as a certain remedy. Accordingly, an official warrant porcured some of these strange cups from London bridge, and the draught was administered. It is said to have afforded temporary relief, but many died, whether because the skulls were traitorous in death as well as in life history does not relate.

About this time a new mode of coining, by means of the mill and the screw press, was introduced from France by one Eloye Mestrell. The method was approved by the Queen and her Council; indeed, it has been said that the first milled coin was struck in the tower by her own royal hand. However that may be, the corporation of moneyers bitterly opposed the scheme, and, the Frenchman being detected in making milled money outside the Tower, was summarily hanged and quartered, and his machinery abandoned.—Gentleman's Magazine.

First Girl:—"I like a man with a past. A man with a past is always interesting." Second Girl:—"That's true; but I don't think he's nearly so interesting as the man with a future." Third Girl:—"The man who interests me is the man with a present; and the more expensive the present is the more interst I take in it."

WOMEN AS INVENTORS.

Patents for All Sorts of Odd Things.

PLOUGHS, BEE-HIVES, AXLES, RAFTS.

Sleep-Producers, Nose-Improvers, Skirt-Supporters and Many Other Articles of Feminine Use.

Significant of the times is the fact that woman is rapidly coming to the front as an inventor. Women are not only filling thousands of applications for patents on improvements in articles especially adapted and intended for their sex, but they are exercising their ingenuity in the direction of improving many of the implements with which men only as a rule are supposed to deal.

The model-room of the Patent Office in Washington bears witness to the fact that the inventive genius of the fair sex, while perhaps not so prolific as man's has certainly accomplished remarkable results.

The first invention in this country by a woman was in 1809 and perfected on May 5th of that year. It was a device for straw weaving with silk or thread. The name of the inventor was Mary Kies. The next invention by a woman was in July, 1815. This was a corset perfected by Mary Brush. Then came a number of years with only an occasional invention.

Lavinia H. Foy, of Worcester, Mass., was one of the early woman patentees, and she has applied for patents on a great many improvements. Her first patent was issued on July 22, 1862, for an improvement in corset skirt supporters, and nearly all the patents granted her have been for articles connected with the wearing apparel of women. In fact, nearly all of the early patents by woman were for improvemnts on articles connected with her surroundings or apparel, such as cooking utensils, picture frames, articles of dress and things useful and ornamental about the house.

A Philadelphia woman, however, started the ball rolling in the other direction by patenting an improvement in bee-hives, and about the same time another woman from the same city invented a mode of preventing the heating of journals or axles on cars. Still another from the Quaker City patented a railroad car heater.

Not to be outdone in the race a California woman invented a dumping wagon and an improvement in desulphurizing ores. A Georiga woman patented a plough, and was followed with a similar device by a sister inventor in Illinois. More watchful over the comforts of man, however, was some fair Philadelphian who made application for a patent on a "mustache spoon," and she received her patent, too.

An Ohio woman patented a car-coupler. About this time, from among the snowy Alps in far-off Switzerland came an application from a woman for an American patent on an improvement in stem-winding watches. The women of the Quaker City, however, still continued to lead, and one of them patented a life-raft and another a fire-escape; from Pittsburg came an application for a car wheel.

A woman in England made application for a patent in this country for an improved method of constructing screw propellers. A Chicago woman patented a process of concentrating ores, and another from the same city invented a tug for harness, while a damsel of Buffalo patented an ozone machine. A New York woman invented a dice-box, and a Washington woman a pyrotechnic night signal. A Washington woman patented a street car awning.

Some years ago the wife of a Western man who was a General in the Union Army during the civil war dreamed of a lock somewhat different from any in use at that time. She awoke in the night, got up and taking a cake of toilet soap and a paper cutter, fashioned the lock as she had dreamed it was constructed. The next day she took it to a machinist who formed a model from the one she had made of the cake of soap, and it was such an improvement on the locks of that time that a large firm offered a good royalty, from which she derives a fair income to this day.

An application was once made by a woman for a patent on "artificial dimples." It was rejected, however, by the Commissioner of the Patent Office, so that any of the fair sex who now desire to experiment can do so without fear of infringement. Her claims were as follows.

"Smear a small spot on the cheek or chin with colorless shellac varnish mixed with glue. With a pencil or pen-holder press the flesh with the paint, holding it there until the substance on the face becomes dry and hard. The stiffened indentation thus retains the exact shape of a dimple, and a little face powder carefully dusted over the "artificial dimple," will completely conceal the varnish and glue compound.

"Some care must be observed in smiling too suddenly, or the dimple may be broken. But with ordinary, gentle usage it will retain its pretty shape a whole evening, if not longer. While the dimple process is applicable to those whose faces comprise a soft, velvety or pulp surface, as then a very deceptive dimple can be produced, it is not so available for thin or bony faces, nor where the skin is very thick and unyielding."

Another interesting and amusing invention by a woman was a crimping pin which could be used as a paper-cutter, skirt-supporter, paper file, child's pin, bouquet holder, shawl fastener and bookmark.

On Macrh 10, 1885, a New York woman patented a device for inducing sleep. A description would be too lengthy to be given here in full, but the device consisted of a collar-like band of rubber, partly encircling the neck, and was fashioned so as to control the flow of blood to and from the head by limited pressure on certain veins and arteries.

In 1881 a patent was issued to a Boston woman on two somewhat novel devices. One of them was for restoring facial symmetry, and consisted of a spring plate with a head and two prongs or forks. The head was to be attached to the teeth and by placing the prongs inside of the mouth so that they would press outward against each cheek, caused the cheeks in time to look plump and full. The other was a finger compressor made on two longitudinal conclave plates hinged together at one end by spring hinges, and thus adapted to fit the tips of the fingers while the constant pressure reduced the size.

One of the inventions by the fair sex that is supposed to be conducive of beauty is a nose improver. It consists of a metal shell of the exact size of the nose desired. The nose is well bathed and then greased with olive oil or glycerine until perfectly soft. The improver is then attached and well fastened. The wearer then goes to bed. In the morning the improver is to be taken off and the nose bathed in warm water. It will probably cause some soreness, but a few applications are said to relieve the pain. In this way, it is claimed by the inventor, any nose may be changed to suit, the theory being that the nose is only a piece of cartilage and easy to change its shape.

WHAT CONSTITUTES A LETTER?

Most people have supposed that anything sealed against inspection and delivered to the postoffice constituted in effect a "letter," which at the regular rate of 2 cents postage per ounce the mail service would be obliged to forward to its destination. So far as the domestic service is concerned this supposition may be correct and would seem to be implied by the wording of official decisions, which declare that "all matter, sealed or otherwise, closed against inspection is also of the first class." But with the foreign mail service, at least, the condition is different. A provision in the postal treaty specifies that letters "in the usual and ordinary form" are to be forwarded at a given rate. Just what constitutes this "usual and ordinary form" has not till now been defined and officially declared, and this is the way in which the definition was brought about:

A Boston architect offered at the postoffice in that city a sealed roll addressed to the Commissioner of Patents at Ottawa, Canada, on which the proper amount of postage at letter rates had been paid. The clerk in charge of the window declined to receive the roll as a letter, and on the matter being referred to him, Postmaster Coveney decided that the term letter is to be construed to mean and embrace sealed packages consisting of an envelope of any size, but flat, as is the usual letter. The objector did not think that this ruling and definition of a letter was correct, and gave his opinion that a letter "was a package containing personal matter of no salable value." The matter being referred to the authorities at Washington for decision, the superintendent of foreign mails in due time forwarded a decision embodying the joint opinions of Canadian and American postal authorities, to the effect that "the term letter in its usual and ordinary form is to be construed to embrace sealed packages consisting of an envelope of any size, but of the usual letter shape, and its contents; but that rolls or a package not contained in an 'envelope,' as the word envelope is generally used, cannot be considered to be 'a letter in its usual and ordinary form.' A sealed package in the form of a roll is, therefore, not entitled to transmission in the mails exchanged between the United States and Canada, and your office was correct in declining to receive the sealed roll mentioned.' This would seem to settle the matter as to what constitutes a letter within the meaning of our postal treaties.—Paper World.

THE MAN AND HIS ART.

Now it came to pass that a Man had a new thing to say. And as he had no aptness to write he painted such things as served to tell what was in him. So he was happy and held his peace and painted yet again.

In that case came a Critic, having no new thing to say and no aptitude either with words or with paint. He saw what the Man had done and was wroth, saying: "Behold, this mountebank and his daub of paint." Thereat the Critic vaunted himself mightily and wrote an Article, full of artificial spleen, which was read of many men.

Being hungry, the Man took counsel how he might fill his stomach, and he said: "If I can but paint bad pictures the Critic will praise me and the Cultured Classes will buy." Whereupon he daubed in fearful wise, so that his studio was full of Lovers of Fine Art, and his purse strings burst. Then the Critic printed his name in capitals, so that it became sacrilege to speak ill of the Man.

But a day fell when the Critic passed to the limbo of his dead articles; and the Man died, also his pot-boilers and those that bought them; but the fame of the Man lived, being grounded in the unpopular works which he wrought.

This fable teaches that a good thing needs no promoter.

The Berlin War Office has determined to furnish free artificial teeth to such soldiers as may need them, as they can, of course, work better with teeth than without and keep in better health.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
ITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 19 1895

Did you ever stop to think how unequal and unjust a money fine for crime is? A $10 fine on a man getting $1 a day means taking ten days of his life, while a $10 fine on a man whose income is $100 a day, for the same offense, means one hour of his life. No violation of law should be cancelled by payment of money. It should always be in days of punishment. A $10 fine is nothing to a rich man; he can violate any law at pleasure that imposes it, but a poor man unable to pay, goes to jail. The rich ought not to escape jail because they have money. They are less excusable for violating the law than the poor, because the law is to protect them not the poor, and they have not the same reasons for violating it. The poor always vote for a social system that upholds the rich, and always get punished by that which virtually does not punish the rich.

Our war showed the American people the necessity of opening railroads through all parts of the country. If China can learn anything from experience, she also will take to heart the same lesson. When the war with Japan began, China had only two railroads. One was the North China line, from Tien-tsin to Shan Hai Kuan, 230 miles long. The other was a little 20 mile narrow guage on the island of Formosa. The North China line was all she had for transportation of troops and supplies. So that, all told, China has only 250 miles of railroad for her 400,000,000 inhabitants. A country like that ought to be either mended or ended.

There's a glut of funds in the English money market. It is said that a recent Government loan was snapped up at seventeen-eighteenths of 1 per cent. This is probably not exaggeration, for it is certain that there is now more money to loan in the European market than was ever before known. Ordinary trade bills, we are told, are discounted at 1 per cent. England now has $525,000,000 of foreign loans, of which $150,000,000 is in the United States alone. In the glut of money is not represented, there is explanation of the low rate of interest—indeed, the low rate proves the plethora of coin.

As long as California imports butter, hams, bacon, lard, eggs, chickens and turkeys by the carload from the effete East, while there are thousands of acres of the most productive soil in the world lying idle within easy reach of markets, on which these things can be produced cheaper than anywhere else in the world by intelligent effort, so long will a large element of the population remain unthrifty grumblers and superstitious politicians who persist in making whatever party is in power responsible for the inconvenience they suffer because of their own shiftlessness and lack of enterprise.

The amount of gold that will be produced this year will give about 30 cents a piece to the people of France, Germany, Great Britain and the United States. But there are Austria and several other nations who must secure some of coveted yellow metal, and as the gold ring is continually trying to extend monometallic principle, the amount named, small as it is will be materially reduced. Yet the gold bugs say there is plenty of gold for the demands of commerce.

The Supervisors of Santa Clara county have just appropriated a thousand dollars to expend in encouraging a local newspaper there in its efforts to get up an addition to boom that county. That's the way the Supervisors of that county have been in the habit of encouraging a portion of the local press for many years.

Despite the talk last winter of low prices and competition of the Florida crop, the orange growers of Southern California, it is estimated, have received nearly $2,000,000 for their fruit, and the railway companies were paid nearly that amount for freight, a proposition that is not equitable.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING
EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.
FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA.

Location of principal place of business: San Francisco, California. Location of works, Inyo, Inyo County, California.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Directors held on the 5th day of July, 1895, an assessment (No. 27) of ten cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, Room No. 12, Rotunda, Mills Building, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this Assessment shall remain unpaid on the 8th day of August, 1895, will be declared delinquent, and advertised for sale at Public Auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Wednesday, the 4th day of September, 1895, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.
W. W. SARGEANT,
Secretary.

Office—Room 12, Rotunda, Mills Building San Francisco, California.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE WHY ORDER OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE SHOULD NOT BE MADE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of the estate of James Daley, deceased.

H. H. Howell, the Administrator of the estate of James Daley, deceased, having filed his petition herein, duly verified, praying for an order of sale of the Mayflower mine and mining claim, and the decedent's mill-site, being a portion of the real estate of said deceased, for the purposes therein set forth.

It is therefore ordered by the Judge of said Court that all persons interested in the estate of said deceased appear before the said Superior Court on Saturday, the 17th day of August, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, at the Court-Room of said Superior Court, at the Court House, in the County of Inyo, State of California, to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said Administrator to sell the said mine and mining claim and the said mill site.

And that a copy of this order be published at least once a week for four consecutive weeks in the Inyo Independent, a newspaper printed and published in said Inyo county.

GEO. M. GILL,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Dated July 1, 1895.

[Endorsed.]

Filed July 3, 1895.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

Bennett & Forbes, Attorneys for Petitioner.

Order of Adjudication of Insolvency.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE County of Inyo, State of California.

In the matter of Bertrand Rhine, An Insolvent Debtor.

Bertrand Rhine, having filed in this Court his petition, schedule and inventory in Insolvency, from which it appears that he is an Insolvent Debtor the said Bertrand Rhine is hereby declared to be insolvent. It is hereby ordered that A. M. Given, Sheriff of said Inyo County, be and he is hereby appointed Receiver of the property of said Insolvent, and that upon his giving a bond to the People of the State of California, conditioned as required by law, and in such sum as the Court may order, and qualifying, he take charge and possession of all of the estate, real and personal of said Bertrand Rhine Insolvent Debtor, wherever and where-soever situate, except such as may be exempt from execution, and of all books, vouchers, documents and papers relating to said estate, and keep and hold the same subject to the order of this Court, and that the appointment of an Assignee of his estate be withheld for the purpose of the same until the appointment of an Assignee of his estate. All persons having the same or any part thereof in his or their possession are hereby directed to deliver said property to said Receiver, and all persons owing debts to said Insolvent are hereby directed to pay the same to said Receiver, and that said Receiver keep the said property, or the proceeds thereof, till the further order of this Court. And all persons are hereby forbidden to pay any debt to said Insolvent, or to deliver any property belonging to such Insolvent to him, or to any person, firm, corporation or association for his use, and the said debtor is hereby forbidden to transfer or deliver any property until the further order of this Court, except as herein ordered.

It is further ordered, that all the creditors of said debtor be and appear before the Hon. Geo. M. Gill, Judge of the Superior Court of the said County of Inyo, in open court at the court-room of said court in the town of Independence, in said County of Inyo, on the 24th day of July, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of the estates of said debtor. It is further ordered, that this order be published in the Inyo Independent, a newspaper of general circulation, published in the County of Inyo, as often as the said paper is published before the day set for the meeting of creditors.

And it is further ordered, that in the meantime all proceedings against the said insolvent be stayed.

Dated July 11th, 1895.

GEO. M. GILL,
Judge of the Superior Court.

[Endorsed.]

Filed July 11th, 1895.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. H. Mack, Attorney for Petitioner.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Administratrix of the estate of JONATHAN BROWN, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix, at the law office P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in said Inyo County.

ALLIE R. BROWN,
Administratrix of the estate of Jonathan Brown, deceased.

Dated February 15, 1895.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administratrix.
aug3 5]

Carpet Weaving.

MRS. J. R. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.

PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER

We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kinds of carpet and rug weaving.

Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished, at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.

First class work guaranteed at low prices

NEW FEE BILL.

CHAPTER CCVII.

An Act to establish fees of county, township and othe. officers, and of jurors and witnesses in this State.

[Approved March 23, 1895.]

The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The following county, township, and other officers shall charge and collect the following fees.

COUNTY CLERK.

On the commencement of any action or proceeding in the Superior Court, except probate proceedings, or on appeal thereto, to be paid by the party commencing such action or proceeding, or taking such appeal	$5 00
On the filing of a petition for letters of administration, testamentary, or guardianship five dollars, to be paid by the petitioner; provided, that at the time of filing the inventory and appraisement in any such proceeding there shall be an additional deposit of one dollar for each additional thousand dollars of the appraised valuation, in excess of three thousand dollars.
On filing the petition to contest any will or codicil	3 00
On the appearance of any defendant, or any number of defendants answering jointly, to be paid upon filing the first paper in the action by him or them	2 00
On placing any action, except a probate proceeding, or default case, on the calendar for trial or hearing, to be paid by the party at whose request such action or proceeding is so placed	2 00
For every additional defendant appearing separately	1 00
The foregoing fees shall be in full for all services rendered by such Clerk in the cause, to and including the making up of the judgment roll.
On the filing of any notice of motion to move for a new trial or any civil action or proceeding, the party filing same must pay to the Clerk, in full for all services to be rendered in connection with said motion, except as hereinafter in this section provided	2 00
For issuing an execution or order of sale in any action	1 00
In all proceedings begun or acts performed prior to this Act becoming a law, such and charges as were provided by the law at the time such proceedings were begun or acts performed.
The Clerk shall also charge and collect the following fees and compensation not above provided for:
For any copy of any record, proceeding or paper on file in the office of the Clerk relating to any civil action pending in said Court, when said copy is made by him, per folio	10
For each certificate of the Clerk, under seal of the Court	25
For filing each claim in probate or insolvency proceedings	15
No fees shall be allowed or charged by the Clerk for services rendered in any criminal case.
For services rendered by the Clerk, not in connection with civil actions or proceedings in Court, he shall charge and collect, for the benefit of the county, the following fees:
For issuing marriage license, one half to be paid to the County Recorder	2 00
For filing and indexing articles of incorporation	1 00
For filing and indexing certificates of copartnership	1 00
For filing and indexing all papers to be kept by him, other than papers filed in actions or proceedings in Court, and official bonds and certificates of appointment, each	25
For issuing any license required by law, other than marriage licenses	1 00
For examining and certifying to a copy of any paper, record, or proceeding preserved by another and presented for the certificate, fifty cents, and the cost of fees for comparing the said copy with the original.
For making satisfaction of order or judgment	25
For receiving and filing remittitur from appellate Court	50
For administering each oath, without certificate, except in a pending action or proceeding	10
For taking any affidavit, except in criminal cases	25
For taking and approving each undertaking and the justification thereof, except in criminal cases	50
For searching records of files, for each year	50
For taking acknowledgement of any deed or other instrument, including the certificate	50
For filing notices of appeal and appeal bonds, each	25

SHERIFF.

For serving any process, writ, order, or paper, except as hereinafter provided, required by law to be served by the Sheriff	50
For serving a writ of attachment, execution, or order for the delivery of personal property	1 00
For taking any bond or undertaking	50
For serving an attachment or execution on any ship, boat, or vessel	3 00
For keeping and caring for property under attachment or execution, such sum as the court may fix, provided, that no greater sum than two dollars per day shall be allowed to a keeper when necessarily employed.
For a copy of any writ, process, or paper actually made by him, when required or demanded according to law, per folio, ten cents; provided, that when correct copies are furnished to him for use, no charge shall be made for such copies.
For advertising sale of property and posting notices, exclusive of cost of publication, or furnishing notice for publication, each	50
For publication of notice in newspaper, the reasonable cost of publication, subject to the approval of the Court.
For serving writ of possession or restitution, putting a person in possession of the premises, and removing the occupant	1 50
For subpoenaing witness, including copy of subpoena, each	25
For summoning trial jury of twelve or less	2 00
For each additional juror	10
For traveling in the service of any paper required by law to be served, for each mile actually and necessarily traveled, one way only, fifteen cents, when such travel can be made by rail, in other cases, twenty-five cents. No constructive mileage to be allowed.
For collecting money on execution, with or without levy, one per cent on the first thousand dollars or less, and one half of one per cent on all sums over one thousand dollars.
For executing and delivering Sheriff's deed	1 50
For executing and delivering certificate of sale
For transporting prisoners to county jail, actual cost of such transportation.
For executing and delivering any other instrument, per folio	10

RECORDER.

For recording every instrument, paper, or notice required by law to be recorded, per folio
For indexing every instrument, paper, or notice, for each name
For filing every instrument for record, and making necessaay entries thereon
For each certificate under seal
For every entry of discharge, credit, or release on the margin of record, and indexing same
For searching the records of his office, for each year
For abstract of title, for each conveyance or incumbrance
For recording each map or plat where same is copied in book of record, for each course
For recording each map or plat, where same is not copied in a book of record, for figures or letters on maps or plats, per folio, ten cents; provided, that the fees for recording any map shall not exceed fifty dollars.
For taking acknowledgement of any instrument	50
For recording marriage license and certificate, to be paid by County Clerk	1 00
For recording transcript and all services in estray cases	1 00
For recording each mark or brand	50
For administering each oath or affirmation, and certifying the same	25
For filing, indexing and keeping each paper not required by law to be recorded	25

The Clerk, Sheriff, and Recorder shall account for all fees in this section provided for, and the Clerk, Sheriff and Recorder, unless otherwise provided by law, shall pay the same to the County Treasurer on the first Monday of the month following their collection, as provided in this Act.

County Officers must, and township officers may, demand the payment of all fees in civil cases, in advance.

SECTION 2. No fees or other compensation shall be paid for certificate of declaration to become a citizen of the United States, and for making a record thereof, or issuing a certificate of citizenship to become a citizen of the United States, or for making a record thereof; and no fees or other compensation shall be paid for filing the statement and affidavit of a committee or candidate voted for at any public election held within the State; and this section shall apply to all the counties in the State.

SECTION 3. All Acts or portions of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect immediately.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, to all persons having business with the offices of Clerk, Sheriff or Recorder fo the County of Inyo that the above provisions of the Fee Bill are mandatory, and will be strictly enforced.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk and Recorder.

Independence, Cal., June 3, 1895.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General superintendent.
R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER, General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.		From Mound House No. 1	To Mound House No. 2
		Leave—	Arrive—
Mound House		10.50 a. m	5.20 p. m
Dayton		11.25 a. m.	4.45 p. m
Wabuska		1.40 p. m	2.35 p. m
Hawthorne	Ar.	5.00 p. m	Lv. 11.00 a. m
		No. 3. Leave—	No. 4 Arrive—
Hawthorne		6.00 a. m.	7.25 p. m
Sodaville		7.11 a. m.	6.15 p. m
Soda Springs		7.50 a. m.	5.58 p. m
Belleville		8.10 a. m.	4.35 p. m
Candelaria		9.40 a. m	3.05 p. m
Benton		1.20 p. m	11.50 a. m
Bishop Creek		3.10 p. m.	9.50 a. m
Alcord		.05 p. m	8.05 a. m
Independence		4.25 p. m.	7.59 a. m
Lone Pine		6.20 p. m	6.10 a. m
Keeler	Ar.	7.00 p. m.	Lv. 6.00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturday.

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with eastern express of V. & T. R., with connection at Reno with east and west-bound trains Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

ALTA from Mound House with Pioneer Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles), Bodie (6 miles) Bandy and Bridgeport.

ALLEGHANY (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmore & Kennedy's tri-weekly stage (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downieville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's line for Colombus (9 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma, Ralston Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (5 miles), Darwin (24 miles), Ash Meadows (110 miles).

DELINQUENT SALE NOTICE.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business Lone Pine, California. Location of Canal near Lone Pine, Inyo County, Cal.

NOTICE—There are delinquent upon the the following described stock, on account of assessment No. 8, levied on the 27th day of April, 1895, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders, as follows:

Names.	No. Cert.	No. Sh's.	Am't
T. C. Boland	3	300	$ 7.50
T. C. Boland	4	200	30.00
T. C. Boland	18	500	75.00
T. C. Boland	19	200	30.00
J. A. McKenzie	11	700	105.00
E. Robinson	1	500	75.00
E. Robinson	2	200	30.00
J. J. Gunn	12	200	30.00
P. H. Mack	17	300	45.00
Fred Spear		75	11.25
R. C. Spear		75	11.25
D. Holland		50	7.50

And in accordance with law, and an order of the Board of Directors, made on the 27th day of April, 1895, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary, will be sold at public auction, at the office of the said Company, Lone Pine, Inyo County, California, on Saturday, the 22nd day of June, 1895, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. of said day to pay said delinquent assessment thereon together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

POSTPONEMENT.

The above sale is postponed to 2. P. M. of June 29th 1895
By order of the Board of Directors.
DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

POSTPONEMENT.

The above sale is postponed to Saturday, July 13, at 2 oclock P. M.
By order of the Board of Directors.
DAVID HOLLAND,
Secretary.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

Adolph Gerckens Plaintiff, vs. Annie J. Gerckens Defendant.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Annie J. Gerckens, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain judgment against you and a decree dissolving the the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the plaintiff and defendant as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 18th day of June, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. W. Bennett, Attorney for Plaintiff.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the 'INDEPENDENT' building, Independence, Inyo county, Cal.

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc. given careful and prompt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases.

Brown & Willis,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery.
All kinds of dental work done according to atest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING
IN ANY STYLE.
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administrator.

HOTELS.

NORMAN HOUSE,
Independence, - Ca
New House. New Furniture. Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.
O. I. MAINS Pro
feb12tf

BIG PINE HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL
New House. New Furniture. Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.
First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

FOR SALE.
THE WHITNEY HOUSE
—The only hotel in—
LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL
Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address
MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

JOHN B. CLARKE,
Successor to John Clarke,
—PROPRIETOR—
John Clarke's Bishop Stables,
BISHOP, CAL.
First-class Turnouts of Every Kind
Fine horses and Carriages.
horses Boarded for any Time
Best of Care and Attention

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY
L. MUNZINGER & CO., Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modoc Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY, the 6th day of August, 1895, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 10 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the South-east corner of the south-east quarter of North east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 98-100; thence North-east following the meanderings of the bed of the Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence; thence follow said Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, six and 80-100 acres; also lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 23, in the town of Independence, the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead, or lode, situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "La Dispricada Lode."

That certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura State of California, commencing at a point twelve and nine-twentieth (12 9-20) rods south of the general corner of the south west quarter and the North-east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South-west quarter and the South-east quarter of Section No. one (1), in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty eight and eleven-twentieth (68 11-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North-westerly along a small branch or swale to a point twenty four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North East quarter and the South east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North east quarter of the North west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West; running thence North forty-four and eleven-twentieth (44 11-20) rods thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres; Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER,
Executor of the Last Will and Testament John Allen Hannah deceased.

Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th 1892.

SAVE YOUR SHOES
[illegible] 'S' [illegible]
[illegible] tector [illegible] make [illegible] long as the [illegible] any ordinary [illegible] to save from 20 to [illegible] times its cost in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.
PAT. APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROP'R.
Horseshoeing ..... $2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and I see
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday	January 5th
"	February 9th
"	March 9th
"	April 6th
"	May 4th
"	June 1st
"	June 30th
"	August 3rd
"	August 31st
"	October 28th
"	November 2nd
"	November 31st

THOMAS C. BOLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND RHINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, JULY 19.....1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman .....GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman.....CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge.....GEO. M. GILL.
Sheriff.....ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk.....DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney.....P. W. FORBES.
Assessor.....P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer.....W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner.....I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed) .....JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools.....S. V. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist.....FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist.....A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist.....J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist.....J. J. STEWART.
5th Supervisor Dist..FRANK FITZGERALD.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .67
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5½
Pig lead	3.90

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

TUESDAY, July 16, 1895.

T. W. Carroll vs. Patrick Clinton—Filed Complaint, issued summons.

THURSDAY, July 18, 1895.

Woodin vs. Anthony—Filed notice calling up Demurrer for argument.

MARRIED.

ELDER—DIAZ—At Independence, July 16, 1895, by A. V. Davidson J. P. Mr. Horace Elder and Miss Nicholosa Diaz.

Ice was reported at Mammoth on the Fourth.

P. Labarge was up from Lone Pine yesterday.

Ben Williams came down from Bishop last Monday.

Mrs. John Fishman came up from Keeler yesterday.

It is reported that the Inyo marble works are closed.

Judge N. D. [illegible] Independence [illegible] creamery [illegible] Marble Com- [illegible] on Tuesday.

[illegible] fishing parties left Inde- [illegible] vicinity this week.

The Lone Pine Water Company will lay a new pipe line in that town.

The thermometer came within one degree of the 100 mark the past week.

Most of the ice used in Independence lately has been shipped from Bishop.

Arthur Noyes came in from Beveridge last Sunday for more quicksilver to use at the arastra.

W. A. Chalfant of the Inyo Register came down from Bishop last Friday, returning Tuesday.

A number of Citrus people spent last evening in town. They reported Citrus as holding its own.

H. P. Cartier left for Butte, Montana, yesterday morning. He expects to remain about a month.

C. W. Craig and family left last Monday for San Bernardino where they intend making their future home.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Conklin and Mrs. D. Holland and Mr. Shepherd will start for the Mammoth country in a few days.

The Independence Water Company will commence laying a six inch pipe through Edward street in a week or ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Hession went to Bishop yesterday where Mrs. Hession will make a short visit to her mother, Mrs. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Meroney came up from Keeler last Saturday morning. Charlie will work in the Clerk's office for a couple of weeks.

Pasted a dime on a sheet of paper and send to Crocker & Ames, 619 Montgomery St., San Francisco, for Ame's Shoe Protector, the wonderful saver of shoes.

Miners should not forget that the suspension of assessment of '93 and '94 does not apply to 1895, and that to hold an unpatented mining claim in any State or Territory in the Uniied States $100 worth worth of work or improvements must be put thereon sometime between January 1st and December 31st, 1895.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Keeler, Cal. on June 24, 1895, three horses dessribed as follows: One brown mare, white star in forehead branded thus 2C on left hip. One chestnut mare, both ears split, white stripe in forehead both hind legs white branded thus TS on left hip and shoulder. One iron-grey mare branded thus S on left hip and shoulder (brands on this mare very dim.) The owner is hereby notified to claim his property and pay the charges upon the same, or I will, at the expiration of thirty days cause them to be sold according to law.

JOHN BARNES.

Keeler, July 15, 1895.

Weather Summary, Week Ending July 18, 1895.

Highest barometer, 29.98 date, 15th.
Lowest " 29.78 date, 17th.
Highest Temperature 98.2 date, 15th
Lowest " 61.3 date, 12th.
Mean " 81.1
Average dew point 24.6
" humidity 12.1
Total precipitation Trace
Prevailing direction of wind, W.
Highest velocity and date, 23, SW 16th.
Number of clear days 4.
" " partly cloudy days 0.
" " cloudy days 3.
" " rainy days (.01 or more rain) 0.

H. E. WILKINSON,
Observer.

An Accident.

Yesterday while stacking hay at the Mairs ranch Dave Rogers met with a serious accident. He had driven up to the stack with a load of hay from the field and started to unload with the derrick. He set the fork in the hay and the driver started to raise it, but the strain was so great that one of the guy ropes broke. The pole fell and struck Rogers on the back of the neck driving his head down on the fork. He received a large gash in the back of the head and one on the cheek and was insensible for some time. At latest reports he was improving.

Coolgardie.

Rich new finds are being constantly reported from Coolgardie gold fields. Coolgardie, Australia, is an accessible point, reached by steamer to Fremantle, thence by rail to Southern Cross and team to destination. The trip to Australia on the fine steamers of the Oceanic Steamship Company via Honolulu, Samoa, and New Zealand is pleasure sailing the day long. This line tickets passengers to Cape Town, South Africa. Map of Coolgardie district and Pacific ports reached by the Oceanic Steamship Company is mailed free to any address by the O. S. S. Co. 138 Montgomery St San Francisco.

From The Other Side.

A party of State University students reached town last Sunday having come through the Sierras by way of Yosemite and Bloody Canyon. They reported a most enjoyable summer outing thus far and started on Tuesday intending to get through the Kearsarge Pass. They were well equipped for their trip and carried a good map of the country. The party consisted of Messrs. Hirst, Allen, A. and H. Wykoff, Wilder and Monges.

Still Going.

More fishing parties are leaving town. County Treasurer Bunney and family have gone to Long Valley and will be followed shortly by County Clerk Hession and family. J. C. Irwin and Arthur Smith will spend a week or so at the head of Kings river. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Willet and Miss Rosa Roeper are going to the Yosemite. The Misses Bell and a party of friends will go to Onion Valley. George Lewis and Mr. E. Scnabbel are at Long Valley.

Chas. Robinson and Arthur Nolds came in last Monday from Beveridge where they had been packing ore for the arastras. They packed between eighteen and twenty tons from the mine down to the mill, a distance of eight miles. A trip a day with seven animals is creditable.

Last night D. D. Grand Master Wells Barnes installed the following officers of Inyo Lodge No. 93 I. O. O. F.: P. H. Mack, N.G.; P. W. Forbes, V. G.; J. D. Blair, Secretary; E. Robinson, Treasurer; H. E. Wilkinson, Warden; J. F. Beale, Conductor and John Alexander, I. G.

Mrs. Julia Church and family are expected to arrive here from Hawthorne on Monday evening next. Mrs. Church will be accompanied by Miss Linn, a young lady friend, and will visit her mother, Mrs. J. D. Blair.

George Meads arrived in town from Mojave last evening. He had all the freight he could carry and was compelled to leave four tons at Mojave. He met Rudolph Schober going down at Hawaii.

A wedding party came up from Lone Pine on Tuesday, consisting of Mrs. Diaz, Miss Delphina Diaz, and Miss. Nicholosa Diaz, Horace Elder and Chris. Carrasco. They returned the same evening.

Misses Etta Wood, Birdie Levy and Hulda Harris, left for San Francisco yesterday morning to resume their schooling, after a two months vacation visiting friends and relatives here.

Improvements continue to be made in town. J. R. Moffatt is building a corral and stable adjoining his residence and A. W. Eibeshutz has renewed the sidewalk in front of his store.

Pat. Clinton came in from Cerro Gordo Saturday returning Monday. He says he has four men in in his employment and that T. C. Boland is working ten men at Cerro Gordo.

John Baxter has two tons of honey gathered and will have about a thousand pounds more from his first crop. The honey on an average is whiter than that of last year.

The Holiness Band, who have been holding meetings here since the first of July, will hold their last meeting next Sunday evening, preparatory to starting for Big Pine.

Mrs. Curtis Harvey and Miss Agnes Harvey of Lone Pine are visiting at Mr. Baxter's family. They will return home next Sunday.

J. R. Moffatt returned from the Mt. Whitney fishing grounds last Friday, bringing with him a fine lot of the beautiful golden trout for which that region is famous.

(Official.)

Auditor's Report.

Quarterly report of the County Auditor of Inyo county, Cal., for the Quarter ending June 30th, 1895.

June 30 Exhibit showing the amount of warrants drawn and registered and upon what funds since Mar. 31, 1895, date of last report.

Inyo county, (sum total of warrants) drawn		$10,231 64
General Exp. Fund	1,740 62
Salary Fund	2,549 34
School Fund	3,201 48
Hospital Fund	639 00
Bridge Fund	109 86
Rd Dist. No. 1 Fund	116 75
" " " 2 "	213 69
" " " 3 "	350 40
" " " 4 "	101 82
" " " 5 "	104 00
Independence Bond	35
Independence teachers	23 43
Long Pine Building	10 84
		$10,231 64 $10,231 64

Exhibit showing the amount of indebtedness of Inyo county, interest not included and how distributed among the various Funds.

Inyo County	$62,990 55
Inyo Co. Bonds		62,000 00
Old General Fund		990 55
	$62,990 55	62,990 55

June 30 Exhibit showing present financial condition

Inyo county (total indebtedness)	$62,990 55
Less cash, in County Treasurer's hands not subject to pay indebtedness		$20,499 93
Remaining Indebtedness		42,490 62
		$62,990 55 $62,990 55

Respectfully submitted to the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County.

D. J. HESSION,
County Auditor.

Examined, accepted and approved the 9th day of July, 1895, by the Board of Supervisors.

FRANK FITZGERALD,
Chairman.

Silver Convention.

TO THE VOTERS OF CALIFORNIA:

The Executive Committee appointed at a meeting of citizens held at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, upon June 20, 1895, to promote the cause of bimetallism, issued a call for a State Convention, regardless of party, to be held in San Francisco August 19, 1895, at 12 o'clock M. In order to outline a plan for assembling such convention, we submit the following:

1. Each county in the State shall be entitled to be represented at said convention by five delegates at large and one delegate for each 500 votes or fraction thereof cast in said county at the last general election.

2. The only test required for a seat in said convention is that the delegate be an elector of the county which he claims to represent, and is in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver, with equal privileges at the mints of the United States, and with equal functions as money, at the ratio of 16 to 1, without waiting for any international conference, or the concurrence of any foreign power.

3. The delegates shall be selected in each county in such a manner as the friends of the cause in such county may determine, but as the bimetallists belong to all existing political parties, and are themselves without party organization, we recommend that mass meetings of bimetallists be held throughout each county upon Saturday, August 3, 1895, for the purpose of selecting delegates to said convention, and that the Chairman and Secretary of the meeting issue a certificate to the delegates selected, which certificate will be accepted as credentials by the convention.

It is important and essential that each county should have a full delegation at the convention, as in no other way can the earnest wishes of the people upon this important question be fully understood and appreciated.

The time for talking has passed and the people can and will have an inning, if they demand their rights in such a manner as to convince the political parties of the country that they are in dead earnest and will neither follow party traditions nor accept equivocal or uncertain promises, but insist upon candid declarations from candid men.

It is well known that this contest is one in which the masses of the people are confronted by the moneyed powers both at home and abroad. The industrial and producing classes are clamoring at the doors of Congress for relief against the unequal privileges awarded by legislation to aggregated capital by the demonetization of silver. Every effort which wealth can inspire or money secure will be arrayed against the people in this struggle, and hired orators and interested intriguers will be everywhere encountered to resist the assault or stem the tide of public opinion; yet, notwithstanding this disparagement of wealth, we have an abiding faith in the justice of our cause and in the ultimate triumph of principles over pretense, of right over iniquity.

We invite all the interested parties throughout the State to correspond with our Secretary, Mr. George P. Keeney, Sixth Floor, Mills Building, San Francisco, who will furnish all necessary information, together with forms, blanks and other organizing material, free of expense, and without delay.

O. W. BAKER,
Chairman Executive Committee.
GEORGE P. KEENEY, Secretary.

Here and There.

Professor Henry advises feeding wheat to hogs in the straw, scattering it over the ground. He claims that the results would be just as good as if feeding the wheat thrashed.

The irrigation movement is accumulating a tremendous impetus, which is visible not alone in the west, but thoughout the country. The work of organization and agitation, through national, interstate, state and county associations, will go forward with renewed energy from now until the next great international congress assembles at Albuquerque, N. M., in the autumn of 1895.

INYO SEMINARY.

A Classic and Scientific School for both sexes.

Competent Instructors in Art and Music.

BOARD AND TUITION REASONABLE

First Term commences about September 1st.

For further particulars apply to the Principal, M. E. Temple Stevens, A. M. Bishop, Calif.

(Official.)

Treasurer's Report.

To the Hon. Board of Supervisors, Inyo County State of California.

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith submit my report of the receipts and disbursements of this office for the Quarter ending June 30th, 1895. Respectfully submitted,

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer.

RECEIPTS—

Apr. 1, 1895, Cash on hand		$12,075 31
A. M. Given, Sheriff fees	39 70
A. M. Given, Tax-Collector fees	19 00
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees	125 60
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees	44 60
J. E. Dunlap, J. P. 3d twp fines	7 00
A. A. Armstrong, Int State land	27 85
ram'l Levy "	125 28
Jos. Seely "	50 69
D. J. Hession, error warrant 74	45
E. H. Edwards, Int State land	32 00
P. A. Chalfant, Assessor	199 50
A. M. Given, Tax-Collectr fees	965 57
		13,713 15
May, F. J. Cooper, Int State land	44 80
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees	44 15
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees	40 75
A. M. Given, Sheriff fees	23 20
A. M. Given, Tax Collector	38 00
S. P. McKnight Int S Schl ld	51 74
Jas. E. Damon "	16 80
" " "	16 80
C. & C. R. R. Tax State Treas'r	1,195 68
Margie Shaw Int State ld	53 00
State Treas. ac't Treas. & Aud.	16 64
W. A. La Mar Int State land	22 40
W H Murray Red'mpt'n State ld	58 22
P. A. Chalfant, Assessor	431 23
A. M. Given, Tax-Collector	6,687 43
		22,455 99
June, A. M. Given, Sheriff fees	20 55
A. M. Given, Tax-Collector fees	34 00
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees	93 40
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees	37 00
J. J. Stewart Redemption fees	103 79
W. Stewardson and W. Nelswender, Int State land	22 40
Dr. L. Robinson Red'mpt'n fees	1 83
John Davies, Int. State land	33 60
State Treas. ac't Treas. & Aud.	90 00
Jacob Koch, Redemption fees	3 57
R. P. Keating, " "	8 78
" " "	19 52
Mrs. C. Delaney, Int State land	8 00
P. A. Chalfant, Assessor	761 63
A. M. Given, Tax Collector	1,101 86
		24,706 42

DISBURSEMENTS—

Apr. Bridge	106 86
General Expense	1,740 62
Hospital Fund	563 00
County Road Districts	916 66
Bishop School	200 00
Salary	1,374 78
Independence School	86 00
Lone Pine School	95 25
Round Valley School	130 80
Station School	67 03
Warm Springs School	70 00
Irving School	128 00
Big Pine School	200 00
Fish Springs School Dist	75 00
Milton School	2 00
Station Library	4 94
Independence Library	9 75
Bishop Library	3 00
Lone Pine Building	10 84
		5,809 13
May, State General	2,800 95
County Bond	1,005 55
Bishop School Bond	840 00
Big Pine Bond	640 00
Union Bond	855 00
Salary	1,094 98
Hospital	32 00
Rebate	35
Bishop School	146 10
Lone Pine School	228 00
Big Pine School	34 78
Independence School	87 83
Independence School	143 51
Union School	236 50
Fish Springs School	75 00
Warm Springs School	157 20
Milton School	19 00
Irving School	100 00
Station School	65 37
		13,914 37
June, Salary Fund	1,099 98
Hospital Fund	54 00
Irving School	110 40
Big Pine School	331 75
Fish Spring School	23 25
Bishop School	78 00
Irving School	81 00
Milton School	79 52
Independence Special	23 40
Station School	25 37
Riverside School	82 00
Round Valley School	2 25
Warm Spring School	16 22
July, Cash on hand	8,753 77
		24,706 42

Treasurer's Trial Balance, Apr. 1, 1895

To the Salary Fund	$	2,869 24
General Expense "	2,790 31
State General "	409 97
Hospital "	739 93
Bond "	732 45
Bishop Special Fund	5 13
State School "		1,233 00
General Road	280 72
To the various Road Dstrct Funds:
No. 1	383 47
No 2	229 70
No 3	243 85
No 4	146 80
No 5	148 61
Bridge Fund	491 62
Swamp and overflowed Land	264 61
Institute	50 00
Big Pine Special School	56 00
Teachers Library Fund	43 00
Coroner's	88 25
Dog Poll and Property Tax	458 45
County School	82 33
To the various School Dst. Funds:
Riverside	6 16
Round Valley	49 24
Irving	1 0 93
Bishop	289 34
Station	41 66
Warm Springs	201 64
Big Pine	428 91
Milton	106 90
Independence	137 17
Fish spring	30 28
Union	163 02
Lone Pine	341 57
To the various School Dst. Library Funds:
Milton	$ 68 52
Round Valley	8 70
Irving	26 82
Bishop	126 67
Station	82 34
Warm Springs	12 41
Big Pine	48 85
Independence	21 56
Union	46 44
Riverside	26 31
Lone Pine	30 30
Fish Springs	5 60
Independence Bldg Fund	3 00
Fish Springs " "	19 84
Independence Bond Fund	18 10
Bishop (old) " "	11 02
Union " "	1 72
Bishop (new) " "	209 87
Big Pine " "	39 99
Fish Springs " "	11 83
Lone Pine " "	1,439 15
Road Poll Tax	445 25
Cash Balance		$8,753 77
	$12,355 01	$12,356 01

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 1st day of July, 1895.

D. J. HESSION,
Clerk.

Examined, accepted and approved by the Board of Supervisors the 9th day of July, 1895.

FRANK FITZGERALD,
Chairman.

NATHAN RHINE

MERCHANT AND BANKER.

Independence, Cal.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

ALSO TRANSACTS A

GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR

WELLS FARGO & CO'S. EXPRESS

MUTUAL Life Insurance Co. OF NEW YORK

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

AND

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY

All business intrusted to me will receive prompt and careful attention.

NATHAN RHINE

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the sack or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine. Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave, WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeer, MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. R. MILLER, Propr.

The newest Style OF Fashionable Clothing Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc AT

SUEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, "DRESDEN" WARE.

L. WOOD CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES, PEANUTS WALNUTS, TOYS!

THE CASH STORE Is Where You Get the WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
0-m RENO, NEVADA

BIG TOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, om the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

INDEPENDENCE

MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef, Mutton, Pork, Sausage.

☞ arties supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pout. j19-tf

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

☞ Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere

E. CHENOT.

nce, Cal., March 9, 1891. 1164fm

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE, INYO Co. Cal.

Dealer in GENERAL MERCHANDISE, GROCERIES MINERS Supplies

PROVISIONS

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

BELL'S Flouring Mills

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements o our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

IN CARIBOO.

By JULES VERNE.

CHAPTER I.

"Don't stir! I'll save you!"

In the spring of 1875 Louis Morel, a worthy Alsatian farmer, weary of submitting to the vexatious restraints put upon his language and liberty by the German masters of his land, sold what little property he had left and started for America with his entire family, consisting of wife, son and daughter. Morel was still in the prime of life, and his wife Juliette seemed wonderfully young to be the mother of two such children as Leon and Pauline. Leon was head and shoulders taller than his father and of extremely muscular build. Pauline, at this time just entering her eighteenth year, was a maiden of very winning appearance, round and rosy and swift footed as an Atalanta.

The Morels had intended settling somewhere in Manitoba, where distant relatives of theirs had already preceded them, but hearing tales of the wonderful fortunes made in a single month by the gold seekers of British Columbia, they determined to push on to that new el dorado, as father and son felt confident that their strong arms would not be long in uncovering some of the treasures in the valley of the Fraser.

Crossing the United States to Seattle, in Washington Territory, the Morels here fitted themselves out with a good pack wagon, horses, tents, camp utensils, etc., and turned their faces northward. Fish and game were plentiful, and Leon and his father had no difficulty in supplying the moving household with all the fresh meat it stood in need of. Fruits and vegetables were always obtainable from the Indians and Chinese.

The grandeur of the scenery, the wonderful purity of the air, the perfect security to human life in these wild regions exercised a sort of fascination upon the Morels. What they anticipated would be a wearisome march through a wilderness turned out to be one long pleasure trip, varied by laughable adventures of all kinds. True, there was plenty of hard work, but the Morels had been accustomed to that all their lives. It was no hardship to them. The one thing which astonished and charmed them was the respect paid to women by these rough miners. They gazed upon Morel's wife and daughter as if thankful for the privilege. As for Pauline, the fame of her beauty usually traveled about thirty miles ahead of her, and at every small village up the Fraser valley she was sure to find some unknown admirer waiting to get a look at the "beautiful French girl."

As they drew near the mines of the Cariboo they fell in with Captain Roberts, the chief of the mounted police of that district. Roberts' reputation was not of the most savory sort. He was known as a violent tempered man, addicted to the use of liquor and quarrelsome and unscrupulous when under the influence of it. Roberts accepted the Morels' invitation to partake of their hospitality, and a halt was made beneath a clump of towering silver firs. He could scarcely believe his eyes when he saw the ease and skill with which the Morels cinched, tethered or hobbled their horses, put a load on a pack mule with a genuine "squaw hitch" or "diamond hitch," cut poles and pitched a tepee, slung a kettle, skinned a deer or made a trout ready for broiling. Good feeling ran high at dinner, although the banter and chaff were sometimes a little bit too acid to be perfectly safe.

"I thought you French people lived on frogs!" exclaimed Roberts.

"So we did up to the battle of Waterloo," replied Morel, good naturedly, "but now we eat roast beef."

"Speaking of Waterloo," cried the Englishman, "what a fortunate thing it was we crushed that monster Napoleon."

"Yes," answered Morel, "it was fortunate for you that one of his own generals betrayed him, for otherwise he would have beaten you at Waterloo, and after that"——

"What?" cried Roberts.

"He would have swallowed your little island at a single gulp," added the Frenchman with a chuckle.

"Stuff!" growled the Englishman; "England has never been whipped by any nation in the world"——

"How about the Americans?" interrupted Morel, with a sly glance at his son.

"We were not whipped, sir," cried Roberts in a stentorian tone. "We simply abandoned the contest."

"Abandoned the contest! Ha, ha, ha, ha!" roared the Frenchman.

"You Frenchmen are monkeys!" exclaimed Roberts, losing his temper.

"And you Englishmen are—are"— but Madam Morel's hand had stopped his mouth completely.

"Come, come, gentlemen," she cried gayly, "keep cool; you'll spoil your digestion. I hate quarreling. Here's to the health of old England, under whose flag we are as safe in the wilderness as in the city park."

"Bravo!" cried the Englishman. "And here's to La Belle France, that gives us the best wine and the most beautiful women in the world!"

This last pull at his canteen roused Roberts' worst passions, and he began making love to Pauline with more ardor than discretion. The young girl bore herself with admirable judgment, repulsing him without losing her temper or making him lose his. Madam Morel drew a long breath of satisfaction when he asked Leon to bring him his horse, but their troublesome guest was still loath to part company with the beautiful Pauline. Finally he announced his readiness to depart, providing Pauline would permit him to kiss her goodby, as he phrased it, and with this declaration he seized the girl's hand, but she eluded his grasp and cried out laughingly:

"Fie, Captain Roberts, how would you like somebody to treat your daughter—of whom you have told us—in this rude way?"

"Why, surely, Miss Pauline," replied the officer, "a single kiss is not much to ask."

"I keep my kisses for my husband—when I get him," laughed the maiden, as she sprang aside to avoid another attack.

The Englishman seemed really encouraged by the opposition he was meeting with, and as Pauline's dress happened to catch on the end of the pack wagon, he profited by the accident to encircle her waist with his arm, and was in the very act of pressing his lips on the girl's cheek when a sharp blow from a vigorous palm fell with a resounding whack upon the Englishman's face.

It was Madam Morel. With flashing eyes and cheeks red with indignation the Frenchwoman stood beside him ready with another dose of the same remedy.

"Come, come, Captain Roberts," she cried out, "leave the girl alone or I'll let you feel what a heavy hand an indignant mother can lay on an evildoer."

Morel and his son burst into a hearty laugh.

Roberts growled out a curse at the woman's impudence in striking one of her majesty's officers."

"Then let her majesty provide officers who have better manners."

"Come, come, mother," cried Morel, "don't be too severe on the captain. He was only joking," and producing his canteen he invited Roberts to take a taste of some good French brandy before mounting. This was an invitation that Roberts never declined, but it was plain to be seen that he did not intend to forget the treatment which he had received from Pauline and her mother. With the aid of Morel the police officer was enabled to scramble into his saddle and make his way safely to the government house, thanks to the intelligence of the horse he was riding.

The next morning Leon turning to his father asked him how long a halt he intended making. "Another day, at least," was the reply; "the horses have not been tethered in specially good feed lately and need a little rest."

"We shall never reach the mines, father," said Leon despondingly.

"Don't get impatient, my boy," cried Morel encouragingly; "you shall have all the exercise with pickax and shovel that you want, take my word for it."

"Well, I'm off for a little 'prospecting' on my own hook," replied Leon, and swinging a pick across his shoulder he trudged out of the little camp amid the laughter of the others.

The day was beautiful, and Pauline, left to herself, strayed along the river bank, accompanied only by one of the hunting dogs which Morel had brought with him from Seattle. One thing after another—first a cluster of gayly colored leaves, then a flower and after that a gold winged butterfly—enticed the girl to continue her ramble. In this way she gradually drew away from the camp without realizing the distance she had covered. While thus reveling in the beauties of the wild scenery a bird of rich plumage flew up in front of her and alighted upon a bush in plain sight. Immediately the thought that she might be able to find its nest and secure the eggs, which she doubted not would be most daintily spotted, led her to follow the crimson breasted trickster, which of course was simply engaged in leading the girl in the very opposite direction.

On, on, through bush and tall grass, over fallen trees and through networks of trailing vine, followed by her four footed companion, Pauline made her way. The feathered will-o'-the-wisp, uttering plaintive cries, as if it feared his pursuer was upon the very point of seizing his nest, hopped from branch to branch, displaying its beautiful plumage in ever changing lights. Pauline, intoxicated with the increasing hope of coming upon the prize, bounded along like a nymph of the woods, the cries of the bird and barking of the dog serving to keep her mind from all thoughts of the camp left miles behind. Suddenly the dog halted, and raising his nose high in the air gave unmistakable signs of scenting the presence of some enemy, for he whined nervously and fixed his intelligent eyes upon Pauline's face with a puzzled look.

"Good dog, Hector!" said the young girl, for the first time realizing the danger of her position, and then patting him on the head she murmured, "What is it, Hector; what do you see?"

The animal replied with a low, anxious whine and with the same inquiring look into Pauline's face. Suddenly the low whine changed into a growl, and the dog showed his teeth in such a threatening manner that Pauline no longer doubted the presence of some dangerous beast in the underbrush. While standing there revolving in her mind whether the best thing for her to do was not to turn and flee in the opposite direction and trust to her swiftness of foot to make her escape, the girl was suddenly transfixed with fear at seeing a large grizzly rise on his haunches not twenty feet from her, with open mouth and two rows of terrible teeth shining like burnished ivory in the uncertain light of the forest depths. Pauline's limbs bent under her and she had great difficulty to overcome an inclination to throw herself on her face and welcome the unconsciousness which seemed to be playing with her thoughts.

But all at once she recollected mother, father, brother, and something whispered to her that she must not throw her life away. Turning about and making a great effort, she regained possession of her will power and bounded off like an arrow, calling out to Hector to follow her. In an instant the bear started in pursuit. Had there been a clearing, the swift footed Pauline would have had no difficulty in distancing her pursuer, but the long, wiry grass and at times thick underbrush so impeded her movements that a glance over her shoulder told her that the fierce beast was slowly gaining upon her.

Still her heart did not fail her. Bounding, leaping, dashing along, the girl kept in her course. It was now a question of endurance, for a quarter mile of level, open country had enabled her to increase the lead she had. Her strength was still intact. In fact, she began to feel a thrill of pleasurable excitement in this dangerous sport of racing with a grizzly, when to her sorrow she saw that her further advance was blocked by a turbulent stream some twenty feet in width. Swim she could not, and so it seemed certain destruction to plunge into the seething, foaming flood. She halted, turned, saw the fierce beast, from whose jaws flew flakes of foam, not a hundred feet away. It was now a choice of deaths. Thoughts of mother, father, brother again flitted tumultuously through her mind, mixed with a vague idea that the bear had suddenly halted.

And so it had. Worried by the attacks of Hector, the huge animal had come to bay and was making frantic efforts to strike the brave dog with its paw. But again the grizzly resumed the chase. Pauline now stood hesitating upon the bank of the wild mountain stream watching the terrible beast as he drew near with an easy lope. Again the dog succeeded in halting him when within a few feet of her. She could see the glare of his eyes, hear the sound of his breath. It grew black before her. "Good dog, seek him! seek him!" now rang in her ears.

The voice was a strange one, but the sound of it lent her new courage.

"Don't be afraid, woman! Throw yourself on your face; play dead!" again the voice rang out.

Hardly knowing how, Pauline obeyed, and the next instant the grizzly's hot breath came in puffs against her neck, and then she felt a crushing weight upon her back. The grizzly had set his paw upon her. Then the sharp crack of a rifle rang in her ears, followed by a deep roar of rage and pain, and the crushing weight was suddenly lifted from her back. Hector's savage bark now told her that that faithful animal was hanging upon the flanks of the enemy and holding him back. She pressed her lips against the cool ground in silent prayer, and waited for the sound of the strange voice.

"Don't stir! I'll save you!" it now called out.

The speaker, a handsome young man in hunting costume, was, however, separated from the girl by the swollen creek. To wade or swim it meant to make a landing possibly a hundred feet down stream, and thus virtually abandon the girl to her fate. A jump of twenty feet with a heavy rifle was likewise an impossibility. Seeing that the bear was seriously wounded and had turned his attention entirely to the attacks of the dog, the hunter had an instant to collect his thoughts. In that instant he had matured his plan. It was either to reach the girl, or, failing in this, to call to her to throw herself into the torrent, and then spring in and save her. A wild grapevine hung from one of the trees. To swing his rifle on his back and sever the lower end of the vine was the work of a moment. Then seizing the loose end of the vine and drawing it down with his full weight he cried, "Here I come," and leaped fearlessly into the air, trusting that the recoil of the branch would land him safely on the other side, which it did, but, by twisting in midair, the hunter was thrown heavily to the ground and somewhat stunned.

"Don't stir!" he called out again, and the next instant a point blank shot from the rifle laid brain dead within ten feet of Morel's daughter.

With face whiter than chalk the Frenchman rushed up in time to catch the unconscious Pauline in his arms, as her rescuer raised her limp form from the ground.

"Oh, never mind my name," said the stranger, but Morel insisting, he replied with a smile, "Well, call me Timely."

That night the Morels were too much excited over the awful peril to which Pauline had been exposed to examine Leon's specimen of gold ore.

CHAPTER II.

The next instant sank lifeless into a pair of stout arms.

It was about noon the next day when Leon Morel returned from the government house, whither he had gone to confer with the gold commissioner in relation to the entry of his mining claim, which he had staked out and pre-empted under the name of "The Pauline." He found his parents and sister conferring over some very weighty matter, to judge from their pale and anxious faces.

"Hello, what's up?" shouted Leon as he swung himself out of his saddle.

"Captain Roberts has been here."

"Well?" was Leon's quick word of inquiry.

"He came to make a formal demand for Pauline's hand," continued Morel.

(To be continued.)

Foul breath is a discourager of affection. It is always an indication of poor health — bad digestion. To bad digestion is traceable almost all human ills. It is the starting point of many very serious maladies. Upon the healthy action of the digestive organs, the blood depends for its richness and purity. If digestion stops, poisonous matter accumulates and is forced into the blood —there is no place else for it to go.

The bad breath is a danger signal. Look out for it! If you have it, or any other symptom of indigestion, take a bottle or two of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It will straighten out the trouble, make your blood pure and healthy and full of nutriment for the tissues.

A NEW TEST FOR GEMS.

An accurate scientific method has at last been discovered whereby precious stones may be distinguished from the fraudulent gems which are now so numerously manufactured in the laboratories of Paris and other continental cities. This is by testing them for their specific gravity, but not by the scales occasionally used for large stones and which, however delicate, are unreliable.

The new means of detection of bogus gems is simple and ingenious and is likely to be widely adopted in the jewelry trade. It is the chemist who has added this knowledge to the lapidary's art. Several liquids have been discovered which are more than three and one-half times as dense as water and in which therefore the amethyst, the beryl and other light stones will actually float.

The most useful of these liquids is methylene iodide, which has a specific gravity of 3.3 and in which the tourmaline readily floats. Moreover, it is not corosive or in any way dangerous. It being impossible for the lapidary to prepare a number of liquids each having the specific gravity of a different gem stone, the methylene iodide is easily diluted by adding benzine to it. Each drop of benzine added makes the liquid less dense and so it may be used to separate the tourmaline and all the lighter gem stones from each other.

If it is doubtful whether a certain gem be an aquamarine or a chrysoberyl all that is necessary is to place it in a tube of the liquid together with a small fragment of true aquamarine to serve as an index. If it be a chrysoberyl, which has a specific gravity of 3.6, it will sink like lead. If it be an aquamarine, which has a specific gravity of 2.7, it will float. If the liquid be then stirred and diluted until the index fragment is exactly suspended, the gem also will neither float nor sink, but will remain poised beside it. This method may be adopted with all of the lighter stones.

But for heavier gems like the carbuncle, the jargoon, the sapphire, the ruby, the spinal, the topaz and the diamond a different liquid is necessary. This has lately been discovered by the Dutch mineralogist Retgers. He has found a colorless solid compound which meets at a temperature far below that of boiling water to a clear liquid five times as dense as water and therefore sufficiently dense to float any known precious stone. This compound is the double nitrate of silver and thallium.

Its most remarkable property is that it will mix in any desired proportion with warm water, so that by dilution the specific gravity may be easily reduced. This fused mass may be reduced in density by adding water drop by drop so as to suspend in succession carbuncle, sapphire, ruby and diamond.

These tests of precious stones may be made in a few minutes and are absolutely reliable, as all stones of the same nature have the same specific gravity. None of the bogus rubies or diamonds have the same weight as those they are made to imitate.

Another tragedy has been added to the record of Cajon pass, near San Bernardino, in the death of one Joseph Calmont, a Frenchman, 62 years of age. Calmont's charred body was found amid the ruins of his cabin, which was burned to the ground. Calmont was chief witness for the prosecution in the case of Will Taber, who will be tried June 20th for the murder of James P. Medlin on March 11, 1895.

One night last week the Canadian steamer Jack, a flat boat, collided with the steel steamer Norman of Menominee on Lake Huron. The Norman sank immediately, drowning the cook, the wheelman and a fireman.

Ethel:—"What did you do when he proposed?" May—"I lost my self-possession at once."

CHAMPIONSHIP.

In all the out-door sports of the season the weather is playing champion to knock out and close up games. A change will come, of course, and with hot weather will come the fiercer struggle to make up for lost time. All this means a greater amount of wear and tear to the body, to its muscles, nerves and bones. What the damage in all will be from sprains, bruises, wounds, hurts, inflammations, contusions and the like, no one can tell, but there is a championship to be won, important to all, to which few give sufficient consideration, and that is the triumph over all these pains and mishaps in the surest, promptest way. St. Jacobs Oil is the champion remedy for all such ailments; it does not disappoint, and never postpones a cure for any cause whatever.

An Indian named "Man Afraid of Nothing" married a white woman in Montana recently, and in one week after the wedding applied to his tribe to have his name changed.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

If You are Tired

All the time, without special exertion, as tired in the morning as when you retire at night, you may depend upon it, your blood is impure and is lacking in vitality. That is why it does not supply strength to nerves and muscles. You need

Hood's Sarsaparilla

To purify and enrich your blood. A few bottles of this great medicine will give you strength and vitality because it will make pure blood. Get Hood's.

Hood's Pills cure habitual constipation. Price 25 cents.

HOITT'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

Ira G. Hoitt, Ph. D., Master at Burlingame, San Mateo county, Cal., is one of the best schools for boys on the Pacific Coast.

A telegram from New York to Australia has to go nearly 20,000 miles, 15,000 of which are by submarine cable, and it is handled by fifteen operators.

LIKE A SIEVE.

The chief function of the kidneys is to separate from the blood, in its passage through them, of certain impurities and watery particles which make their final exit through the bladder. The retention of these, in consequence of inactivity of the kidneys, is productive of Bright's disease, dropsy, diabetes, albuminuria and other maladies with a fatal tendency. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a highly sanctioned diuretic and blood depurent, impels the kidneys when inactive to renew their sifting function and strain from the vital current impurities which infest it and threaten their own existence as organs of the body. Catarrh of the bladder, gravel and retention of the urine are also maladies arrested or averted by this benign promoter and restorative of organic action. Malaria, rheumatism, constipation, biliousness and dyspepsia also yield to the Bitters, which is also speedily beneficial to the weak and nervous.

The omnibus drivers of Paris have quit driving and gone on a strike. They have made walking delegates of all their old customers.

HOW'S THIS!

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligation made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Price, 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists. Testimonials free.

Instead of an engagement ring the Japanese lover gives his sweetheart a piece of beautiful silk for her sash.

Piso's Cure cured me of a Throat and Lung trouble of three years' standing.—E. CADY, Huntington, Ind., Nov. 12, 1894.

In a jury trial in Mexico two substitute jurors are chosen and sit near the regular jurors. Should one or two of the latter become ill the substitutes take their places.

A GREAT STAYER.

As competition increases it becomes harder and harder for the business man to succeed, and in recognition of this fact, the public is often informed that this or that thing has "come to stay." A strong purpose is good but doing the thing is even better. One of the greatest stayers we know of is Pain-Killer, the advertisements of which we are printing elsewhere. This famous old family remedy has stayed in the homes of the country 55 years, and is today more popular than ever. This one fact proves its value, and makes argument unnecessary. It only remains for the proprietors (as they are now doing) to remind each coming generation that for over half a century Pain Killer has been recognized as the handiest, surest and cheapest cure for the common ills of humanity, and that a bottle on their shelf will sooner or later save them trouble and suffering and money.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Ely's Cream Balm

Cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Heals the Sores.

Apply Balm into each nostril. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

FIRE-WORKS!

BUY DIRECT from the only MANUFACTURERS on the Coast. We make a specialty of 4th July displays. Send for Catalogue.

CALIFORNIA FIREWORKS CO.
219 Front Street, San Francisco.

FRENCH, SPANISH, SPOKEN

A "LINGUA" method of acquiring, in the shortest time, complete fluency of speech in the French and Spanish languages; containing simplified tables for the easy mastery of all the verbs; analysis of the grammar; conversations for every-day use; vocabulary, models of letters and cards, causerie, etc., etc. Price, $1 50 sent by mail, on receipt of the price. Address PROF. DE FILIPPE'S ACADEMY OF LANGUAGES, 320 Post St., San Francisco, Cal.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS

A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. WOODS & Co's.
"CASTLEWOOD" KENTUCKY BOURBON
CARTAN, McCARTHY & Co.
SOLE AGENTS, AND DISTRIBUTORS
SAN FRANCISCO

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE.

FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP
FOR CHILDREN TEETHING
For sale by all Druggists. 25 cents a bottle.

PAINS

and aches of an annoying nature, a torturous nature, a dangerous nature, can be quickly and surely cured with Pain-Killer. As no one is proof against pain, no one should be without Pain-Killer. This good old remedy kept at hand, will save much suffering and many calls on the doctor. For all summer complaints of grown folks or children it has stood without an equal for over half a century. No time like the present to get a bottle of

Pain-Killer

Sold everywhere. The quantity has been doubled but the price remains the same, 25c. Look out for worthless imitations. Buy only the genuine, bearing the name—PERRY DAVIS & SON.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH, RED CROSS PENNYROYAL PILLS DIAMOND BRAND

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE. The only Safe, Sure, and reliable Pill for sale. Ladies, ask Druggist for Chichester's English Diamond Brand in Red and Gold metallic boxes sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other kind. Refuse Substitutions and Imitations. All pills in pasteboard boxes, plus wrappers are dangerous counterfeits. At Druggists, or send 4c. in stamps for particulars, testimonials, and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Name Paper. Sold by all Local Druggists. CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO., 2519 Madison Sq., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"DON'T BORROW TROUBLE." BUY

SAPOLIO

'TIS CHEAPER IN THE END.

MALARIA! DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY. Three doses only. Try it.

CABLED POULTRY, GARDEN AND RABBIT FENCE the best in the market; also CABLED FIELD AND HOG FENCING, STEEL WEB PICKET LAWN FENCE, STEEL WIRE FENCE BOARD; a full line of steel gates, steel posts and rail, steel web picket tree, flower and tomato guards. Catalogue Free.

De Kalb Fence Co., 100 High St., De Kalb, Ill.

JNO. WOODLOCK, PACIFIC COAST AGENT, 26 Beale St., San Francisco, Cal.

Insist on ARM AND HAMMER SODA in packages

BEWARE of imitation trade marks and labels.

Costs no more than inferior package soda—never spoils the flour, keeps soft, and is universally acknowledged purest in the world.

Made only by CHURCH & CO., New York.
Sold by grocers everywhere.
Write for Arm and Hammer Book of valuable Recipes—FREE.

Hercu[illegible]

GAS [illegible]

Engin[illegible]

Workmanship the very best.
Always Ready, a boy can start the [illegible]
No double or false explosions.
They Oil Themseves

A FEW USES TO WHICH THE HERCULES CAN BE PUT:

For Wood-working Machinery.
For Bean-cleaning Machinery.
For Hoisting-works in Mines.
Running Machine Shops.
Running Shoe Factories.
Bottling Soda Water.
Sawing Cord-wood.
Running Churns.
Sawing Lumber.
Pumping Water.
Running Elevators.
Running Paint Mills.
Running Electric Motors.
For Printing Machinery.
Running Sewing Machines.
For Electric Light Dynamos.
Running Ice-cream Freezers
For Carpe-beating Machinery.

ADDRESS:
PALMER & REY[illegible]
405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal.

ASK YOUR DRUGGIST FOR

IMPERIAL GRANUM

IT IS THE BEST FOOD FOR Dyspeptic, Delicate, Infirm and AGED PERSONS

JOHN CARLE & SONS, New York.

S. F. N. U. No. 678. New Series No. 25.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. 25 CTS.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business. 48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc. AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to DR. BOSANKO'S PILE REMEDY, which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price $1.00. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philadelphia, Pa.

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, JULY 26, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVII. NO. 6. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JULY 26. 1895. WHOLE NO. 1291.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$1.00
Six Months	200
Three Months	125
One Month	50
Single Copies	10

QUEEN VICTORIA.

In Name Only But Not Likely to Abdicate.

HER QUIET HOME LIFE AT WINDSOR.

Undiminished Popularity of Albert Edward—He Does His Mother's Work—Usual Queen's Birthday Talk.

"If Great Britain were to adopt a republican form of government tomorrow, and if there were to be a popular election, for President of the British republic, the Prince of Wales would easily receive a majority of all the votes in the United Kingdom over any other candidate who could be named."

These words from one of the leading public men of England, himself anything but a royalist in principle and temperament, fairly reflect the views of the most experienced and astute judges of public opinion in Great Britain. The undiminished popularity of the Prince of Wales among nearly all classes of the people, inexplicable as it is to most Americans, is not surprising to those who have followed closely the career of that most pains taking, patient, unwearied and affable of public functionaries.

For a score of years the Prince has practically performed all the social and public duties of a British monarch, while holding the position and receiving recognition only as the first of the Queen's subjects. On the whole, he has done it well. He has made some errors, but they have not been serious errors. He has had to satisfy a great many people, widely differing in temperament, education, politics and religion, and yet possessing a certain common instinct of nationality, an insulate prejudice, a respect for established institutions and traditions quite unknown among cosmopolitan people like the Americans. So it is that, when the Prince speaks so felicitously at the dedication of some new philanthropic or religious institution, most nonconformists readily forgive his sporting tendencies, while all but the ultra-Jacobins among radical workingmen forget his royal blood when he strides democratically about among the horses in the sadling paddock on Derby day. In short, the Prince of Wales satisfies the tastes, ideas and prejudices of the average Englishman better than any member of his royal house has yet succeeded in doing, and the cheers that invariably greet his every public appearance are the echo of a spontaneous and general popular regard—heightened, of course, by the respect and affection inspired by the character of his lovely and estimable wife.

It is this feeling, undoubtedly, which has given rise to the rumor of the Queen's abdication upon the occasion of the celebration of her 76th birthday on the 24th inst. The rumor is not a new one. A good deal was said about it during the jubile year, 1887. Each succeeding year, as the Queen's infirmities have grown upon her and she has taken less and less interest in public affairs and more persistently withdrawn from all social duties, there has been [illegible] or less talk of the same [illegible]

[illegible] Victoria has ceased [illegible] name and a memory [illegible]s of her people. Since [illegible]er beloved friend and [illegible]aconsfield, she has taken [illegible] interest in public affairs. [illegible]ear, indeed, did rouse her [illegible]me little social activity, and with it there came something like a renaissance of the old royalist spirit in Great Britain. But that was soon followed by even closer seclusion and a still further weakening of the thread that binds the personality of the sovereign to the lives of the people.

Today the Queen is almost an invalid. Her rheumatism has grown upon her to such a degree as to render a residence in the wet, foggy and changeable climate of England extremely undesirable. She longs constantly for Italy, it is said, where she has passed so many months of peace and comfort of late years. She cannot walk at all except with the support of a cane and an attendant, and in England she cannot venture out during the late autumn, the winter and the spring months.

The confinement is extremely wearisome and depressing to the Queen. She no longer attempts to keep in touch with the affairs of state. She does not even dictate the responses to personal letters, which until recently she has always done. Her secretaries write all her letters for her except those to her immediate family which are written by Princess Beatrice.

Loved and revered in her own immediate circle gentle and considerate always to those about her Victoria has drifted apart from the ideas, the aspirations and endeavors of her people and practically belongs to a past generation. The political and social movements that are dominant forces in the England of today neither disturb nor interest her. Her days are given up to her family and to the three delights of an old woman's life—religion, match making and the society of her grandchildren. Her appearances at the royal social functions are now increasingly rare and are made great state occasions.

Yet, withal, the abdication of the Queen is extremely improbable. It would be without precedent, and, as far as possible, the English do nothing for this character without precedent. James II. did, indeed, abandon the crown to William of Orange, but from the monarch's point of view it was a case of exile and flight from armed rebellion rather than of abdication. The mad and mischievous old king, George III., yielded the reins of power to the regency of his infamous and worthless son, but that was a case of absolute necessity, and the king was still king in name.

There yet remains in England a peculiar and intense veneration for the monarchy, which an abdication would tend to greatly shock and disturb. Although in the British theory of government the monarchy is purely the creature of Parliament, it is not so in the minds and hearts of the people. Moreover, no political party except the Radicals could possibly gain anything by the Queen's abdication. The Radicals would favor it on the general principle that whatever disturbs the existing order makes for their cause. For that very reason, of course, the Conservative, would oppose it, while the present ministry is in such a position as to render it wise for them to discourage any event which might create a new condition in the political situation.

On the whole, it seems to say that Victoria will not signalize her seventy-sixth birthday, the fifty eighth year of her reign, by an abdication. If her infirmities should become so great as to render the exercise of her public duties practically impossible, a much more probable solution of the difficulty, and more in consonance with what is undertood to be the feeling of the Prince of Wales, would be a regency.

From an artistic standpoint, the accession of Albert Edward would be a loss to England. For some unexplained reason, the Prince of Wales has never liked Windsor, and has often been heard to declare that he would never live there. Now, Windsor is the one great feudal stronghold of old England, which is still maintained in the regal splendor befitting its history and surroundings, and this is so because it is the residence of sovereign Warwick Castle, its only rival in beauty of location, excellence of preservation and historic value, is tame as compared with the luxury, magnificence and artistic exquipment of Windsor.

Every foot of land surrounding the home of Queen Victoria is historic. At the foot of the hill lies the village where Shakespeare first met Mistress Davenant, and where the characters of Mistress Page and Mistress Ford, of Justice Shallow and Master Slender, of Fenton and Sweet Anne Page, took shape in the poet's brain. Back of the castle, with its miles of open glade and dense woodland, stretches the historic park where Falstaff was burned by the fairies—the hunting ground of many generations of English kings, and still the source of the venison that furnishes the royal table. A few miles below the park the Thames divides at Magna Charta Island, and there you may stand upon the very spot where King John signed the first declaration of independence, and under the very tree which tradition says is a scion of the oak about which the barons were gathered. Across the river from the castle is Eton, the mother of many generations of lustrious Englishmen, her walls scarred with immortal names, carved by boyish hands for centuries—Eton, upon whose playground Wellington testified that he got the training which enabled him to beat Napoleon at last.

Nor is Windsor itself less striking and significant than its surroundings. The great gray towers which have seen many a stubborn siege, guard a treasure of surpassing excellence and beauty. From the Waterloo room, with its great battle paintings and historic trophies, to the old oak-paneled banqueting hall, with the arms of every Knight of the Garter, from King Edward's time down to the present, hung upon its walls; from the old bed chambers, with their quaint furniture and their portraits of Stuart, princes and fine court ladies, by Lely and Kneller, to the splendid chapel of St. George, with its noble monuments, Windsor Castle, more than any other spot, except Westminster Abbey, embodies the national spirit of the English people.

Of course, the Queen occupies only a comparatively small protion of the present castle herself. Her private apartments are in a wing, the approaches to which are guarded by soldiers, even when her Majesty is not in residence. An audacious young American artist of my acquaintance, when the sentinel's back was truned, climbed up to one of the windows and proceeded to make a hasty sketch of the Queen's sitting room. He was interrupted before he had finished his work, but instead of being marched off to the guard house, as I fully expected would be the case, he was only mildly reprimanded. Possibly the soldier did not care to call the officer's attention to his own negligence.

The Queen seldom enters the state apartments now. When she receives the Prime Minister or any member of the royal family it is in her own room. One of the very few occasions when the grand staircase has been used of recent years was when Gen. Grant and Mrs. Grant visited the Queen at Windsor, and her Majesty received them at the head of the staircase. All presentations now are during the limited season when the Queen is at Buckingham Palace.

The people of the village see very little of their sovereign now, as her walks and drives are confined almost entirely to the park. But the older ones will tell you that it was not so in Albert's time. Some of them even recall the day when the young queen, joyful and smiling, with her brilliant and popular husband by her side, first drove the four white horses through the streets of the village and up to the castle gates, to begin their married life in their new home. Those were happy days—days of feasting and rejoicing, of cheer and prosperity to the townsfolk never to return again. Yet, despite her many years of seclusion, the romantic attachment of the people to the good and gentle Victoria survives. The Queen's birthday is still the Queen's birthday—the great national festal holiday of the year—not only to the good people of Windsor and of this tight little island, but to a hundred million Englishmen, scattered on every land and sea throughout the length and the breadth of the world.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

THE WHEELS OF 1895.

The specialties offered in the wheel of 1895 are numerous and commendable. Weight has been reduced wholesale in both racing wheels and roadsters. The thirty pound wheel of last season has entirely disappeared, and wheels weighing between eighteen and twenty-three pounds are now offered everywhere strong enough for road use. Racing machines are now shown that scale in the neighborhood of a dozen pounds, and there are also freak wheels under nine pounds, but of full size, that look at first glance not unlike pactical racers.

In the matter of light wheels of beautiful design and finish, ladies are particulaly well cared for this season, and they have now unlimited choice in wheels of diamond pattern adapted to rational dress and the drop frame stlye prefered by ladies who still adhere to the ordinary costume.

Wood rims have become the rule, as they are admitted to be just as strong and certainly as light as any other material.

Frames of larger tubing have at last been adopted by one or two enterprising makers, and this is a step in the right direction, as the bicycle has a nobler appearance, and an impression of strength and stability is conveyed that will do much to convert non-riders to a belief in its carrying power. The re-enforcement of frames by extra lengths of tubing, braced inside at points where the strain comes, is a capital feature of the 1895 high class mount, as is also the various forms of reversible handle bar, which can be raised or lowered at the will of the rider, as he may wish to lean over for speeding or sit upright for a pleasant jaunt along the road.

The tool steel, gun metal or case hardened unstretchable chain is a most acceptable improvement this year, as riders have suffered endless annoyance during the past few seasons for want of such an attachment. Larger and stronger hubs, ground out of the solid metal, with fewer and larger balls in the bearings, made of tool steel, and the cases absolutely dust-proof, stronger cranks and pedals of improved design, are all features which the experienced cyclist will find have been attended to by the makers of the up-to-date wheel. In this connection riders should also not fail to notice the new dustcaps that some makers have adopted, which permit of examining the bearings without taking the bails or cones out of the frame. An attractive but somewhat overestimated feature this year is the detachable sprocket wheel. As riders will hardly care to carry an extra sprocket, it would seem that the hy-logear that is instananteously changeable without dismounting, and which has been for so long in use by those "in the know," fills the bill to much better purpose.

Another doubtful change is the much talked of "narrow tread"—that is to say, the shortening of the crank axle, so as to bring the feet of the riders close together as possible. This may be all very well for track racers, but two inches of crank shafts is getting it down pretty fine if there is to be rigidity in the bicycle frames.—Hartford Post.

Mushrooms as Food In Europe.

As an article of food mushrooms are becoming more widely and favorably known each year. Immense quantities are grown for market in caves near Paris, some of the beds being seven miles long. One grower has 21 miles of mushrooms growing at Mery. In Italy the truffle beds are so valuable that they are guarded as carefully as are game preserves in England. But the poachers, quite equal to the necessity, train their dogs to go among the beds, dig up those mushrooms of marketable value and bring them out to the edge, where they are waiting to receive them. Mushrooms bring in a revenue of £4,000 a year to Rome, and M. Roques calls the despised toadstools the "manna of the poor."

Mr. Julius Palmer, our own authority on mushrooms, says: "Were the poorer classes of Russia, Germany, Italy or France to see our forests during the autumn rains they would feast on the rich food there going to waste, for this harvest requires no seedtime and asks for no peasant's toil. At the same time the value of mushroom diet ranks second to meat alone. America is one of the richest countries in mushroom food."—Margaret W. Leighton in St. Nicholas.

Made Him Sick.

It is said that Bryan Waller Proctor, known as Barry Cornwall, who wrote the well known poem—

I'm on the sea! I'm on the sea!
I am where I would ever be!

was the very worst of sailors. When we read that he was so seasick that he could scarcely bear the sound of a human voice, it becomes apparent that his wife's conduct during his affliction could scarcely have been reassuring.

As he lay on the deck of a Channel boat, covered with shawls and a tarpaulin, she had the pleasing habit of humming a strain of his jovial sea song. The poet who loved the sea, but loved it best at a distance, had very little life just then, but what force he had was used in the entreaty:

"Don't, my dear! Oh, don't!"

Yet no doubt he loved the sea.

Matrimony and Common Sense.

Every word spoken to our daughters regarding courtship and matrimony should be rich with the practical essence of common sense. Romance and sentimentality are well enough in poetry and fiction. Practical domestic life is neither poetry nor fiction. It is reality, a composite of joy, sorrow, success, disappointment, serenity, vexation. It is the average sum of human experience.—New York Mercury.

Information Furnished.

"It will be through by daylight," remarked Bellefield as he parted from Bloomfield about 11 p. m.

"What will be through by daylight?"

"The night."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Tel.

GLACIER BAY.

John Muir's First Visit to the Place.

EIGHT HUNDRED MILES JOURNEY.

With Many Hardships—Mountains of Ice Seen Through Fog and Storm—Sunrise on a Glacier.

John Muir, after whom the largest glacier in the world is named, writes a paper for the Century for June on "The Discovery of Glacier Bay." Mr. Muir says:

My first visit to the now famous Glacier Bay of Alaska was made toward the end of October, 1879 when young ice was beginning to form in the branch inlets occupied by the glaciers and the mountains were mantled with fresh snow all the way down from the highest peaks and ridges of the Fairweather Range nearly to the level of the sea.

I had spent most of the season exploring the canon of the Stickeen River and its glaciers, and a small portion of the interior region beyond the Coast Mountains, on the divide of some of the southerly tributaries of the Yukon and Mackenzie Rivers. When I got back to my headquarters at Fort Wrangel, about the beginning of October, it seemed too late for new undertakings in this icy northland. The days were growing short, and winter, with its heavy storms, was drawing nigh, when avalanches would be booming down the long white slopes of the peaks, and all the land would be buried.

But, on the other hand, though this white wilderness was new to me, I was familiar with storms, had enjoyed them, knowing well that in right relations with them they are ever kindly. The main inland channels, extending in every direction along the coast, remain open all winter; and their shores being well forested, it would be easy to keep warm in camp, while in a large canoe abundance of provisions could be carried. I determined, therefore, to go ahead as far north as possible, with or without companions, to see and learn what I could especially with reference to future work. When I made known my plans to Mr. Young, the Wrangel missionary, he offered to go with me, and with his assistance I procured a good canoe and a crew of Indians, gathered a large stock of provisions, blankets, etc., and on October 14 set forth, eager to welcome whatever wildness might offer, so long as food and firewood should last. . . . We made a jounrey more than 800 miles long; and though hardships were encountered, and a few dangers, the wild wonderland made compensation beyond our most extravagant hopes.

The first stages of our journey were mostly enjoyment. The weather was about half bright, and we glided along the green and yellow shores in comfort, the lovely islands passing in harmonious succession, like ideas in a fine poem. The rain did not hinder us, but when the wind was too wild we stayed in camp, the Indians usually improving such storm times in deer-hunting, while I examined the rocks and woods. Most of our camps were made in nooks that were charmingly embowered, and fringed with bushes and late flowers. . . . About noon we discovered the first of the great glaciers—the one I afterward named for Geike, the noted Scotch geologist. Its lofty blue cliffs, looming up through the draggled skirts of the clouds, gave a tremendous impression of savage power, while the roar of the new-born icebergs thickened and emphasized the general roar of the storm. An hour and a half beyond the Geikie Glacier we ran into a slight harbor where the shore is low, dragged the canoe beyond the reach of drifting icebergs, and, much against my desire to push ahead, encamped, the guide insisting that the big ice mountain at the head of the bay could not be reached before dark, that the landing there was dangerous even in dalylight, and that this was the only safe harbor on the way to it. While camp was being made I strolled along the shore to examine the rocks and the fossil timber that abound here. All the rocks are freshly glaciated even below the sea-level, nor have the waves as yet worn off the surface polish, much less the heavy scratches and grooves and lines of glacial contour.

The next day being Sunday, the minister wished to stay in camp; and so, on account of the weather, did the Indians. I therefore set out on an excurison, and spent the day alone on the mountain slopes above the camp, and to the north of it, to see what I might learn. Pushing on through rain and mud and sludgy snow, crossing many brown, boulder-choked torrents, wading, jumping, wallowing in snow to my shoulders, I had a desperately hard and dangerous time. After crouching, cramped and benumbed, in the canoe, poulticed in wet clothes and blankets night and day, my limbs had been long asleep. This day they were awake, and in the hour of trial proved that they had not lost the cunning learned on many a mountain peak of the high Sierra.

I reached a height of 1500 feet, on the ridge that bounds the second of the great glaciers on the south. All the landscape was smothered in clouds, and I began to fear that I had climbed in vain, as far as wide views were concerned. But at length the clouds lifted a little, and beneath their gray fringes I saw the berg-filled expanse of the bay, and the feet of the mountains that stand about it, and the imposing fronts of five of the huge glaciers, the nearest being immediately beneath me. This was my first general view of Glacier Bay, a solitude of ice and snow and new-born rocks, dim, dreary, mysterious. I held the ground I had so dearly won for an hour or two, sheltering myself as best I could from the blast, while with benumbed fingers I sketched what I could see of the landscape and wrote a few lines in my notebook. Then I breasted the snow again, crossed the muffled shifting avalanche tail, forded the torrents in safety, and reached camp about dark, wet and weary, but rich in a notable experience.

After we had seen the unveiling of the majestic peaks and glaciers that evening, and their baptism in the downpouring sunbeams, it was inconceivable that nature could have anything finer to show us. Nevertheless, compared with what was coming the next morning, all that was as nothing. As far as we could see, the lovely dawn gave no promise of anything uncommon. Its most impressive features were the frosty clearness of the sky, and a deep, brooding calm, made all the more striking by the intermittent thunder of the bergs. The sunrise we did not see at all, for we were beneath the shadows of the fiord cliffs; but in the midst of our studies we were startled by the sudden appearance of a red light burning with a strange, unearthly splendor on the topmost peak of the Fairweather Mountains. Instead of vanishing as suddenly as it had appeared, it spread and spread until the whole range down to the level of the glaciers was filled with the celestial fire. In color it was at first a vivid crimson, with a thick, furred appearance, as fine as the alpenglow, yet indescribably rich and deep—not in the least like a garment or mere external flush or bloom through which one might expect to see the rocks or snow, but every mountain apparently glowing from the heart like molten metal fresh from a furnace.

Beneath the frosty shadows of the fiord we stood hushed and awe-stricken, gazing at the holy vision, and had we seen the heavens opened and God made manifest, our attention could not have been more tremendously strained. When the highest peak began to burn, it did not seem to be steeped in sunshine, however glorious, but rather as if it had been thrust into the body of the sun itself. Then the supernal fire slowly descending with a sharp line of demarkation, separating it from the cold, shaded region beneath, peak after peak, with their spires and ridges and cascading glaciers, caught the heavenly glow, until all the mighty host stood transfigured, hushed and thoughtful, as if waiting the coming of the Lord. The white, rayless light of the morning, seen when I was alone amid the silent peaks of the Sierra, had always seemed to me the most telling of the terrestrial manifestations of God. But here the mountains themselves were made divine, and declared his glory in terms still more impressive.

How long we gazed I never knew. The glorious vision passed away in a gradual, fading change through a thousand tones of color to pale yellow and white and then the work of the ice-world went on again in every-day beauty. The green waters of the fiord were filled with sun-spangles; with the upspringing breeze the fleet of icebergs set forth on their voyages; and on the innumerable mirrors and prisms of these bergs, and on those of the shattered crystal walls of the glaciers, common white light and the rainbow light began to glow, while the mountains, changing to stone, put on their frosty jewelry, and loomed again in the thin azure in serene terrestrial majesty. We turned and sailed away, joining the outgoing bergs, while "Gloria in excelsis" still seemed to be sounding over all the white landscape, and our burning hearts were ready for any fate, feeling that whatever the future might have in store, the treasures we had gained would enrich our lives forever.—"The Discovery of Glacier Bay," by John Muir, in the June Century.

A MYSTERIOUS CITY.

Many stories have been written about mirages and delusions, but none have been more interesting and curious than that of the Silent City mirage, which makes its appearance near the Pacific glacier in Alaska. The discovery of this wonderful mirage as made by the Indians, who would tell of the city which was built in the clouds.

The mirage can be seen in the early part of July from 5 to 6 p. m. It rises from the side of the Pacific glacier. It first appears like a heavy mist, and soon becomes clearer, and one can distinctly see the specter city, well-defined streets and trees, tall spires, huge and odd-shaped buildings which appear to be ancient mosques or cathedrals.

It is a city which would seem to contain at least 25,000 or 30,000 inhabitants. No one has been able to identify it, although several have claimed to recognize the place. There is no city like it in Alaska, nor in any country about it for thousands of miles. Some claim it as a city in Russia, others say it is a city in England, but none can tell what or where it is. The mirage was given the name of the "Silent City,' as it appears to no one like a dead city. There is nothing which would indicate that it is uninhabited.

Here are some schoolboy answers to examination questions: "A point," wrote one boy, "is that which will not appear any bigger, even if you get a magnifying glass." "Two straight lines cannot inclose a space unless they are crooked," said another, who may have had Irish blood in his veins. "Parallel straight lines are those which meet at the far end of infinity" is equal to some poetry. "Things which are impossible are equal to one another" is common sense, even though it is not exactly mathematical.

It is stated on good authority that Mgr. Satolli will be created Cardinal at the next consistory.

POISON IN DRINKS.

The Deadly Compounds in Certain French Wines.

EXPERIMENTS ON GUINEA PIGS.

Some Startling Results that Probably Account for the Low Birth-rate in France.

Whether pure alcoholic beverages in limited quantities exert a baneful or beneficial effet upon the human system has long been a matter of dispute among learned physicians. Much light has been thrown upon this point by some experiments recently made by Dr. Laborde, of Paris.

The slow but steady diminution of the birth-rate in France is attributed in a great degree to the enormous consumption of wines and to those insiduous liquors which also form so important a portion of that country's exports.

"There is every indication that intemperance is increasing and will in time destroy us," said Dr. Bergeron, of the French Academy of Medicine, in 1869. "The diminishing birth-rate, the congenial weaknesses which become each day more general and apparent among the newly born of the working class, the diseased and deformed children which crowd our hospitals, the increasing number of cases of epilepsy, idiocy and other mental disorders, natural or acquired, and the multiplication of pulmonary diseases; this is the annually increasing tribute which alcohol continually demands." Since these words were written, nearly thirty years ago, the situation has become yet more grave.

The ruin by the phylloxera of many of the French vineyards led the chemists of commerce to devise numberless alcoholic liquors whose bases are poisonous, and whose moderate use, even, is more disastrous in their effect upon the human organism than would be the excessive consumption of unadulterated stimulants.

It costs the French people 377,000 francs per hour to be governed, and in the carefully balanced budget the receipts from taxes on alcoholic beverages is a great item. If drinking were stopped there would be a deficit.

The most eminent scientists in France were therefore called upon, and of late have done much towards establishing the comparative harmfulness of various products of distillation. The next step will be to proscribe those alcoholic beverages which have been shown to be venemous in their effects, and to encourage the sale of others by guaranteeing the purity of their ingredients.

It would take many columns of space to explain in detail the researches of these French savants—researches which represent years of study and experiment—but the results which they have arrived at may be summarized as follows:

All badly distilled alcohols contain poisons, of which the most terrible are pyromacic aldehyde and furturol. Aldehyde is produced by the oxidation of ordinary alcohol. When exposed to the air or to oxygen it is converted into acetic acid, the powerful corrosive qualities of which are well known. Furfurol is a volatile oil produced by the action of dilute sulphuric acid upon wheat, bran, sugar or starch. Aldehyde is also the general name of a class of compounds intermediate between alcohols and acids.

In the order of harmfulness the three kinds of alcohol are ranged thus, commencing with the least hurtful. Alcohol obtained from grapes, alcohol produced by the fermentation of grains, and lasty that manufactured from the beet root, which vegetable is largely cultivated in France and but little in this country.

All well-rectified alcohols—that is, those that are restored to a high degree of purity—are hardly more harmful than that which comes from the grape. The savants naturally conclude from this that the danger to the public health would be much decreased if the purity of alcohols could be assured.

Those compounds of herbs and alcohol, called liqueurs, for which France is famous, are, generally speaking, more poisonous than simple alcoholic wines, because to the liqueurs are added various chemical ingredients to conceal the taste of the herbs used. The most deadly and most generally used of these poisons is a compound of salicylic acid and aldehyde.

To practically illustrate the truth of these conclusions Dr. Laborde has made a series of experiments upon guinea pigs. Dr. Laborde has taken three of these little animals, each about 350 grammes (about 12 ounces) in weight, and injected into the viens of the first a cubic centimetre of ethylic alcohol, which is the purest obtainable. Ethyl is the radical of ordinary alcohol and ether. It has never been obtained in the free state. Pure alcohol is hydrate of ethyl.

Into the veins of the second guinea pig was injected a similar quantity of amylic alcohol, which is the kind found in adulterated wines and badly distilled liquors. Its chief constituent is fusel oil, which is contained in the crude spirit, and whose presence even in a small quantity impairs the quality of the spirit and renders it exceedingly harmful. The third little animal received a like dose of extrait d'absinthe such as is consumed in large quantities throughout France, Italy and Switzerland.

Absinthe is a highly aromatic liquor of an opaline green color and bitter taste, and is prepared by steeping wormwood and other herbs in alcohol or strong spirit. Its excessive use produces a morbid condition, differing somewhat from ordinary alcoholism. Vertigo and epilpetiform convulsions are marked symptoms, and hallucinations occur without other symptoms of delirium tremens. The use of absinthe has been forbidden in the French Army. The French call this beverage "the fairy with the green eyes."

Being given the weight of the guines pigs in proportion to that of a man weighing about 70 kilos, or 154 pounds, and the degree of concentration of the substances in proportion to the eau de vie and the liqueurs of current consumption, the quantity injected corresponded to the absorption by a human being of half a litre (four-fifths of a pint) of each liquid. It was injected into the animals instead of making them drink it, as, if the latter course had been pursued the liquid would have been promptly ejected from the animal's stomach and the experiment would have been a failure. The action of the liquids as they were administered is also more rapid.

Ninety seconds after the first guinea pig had received his dose of pure alcohol he gave the most manifest signs of inebriety. His sensibility and activity were much increased. If he was touched, for instance, at the extremity of some member he evinced great sensitiveness and ran about the small enclosure excitedly, but with apparent enjoyment of the exercise. His respiration was more rapid, and a sort of numbness and torpor resembling paralysis was noticed in his hind legs. The effects of the alcohol disappeared after several hours, and the animal resumed his accustomed nourishment.

The second guinea pig had scarcely absorbed his injection of amylic, or impure alcohol, when his body commenced to tremble violently and his eyes became dull and glassy. His hind legs became useless and failed to support him. A few seconds later he rolled over on his back utterly insensible and apparently dead. Many methods were resorted to in order to arouse him from this state, but met with no response. He was dead drunk, and remained in this condition for over twenty-four hours, after which came a period of semi-coma—a sort of brutish stupor—during which the animal hardly troubled itself to move, and digestion seemed at a standstill.

The third guinea pig suffered worst of all, however, and became a martyr to the cause of science. Two minutes after the injection of a cubic centimetre of ordinary extrait d'absinthe it stiffened its four legs and bounded into the air, and when it fell back to the ground rolled over and staggered about crazy drunk. The wild expression of its eyes was exactly the same as in the case of a man suffering from what doctors call "impulsive hallucination." Dr. Laborde tried this experiment on a dog once. The beast went mad and foamed at the mouth, and it was with great difficulty that the Doctor and his pupils escaped without serious injury. This alcoholic delirium in the dog is exactly the same as that which in human beings drives men to commit wholesale and indiscriminate homicide.

The guinea pig, however, showed its superiority to the human race by refraining from venting its frenzy upon those about it or itself. Its back stiffened into a semic-circle, and then the convulsions commenced. These were marked by violent somersaults and plaintive cries from the suffering animal, whose legs moved as if it were swimming. The brief intervals of calm between the attacks became shorter, and the convulsions more intense, until the victim died after forty-eight minutes of agony. Those physicians who have witnessed the end of the absintheur at the great Paris hospitals of St. Anne or Saltpetriere, say the symptoms in the animal and the human being are exactly the same, and that the death scene of the latter is frightful beyond description. Zola has depicted one such spectacle in "L'Assomoir," with all the horrible faithfulness to detail of which he is a master.

In the course of his experiments Dr. Laborde discovered that alcoholic exhalations were almost, perhaps, more, deadly than the liquid itself. He noticed after a time that on leaving his laboratory he would be attacked with every symptom of intoxication, though he never tasted even wine. Finally his system became so impregnated that up to a certain time he would feel no effects from the alcoholic atmosphere in which he worked, but, all in a moment, the limit of indurance would seem to have passed, and he would feel a wave of intoxication sweep over him, and would often have to be taken in a carriage to his apartments near by—to all intents and purposes stupidly drunk. So evil have been the effects of his inhalation of alcoholic fumes that Dr. Laborde's health is now much impaired, and he has been forced to abandon for a time his further researches.

An eider-down quilt rolled up and tied with a broad ribbon is now occasionally seen piled with the other cushions of a divan. It is said to have admirable fitting in qualities, and if the quilt is handsome, as such usually are, it is decorative as well.

An Island of Millionaires.—Jekyll Island is said to be the only place in the world entirely inhabited by millionaires. It belongs to a club composed of New York, Boston, and Philadelphia capitalists, the poorest of whom counts his fortune by millions.

Chemists say it takes more than twice as much sugar to sweeten preserves, sauces and the like if put in when they begin to cook, as it does to add it after the process is accomplished.

He—"I wonder when you will be able to set as good a table as my mother does?" She—"By the time you are able to provide as good a table as your father does, my dear."

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
ITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 2 1895

Sir William Harcourt's attempt to break the force of the bimetallic contention that a standard of gold and silver, which would give the world a greater stock of redemption money, would improve business throughout the universe, by calling attention to the fact that during the thirty years between 1815 and 1845 affairs were in as bad a way as they are now, was an unfortunate blunder. Bimetallists have used this period of depression to illustrate the necessity of an abundant supply of the money metals. All of the authorities are agreed that the production of gold and silver, which had been very large during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, began to decline shortly after the opening of the present century. Soetbeer estimates that the annual output of gold and silver, which was as high as $52,000,000 in in 1800, declined to $32,500,000 in 1846. The scarcity had a most disastrous effect on trade, which fell off enormously, and showed satisfactory signs of increase only after the gold discoveries in California and Australia were made. Had it not been for these discoveries, the stagnation to which Mr. Harcourt refers must have continued indefinitely, for the evidence is absolutely indisputable that the great revival of industry after 1849 is directly traceable to the vast increase of the volume of ultimate redemption money.—S. F. Chronicle.

The arrival at Stockton of two locomotives for the San Joaquin Valley Railroad bears eloquent testimony to the reality of the new enterprise. The "S. F. & S. J. V." on the tenders of these huge machines tells a story of progress that he who runs may read. The new road is not to be any cheap makeshift. Everything about it shows that it has come to stay. The grading is of the solidest description, the bridges are to be models of strength, the rails are as substantial as those used on the great trunk lines of the East, and the engines are the heaviest made. As the contracts for a supply of cars were let some time ago, there is nothing to interfere with the early operation of a part of the line. The trains that take materials to the front can bring grain and fruit back. The early days of railroading will be repeated, and the temporary terminus will be a moving town advancing over the plains and attracting clusters of farm wagons as the pole of a magnet attracts iron filings. The presence of those locomotives is an inspiring thing for California, but the sight of them stimulates the desire for something more. We want to hear the toot of their whistles as they rattle through the valley—Exc.

It is said that Horace G. Clark, the Washington attorney for the California State Miners' Association, has written a very sharp letter to the association, demanding his pay. He says that he discovered and disclosed to the miners their grievance and has furnished the brains for the fight; that the officers of the association could find money to have their pictures printed in the newspapers, but none to pay him for his services. There was money also to pay the expenses of their delegation to Washington, but his services were overlooked. Altogether, it is said that Mr. Clark's letter is a decidedly pointed and vigorous document.

When gold was going out of the country, millions a day, insensate howlers against the Administration found quite as much fault with it as they find now that the gold reserve is stable. They cannot be brought to forgive the Administration for maintaining the credit of the Government by inspiring confidence at home and abroad that all the lawful money of United States will be kept at par, and that money lent now will be repaid in money of equal value when the debt is due. The greatest sin of the Administration is that of restoring prosperity without the aid of the "kickers" and contrary to their doleful predictions.

Live Stock Points.

A pig is a pig till it is a year old. Then it becomes a hog. In classification for fairs, however, when a premium is offered for a sow and pigs, it is understood that the pigs are to be under 6 months old.

An old horse dealer says, "If you want to buy a horse, don't believe your own brother."

Give carrots, turnips and other juicy root feeds to horses plentifully in winter. They will vary the monotony of equine hard tack, and they are excellent for the digestion.

The Pennsylvania agricultural station analyzed some widely advertised "calf food" and found it to consist mostly of linseed meal. For such compounds a double or threefold to tenfold price is generally charged. Here is an excellent recipe for mixing a first class calf food yourself: Take 25 pounds each of cornmeal and linseed meal and mix them thoroughly. Into the mixture put a pound of sulphate of iron, a pound of aloes, 2 pounds powdered gentian, 2 pounds niter. Stir these perfectly into the mixture of cornmeal and linseed meal, and there you are.

Dams that suckle well never remain fat. If a sow is round and plump while her pigs are scrawny, it means either that you are not giving her the right food or that she is a poor suckler, probably the latter. Experiment with her food, giving her plenty of bran and middlings. Also give the pigs some new milk from a cow to piece out their defective rations from their mother's udder. If she does not improve, fatten and sell her for pork as soon as you have reared that litter, for she is no good as a suckler.

Cauliflower In Winter.

How to put away cauliflower plants that have not headed to keep for winter until they form heads is a perplexing problem with some growers. Here is a plan indorsed by Rural New Yorker:

Dig a pit of the required size 2½ feet deep. Commence at one end with the plants set as closely as they can be placed and cover the roots with earth. Cover with boards or sashes to keep out the rain. If the plants show the bud in the least, they will develop perfect heads before spring. Of course the frame will need to be lower on one side than the other to carry off the rains, and the boards should fit closely. In case of severe cold, say where the temperature falls below 15 degrees, some mats or straw should be thrown over the cover. They will keep and head up through the winter splendidly if set in the ground in a piece of woods and covered with leaves to the depth of six inches. Keep the leaves from blowing away by some brush.

NOTICE.

SCHOOL BOND ELECTION NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given to the electors of Taboose School District, in the County of Inyo, State of California, that, in accordance with the provisions of the Political Code of the State of California, as set forth in Section 1880, to and including Section 1888 of said Code, an election will be held on the 17th day of August, A. D. 1895, at the Public School House, in said Taboose School District, at which time will be submitted to the electors of said District the question of issuing bonds of the District and selling the same, for the purpose of raising money for purchasing school lots, and for building or purchasing one or more school houses in such District, and furnishing the same.

The polls will be opened and the election held at J. H. Miller's House, in Taboose School District, on the 17th day of August, 1895, and the polls will be open from 1 o'clock p. m. of said day until 6 o'clock p. m. of said day.

D. E. Smith, Inspector. J. H. Miller and George Calvert will act as Judges of said election to conduct the same.

The amount of bonds to be issued is One Thousand dollars, of the denomination of One Hundred and twenty-five dollars each, and to bear interest at the rate of eight (8) per cent per annum.

Said bonds are to be numbered consecutively 1 to 8 inclusive, and are to mature as follows to wit:

1. to mature, inclusive, One year from date.
2. " " " Two years from date.
3. " " " Three years from date.
4. " " " Four years from date.
5. " " " Five years from date.
6. " " " Six years from date.
7. " " " Seven years from date.
8. " " " Eight years from date.

Said election will be held in conformity with the provisions of the Political Code of California governing such elections.

A. L. CONKLIN.
J. W. CALLOWAY.
W. B. MOORE.
Trustees of Taboose School District.
Dated July 15th, 1895.

INYO SEMINARY.

A Classic and Scientific School for both sexes.

Competent Instructors in Art and Music.

BOARD AND TUITION REASONABLE

First term commences about September 1st.

For further particulars apply to the Principal, M. E. Temple Stevens, A. M. Bishop, Calif.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.

Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.

All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone

FRED BURCKHARDT.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO's

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING
EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.
FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

NEW FEE BILL.

CHAPTER CCVII.

An Act to establish fees of county, township and other officers, and of jurors and witnesses in this State.

[Approved March 28, 1895.]

The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The following county, township, and other officers shall charge and collect the following fees.

COUNTY CLERK.

On the commencement of any action or proceeding in the Superior Court, except probate proceedings, or on appeal thereto, to be paid by the party commencing such action or proceeding, or taking such appeal	$5 00
On the filing of a petition for letters of administration, testamentary, or guardianship five dollars, to be paid by the petitioner; provided, that at the time of filing the inventory and appraisment in any such proceeding there shall be an additional deposit of one dollar for each additional thousand dollars of the appraised valuation, in excess of three thousand dollars.
On filing the petition to contest any will or codicil	3 00
On the appearance of any defendant, or any number of defendants answering jointly, to be paid upon filing the first paper in the action by him or them	2 00
On placing any action, except a probate proceeding, or default case, on the calendar for trial or hearing, to be paid by the party at whose request such action or proceeding is so placed	2 00
For every additional defendant appearing separately	1 00
The foregoing fees shall be in full for all services rendered by such Clerk in the cause, to and including the making up of the judgment roll.
On the filing of any notice of motion to move for a new trial of any civil action or proceeding, the party filing same must pay to the Clerk, in full for all services to be rendered in connection with said motion, except as hereinafter in this section provided	2 00
For issuing an execution or order of sale in any action	1 00
In all proceedings begun or acts performed prior to this Act becoming a law, such and charges as were provided by the law at the time such proceedings were begun or acts performed.
The Clerk shall also charge and collect the following fees and compensation not above provided for:
For any copy of any record, proceeding or paper on file in the office of the Clerk relating to any civil action pending in said Court, when said copy is made by him, per folio	10
For each certificate of the Clerk, under seal of the Court	25
For filing each claim in probate or insolvency proceedings	15
No fees shall be allowed or charged by the Clerk for services rendered in any criminal case.
For services rendered by the Clerk, not in connection with civil actions or proceedings in Court, he shall charge and collect, for the benefit of the county, the following fees:
For issuing marriage license, one half to be paid to the County Recorder	2 00
For filing and indexing articles of incorporation	1 00
For filing and indexing certificates of copartnership	1 00
For filing and indexing all papers to be kept by him, other than papers filed in actions or proceedings in Court, and official bonds and certificates of appointment, each	25
For issuing any license required by law, other than marriage licenses	1 00
For examining and certifying to a copy of any paper, record, or proceeding prepared by another, and presented for his certificate, fifty cents, and one cent per folio for comparing the said copy with the original.
For making satisfaction of or credit on judgment	25
For receiving and filing remittitur from Supreme Court	50
For administering each oath, without certificate, except in a pending action or proceeding	10
For taking any affidavit, except in criminal cases	25
For taking and approving each undertaking and the justification thereof, except in criminal cases	50
For searching records or files, for each year	50
For taking acknowledgement of any deed or other instrument, including the certificate	50
For filing notices of appeal and appeal bonds, each	25

SHERIFF.

For serving any process, writ, order, or paper, except as hereinafter provided, required by law to be served by the Sheriff	50
For serving a writ of attachment, execution, or order for the delivery of personal property	1 00
For taking any bond or undertaking	50
For serving an attachment or execution on any ship, boat, or vessel	3 00
For keeping and caring for property under attachment or execution, such sum as the court may fix, provided, that no greater sum than two dollars per day shall be allowed to a keeper when necessarily employed.
For a copy of any writ, process, or paper actually made by him, when required or demanded according to law, per folio, ten cents; provided, that when correct copies are furnished to him for use, no charge shall be made for such copies.
For advertising sale of property and posting notice, exclusive of cost of publication, or furnishing notice for publication, each	50
For publication of notice in newspaper, the reasonable cost of publication, subject to the approval of the Court.
For serving writ of possession or restitution, putting a person in possession of the premises, and removing the occupant	1 50
For subpoenaing witness, including copy of subpoena, each	25
For summoning trial jury of twelve or less	2 00
For each additional juror	10
For traveling in the service of any paper required by law to be served, for each mile actually and necessarily traveled, one way only, fifteen cents, when such travel can be made by rail, in other cases, twenty-five cents. No constructive mileage to be allowed.
For collecting money on execution, with or without levy, one per cent on the first thousand dollars or less, and one half of one per cent on all sums over one thousand dollars.
For executing and delivering Sheriff's deed	1 50
For executing and delivering certificate of sale	50
For transporting prisoners to county jail, actual cost of such transportation.
For executing and delivering any other instrument, per folio	10

RECORDER.

For recording every instrument, paper, or notice required by law to be recorded, per folio	10
For indexing every instrument, paper, or notice, for each name	10
For filing every instrument for record, and making necessary entries thereon	20
For each certificate under seal	25
For every entry of discharge, credit, or release on the margin of record, and indexing same	25
For searching the records of his office, for each year	50
For abstract of title, for each conveyance or incumbrance	25
For recording each map or plat where same is copied in book of record, for each course	10
For recording each map or plat, where same is not copied in a book of record	50
For figures or letters on maps or plats, per folio, ten cents; provided, that the fees for recording any map shall not exceed fifty dollars.
For taking acknowledgement of any instrument	50
For recording marriage license and certificate, to be paid by County Clerk	1 00
For recording transcript and all services in estray cases	1 00
For recording each mark or brand	50
For administering each oath or affirmation, and certifying the same	25
For filing, indexing and keeping each paper not required by law to be recorded	25

The Clerk, Sheriff, and Recorder shall account for all fees in this section provided for, and the Clerk, Sheriff and Recorder, unless otherwise provided by law, shall pay the same to the County Treasurer on the first Monday of the month following their collection, as provided in this Act.

County Officers must, and township officers may, demand the payment of all fees in civil cases, in advance.

SECTION 2. No fees or other compensation shall be paid for certificate of declaration to become a citizen of the United States, and for making a record thereof, or issuing a certificate of citizenship to become a citizen of the United States, or for making a record thereof; and no fees or other compensation shall be paid for filing the statement and affidavit of a committee or candidate voted for at any public election held within the State; and this section shall apply to all the counties in the State.

SECTION 3. All Acts or portions of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect immediately.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, to all persons having business with the offices of Clerk, Sheriff or Recorder fo the County of Inyo that the above provisions of the Fee Bill are mandatory, and will be strictly enforced.*

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk and Recorder.

Independence, Cal., June 3, 1895.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER, General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.		From Mound House No. 1	To Mound House No. 2
		Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House		10.50 a. m	5.20 p. m
Dayton		11.25 a. m.	4.45 p. m
Wabuska		1.40 p. m	2.30 p. m
Hawthorne	Ar.	5.00 p. m	Lv. 11.00 a. m
		No. 3. Leave—	No. 4. Arrives—
Hawthorne		6.00 a. m.	7.25 p. m
Luning		7.10 a. m.	6.15 p. m
Soda Springs		7.50 a. m.	5.35 p. m
Belleville		8.10 a. m.	4.35 p. m
Candelaria		9.40 a. m	3.50 p. m
Benton		1.30 p. m	11.50 a. m
Bishop Creek		3.10 p. m.	9.50 a. m
Alvord		.05 p. m	8.55 a. m
Independence		4.35 p. m.	7.25 a. m
Lone Pine		5.20 p. m.	6.40 a. m
Keeler	Ar.	7.00 p. m.	Lv. 6.00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturday

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (25 miles); Bodie (3 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salsbury & Co's tri-weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (9 miles), Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles)

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

Adolph Gerckens Plaintiff, vs. Annie J. Gerckens Defendant.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Annie J. Gerckens, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain judgment against you and a decree dissolving the the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the plaintiff and defendant as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 18th day of June, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. W. BENNETT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA.

Location of principal place of business: San Francisco, California. Location of works, Inyo, Inyo County, California.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Directors held on the 5th day of July, 1895, an assessment (No. 27) of ten cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, Room No. 12, Rotunda, Mills Building, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this Assessment shall remain unpaid on the 8th, day of August, 1895, will be declared delinquent, and advertised for sale at Public Auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Wednesday, the 4th day of September, 1895, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.
W. W. SARGEANT, Secretary.
Office—Room 12, Rotunda, Mills Building San Francisco, California.

Carpet Weaving.

MRS. J. P. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.

PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER

We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kinds of carpet and rug weaving.

Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished, at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.

First class work guaranteed at low prices.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc. given careful and promt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY--AT--LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases

Brown & Wills,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery
All kinds of dental work done according to latest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING IN ANY STYLE, SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.
Dated at Independence, July 18, 1894.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administrator.

HOTELS.

NORMAN HOUSE
Independence. - Cal
New House. New Furniture. Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.
O. I. MAIRS Pro
feb12tf

BIG PINE HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL
New House. New Furniture. Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
Thos. Callow, Proprietor.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.
First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

FOR SALE.
THE WHITNEY HOUSE
—The only hotel in—
LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL
Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address
MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.
Dated February 2nd 1895.

JOHN B. CLARKE,
Successor to John Clarke,
—PROPRIETOR—
John Clarke's Bishop Stables,
BISHOP, CAL.
First-class Turnouts of Every Kind
Fine horses and Carriages.
horses Boarded for any Time
Best of Care and Attention

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY
L. MUNZINGER & CO., Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will presen he same by the first of each month and avment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modo Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT in pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY, the 8th day of March, 1892, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter of the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 10 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the South-east corner of south-east quarter of North east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 98-100 feet, to the North-east following the meanderings of the bed of the Creek along its North branch to Edwards street in the town of Independence, thence following said Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, containing 80-100 acres; also lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29, in the town of Independence, in the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hallhah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead, or lode situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "La Dispicada Lode."

That certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura State of California, commencing at a point twelve and nine-twentieth (12 9-20) rods south of the general corner of the North-west quarter and the North-east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South-west quarter and the South-east quarter of Section No. one (1), in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardine Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and eleven-twentieth (68 11-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North-westerly along a small branch or swale to a point twenty-four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North East quarter and the South east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North east quarter of the south west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West; running thence North forty-four and eleven twentieth (44 11-20) rods thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres. Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney, at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and alls bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER
Executor of the Last Will and Testament John Allen Hannah, deceased.
Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th 1892.

SAVE YOUR SHOES
SAVE YOUR SHOES
AMES' SHOE
PROTECTOR is to make the shoe last as long as the upper of any ordinary shoe. It will save from 20 to 60 times its cost in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.
PAT. APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROP'R.
Horseshoeing ..... $2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1894, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday ..... January 5th
" ..... February 9th
" ..... March 9th
" ..... April 6th
" ..... May 4th
" ..... June 1st
" ..... June 30th
" ..... August 3rd
" ..... August 31st
" ..... October 28th
" ..... November 2nd
" ..... November 31st

THOMAS C. BOLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND RHINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, AUGUST 2.....1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman .....GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman.....CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge.....GEO. M. GILL.
Sheriff.....ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk.....DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney..... ...P. W. FORBES.
Assessor.. .....P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer .... W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner.....I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed) .....JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools.....S. W. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist.....FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist .....A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist .....J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist.....J. J. STEWART.
5th Supervisor Dist..FRANK FITZGERALD.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz.....	$ .66¼
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots.....	5½
Pig lead.....	3.90

MARRIED.

CARRASCO—DIAZ—At Lone Pine, July 28, 1895, by A. C. Harvy, J. P., Jesus Carrasco and Miss Delfina Diaz, both of Lone Pine.

DIED.

CARBERRY—At Keeler, July 29, 1895, Henry Carberry, a native of Ireland, aged 75 years.

Dr. I. J. Woodin has been on the sick list this week.

Mrs. Neil McLean has gone to Lone Pine to visit friends.

Tommy Kehoe is to the front with green corn. Try some of it.

Brady, the train robber was captured last week at Richland, Cal.

Arthur Robinson has had another sick spell. He is better now, however.

Joe Groves and the McCormick Bros. are working pay dirt in Mazourka.

Regular meeting of Inyo Lodge, No. 321 F. & A. M., to-morrow evening.

[illegible] will have over sixty tons [illegible] ranch this year.

[illegible] melons of the season [illegible] the market the first of [illegible]

[illegible] nugget was reported found in [illegible]ourka last week. Chas. Houle be[illegible] the finder.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Rhine are visiting with friends and relatives in the upper end of the Valley.

Leon Marks and Tommy Parker are spending a few days fishing at the headwaters of Kings river.

A. C. Harvey and a party of ladies came up from Lone Pine last Sunday, returning the same day.

Rudolph Schober arrived from Mojave last Tuesday evening with a load of freight for Bishop merchants.

Judge N. D. Arnot arrived from Alpine county last Friday evening and has been holding court all the week.

John McSweeny and Neil McLean expect to go to Cerro Gordo next week to haul ore for Pat Clinton.

James A. Yerington came over to Independence on Wednesday evening, returning Thursday morning.

Supervisor Fitzgerald came in from Modock early in the week and is spending a few days at Lone Pine.

E. H. Edwards, Mark Hand and H. C. Hamilton, all of Lone Pine were visitors at the end of last week.

County Treasurer Bunney and family arrived home yesterday from a camping trip to the Mammoth country.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Eibeshutz expect to start for San Francisco to-morrow morning to be gone about two weeks.

Pasted a dime on a sheet of paper and send to Crocker & Ames, 619 Montgomery St., San Francisco, for Ame's Shoe Protector, the wonderful saver of shoes.

S. G. Sneden Esq. came down from Bishop on Wednesday and will remain here until Tuesday. He has several cases in the Superior Court requiring his attention.

Mr. and Mrs. Mills, father-and mother-in-law of L. A. Anger of Camp Independence, arrived from New York on Wednesday evening and will make their home here.

Messrs. Shelhamer and Church of Pasadena arrived in town yesterday morning and spent the day looking over some of the fine farms in this vicinity. They are reported to be looking for investment in farm property.

Mr. and Mrs. John Baxter were both quite ill during the week, Mrs. Baxter is reported better this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Willett and Miss Rosa Roeper started for Long Valley for a camping trip on Tuesday morning.

The next conference of the Nevada M. E. Mission will be held at Winnemucca, Nevada, on the 20th of this month.

Miss Georgie Johnson came down from Bishop last Monday and is doing the official reporting in the Superior Court.

Durrant has been denied a change of venue and is now being tried in San Francisco for the murder of Blanche Lamont.

Supt. Rives of the Hirsch mine has completed his residence at the mine and moved his family over there yesterday morning.

A. O. Collins and Louis B. Heise came down from Warm Springs on Monday, returning on Tuesday. Mr. Heise located a desert claim south of the Collins ranch.

Fishing in the lakes surrounding Onion Valley is reported to very poor this year. Plenty of fish can be seen in the water but they will not bite at any bait yet tried.

Abe Church came over to town last Monday evening and took his family up to Grey's place Wednesday morning to spend a couple of weeks camping and fishing.

Tom Morris, the champion sprinter, is reported to have started for Boston on Tuesday morning, where there is to be a big race for the fastest foot-racers in the world.

The trouble with the Bannock Indians, in Wyoming is getting serious. Sixteen families of whites have been murdered and the troops have been ordered to the scene.

Miss Delfina Diaz has been appointed Executrix of the estate of Mrs. A. A. Diaz, deceased. In company with her sister, Miss Manuela Diaz, and Relles and Jesus Carrasco, she came to Independence last Saturday on business connected with said estate.

Will Sanger returned from Los Angeles last week, where he had been with a small bunch of horses. He succeeded in disposing of them all but the prices were low. He is of the opinion, however, that prices will be better this fall, when he will try it again.

Supt. Rives states that he expects to have the new mill at the Hirsh mine in good running order about the middle of September. He does not expect to do custom work, however, for time some at least. The mill will be kept running steadily on ore from the Hirsch mine.

Pat. Keys and his two men, R. Wilder and Arthur Noyes, came in from Beveridge at the end of last week. They had just finished a run of ore through the arrastra at the old McEvoy mill, resulting in a cleanup of two hundred and eighty-four ounces of bullion, which has been shipped to San Francisco. The bullion is estimated to be worth $3,000.

Henry Carberry, well known in southern Inyo as "Mountain Harry," died at Keeler last Monday. He was a native of Donegal, Ireland, aged 75 years. He was in the military service for a number of years, at a private in Battery "M," Third Regiment U. S. Artillery, and in Company "F," Second California Volunteer Infantry. Harry was a confirmed prospector and never until the last gave up the hope that some day he would strike it rich.

Jesse Fox came in from Red Rock this week with Schober's team. He and another man have been prospecting in the country about Jawbone and struck a small ledge of coal. He brought in a couple of sacks and it seems to be a splendid article of bituminous coal. The weather was so intensely hot that he could not do much in the way of development, but he will return later and prospect the strike thoroughly. The mine is about ten miles north of Mojave.

Cattle At Long Valley.

Henry Giles came down from Long Valley at the end of last week, returning on Monday. Mr. Giles says that the cattle in Long Valley have been doing well hitherto, but that the feed will give out earlier than usual this year, owing to the range being overstocked. Several of the cattlemen who have steers to sell have made a combine and rented a pasture containing about a thousand acres near Bridgeport and will take their cattle there and fatten them for market. He states that if they do not get satisfactory prices at Bridgeport they will drive to Reno and sell to Chicago buyers. Fred Holbert went to Long Valley last week and will doubtless purchase a number of steers to fatten on the Sanger Ranch at Alvord.

Continue To Pay.

The placer mines in Mazourka Canyon still continue to yield up the yellow metal. Jim McCormick, an elderly man and badly crippled with rheumatism, has taken out about two hundred dollars since the Fourth. Charley Houle and Dave Johnson are working the old Cartier claim at the Golden Star and are making good wages. Charley brought in a handsome nugget last Saturday which weighs two ounces and is worth thirty-six dollars. This was found in in the waste dirt and had evidently been thrown over the screen by Cartier, who found a nugget weighing about five ounces in the same place. Pete Laberge is reported to be taking out about an ounce per day at Santa Rita flat. His ground is hard to work, however, as the surface dirt to a depth of three feet must be removed with a scraper. There are several other parties prospecting over there and all taking out about enough for a grub stake. Tom Ferguson expects to go over on Saturday and try his hand at the business.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place on July 22, 1895, a grey mare, weight about 1100 lbs. no visible brand, large scars on back, swelling in knee of left front leg, gentle animal and a persistent gate breaker. Owner will call and prove property and pay charges.

R. L. Rossi.
At Lacey Ranch.

Camp Independence, July 26, 1895.

Clippings.

From the Lpon County Times of July 28 we take the following:

A bar of gold worth $12,000 was received at Carson last week from Silver Star.

The Dayton and Hawthorne nines will cross bats in the near future for $200 a corner.

The rear of the wood drive reached this place Thursday, and the wood will all be out in a few days.

A great many swarms of bees have died this summer in Mason Valley, presumably on account of their swarming before the flowers were in bloom.

James Yerington and a party of mining experts passed through here last Sunday on their way to Silver Star District, in Esmeralda county, to look at the gold mines which were not sold to Senator Wolcott, of Colorado. The people represent St Louis capilists, and Mr. Yerington thinks there will be no doubt about a sale being made this time.

From the Yerington Rustler of July 25.

T. B. Rickey is reported to be sick at Bridgeport.

Look out for counterfit $5 gold coin of 1894 or 1886.

The first crop of alfalfa is nearly all in stack and the farmers are well pleased with the yield.

It is reported that R. L. McCarty of Bishop, Cal. has purchased the Mason Valley Tidings, and will start another paper in Bodie.

Should the ore from the Logan mine which is being tested by the cyanide process, be worked successfull, a cyanide plant will be erected in Como instead of starting up the old mill.

From the Chronicle-Union of July 27.

Yesterday morning a band of sheep belonging to Manuel Irizois was attached by the county for sheep libense tax, the owner having made a return of 2,400 head. The Tax collector had them counted yesterday morning, and found, instead of 2,400, there were 5,500 head, 3,100 more than they took out a license for—Every band so far counted show that the county has been swindled. The owners will find out that "honesty is the best policy" even in paying their sheep licenses.

A dispatch was received last night from Bakersfield instructing the party in charge of the sheep to pay the license, so it is probable the affair will be arranged to-day and the suit dismissed.

Work on the ditch of the Standard Con. at the Green Creek Dynamo plant, was again started on Wednesday.—The Company is more liberal than it was last fall, when the ditch and dam were commenced. Superintendent Brown, who has but recently assumed charge of the Standard Con. mine, giving the men $2 a day and board, equal to $3 a day.

The ax has fallen and the devoted head of our friend John F. Millner, Benton's Postmaster, has dropped into the basket. Miss Tillie Claussen having been appointed Postmistress at that place.

Bullion to the amount of $3,593 97 was recently received in San Francisco from the Bulwer Con. mine at Bodie.

From the Carson Morning News.

A party of emigrants passed through Carson yesterday southward bound. They are from the State of Washington, where they were disappointed in the farming outlook and will probably locate in Invo county, Cal.

A large forest fire is raging in the mountains ten miles east of Truckee. It started a day or two ago and is raging furiously. It covers an area of nearly three miles. Hundreds of men out battling with the flames. Large quantities of wood and timber are in danger. The view of the great fire from Truckee is said to be grand.

Coolgardie.

Rich new finds are being constantly reported from Coolgardie gold fields. Coolgardie, Australia, is an accessible point, reached by steamer to Fremantle, thence by rail to Southern Cross and team to destination. The trip to Australia on the fine steamers of the Oceanic Steamship Company via Honolulu, Samoa, and New Zealand is pleasure sailing the day long. This line tickets passengers to Cape Town, South Africa. Map of Coolgardie district and Pacific ports reached by the Oceanic Steamship Company is mailed free to any address by the O. S. S. Co. 138 Montgomery St San Francisco.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Keeler, Cal. on June 24, 1895, three horses dessribed as follows: One brown mare, white star in forehead branded thus 2C on left hip. One chestnut mare, both ears split, white stripe in forehead both hind legs white branded thus TS on left hip and shoulder. One iron-grey mare branded thus S on left hip and shoulder (brands on this mare very dim.) The owner is hereby notified to claim his property and pay the charges upon the same, or I will, at the expiration of thirty days cause them to be sold according to law.

JOHN BARNES.

Keeler, July 15, 1895,

Weather Summary, Week Ending August 1, 1895.

Highest barometer,	30.002 date, 1st.
Lowest "	29.653 date, 26th.
Highest Temperature	97.5 date, 26th
Lowest "	54.3 date, 31st.
Mean "	76.4
Average dew point	30.0
" humidity	19.7
Total precipitation	0

Prevailing direction of wind, NW.
Highest velocity and date, 22, SE 30th.
Number of clear days 4.
" " partly cloudy days 2.
" " cloudy days 1.
" " rainy days (.01 or more rain) 0.

H. E. WILKINSON.
Observer.

The thermometers of the Weather Bureau station have been moved from the top of the Norman House to the ground. The change being made for the purpose of obtaining a more fair measurement of temperature.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of A. A. DIAZ, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNDERSIGNED, Executrix of the estate of A. A. DIAZ, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Executrix at her residence at the town of Lone Pine, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the County of Inyo, State of California.

DELFINA DIAZ.
Executrix of the estate of A. A. Diaz, deceased.

Dated at Lone Pine, Inyo Co., Cal., August 2nd 1895.

W. A. LAMAR, Attorney for Executrix.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.,
July 29, 1895.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. (Main Line) has filed in this office a list of lands situated in the townships described below, and has applied for a patent for said lands; that the list is open to the public for inspection, and a copy thereof, by descriptive subdivisions, has been posted in a convenient place in this office for the inspection of all persons interested and the public generally.

Within the next sixty days following the date of this notice, protests or contests against the claim of the company to any tract or subdivision described in the list, on the ground that the same is more valuable for mineral than agricultural purposes will be received and noted for report to the General Land Office at Washington, D. C.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Register.
A. W. EIBESHUTZ, Receiver.

SUPPLEMENTAL TO CLEAR LIST NO. 23, TRACTS SELECTED BY SOUTHERN PAC. R. R.—MAIN LINE GRANTED LIMITS.

Independence District.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.,
July, 25, 1895.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company has filed in this office a list of lands situated in the townships described below, and has applied for a patent for said lands; that the list is now open to the public for inspection and a copy thereof, by descriptive subdivisions, has been posted in a convenient place in this office for the inspection of all persons interested and the public generally.

Within the next sixty days following the date of this notice, protests or contests against the claim of the company to any tract or subdivision described in the list, on the ground that the same is more valuable for mineral than agricultural purposes, will be received and noted for report to the General Land Office at Washington, D. C.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Register.
A. W. EIBESHUTZ, Receiver.

SUPPLEMENTAL LIST NO. 23.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD LANDS INDEMNITY SELECTION (MAIN LINE).

Independence Land District, California.

List No. 8, approved September 28, 1889.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

List No. 11, approved September 26, 1894.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.
Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 34 East, M. D. M.

List No. 7, approved June 18, 1889.

Lands situated in Township 27 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.,
July 25, 1895.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that the Southern Pacific Railroad has filed in this office a list of lands situated in the townships described below, and has applied for a patent for said lands; that the list is open to the public for inspection, and a copy thereof, by descriptive subdivisions, has been posted in a convenient place in this office for the inspection of all persons interested and the public generally.

Within the next sixty days following the date of this notice, protests or contests against the claim of the company to any tract or subdivision described in the list, on the ground that the same is more valuable for mineral than agricultural purposes, will be received and noted for report to the General Land Office at Washington, D. C.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Register.
A. W. EIBESHUTZ, Receiver.

SUPPLEMENTAL TO CLEAR LIST NO. 24.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD LANDS, MAIN LINE.

Independence Land District.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 34 East, M. D. M.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE WHY ORDER OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE SHOULD NOT BE MADE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of the estate of James Daley, deceased.

H. H. Howell, the Administrator of the estate of James Daley, deceased, having filed his petition herein, duly verified, praying for an order of sale of the Mayflower mine and mining claim, and the decedent's mill-site, being a portion of the real estate of said decedent, for the purposes therein set forth,

It is therefore ordered by the Judge of said Court that all persons interested in the estate of said deceased appear before the said Superior Court on Saturday, the 17th day of August, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, at the Court-Room of said Superior Court, at the Court House, in the County of Inyo, State of California, to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said Administrator to sell the said mine and mining claim and the said mill site.

And that a copy of this order be published at least once a week for four consecutive weeks in the Inyo Independent, a newspaper printed and published in said Inyo county.

GEO. M. GILL,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Dated July 1, 1895.

[Endorsed.]

Filed July 3, 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

Bennett & Forbes, Attorneys for Petitioner

MERCHANDISE.

The newest Style

OF

Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOD

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, "DRESDEN" WARE.

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get the

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE, INYO Co. Cal.

PROVISIONS

&c., &c., &c

A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

MERCHANDISE.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL

MERCHANDISE

Agent For

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

☞ Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
1164tfo

NATHAN RHINE,

Independence, Cal.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

ALSO TRANSACTS A

GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

AGENT FOR

WELLS, FARGO & CO'S EXPRESS,
WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO.
MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO. OF NEW YORK.
LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE FIRE INSURANCE CO.

NATHAN RHINE.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS. WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

☞ All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

0-m RENO, NEVADA

MISCELLANEOUS.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave,
WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS
at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeler,
MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS
at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER,
Propr.

INDEPENDENCE

MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

☞ Parties supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.

j19-tf

BELL'S Flouring Mills

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the managment of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. I. MAINS, Proprietor

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

IN CARIBOO.

By JULES VERNE.

"Which, of course, you refused!" cried the young man indignantly.

"He assured us that he is the owner of mining claims worth several hundred thousand dollars"——

"What, father," interrupted Leon, "can it be you entertained his proposition?"

"Gently, gently, my son!" said Morel. "I'm wiser than you in these worldly matters. Captain Roberts is a man of position and power in the province and a dangerous man to have for an enemy. I tried not to offend him. I thrust myself down and told him that a farmer's daughter would not make a proper wife for a British officer of rank and wealth."

"Thank heaven," ejaculated Leon, "that you were strong enough to do this, father! But how did it all end?"

"He grew violent," replied Mr. Morel, "and warned me to have a care how I made enemies in this wild and desperate country. 'When it once became known,' said he, 'that Captain Roberts has been accepted as the future husband of Miss Pauline, you and your family will be as safe in the province as you would be in your native village.' He then promised to give you valuable information as to the location of mining claims, guaranteeing that you would return home a millionaire within a year's time. To all these brilliant promises I returned a firm but respectful answer that the proposed alliance was impossible. Whereupon, thinking to make a bold strike for the coveted prize, Roberts called out: "Well, friend Morel, this way of deciding things may be French fashion, but it is not our English way. Let Miss Pauline have a word to say. She has assured me that her heart is entirely free.'

"At this," continued Morel, "our little Pauline turned very red, but I agreed to the proposition, and calling her to my side told her to decide her own fate. She fixed her eyes on Captain Roberts' face, which became very pale as he met Pauline's steady, honest look.

"'I'm grateful for the honor, Captain Roberts,' said she quietly, 'but it cannot be. I love—another.'"

"Brave little Pauline!" cried Leon. "Spoken like a true Alsatian, but who the deuce"——

Morel raised his hand and motioned to his son to keep silence, and then continued, "When Roberts heard these words he broke out fiercely:

"'Love another? What, can it be possible that you have allowed this unknown adventurer, who happened to save you from the grizzly'— Roberts paused, fairly choking with rage, while our Pauline grew redder and redder. 'Some desperado from the states,' he blurted out, 'low riffraff that has drifted into the province since the gold was discovered. Morel, you're a fool, you're a madman! But go your ways! I wish you luck with your new son-in-law. He'll be a credit to you!' and seizing his horse's reins, he swung himself in the saddle and rode off."

"We've made a dangerous enemy," cried Leon, "but we're honest folk, and have nothing to fear from anybody!"

"Roberts may not be as bad as his reputation," said Morel. "I'm told he has a son and daughter in the province, and that it's the son's influence with the government which keeps the father in command of the mounted police."

"Come, come," exclaimed Madam Morel, testily, "are you men never coming to dinner. Everything is getting cold. I've cooked a stick full of tortillas for you, Leon, and for you, papa, I've got a lovely mess of pigjeree (bacon and rice), so come one and come all and let little Pauline's lovers take care of themselves."

There was a hearty laugh at Pauline's expense, and the family gathered around the table, which was formed by setting a stake under the tailboard of the pack wagon. Leon had much to tell them about his mine and how he was a land owner in the province. Turning to his father, he cried out:

"If we strike it rich, little papa, I shall yet be a French senator."

"And what shall I be, hey?" inquired Morel, "plain Alsatian farmer, I suppose, with no other duty than to be proud of his son and say to everybody he meets: 'Have you read Senator Morel's last speech? That's my son, you know.'"

"How nicely a bottle of bon ordinaire would go with this pigjeree?" cried out Leon.

"Ah, dear old France," murmured Madam Morel. "I wonder when we shall see her again?"

"What, homesick already, little mother?" inquired Pauline. "Why, I think this is a beautiful country."

"Fine country for grizzlies," said Leon, at which Pauline's dark eyes were quickly lowered and a deep blush mantled her sweet girlish face.

"Let her alone, you men," cried Madam Morel, "why shouldn't she be grateful to her rescuer?"

"Gratitude, mother," replied Leon, "lives next door to"——

But Pauline's little hand stopped his mouth.

The rest of the day was passed in looking over their mining outfit and laying plans for beginning work on Leon's claim. The sun had set behind the towering larches and its golden light gilded the wonderful red barked trees of the forest. On the distant ridge the pines stood like columns of flame beneath the glory of the sunset. The whole sky glowed with wondrous tints of yellow and scarlet. The laughter and gayety of the light hearted Morels were hushed at sight of this glorious sunset. Suddenly the sound of a horse's hoofs reached their ears and the next moment a scarlet coated officer of the police force rode up to the little camp. Touching his hat respectfully he said:

"I'm looking for Louis and Leon Morel, father and son."

"Here we are," cried Morel, stepping forward. Pauline uttered a low cry of half fear, half surprise, and clung to her mother with deep anxiety pictured on her face. Morel raised his hand toward the two women, and said in a quiet tone, "Be calm," then turning to the officer he continued:

"What is your business with us, sir?"

"I hold a warrant for your arrest," was the reply.

"Our arrest?" repeated Morel. "This is not Bismarckland. What are we accused of? Let me see the warrant."

The officer handed the paper to the Frenchman, who glanced it over.

"Horse stealing!" he exclaimed, as the blood mantled his face and neck. "This is infamous. We are honest people."

"Yes, we are honest people!" cried Madam Morel, stepping forward and facing the police officer.

Morel laid his hand gently on his wife's shoulder. "This is not a matter for women to settle," he murmured, then approaching the officer, he informed him that their horses were tethered some distance away and that his son would bring them in. "We shall be ready to follow you in a short half hour," added Morel.

The officer nodded his approval.

Pauline's eyes were filled with tears as her father led her and her mother aside and spoke a few words of comfort and encouragement to them.

"Fear nothing," said he; "no harm will come to us. We shall be back in a day or so. This is not Bismarckland, I tell you! Close the packwagon securely at night and see that your pistols are close at hand. But you'll not need them. Women are sacred in this country. If a wolf comes prowling around in the night use my Winchester, Pauline. Take good care of little mamma. Goodby, goodby!"

The three men rode away and Pauline and her mother stood watching them until their forms faded out of sight in the dark shadows cast by the towering pines which lined the road.

"Don't tremble, little mother!" cried Pauline bravely, for she felt her heart grow strong at thought of the glaring injustice that had been done her father and brother. "They'll soon come back to us. Hector and I'll take good care of you. You know I've killed a deer and Leon says I'm as good a shot with a pistol as he is."

Madam Morel smiled at her daughter's cheering words and replied: "I don't fear four footed enemies, my child. There's another kind far more dangerous."

"Oh, you mean men, little mamma!" cried Pauline with a laugh. "Pshaw, everybody says a woman is safer in the province than she would be in the streets of a large city. Just recollect how you and I have been treated since we left Seattle. Why, the men act as if we were real angels. I saw one of them pick up a bit of cloth that I tore off the sleeve of my dress and tie it in his buttonhole 'for luck,' as he called it."

Madam Morel drew her pretty daughter to her side in a warm embrace. "I'm not afraid of either, my sweet baby," she murmured as she kissed Pauline's soft cheeks. "No one will harm us. But come, let us prepare for bed, and begin by praying that holy Mary may watch over our dear ones in this dark hour."

The two women paused several times in their labors to contemplate the sublimity of the scene which surrounded them, for the moon had risen and the grandeur of the forest scenery, the dull murmuring roar of the swift flowing Fraser, interrupted only by the mournful cry of the whip-poor-will and the howl of the coyotes, impressed them more than ever now that they were alone in this almost illimitable region of solitude.

Hector felt his importance as the sole gardian of Pauline and her mother, and from time to time made the tour of the little camp and reported that all was well by a friendly wag of the tail. Pauline followed her father's directions and laid his Winchester and a brace of revolvers within easy reach. Worn out by the excitement of the day, Madam Morel was soon sleeping soundly, very much to Pauline's satisfaction. She however found waking and thinking of the handsome stranger more to her taste.

"I wonder if I shall ever set eyes upon him again," she asked herself, and then she tried to recall the musical ring of his voice and the kindly gleam of his eye. "He is surely no desperado," argued the young girl to herself, "or any such adventurer as Captain Roberts would have us believe. He was so gentle and so brave that I know he must be higher born than I am!" sighed the poor girl, as she lay there beside her mother listening to the cry of the great white owl, which nests in the gigantic pines of these forests.

As the night wore on, even the cries of bird and beast gradually closed and a deathlike stillness settled upon these solitudes of mountain and plain. Pauline had never before attempted to watch through the night this way, and so strange and mysterious was this first experience of hers that it had a sort of fascination about it. She was giving herself up to the full enjoyment of this delicious sensation of utter loneliness and helplessness, no doubt akin to that pleasure which a man finds in needlessly facing extreme danger, when a low growl from Hector called her back to thoughts of real life. Rising to her feet without awakening her mother, Pauline proceeded to the end of the wagon, and drawing the canvas aside saw that a covered vehicle was passing along the road from which their camp was several hundred feet distant. She heard it halt, although it had passed quite out of sight.

In a few moments Hector's excited manner, accompanied by angry growling and barking, aroused Madam Morel, and the two women became convinced that some one must be approaching their wagon.

"Who goes there? Halt, or I'll fire!" cried Pauline, thrusting her head out of the wagon.

"A friend," was the answer that came quickly back. "We need help. Call off the dog. Have you any spirits, one of our men is dying?"

"Stand where you are," cried Pauline. "I'll get you some in a few moments."

The brave girl hastily wrapped a shawl about her shoulders, and seizing the bottle which her mother had taken from a locker began to untie the canvas at the end of the wagon.

"Let me go, Pauline," cried Madam Morel, "it's better."

"No, no, little mamma," returned Pauline, "you could do nothing with Hector. He wouldn't mind you, stay back."

Pauline sprang lightly down and advanced to meet the man whose figure was dimly outlined in the moonlight. She noticed that Hector was strangely quiet and that he staggered about in a dazed away. When within a few feet of the man, who had until that moment been standing behind a clump of bushes, he bounded forward, and throwing his arms around the girl's waist muttered between his teeth:

"Ah, my pretty one, you must go with me! Don't be afraid; no harm will come to you."

For the first time Pauline now saw that the man was masked. Quivering with rage at the foul deception which had been played upon her, the girl felt her muscles grow strong as iron.

"Quick, mother, bring me a pistol!" she called out, and seizing the man by the throat she gave him such convincing proof of her strength that he was forced to let go her waist and lay hold of her wrist. Madam Morel, at sight of her daughter struggling with the masked ruffian, made several attempts to reach her side, but her limbs bent under her, her brain whirled and she tottered and fell in a heap.

"Come, come, my pretty one," coaxed the ruffian, "what's the use? We won't hurt you. You shall be treated like a lady and have the very best the land affords."

Pauline felt her strength gradually failing. She realized that in a moment more she would be completely at the man's mercy. The thought maddened her; already her voice was gone. Her few agonizing screams had destroyed its force. She still kept up a faint show of resistance, but slowly and gradually the ruffian was dragging her toward the vehicle. All seemed lost. Mother, father, brother, even the handsome stranger, flitted through her mind. The covered vehicle was reached, and the ruffian stooped to lift the lifeless girl into the wagon, when the sharp report of a pistol rang out. She felt the man's hold relax, and the next instant sank lifeless into a pair of stout arms, which, gently encircling her, bore her back to her mother's side. She could not see the face of her rescuer, but instinctively she felt that the handsome stranger was near her and had now a double claim upon her heart.

Madam Morel was easily persuaded to lie down again, but Pauline preferred to sit beside "Mr. Timely," and not until the dawn showed him the soft gleam of her dark eyes did he spring lightly into the saddle and ride away, promising that a guard should be set upon the little camp while it was without its defenders.

(To be continued.)

FANCY PORTRAITS.

A Chinese Paper Resents American Adulation of Japanese Civilization.

The following "side light" on Japanese civilization is taken from a recent number of the North China Herald, published at Shanghai, and may be interesting to the many people in America who are busy in picturing Japan as the home par excellence of virtue, culture, art and romance:

"The days of travelers' tales are passed, or supposed to be, and we generally credit ourselves with being superior to the unquestioning acceptance of descriptions of lands beyond the seas of which our grandfathers have been declared guilty. But it is open to dispute whether we have after all so entirely discarded the love of the wonderful which seems inherent in us all, and become devoted to the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Is it not true that we cultivate our 'lying friend' though we know that he lies, just because his sprightly conversation and fund of anecdotes amuses us? We do not believe half he says, but we listen to and laugh with him unreservedly.

"So, in like manner, we read and delight in the descriptions of people and places which offer the most striking contrast to our everyday experiences and this even against our better judgment, perhaps. The same love of the extraordinary which led our forefathers to listen with bated breath to the narratives of the returned wanderer from many lands leads people in the present day to peruse with the greatest avidity those descriptions of distant scenes which paint the picture in the most artistic and fascinating colors, which reflect, as it were, the imaginings of the reader's brain, rather than the bare facts of the writer's experience.

"Realizing if not acknowledging this fact, a certain class of writers has arisen in the present day to cater to this public weakness, writers who make but little effort to conceal the fact that their first object is to be interesting, their second to be correct. In Japan this class of scribblers, with Sir Edwin Arnold at their head, have found a mine of wealth. That country more than any other lends itself in a peculiar degree to the art of fancy portraiture. In the first place, the outward and superficial Japan which visitors have access to abounds in artistic contradictions of our own prosaic existence in the west, and offers abundant material for the construction of romance; secondly, the volcanic formation of the country, aided by extraordinary atmospheric conditions, tends to foster a sense of fascination which appeals to us all the more strongly when compared with our own foggy and begrimed climate."

After presenting its compliments on this score to Mr. John Russell Young, erstwhile American minister to China, the paper continues: "But in the case of Japan, where popular fancy is only too ready to be fired by romantic suggestion, and where grave issues may be influenced by the press, the clever espousal of her cause by subsidized journals may result in a great deal of mischief. It is a noticeable fact that the utterances of organs paid to sing Japan's praise to the world all betray a plausibility and force of argument which involuntarily carries weight and disguises the want of intrinsic value in their special pleading. They naturally often state what is perfectly true, for we are not denying that Japan has her full share of virtues, but fancy is so deftly interwoven with fact that the outcome of a year's writing still partakes largely of the attributes of a fancy portrait."

How She Kept Her Complexion.

Ninon de l'Enclos possessed at 70 the complexion of a girl of 16. And this is to what she attributed it: "Half an ounce of tincture of benzoin, 16 ounces best rose water, 10 drops attar of roses. Sponge the wet skin with this preparation after the bath. An equal weight of refined linseed oil added to this mixture and rubbed well into the arms and neck twice daily will preserve them from attenuation."

Perfected Necks.

Physical culture enthusiasts claim that a thin throat can be developed into the firm, round column every woman desires by regular exercise. The fingers are pressed lightly upon the muscles at the front of the throat and the head thrown forward, the pressure of the fingers serving the same purpose that dumbbells do in exercises of the arms and chest. The process is repeated backward and sidewise.

NEW RACE OF PEOPLE

They Were Cannibals and Yet Skilled People.

REMAINS DISCOVERED IN EGYPT.

Explorers Have Stumbled Across Signs of a Prehistoric Nation That Puzzles Scientists—2,000 Graves.

A new race in Egypt in the long ago and almost at the very dawn of history is the surprising discovery that has just been made by a band of European scientists who have been exploring and excavating in the southern part of that very ancient and historic country. Of what type or section of the human family this race was a part has not yet been settled, but this much at least is certain; that these people must have been essentially non-Egyptian, for their pottery, their statuettes, their mode of burial, their beads and even themselves, as can be plainly deduced, were completely different. The honors of this discovery, the particulars of which have only just come to London, are due to two gentlemen of that recently established English institution known as the Egyptian Research Account—a Mr. Quibell and W. M. Flinders Petrie, who have been constantly in Africa for six months past.

They have not only explored and exhumed, but they have summarized their data and made careful deductions, so that the value of the discovery is already apparent. By a careful study of dates and other comparisons they have proved fairly conclusively, that this new—or old—race lived and had power between the seventh and ninth dynasties of Royal Egpyt, or about 3,000 years B. C.

Over 2,000 graves have been opened, and hundreds of skulls and skeletons have been collected, and with a great mass of implements and relics made ready for shipment to England. Yet in all these tombs and excavations there has not been found a single article that bore the marks of Egyptian civilization in the slightest degree, or a solitary mummy.

In the graves the bodies lay contracted and not mummified, always with the head to the south and the face to the west. The evidence is not lacking that the bodies were generally mutilated before they were burried, and a yet more startling characteristic is conveyed from the fact that seems to be proven that these people were anthropophagists, that is, cannibals.

In one large and important tomb four skulls were found placed between stone vases on the floor, a separate heap of loose bones of several bodies together, and but a little distance away bones broken open at the ends and scooped out. All of these were distinctively human bones. It does not need an expert in ethnology to judge this to be cannibalism pure and simple.

Commercially speaking, these unknowns must have been of importance, for even when set side by side in comparison with the Egyptians, their workmanship shows forth as little short of remarkable. With both metals and flint they were experts. In flint especially they must have been possessed of wonderful skill, for flint articles have been found magnificently worked, far more exquisitely and with a greater degree of elaboration than that employed by the Egpytians in any age. There are at the Ashmolean and the Pitt-Rivers museums at Oxford splendid examples of flint workmanship that have been believed for years to be Egyptian. It is now absolutely proved, the discoverers say, that these were the products of this unknown race.

Copper needles found in the tombs indicate the use of garments that were sewed, and scores of spindle wheels discovered in one of the excavated towns prove beyond question that weaving must have been a common pursuit among the women of this people. Copper adzes show that carving was a trade in vogue, and a couch has been found in illustration of this art with finely carved bull's legs.

These people were a nation of hand workers, for while vases of stone and other materials have been found in great abundance, none of them shows the slightest sign of the turning wheel or the lathe. This fact in itself is sufficient to distinguish completely the unknown race from the Egpytian, among whom the wheel was well known.

All the workmanship thus far discovered, however, is exquisite. The vases especially are beautifully wrought and every kind of material, from alabaster to granite was used. Pottery indeed, must have been the favorite art among them. The discoverers declare the variety, fineness and quantity of it to be surprising.

Few graves were opened that did not contain from two to twelve vases, and in some were found as many as eighty. Many were of the coarser kind, merely used for containing the ashes of the great funeral fire. Bodies, so far as can be told, were never burned among these people, but a great burning was made at each funeral, and the ashes thereof were carefully taken and preserved, sometimes in as many as twenty to thirty jars.

It is more than likely, moreover, that the discovery of this race, which has hitherto been without record in the pages of history will lead to the focusing of many important side lights upon the customs and manners of the ancient dominion of Egypt. Already, though the excavations so far are no where near complete, one minor Egyptian mystery has been satisfactorily explained. A very puzzling class of objects long known in Egypt are the slate figures of birds and animals, rhombi squares, etc. These now prove to be the toilet palettes for grinding malachite, probably for painting the eyes, as among the Egpytians of the fourth dynasty.

The trial of John K. Love, charged with the burning of the Empire livery stable at Modesto in July last, in which fourteen horses were cremated, was concluded last week in Modesto by a verdict of not guilty. Love is now charged with burglary in connection with the same disaster

A WAR ECHO.

Every Honorable Veteran Deserves His Pension.

And the Lone Limb is Not the Only Reason for a Government Reward, Either.

(From Journal, Lewiston, Maine.)

Samuel R. Jordan has just given the Journal an account of his life, which in view of his extremely hard lot for the past few years will be read with interest.

"I am 48 years old and have always lived in New Portland. I enlisted in the army in 1862 as a private in Company A, 28th Me. Volunteers. My army experience injured my health to some extent, although I worked at blacksmithing some part of the time, when suddenly, several years ago, I was prostrated with what able physicians pronounced Locomotor Ataxia. At first I could get around somewhat yet the disease progressed quite rapidly until I had hardly any feeling in my legs and feet, they felt like sticks of wood and I grew so much worse that I could not move for three years without help, as my neighbors and friends could testify. I employed several physicians in my vicinity, and elsewhere, and they all told me that medicines would not help me, that they could do nothing to effect a cure and that in time I should become entirely helpless. I became discouraged. I was a great care to my wife and friends. Shortly after I met an old army comrade, Mr. All. Parlin, a resident of Madison, Maine, and he incidentally mentioned how he had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for a severe case of rheumatism and a spinal and malarial trouble, that he had suffered with consequent of his army life, and had been greatly benefited by their use. By his earnest recommendation I was induced to try the pills. After taking them for a time I began to feel prickly sensations in my legs and a return of strength so I could move them a little. After a few weeks I began to feel a marked improvement in my condition. I soon was enabled to walk around a little with the help of crutches. After taking for some time I can now walk without crutches, my general health is much improved and I have regained my old-timed vigor. I can walk about and enjoy life once more, for which I feel very thankful, and this happy result is due to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are not a patent medicine in the sense that name implies. They were first compounded as a prescription and used as such in general practice by an eminent physician. So great was their efficacy that it was deemed wise to place them within the reach of all. They are now manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

An Old Story In a New Form.

The platform of the electric car was pretty well taken up by the driver, a man of the "slugger" variety and a big bag, over which the man of the "slugger" variety appeared to be standing guard. When the conductor came to collect the fares, he looked sharply at the bag and then said to the tough:

"I'll have ter charge yer fer that bag."

"I'll bet yer won't," answered the man, looking angrily at him, as if any attempt at collection would induce a prize fight.

"Yes, I will, an if yer don't pay, I'll put ther bag off. See?" said the conductor shortly. He gave the man five minutes more, asked him a second and a third time, then stopped the car and put the bag off on the sidewalk. The "slugger" didn't even move, and when the car had gone about a mile further the conductor said to him:

"Yer don't care much for that bag if you wouldn't pay 5 cents for it."

"Ah, come off!" was the reply. "What's der bag got ter do wid me? 'Tain't mine. I'd 'a' told ver so if ver'd asked me."

For the Hair.

Here is a pretty little conceit that is sure to have the desired effect of making the hair smell sweet: Make an old fashioned cap of soft silk, line it with a thin sheet of batting in which you have heavily sprinkled sachet powder of your favorite odor. Wear this when your hair is just drying, and you will be astonished at what a lovely and lasting scent will prevail.—Housekeeper.

Quite the Reverse.

Ethel (rummaging in grandma's drawer)—Oh, grandma, what a curious old key this is!

Grandma—Yes, my dear. That was your grandfather's latchkey.

Ethel—And you keep it in memory of old days?

Grandma—No, my dear, old nights.—

A Long Island girl who had been deaf and dumb for eight years had her speech restored by an electric shock, which struck the house in which she was during a storm.

After physicians had given me up, I was saved by Piso's Cure.—RALPH ERIEG, Williamsport, Pa., Nov. 22, 1893.

If we will take the good we find, asking no questions, we shall have heaping measures. The great gifts are not got by analysis. Everything is good on the highway.

Messrs. Walter Baker & Co., the largest manufacturers of pure, high grade Cocoas and Chocolates on this continent, have found it necessary to issue a special notice cautioning consumers of their goods against the recent attempts which have been made to substitute other manufactures, bearing labels, and done up in packages, in imitation of theirs. A sure test of genuineness is the name of WALTER BAKER & CO.'s place of manufacture—"DORCHESTER, MASS."

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and Itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

How is Your Blood?

If it is poor and thin and lacking in the number and quality of those red corpuscles, you are in danger of sickness from disease germs and the enervating effect of warm weather. Purify your blood with

Hood's Sarsaparilla

The great blood purifier which has proved its merit by a record of cures unequalled in medical history. With pure, rich blood you will be well and strong. Do not neglect this important matter but take Hood's Sarsaparilla now.

Hood's Pills are tasteless, mild, effective. All druggists. 25c

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION — CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. 25 CTS.

HOITT'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

Ira G. Hoitt, Ph. D., Master at Burlingame, San Mateo county, Cal., is one of the best schools for boys on the Pacific Coast.

Elegance is something more than ease; it is more than a freedom from awkwardness or restraint. It implies, I conceive, a precision, a polish—sparkling, spirited, yet delicate.

LIKE A SIEVE.

The chief function of the kidneys is to separate from the blood, in its passage through them, of certain impurities and watery particles which make their final exit through the bladder. The retention of these, in consequence of inactivity of the kidneys, is productive of Bright's disease, dropsy, diabetes, albuminuria and other maladies with a fatal tendency. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a highly sanctioned diuretic and blood depurent, impels the kidneys when inactive to renew their sifting function, and strain from the vital current impurities which infest it and threaten their own existence as organs of the body. Catarrh of the bladder, gravel and retention of the urine are also maladies arrested or averted by this benign promoter and restorative of organic action. Malaria, rheumatism, constipation, biliousness and dyspepsia also yield to the Bitters, which is also speedily beneficial to the weak and nervous.

A lady of genius will give a genteel air to her whole dress by a well fancied suit of knots, as a judicious writer gives a spirit to a whole sentence by a single expression.

HOW'S THIS!

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligation made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Price, 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists. Testimonials free.

O that you could turn your eyes toward the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves.

S S S

HEALS RUNNING SORES

CURES THE SERPENT'S STING

CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON In all its stages completely eradicated by S.S.S. Obstinate sores and ulcers yield to its healing powers. It removes the poison and builds up the system

Valuable treatise on the disease and its treatment mailed free. SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

I used Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh and have received great benefit. I believe it a safe and certain cure. Very pleasant to take.—Wm. Frazer, Rochester, N.Y.

ELY'S CREAM BALM CURES COLD IN HEAD. CATARRH HAYFEVER. ELY BROS. NEW YORK

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from Colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents, at Druggists, or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE.

FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY, which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

MEN

Dr. LIEBIG & CO. Special Doctors for Chronic, Private and Wasting Diseases.

Dr. Liebig's Invigorator the greatest remedy for Seminal Weakness, Loss of Manhood and Private Diseases. Overcomes Prematureness and prepares for marriage life's duties, pleasures and responsibilities; $1 trial bottle given or sent free to any one describing symptoms; call or address 400 Geary St. private entrance 405 Mason St., San Francisco.

MOTHERS

recovering from the illness attending childbirth, or who suffer from the effects of disorders, derangements and displacements of the womanly organs, will find relief and a permanent cure in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Taken during pregnancy, the "Prescription"

MAKES CHILDBIRTH EASY

by preparing the system for parturition, thus assisting Nature and shortening "labor." The painful ordeal of childbirth is robbed of its terrors, and the dangers thereof greatly lessened, to both mother and child. The period of confinement is also greatly shortened, the mother strengthened and built up, and an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child promoted.

WALTER BAKER & CO.

The Largest Manufacturers of

PURE, HIGH GRADE COCOAS and CHOCOLATES

On this Continent, have received

HIGHEST AWARDS

from the great

Industrial and Food EXPOSITIONS IN EUROPE AND AMERICA.

Caution: In view of the many imitations of the labels and wrappers on our goods, consumers should make sure that our place of manufacture, namely, Dorchester, Mass., is printed on each package.

SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE.

WALTER BAKER & CO., DORCHESTER, MASS.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

if you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE"

mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc. AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

★ HIGHEST AWARD ★ WORLD'S FAIR.

IMPERIAL GRANUM

IS ★ THE BEST ★ PREPARED

FOOD

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

★ JOHN CARLE & SONS, New York. ★

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. For sale by all Druggists, 25 cents a bottle.

S. F. N. U. No. 679. New Series No. 26.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS

A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. W.

"CASTLEWOOD," CARTAN, SOLE AGENTS, SAN F.

"IT IS IGNORANCE THAT WAS EFFORT." TRAINED SERVANTS U.

SAPOLIO

MALARIA! DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY. Three doses only. Try it.

Hercules

GAS OR GASOLINE

Engines

Workmanship the very best.
Always Ready, a boy can start them
No double or false explosions.
They Oil Themseves

A FEW USES TO WHICH THE HERCULES CAN BE PUT:

For Wood-working Machinery.
For Bean-cleaning Machinery.
For Hoisting-works in Mines.
Running Machine Shops.
Running Shoe Factories.
Bottling Soda Water.
Sawing Cord-wood.
Running Churns.
Sawing Lumber.
Pumping Water.
Running Elevators.
Running Paint Mills.
Running Electric Motors.
For Printing Machinery.
Running Sewing Machines.
For Electric Light Dynamos.
Running Ice-cream Freezers
For Carpe-beating Machinery.

ADDRESS:
PALMER & REY
405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal.

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, AUGUST 2, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVII. NO. 7. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., AUGUST 2, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1292.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.
One Year (post paid) $4.00
Six Months 2.00
Three Months 1.25
One Month 50
Single Copies 10

FAMOUS AUTOGRAPHS.

Prices Obtained for Signatures of Great Men.

BISMARCK NOW BEATS NAPOLEON.

Collectors Look Down on "Autograph Fiends"—Andrew Johnson Very Rare, Gladstone Quite Common.

Whether we are willing to admit it or not, we are all of us more or less inclined toward hero-worship. And perhaps it is this rather than anything else that has led to the collecting of autographs. If we cannot meet or emulate our particular hero we seek, as a last resort, to obtain something that has been closely allied with his personality and interests. All this is fulfilled by a letter.

There is nothing that brings us closer to a man who is placed beyond us by death or otherwise than his autograph letter. As we look at it we remember that during its preparations it engrossed all of his attention, was the work of his own hands and bears clearly discernible hints as to his character. The letter means more than the chair in which he sat, the table at which he played cards or even the buckles that adorned his shoe. It is a visible link that binds the past to the present, and a link wrought, unwittingly, by his own hand.

That autograph collecting is one of the most sensible hobbies one may ride will become a matter of conviction after a chat with an interested collector. The facts concerning autographs in this article were gained by a Mail and Express reporter during a recent conversation with Mr. Walter Romeyn Benjamin, one of the largest collectors in this country.

The classes into which autograph collectors may be divided are as diverse and distinct as the styles of penmanship they collect. They may, however, for convenience, be placed in three groups "star" collectors, "set" collectors and "extra illustrators." These must in no wise be confounded with what are known as "autograph fiends," a horde roundly anathematized by legitimate collectors. A collector desires only complete autograph letters or signed documents—mere signatures being considered of comparatively small value.

The "star" collector is one who gathers together an interesting but conglomerate portfolio of letters, their authors bearing no relation to one another other than that made by the bond of fame. The collection may embrace celebrities ranging from the time of Shakespeare to that of Bismarck and include every other leaf in the laurel wreath, but no letter may be said to stand in direct sequence to its neighbor. The "set" collector is a more methodical being. He obtains, as the designation infers, the letters of personages famous in some particular line. They may be those of all the signers of the Declaration of Independence, for example, or the rulers of Great Britain the Presidents of the United States or of victorious generals.

The "extra illustrator" is a combined lector. Should he possess a book taining the portrait of a notable or woman he obtains that person's graph and letter, and gives it place the book as an extra illustration. In the case of a portrait of a renowned man this sort of collector would enhance the value of the portrait by getting an autograph letter to accompany it. Still another variation is obtaining the signature of the author for the latter's books.

The "autograph fiend" has, as a rule, a collection that is of little value. It is likely to be made up of signatures for which he has asked and received a stereotpyed reply, beginning, "It gives me much pleasure to send you my autograph, etc." Such letters are not sought by collectors. The highly prized letters are those written as matters of private or official correspondence, and therefore, of closer association with the writer's nature.

Autograph collecting is not so prevalent in this country as in Europe. In England, France and Germany the occupation is old and honorable and pursued by celebrated antiquarians.

The requisites for an atograph collector are that he shall be a man of keen judgment and an excellent student of history, because nearly all autographs are historical in one sense or another. Every man has a different kind of collection, it being, as has been said, a mere matter of hobby. Many families whose members were famous in former days are most persistent collectors, eagerly watching every chance to obtain letters, documents and papers bearing the writings of their ancestors.

The prices obtained for autographs are matters of surprise to the uninitiated. This does not refer wholly to the enormous sums sometimes paid, but to the seemingly ridiculous cheapness at which some autographs are sold. Documents signed by Napoleon can be readily bought for $5, while a letter of Bismarck's could hardly be purchased for less than $25.

Prices depend upon rarity solely and signed documents are always worth less than signed autograph letters, and the latter more than signed letters. Collectors divide these things into several clases. First is the A. L. S. or autogarph letter signed, which is the most valuable; next the A. D. S. or atograph document signed; and then the L. S. letter signed: D. S., document signed; A. N. S., autograph note signed, and N. S., note signed. Checks and memoranda follow in value.

In many cases signed documents can be obtained, whereas it is impossible to get signed autograph letters. This is particularly true of the old French kings, such as Charles II. and Charles III., who signed their names only, as they were unable to write. The secretaries drew up the documents and their majesties signed as best they knew how. Their mighty scrawls are worth $4 or $5.

The autographs of almost all the notables living during the last 500 years can be obtained for some price, but beyond that rises an impassable barrier. Shakespeare's signature is of enormous rarity, there being but five or six extant, as, for instance, on his will and two or three deeds for property. An autograph letter signed would bring a fabulous sum. The autograph of Moliere is almost as rare, there being only five or six of his in existence.

The rarest signature in the history of our country is that of Thomas Lynch Jr., one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Lynch's father was a Representative from South Carolina, and the son was an alternate in Congress. It hapened that Lynch, Sr., was ill when the time came to sign the Declaration, so Lynch, Jr., signed in his stead. There is only one letter of the younger Lynch extant so far as is known. This one is written to Gen. Washington. It is in the valuable collection belonging to Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet, and was purchased for $5,000.

The next rarest signer is Button Gwinnet, whose leters bring $300. The autograph letter signature of Andrew Johnson is by far the most scarce of all the Presidents, and sells for from $40 to $60. President Johnson had some trouble with his arm and wrote but rarely in later years. James Monroe was so prolific of letters that they bring now only about $2. Zachary Taylor and William Henry Harrison are rare, their letters selling for about $35 and $20 respectively. Although signatures of Gen. Washington are worth only a few cents, his autograph letters command from $25 to $1,500, the price depending upon the date of the letter and the importance of its contents.

While time plays havoc with some signatures in the matter of worth, it deals so lightly with others as to become amusing. Singed matter by Queen Victoria is purchasable for $5. Singed letters of George III. are sold for $2. One incident will serve to show the irony of collectors. While Oliver Wendell Holmes was alive his letters were worth $1, but when he died and the supply was cut off they went up to $1.50.

The Napoleonic craze has increased the demand for his signature. Documents probably written by Bourienne an signed by Napoleon, may be obtained for $5. His autograph letters are much more expensive.

Mr. Benjamin has a very interesting collection of Napolleonic autographs and those of his family and marshals and political associates. A double folio document dated 1802 and signed by Napoleon, Marshal Berthier and Maret, while brimming with history commands the small price of $8. The marshals of Napoleon range in price from $1.50 to $6.

Going back beyond the birthday of the American Continent documents signed by Fredinand and Isabella of Spain seem cheap at $35, but such is the collector's price. Had Columbus known that an autograph letter by him would be worth $1,700 today he might have left a few as legacies.

The signature of Dante is of a rarity beyond expression almost. Mr. Benjamin said he has seen but one Dante catalogued during his experience.

It is by no means an uncommon matter for fancy prices to be paid for signatures and letters. Some time ago $1,750 was paid for a letter of Lyman Hall, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and the signed writing of Major Andre has been known to bring $750.

A curious comparison may be made in the prices quoted for the signed letters of Bismarck and Gladstone. Mr. Gladstone has written his name to letters so often that $5 is the average price they command, while Bismarck writes so little that a collector is lucky indeed to get the handwriting of the Iron Chancellor for $25.

There can be little doubt but that to the person who glances casually over an autograph collector's catalogue the prices are a shock in many cases. It seems unkind of fate to allow the autograph of a favored son of fame to be desecrated by a price of a few dol ars. For example, a $5 lot of notables comprises: The Duke of Wellington a signed autograph letter; Louis XIV., of France, a signed letter; Henry IV. of France, a signed document; Lord Burleigh, Prime Minister of Queen Elizabeth, a signed document; Frederick the Great of Prussia a signed letter and Gen. Arbot, who was distinguished under Napoleon, and wrote the famous memoirs. A signed letter by Talerand sells for $1.50.

To go to the other extreme, a full autograph letter of Cardinal Richelieu costs $50, and a letter of the doughty John Hancock $25.

Autograph collecting must indeed be a fascinating vocation, and in the writing of a dead celebrated hand one who pauses may read something more than "words, words, words."

Mr. and Mrs. William Paxonhurst, of Boston, have had their private railway car, which was built at a cost of $17,000 by the Pullman Company in 1892, mounted on a canal barge and will use it as a houseboat this summer in Frenchman's Bay. It will be moored off their beautiful cottage at Southwest Harbor, Mount Desert, when not cruising about the bay, and will often be seen at Bar Harbor during the season.

He (Paris)—And of course we'll have a civil marriage also.

She (Chicago)—Then I decline. A double marriage would make me nervous. I should never be sure we were properly divorced.

BACK TO BARBARISM.

Distinguished Men Who Have Adjured Civilization.

LIKE THE NOVELIST STEVENSON.

African Explorers Enamored of Life in the Dark Continent-Savage Memories Revived by Music.

Few observers have failed to note the streaming of poulation citywards. More and more the inhabitants of prosperous countries are abandoning the areas of production for the centers of manufacture and exchange. London thrives and Sussex languishes. Boston's gain means the decay of New Hampshire's villages. On every side the farmhouse may be seen deserted, while the tenement and the hotel spring up to shelter its transplanted occupants. This is familiar matter of lament, but the signs of a reaction, of a contrary flow, may have escaped the notice of some—that curious reflux of sensitive spirits who lightly turn their backs on the best that civilization can offer them, its art, its knowledge, its refinement, and seek the society of semi-civilized or barbarous neighbors.

Of these rebels against culture Robert Louis Stevenson was the most conspicuous. His death in Samoa, after seven years' residence there, has, says a writer in the Boston Transcript, a significance much greater than the importance it must assume as an incident of his biography. It may be true that he was a man of somewhat primitive sympathies; a reader of buccaneer stories and a writer of romances; and, finally, an invalid glad to pillow his declining vigor on the warmth and fragrance of this tropical paradise. But when his unstinted praise of the tall, fine race among whom he lived is recalled, and his ever wider departure from unconventionality, both of habit and of thought his exile to the mid-Pacific, like every other voluntary exile, must be considered as a protest against the country abandoned—in his case a protest against Europe.

The Pacific, too, as well as Senegal and Morocco was the scene of experiments in smockless existence by a rover much more truly barbaric than Stevenson ever became—Pierre Loti—the celebrator in "Rarahu" of Tahitian langours and in "Mme. Chrysantheme" of Japanese laxity and gentleness.

Aside from the exact grade of its civilization, is it not somewhat amusing to see a sturdy Briton like Sir Edwin Arnold head over heels in love with the pretty coquetries of the mumus, as if one needed to go farther than Italy to meet politeness and taste! And Mr. Lafcadio Hearn, who began his career by certain wayward peregrinations around the Gulf of Mexico, having taken a Japanese wife and issued manifestoes on the corrupting influences of Christianity, appears to have earned the title of The Irreconcilable, the Jabal Early of this secession from the Occident.

Traveling westward on the map to equatorial Africa, even there you meet surrenders hardly less absolute to the charms of the state of nature. For all the foul practices of the Dark Continent—slavery, fetich-worship, tattooing, cannibalism—occur to cast shadows grotesque or horrible over any possible dream of a Soudanese paradise. But perhaps these customs could be paralleled in a symbolical way from the social order of Europe. At any rate, African life must have its compensations. Fr. Ohrwalder, the priest who escaped from Mahdi, found several Europeans of note among the rebel leader's advisers, and one who knew Gen. Gordon well has put forth a surmise that this strange character is still alive, the willing prisoner of one of the native tribes.

There is no proof and little probability of this; but it is known that Gordon's subaltern, Dr. Edward Schnitzen, a graduate of German universities, and successively Emin Effendi, Emin Bey and Emin Pasha in the service of the Khedive, had been for several years the contented ruler of a savage tribe when Stanley in 1889 led an army to his "rescue." Emin Pasha had a predecessor in Edmund O'Donovan, the war correspondent, whose description of his experiences as a satrap in the Mero oasis, beyond the Caspian Sea, never before visited by Europeans, deserves a high place in the literature of adventure.

Leconte de l'Isle, born and reared on the Island of Reunion, east of Madagascar has left a record of frank paganism in his "Poems Barbares," on this side of his genius touching closely the whole barbaric school—Loti, Hearn, Stevenson, Mallock, and whatsoever others less known to fame, may have exalted the palm grove and the dusky savage. With this group, though savants more than literateurs, belong the brothers Reclus, whose encyclopedias of geography certainly render full justice to the savage nations they describe.

It would seem that sheer love of the free, wild life must have mingled with irrevelant motives, ambition, philanthropy, the spirit of adventure, the thirst for knowledge, in guiding the great African explorers again and again into the forests of the interior—such men as Burton, Baker, Cameron, Du Chailu, Livingston, Speke and Stanley, several of them virtually domiciled in the "Dark Continent," only returning to civilization now and then on some pleasure trip or business excursion.

The Greenland Esquimaux are not an inviting race, with their mummy faces peeping out from limbless heaps of fur; yet readers of Dr. Nansen will remember his chamionship of their deportment as compared with that of the whites who prey upon them. As for the Russian moujik, who sleeps on the ground and grinds tree bark into flour when his harvests fail, there can be no doubt that Tolstoi, one of the most eminent of living Russians, regards him not only as an agreeable comrade, but in many respects as a pattern to be imitated, since he has converted himself from a cultivated nobleman into a highly benevolent moujik.

Here and there are white sachems, sheiks rajahs of dark-shinned tribes, Utopian colonies are setting out from Germany, Russia, Australia, the United States to found happier settlements invariably closer to the equator. In part, this tendency expresses only the familiar fascination of ancient things, illustrated by the hallowing of ruins and the faith in a golden age. Objects, once of use, hearths, vases, canes, domestic animals become ornaments or playthings.

Exercises once of prime neccessity, fencing, boating, archery, horticulture, become games or amusements. To this playing barbarian may be regarded. For after all this barbarism is not a true barbarism. It has its claws clipped and its teeth drawn, its assegais blunted with buttons and its war dances covered by the mouths of sundry sophistocated cannon gaping protectively not far behind the enamored white intruder. Naturally men of highly sensitive natures, artists of one kind or another, are the sort to respond to this new species of diversion. Art always seeks the primitive and the enduring.

ODDDITIES OF FACT AND FICTION.

An interesting experiment is being tried at Newbold Ebenezer Chapel, Rochdale, England. All the young men of the congregation who possess musical instruments and can play them have been invited to bring them to the evening service and to accompany the singing. The result so far has been satisfactory.

The Philadelphia Police Department now includes a bicycle corps of about one hundred men, several of whom are negroes. At the recent police parade there thirty men were overcome by the heat, three of them fatally. One officer with a good record of twenty years remained at home and explained that his pet dog had hidden his false teeth in a flower bed, and that without them he "couldn't make a good front."

Philadelphia is also deserving of further mention. The published description of an unknown drowned man, whose body was in the morgue there produced from a citizen the following note: "That man Philip found in the river was just my size and had whiskers. Will you write and let me know if it is the right man? He was very deaf, so you can tell him by that."

Americans who visited Vienna, making their stay at any of the fine hotels in that delightful city, will be rather surprised to learn that "an investigation into the comparative cost of living at the various European capitals" shows the prices of most articles of food to be lower in the Kaiserstadt as the Viennese like to hear it called, than in any of the others. Vienna is certainly one of the dearest cities in Europe as far as the ordinary visitor is concerned, though, of course, living in a place and doing one's own catering is a very different thing from living at a hotel. Brussels is reckoned the next cheapest after Vienna, then comes Paris. London is set down as being "terribly expensive." At Madrid articles of food cost more than in any other capital, while in St. Petersburg flour is so dear that only well-to-do people can afford to eat white bread.

Bees prefer to work in the dark because the action of the sunlight upon the honey causes the sugar to granulate out, and so to solidify the whole mass, in which condition it is of no use either to themselves or their young.—Chicago News.

AN UGLY ACTOR'S SUCCESS.

Not a few great men have risen to eminence in spite of overwhelming physical defects; but far more rare are the cases in which ugliness has in itself proved a stepping stone to success. Rubel, the actor who has just died in Paris at the age of 78, owed his first start in the legitimate drama to his strikingly plain features and diminutive statue. Forty years ago he was the humblest of music hall comics at the Funambules, when Offenbach dropped in one evening, noticed his grotesque physiognomy, and offered him an engagement at the Buffes. When Barbe-Bleue was produced, and a peculiarly hideous face was required for the part of the Queen's lover, Schneider cried out, "There is only one man in the world who can play it, and that is Rubel." Instead of being flattered the poor fellow was mortified, and positively declined to be cast for the character. He migrated to other stages and worked to the last, filling only a month ago the prompter's box at the Theatre de la Republique.—St. James Gazette.

Old Dr. William Affleck, the nonogenarian Mayor of Cobtown, Conn., has, after long experimenting discovered how to dye tobacco leaves any desired color without affecting their taste or flavor. He refuses to divulge his secret, but affords his friends much amusement by smoking pink, green, sky-blue, bright yellow or brilliant scarlet cigars, and he is also very liberal in giving them away. He only dyes the wrappers and employs an expert Cuban to make them up.

The woman who will endear herself to June brides is she who is now making a collection of swell boxes in which to pack her unostentatious gifts.

He that has never known adversity is but half acquainted with himself or others.—Colton.

INDUSTRY.

Handwriting in its Relation to Mental Conditions.

BEET-SUGAR MAKING IN EUROPE.

Overcoming Friction the Greatest Difficulty in the Manufacture of Bicycles—Many Experiments.

John H. Schooling has been making a scientific study of handwriting in its relation to mental conditions. Although much exaggerated, belief as to the reliability of the delineation of character by handwriting has been encouraged by professional graphiologists. Mr. Schooling finds much new in the subject, which is full of interest and value. For a long time the curious differences in the handwriting of the same person puzzled him. He eventually found that where there was no variation in the handwriting from year to year, the general demeanor, voice inflection, style of walking and other mannerisms were unchanged. But, on the contrary, where the change of handwriting was apparent, the writer invariably exhibited a corresponding variation in general demeanor, voice inflection, etc. Written gesture is the only form of gesture which is permanently self-registering at the moment of its expression. The pen strokes of a person may be regarded as so many little nerve-muscular gestures, which are on a par with the delicate and expressive actions of the small muscles of the face. There may be, of course, many side issues which produce abnormal conditions in writing, such as illness, extreme haste and the attempt to write legibly in violation of habit, but ordinarily the handwriting which constantly shows an ascendant movement across the page, either as regards individual words or as regards the lines of words, indicates a man of ardent, active and sanguine nature. These qualities are accompanied by a plentiful store of nerve force, and plenty of nerve force causes a man to perform all his acts in a buoyant and expansive manner. He unconsciously and easily expends the extra nerve force that is needed in order to continually thrust his pen upward and farther away from his body than is really necesary in the act of writing. As a contrast, the handwriting that runs down across the page, dropping below the horizontal level from which it starts, exhibits the gesture of depression, want of ardor and of sadness. There is a deficiency of nerve force. The dragging hand gets through its task at the least expenditure of energy and it lacks the virility and go" which mark the other gestures. Even as regards normally sanguine persons, profound sorrow or physical trouble will cause this gesture of depression to show in their handwriting, as it will show in their temporary lax gait and bent head. A confused hand often betokens confusion of thought, and marked carelessness in writing shows want of courtesy, inasmuch as it necessarily causes some inconvenience to the addressee of the letter. Persons who are plain, direct and straightforward do not write with useless and ill-controlled elaboration of gesture, which is rather the gesture of insincere, affected or pretentious individuals. Mr. Schooling has not much patience with the man who writes the body of a letter in a slovenly style and expends infinite pains on his signature. There is much expression in the dots of the "i." Take a magnifying glass and note the difference between those leisurely placed by a calm, unemotional man and those dashed down by an impulsive or animated person. There is unquestionably a close connection between peculiarities in written gesture and psychical conditions. The deliberate action of letting the hand move calmly and quietly and thus producing calm and equable written gesture causes the subsidence of a temporary condition of mental agitation and restlessness. The setting of the hand to wander about the paper, making confused and tangled written gesture, causes, in a normally clear-thinking and orderly mind, a sensation of confusion. If the hand is deliberately forced to make vigorous and ascendant written gesture the effect in reducing mental depression is distinctly apparent. Conversely, useful results are obtained by assuming with sincerity and thoroughness any condition of thought or emotion and then freely allowing the hand to write under the influence of the assumed and partly realized condition, without any conscious bias toward this or that form of written gesture. The study of handwriting, far from being a foolish pastime, must be regarded as a branch of the study of human gesture by which much knowledge may be gained of the physical expression of psychical conditions.

On important changes in legislation in regard to beet-root sugar in Europe the question of how to dispose of the residuum molasses to the best advantage has assumed paramount importance. It is proposed to turn the molasses into food for cattle. Already in several European markets a product is sold for stock feed containing 60 per cent. of molasses and 40 per cent. of cocoa oil cake, which costs a fraction more than 1 cent a pound. Another fodder is composed of 20 per cent. of cottonseed flour, 40 per cent. of palm nuts and 40 per cent. of molasses. Some factories undertake their own mixing and the substance produced contains 14 per cent. protein, 3 per cent. fatty matter and 50 per cent. non-nitrogenous matter. The results of feeding cattle on these rations have been most satisfactory. Sheep have also been fattened on a molasses diet. One of the best ways of giving molasses to cattle is to mix it with their drinking water and astonishing success has been obtained by adding to the water given to cattle about two pounds of molasses a day. As cavalry horses have been found to do good work on a continuous diet of sugar, it has been thought that cattle might thrive on molasses alone. This belief, however, has been disproved by Porf. Maercker, who concluded that the maximum of molasses that it was advisable to feed 1,000 pounds live weight and per diem was three to four pounds for oxen and two and one-half pounds for milch cows. That this was a wise restriction has been evident by the results that have followed when this proportion of molasses was exceeded. Experts now say that the best results are obtained by using 50 per cent. of fodder and 50 per cent. of molasses. The utilization of molasses for cattle feeding is not new. It has been practiced in many countries for over half a century. In the West Indies one of the events of the beginning of "crop" on the sugar estates is the first feed of "chop-tops" given to the working cattle. The top part of the sugar-cane is sliced fine in a cutting machine and piled into troughs. Rock salt is then pounded fine and strewn over the fodder and over all is thrown a top-dressing of rich molasses. The cattle revel in the mixture and after having fairly gorged themselves, they will linger to suck up the mlasses that has trickled down into the bottom of the trough. Before many weeks have passed they are fat and shining, and horses and sheep, which also take kindly to the food, give ample evidence of its fattening and beneficial properties.

An expert on cycling matters, who was asked "How will the bicycle be improved in future years!" says there is some ground for believing that the chainless safety will be the coming bicycle. Overcoming the friction is the greatest difficulty in the manfacture of this class of wheel and many of the experiments which have been made to this end have given encouraging results. There will be improvement all around in the construction of the bicycle—in the tires, the saddles and the pedals. Already a saddle has been brought out in France which is a comfort and a delight. It is said to enable a wheelman not only to ride further with less discomfort and wear and tear but to add to his speed. The present saddle is barbarous and unscientific, and before long the public will realize the fact and demand improvement. The bicycle makers are loath to adopt a new idea, no matter how good it is, and it is only the pressure of popular dissatisfaction that will drive them to the manufacture of a better form of saddle. It was so with the safety frame, the pneumatic tire, the wood rim and other improvements. Just now light wheels are the fashion, but they are sure to be dropped later on. On the question of whether cycling is merely a craze or will take a permanent place among the national pastimes, opinion is divided. The authority just mentioned says: "Of course the cycling craze will die out and the sport remain. Cycling has backbone and has come to stay, but it may experience a setback, for many persons now riding will hardly do so next year or the year after. Field athletics, tennis, baseball, roller-skating and many other sports have all had their booms in this country and cycling now has the time and attention of the public. Nevertheless, cycling is about the most rational and healthy craze that has taken hold of the people in a generation and it bears unmistakable signs of robustness and long life.

A horticultural journal seeks to remedy the popular inability to define what an orchid is. Some may know an orchid when they see one. They may even be cognizant of the habits and with the habitats of some of the more hardy varieties, but to give a definition at sight would certainly be impossible to many. A plant which is not peculiar to any zone, which is found in the frigid and torrid, which has at least 10,000 varieties already known to man, some of which grow from roots, some from a bulb, some in trees, some creep on the ground, some of the plants completely cover huge trunks, others grow to the size and with the profusion of the daisy—such a variety of plants must needs have something in common to enable the perplexed botanist to classify and to catalogue his specimens. Every orchid flower consists of three petals and three sepals. Under the microscope every difference apparent to the naked eye disappears and one sees that whereas in other plants the organs of reproduction are separate, in the orchid they are, in each case, fused together. Orchids have the style and the stamens in common with other plants but they bear the stigmata underneath, while at the tips are the pollen grains.

Microbes as a class have been so roundly abused that the discovery of the fact that we cannot altogether get along without them induces a certain sense of satisfaction. A Russian professor has been taking great trouble to determine the value of germs in assisting the body to perform its natural functions. He fed animals on food that had been carefully sterilized and compelled them to breathe germless air. The experiments proved that the presence of microbes is necessary to digestion. The animals soon showed the effect of the deprivation. First they began to droop, then lost their appetite and finally weakened and died. It was found that the food simply would not assimilate when the microbes were absent. This series of experiments has been extended to the vegetable world. It is now proved that certain plants can assimilate the nitrogen which is necessary to their growth only through the action of the microbes that live at their roots.

Next to excellence is the appreciation of it.—Thackeray.

JAPANESE FACES.

They are Entirely Unlike Any Other Asiatics.

RESEMBLANCE TO THE COREAN FACE.

Two Marked Varieties Typical of the Country Studied by a Well-known Physiognomist.

The typical face of the Japanese race has become familiar in this country within a year through the pictures printed in the Sun and other papers. At first it may have made rather an unfavorable impression upon physiognomists and observers in general; but as people have become better acquainted with it through the study of its peculiarities it must have grown in favor. It differs from the face of other Asiatic races; it is obviously distinct from the Chinese, the Tartar, the Hindoo, the Malay, and the Persian face. It bears a nearer resemblance to the Corean face than to any other in Asia. But in facial outlines, as in mental characteristics, the Japanese are more like the European races than are any other Asiatic people.

Professor Griffis of Tokio says that there are two marked varieties of feature in Japan, which are strikingly portrayed in their own pictures. These are the broad flat face of the lowest class and the oval face, with full nose, of the higher. Professor Griffis has been further led to believe that the Japanese, whose origin is lost in antiquity, are a mixture of two separate races, the one of which had extended southward from Siberia, hairy and broad featured, while the other, which approached from the southwest, had the Hindoostani physiognomy and smooth skin. To this day the natives of the chief island, Nippon, regard those of the lesser island, Yeso, who are called Ainos, as of inferior quality. The face here spoken of as typical of the natives of Japan is that of the well-born Nipponese a people who probably owe their origin to a cross between the primitive Ainos and the latter comers from India.

The face of the Mikado, as twice or thrice printed in the Sun from Tokio portraits of him, is one which apart from his complexion, resembles that of many Americans who may be seen in the streets of New York any day. At first glance it seems to have a rather sullen expression; but when closely studied it gives an idea of intellectuality, thoughtfulness, steadfastness cautiousness, energy and level-headedness. It is evidently indicative of the man's character, as illustrated during his long and successful reign. All the features of it are well formed, and the bearing of the head is in accord with his traits, as known to the world. Any physiognomist, after thoroughly examining the Emperor's face and head, would very surely pronounce a most favorable judgment upon them. The face of his wife the Empress, is oval, full of intelligence, kindly, and might be taken for that of a fine-looking American or European woman, in so far as form and expression are concerned, yet not, perhaps, as regards complexion, though it is a truth that many Japanese women of rank, who rarely go out of the house, are fair-complexioned.

The Premier, Prince Ito, the great diplomatist, would pass here for a Colorado silverite or a North Dakota speculator in town lots. General Yamagata looks not unlike the late Robert Louis Stevenson, novelist, Marshal Oyama bears some resemblance to Grover Cleveland. Viscount Mutsu would be fine-looking for a white man. Vice-Admiral Ito's double may be seen upon every block on Broadway any fine afternoon. Dr. Depew, the Bowery "Peach," would smile if he saw one of the Japanese portraits in the Sun's collection of them, and Thomas C. Platt would smile if he saw another. The faces of a group of young Japs in a photograph belonging to the Sun look like those of any group of young Americans at Yale or Harvard or Princeton.

The typical Japanese face, as drawn and colored by native artists, bears less of a resemblance to the American or European face than when it is photographed, for the methods of Japanese art are peculiar. The real style and spirit of the face are best brought out by the camera. It is a face that must be studied very closely and very long and very often by any one who would seek to gain an insight into Japanese character by means of it, or who would get a proper comprehension of it, or who would attempt to interpret the history of Japan by the distinctive physiognomy of its peculiar people.—New York Sun.

ANTIQUITY.

Egypt still remains the land of wonders, and mysteries. A wreath of forget-me-nots made of precious stones with intertwining stems of gold was recently found in one of the tombs by M. de Morgan, the coronet that had perhaps encircled the brow of a princess buried two hundred years before Abraham was born, coming forth fresh and beautiful from the dust of ages, while the mummied princess herself crumbled to pieces at the touch. To an explorer thus rumaging among the dust of ages this sparkling coronet, with a portion of the epitaph of Queen Is em Kheb's epitaph, "She is armed with flowers every day," must have given a sense of strangeness and at the same time a nearness to ages long dead startling in its vividness.

The Boston small boys call the good old game of prisoner's base "China and Japan." Of course Japan does the getting of 'em in.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 26 1895

The Union Stockyards in Chicago cover 350 acres and cost $3,000,000. They have eight miles of streets and receive 8,000,000 head of stock every year.

Active work on the Valley road has begun. Within thirty days three miles of the track will be ready for the rails, and after that it won't be long before Stockton hears the whistle blow.

An indication of returning prosperity is the lower rate of interest to be had in San Francisco, and the willingness of capital to make loans on country property again. Only a commencement has been made, but even this much has been so long delayed that the change is more than welcome.

The British government borrowed $6,000,000 the other day at less than three-fourths of 1 per cent interest and could have had ten times the amount at the same rate, had they needed it. There is no valid reason why Uncle Sam should pay 4 and 5 per cent., when money in Europe is crowding forward for investment at less than 1 per cent.

The disastrous and fatal cyclone which has just visited a number of Eastern States makes it opportune to call attention to the fact that such climate exigencies are entirely unknown in California, while in one storm that has just occured more lives were lost than in all the earthquakes California ever experienced.

New experiments in motive power for street railroads are soon to made in the east. Compressed air as a propelling force is to be tried in Baltimore. It is claimed that a car can be charged in half a minute to run fifteen miles. Cars are being equipped for the experiment, and if successful another problem of rapid and cheap transportation will be solved.

Three mortal columns of one of the "big dailies" are devoted to the half-witted maunderings of one John L. Sullivan, whose sole claim to public attention consists of the fact that once upon a time he was able to whip any brute of his class. They must be hard up for "stuff" to pad out with when such slush is ladled out so liberally. It is safe to say that not one in a hundred reads such rot.

It now develops that of the money appropriated by the Nebraska legislature for relief of starving farmers $17 out of every $21 was paid to the railroads for transportation. About the same percentage the farmers of Nebraska get for their crops when raised and shipped. Yet we must send relief to Ireland's poor, who are being robbed through the extortions of "landlordism." When you saluted Old Glory on Independence Day did you stop to think whether it represented protection to the freedom you enjoy or protection to railroads while they make you stand and deliver 17-21sts of your production? When you find out let us know.

From time to time a man will be found who will not take a home paper on the ground that it is not worth his while, or that he is too poor to do so. No man is too poor to take his local newspaper and it is false economy to get along without it. Hardly a week passes that something does not appear in columns that will be a financial benefit to the subscriber, and by the end of the year he has made or saved from one to twenty times its subscription price. The city papers do not take the place of your local paper, although some people seem to think they do. The city papers are all right in their way, but they don't give you what you are most interested in—your local and county news. You can not learn from them when and where public meetings are to be held, who are dying and who are marrying, who are moving in and who are moving out, court proceedings, who wants to sell land—in fact hundreds of items which might be of particular importance for you to know. Such matters city papers cannot furnish but your local paper can and does.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

TRADE MARK

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING

EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.

FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

MISCELLANEOUS.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.,
July, 25, 1895.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company has filed in this office a list of lands situated in the townships described below, and has applied for a patent for said lands; that the list is now open to the public for inspection and a copy thereof, by descriptive subdivisions, has been posted in a convenient place in this office for the inspection of all persons interested and the public generally.

Within the next sixty days following the date of this notice, protests or contests against the claim of the company to any tract or subdivision described in the list, on the ground that the same is more valuable for mineral than agricultural purposes, will be received and noted for report to the General Land Office at Washington, D. C.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Register.
A. W. EIBESHUTZ, Receiver.

SUPPLEMENTAL LIST NO. 23.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD LANDS.

INDEMNITY SELECTION (MAIN LINE).

Independence Land District.

California.

List No. 8, approved September 26, 1889.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

List No. 11, approved September 26, 1894.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 34 East, M. D. M.

List No. 7, approved June 18, 1889.

Lands situated in Township 27 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.,
July 25, 1895.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that the Southern Pacific Railroad has filed in this office a list of lands situated in the townships described below, and has applied for a patent for said lands; that the list is open to the public for inspection, and a copy thereof, by descriptive subdivisions, has been posted in a convenient place in this office for the inspection of all persons interested and the public generally.

Within the next sixty days following the date of this notice, protests or contests against the claim of the company to any tract or subdivision described in the list, on the ground that the same is more valuable for mineral than agricultural purposes, will be received and noted for report to the General Land Office at Washington, D. C.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Register.
A. W. EIBESHUTZ, Receiver.

SUPPLEMENTAL TO CLEAR LIST NO. 24.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD LANDS,

MAIN LINE.

Independence Land District.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 34 East, M. D. M.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

NOTICE.

SCHOOL BOND ELECTION NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given to the electors of Taboose School District, in the County of Inyo, State of California, that, in accordance with the provisions of the Political Code of the State of California, as set forth in Section 1880, to and including Section 1888 of said Code, an election will be held on the 17th day of August, A. D. 1895, at the Public School House, in said Taboose School District, at which time will be submitted to the electors of said District the question of issuing bonds of the District and selling the same, for the purpose of raising money for purchasing school lots, and for building or purchasing one or more school houses in each District, and furnishing the same.

The polls will be opened and the election held at J. H. Miller's House, in Taboose School District, on the 17th day of August, 1895, and the polls will be open from 1 o'clock p. m. of said day until 6 o'clock p. m. of said day.

D. E. Smith, Inspector. J. H. Miller and George Calvert will act as Judges of said election to conduct the same.

The amount of bonds to be issued is One Thousand dollars, of the denomination of One Hundred and twenty-five dollars each, and to bear interest at the rate of eight (8) per cent per annum.

Said bonds are to be numbered consecutively 1 to 8 inclusive, and are to mature as follows to wit:

1. to mature, inclusive, One year from date.
2. " " " Two years from date.
3. " " " Three years from date.
4. " " " Four years from date.
5. " " " Five years from date.
6. " " " Six years from date.
7. " " " Seven years from date.
8. " " " Eight years from date.

Said election will be held in conformity with the provisions of the Political Code of California governing such elections.

A. L. CONKLIN.
J. W. CALLOWAY.
W. B. MOORE.
Trustees of Taboose School District.

Dated July 15th, 1895.

INYO SEMINARY.

A Classic and Scientific School for both sexes.

Competent Instructors in Art and Music.

BOARD AND TUITION REASONABLE

First term commences about September 1st.

For further particulars apply to the Principal, M. E. Temple Stevens, A. M. Bishop, Calif.

NEW FEE BILL.

CHAPTER CCVII.

An Act to establish fees of county, township and othe officers, and of jurors and witnesses in this State.

[Approved March 28, 1895.]

The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The following county, township, and other officers shall charge and collect the following fees.

COUNTY CLERK.

On the commencement of any action or proceeding in the Superior Court, except probate proceedings, or on appeal thereto, to be paid by the party commencing such action or proceeding, or taking such appeal	$5 00
On the filing of a petition for letters of administration, testamentary, or guardianship five dollars, to be paid by the petitioner; provided, that at the time of filing the inventory and appraisment in any such proceeding there shall be an additional deposit of one dollar for each additional thousand dollars of the appraised valuation, in excess of three thousand dollars.
On filing the petition to contest any will or codicil	3 00
On the appearance of any defendant, or any number of defendants answering jointly, to be paid upon filing the first paper in the action by him or them	2 00
On placing any action, except a probate proceeding, or default case, on the calendar for trial or hearing, to be paid by the party at whose request such action or proceeding is so placed	2 00
For every additional defendant appearing separately	1 00
The foregoing fees shall be in full for all services rendered by such Clerk in the cause, to and including the making up of the judgment roll.
On the filing of any notice of motion to move for a new trial of any civil action or proceeding, the party filing same must pay to the Clerk, in full for all services to be rendered in connection with said motion, except as hereinafter in this section provided	2 00
For issuing an execution or order of sale in any action	1 00
In all proceedings begun or acts performed prior to this Act becoming a law, such and charges as were provided by the law at the time such proceedings were begun or acts performed.
The Clerk shall also charge and collect the following fees and compensation not above provided for:
For any copy of any record, proceeding or paper on file in the office of the Clerk relating to any civil action pending in said Court, when said copy is made by him, per folio	10
For each certificate of the Clerk, under seal of the Court	25
For filing each claim in probate or insolvency proceedings	15
No fees shall be allowed or charged by the Clerk for services rendered in any criminal case.
For services rendered by the Clerk, not in connection with civil actions or proceedings in Court, he shall charge and collect, for the benefit of the county, the following fees:
For issuing marriage license, one half to be paid to the County Recorder	2 00
For filing and indexing articles of incorporation	1 00
For filing and indexing certificates of copartnership	1 00
For filing and indexing all papers to be kept by him, other than papers filed in actions or proceedings in Court, and official bonds and certificates of appointment, each	25
For issuing any license required by law, other than marriage licenses	1 00
For examining and certifying to a copy of any paper, record, or proceeding prepared by another, and presented for his certificate, fifty cents, and one cent per folio for comparing the said copy with the original.
For making satisfaction of or credit on judgment	25
For receiving and filing remittitur from Supreme Court	50
For administering each oath, without certificate, except in a pending action or proceeding	10
For taking any affidavit, except in criminal cases	25
For taking and approving each undertaking and the justification thereof, except in criminal cases	50
For searching records or files, for each year	50
For taking acknowledgement of any deed or other instrument, including the certificate	50
For filing notices of appeal and appeal bonds, each	25

SHERIFF.

For serving any process, writ, order, or paper, except as hereinafter provided, required by law to be served by the Sheriff	50
For serving a writ of attachment, execution, or order for the delivery of personal property	1 00
For taking any bond or undertaking	50
For serving an attachment or execution on any ship, boat, or vessel	3 00
For keeping and caring for property under attachment or execution, such sum as the court may fix, provided, that no greater sum than two dollars per day shall be allowed to a keeper when necessarily employed.
For a copy of any writ, process, or paper actually made by him, when required or demanded according to law, per folio, ten cents; provided, that when correct copies are furnished to him for use, no charge shall be made for such copies.
For advertising sale of property and posting notice, exclusive of cost of publication, or furnishing notice for publication, each	50
For publication of notice in newspaper, the reasonable cost of publication, subject to the approval of the Court.
For serving writ of possession or restitution, putting a person in possession of the premises, and removing the occupant	1 50
For subpoenaing witness, including copy of subpoena, each	25
For summoning trial jury of twelve or less	2 00
For each additional juror	10
For traveling in the service of any paper required by law to be served, for each mile actually and necessarily traveled, one way only, fifteen cents, when such travel can be made by rail, in other cases, twenty-five cents. No constructive mileage to be allowed.
For collecting money on execution, with or without levy, one per cent on the first thousand dollars or less, and one half of one per cent on all sums over one thousand dollars.
For executing and delivering Sheriff's deed	1 50
For executing and delivering certificate of sale	50
For transporting prisoners to county jail, actual cost of such transportation.
For executing and delivering any other instrument, per folio	10

RECORDER.

For recording every instrument, paper, or notice required by law to be recorded, per folio	10
For indexing every instrument, paper, or notice, for each name	10
For filing every instrument for record, and making necessaay entries thereon	20
For each certificate under seal	25
For every entry of discharge, credit, or release on the margin of record, and indexing same	25
For searching the records of his office, for each year	50
For abstract of title, for each conveyance or incumbrance	25
For recording each map or plat where same is copied in book of record, for each course	10
For recording each map or plat, where same is not copied in a book of record	50
For figures or letters on maps or plats, per folio, ten cents; provided, that the fees for recording any map shall not exceed fifty dollars.
For taking acknowledgement of any instrument	50
For recording marriage license and certificate, to be paid by County Clerk	1 00
For recording transcript and all services in estray cases	1 00
For recording each mark or brand	50
For administering each oath or affirmation, and certifying the same	25
For filing, indexing and keeping each paper not required by law to be recorded	25

The Clerk, Sheriff, and Recorder shall account for all fees in this section provided for, and the Clerk, Sheriff and Recorder, unless otherwise provided by law, shall pay the same to the County Treasurer on the first Monday of the month following their collection, as provided in this Act.

County Officers must, and township officers may, demand the payment of all fees in civil cases, in advance.

SECTION 2. No fees or other compensation shall be paid for certificate of declaration to become a citizen of the United States, and for making a record thereof, or issuing a certificate of citizenship to become a citizen of the United States, or for making a record thereof; and no fees or other compensation shall be paid for filing the statement and affidavit of a committee or candidate voted for at any public election held within the State; and this section shall apply to all the counties in the State.

SECTION 3. All Acts or portions of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect immediately.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, to all persons having business with the offices of Clerk, Sheriff or Recorder fo the Countyof Inyo that the above provisions of the Fee Bill are mandatory, and will be strictly enforced.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk and Recorder.

Independence, Cal., June 3, 1895.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER, General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.		From Mound House No. 1	To Mound House No. 2.
		Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House		10.50 a. m.	5.20 p. m
Dayton		11.25 a. m.	4.45 p. m
Wabuska		1.40 p. m.	2.30 p. m
Hawthorne	Ar.	5.00 p. m.	Lv. 11.00 a. m
		No. 3. Leave—	No. 4. Arrives—
Hawthorne		6.00 a. m.	7.25 p. m
Luning		7.10 a. m.	6.15 p. m
Soda Springs		7.50 a. m.	5.35 p. m
Belleville		8.10 a. m.	4.35 p. m
Candelaria		9.40 a. m	3.50 p. m
Benton		1.20 p. m	11.50 a. m
Bishop Creek		3.10 p. m.	9.50 a. m
Alvord		.05 p. m.	8.55 a. m
Independence		4.35 p. m.	7.25 a. m
Lone Pine		5.20 p. m.	6.40 a. m
Keeler	Ar	7.00 p. m.	Lv. 6.00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturday.

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (33 miles), Sandy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salsbury & Co's tri weekly stages (leaving Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (5 miles) Darwin (24 miles), and Mojave (110 miles)

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

Adolph Gerckens Plaintiff, vs. Annie J. Gerckens Defendant.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Annie J. Gerckens, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain judgment against you and a decree dissolving the the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the plaintiff and defendant as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 18th day of June, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. W. BENNETT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA.

Location of principal place of business: San Francisco, California. Location of works, Inyo, Inyo County, California.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Directors held on the 5th day of July, 1895, an assessment (No. 27) of ten cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, Room No. 12, Rotunda, Mills Building, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this Assessment shall remain unpaid on the 8th, day of August, 1895, will be declared delinquent, and advertised for sale at Public Auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Wednesday, the 4th day of September, 1895, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.
W. W. SARGEANT, Secretary.

Office—Room 12, Rotunda, Mills Building San Francisco, California.

Carpet Weaving.

MRS. J. F. ELDRED.

BIG PINE, CAL.

PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER

We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kinds of carpet and rug weaving.

Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished, at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.

First class work guaranteed at low prices.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases, contests etc. given careful and promt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY--AT--LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases.

Brown & Wills,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Social attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Kearsarge Sts.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery.
All kinds of dental work done according to latest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING IN ANY STYLE, SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 13, 1894.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Administrator.

HOTELS.

NORMAN HOUSE,
Independence, Cal.
New House
New Furniture.
Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.
O. I. MAIRS Prop
feb12tf

BIG PINE HOTEL.
BIG PINE CAL
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.
First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.
THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

FOR SALE.
THE WHITNEY HOUSE
—The only hotel in—
LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL
Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address
MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895.

JOHN B. CLARKE,
Successor to John Clarke,
—PROPRIETOR—
John Clarke's Bishop Stables,
BISHOP, CAL.
First-class Turnouts of Every Kind
Fine horses and Carriages.
horses Boarded for any Time
Best of Care and Attention

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY
L. MUNZINGER & CO., Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will presen he same by the first of each month and avment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modo Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY, the 8th day of March, 1892, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 10 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit Commencing at the South-east corner of the south-east quarter of North and quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 98-100; thence North-east following the meanderings of the bed of the Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence, thence following said Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, six and 80-100 acres; also lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29, in the town of Independence, the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead, or lode situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "La Dispricada Lode."

That certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura State of California, commencing at a point twelve and nine-twentieth (12 9-20) rods south of the general corner of the North-west quarter and the North-east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South-west quarter and the South-east quarter of Section No. one (1), in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty-eight and eleven-twentieth (68 11-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North-westerly along a small branch or swale to a point twenty-four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North East quarter and the South-east quarter, and the North-west quarter and the North east quarter of the North-west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty-one (21) West, running thence North forty-four and eleven twentieth (44 11-20) rods thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres: Together with ten shares of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and alls bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament John Allen Hannah deceased.

Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th 1892.

SAVE YOUR SHOES

AMES' SHOE PROTECTOR is warranted to make the sole wear as long as the remainder of any ordinary shoe, and to save from 20 to 60 times its cost in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.

PAT. APPLIED FOR

SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROP'R.
Horseshoeing ..... $2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1894, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday ..... January 5th
" ..... February 9th
" ..... March 9th
" ..... April 6th
" ..... May 4th
" ..... June 1st
" ..... June 30th
" ..... August 3rd
" ..... August 31st
" ..... October 26th
" ..... November 2nd
" ..... November 31st

THOMAS C. BOLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND BHINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, JULY 26.....1895

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman .....GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman.....CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge.....GEO. M. GILL.
Sheriff.....ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk.....DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney.....P. W. FORBES.
Assessor.....P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer.....W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner.....I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed).....JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools.....S. W. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist.....FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist.....A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist.....J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist.....J. J. STEWART.
5th Supervisor Dist..FRANK FITZGERALD.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .67
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5¼
Pig lead	3.90

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

MONDAY, July 22, 1895.

Estate of W. G. Watson, deceased—Filed petition for letters of administration.

WEDNESDAY, July 24, 1895.

F. Rhine vs. Eliza M. Hannigan—Issued summons.

THURSDAY, July, 25, 1895.

People vs. Patrick Conners—Filed Information.

MARRIED.

WASHBURN--CANFIELD--At Independence Cal., July 21, 1895, by Rev. S. W. Albone, Mr. George Washburn and Miss Vena Canfield.

Ben. H. Yandell Esq. visited Big Pine yesterday.

Snow is reported to be quite plentiful on the summit.

Eight commercial travelers were on Monday's train.

Ring grapes are for sale in the Southern Inyo market.

Judge Arnot is on to-day's train and will be with us this evening.

The large crops of grain are ready in every locality in the valley.

J. W. Forces and family have moved into their new residence on Edwards street.

Dave Rogers, who was hurt at the Mairs ranch last week with a derrick is steadily improving.

Judge Arnot was unable to come last Monday, but is expected without fail on this evenings train.

Mike Reddy left town last Wednesday afternoon for Cerro Gordo where he will work for Pat Clinton.

Dr. J. S. McQueen returned to Bishop last Tuesday morning after a professional visit of two weeks here.

J. J. Gunn, wife and daughter and Mrs. J. C. Irwin went to Big Pine on Saturday, returning Monday.

I. Tucker and family, accompanied by two friends are spendings a week's vacation at the headwaters of Bubb's creek.

J. C. Irwin and Arthur Smith left last Sunday morning for the Mt. Whitney country where they will spend a month Fishing is reported to be excellent at the head waters of Kings River and Bubb's Creek, but game somewhat scarce.

Mrs. John Fiehman returned to her home at Keeler, Monday after a visit of several days with friends at Independence.

Sam Gruber was in from Mazourka last Sunday for more supplies. Sam is making ends meet by the dry-washer process.

Davis & McIntosh will start on a run of ore in a few days, at the arrastra owned by Schroeder & Basto, at the Alabama hills.

A. N. Bell is refitting his flouring mill at Camp Independence, so as to be able to make flour out of the coming crop that will equal the imported article.

Pasted a dime on a sheet of paper and send to Crocker & Ames, 619 Montgomery St., San Francisco, for Ame's Shoe Protector, the wonderful saver of shoes.

Sam Andrews, Alex. Clarke and two other men, nephews of James Hillyer, left last Wednesday for the lakes over the summit to spend a few days outing.

The two little sons and daughter of Mr. Geo. C. Rives arrived in Independence Monday evening and will make their home with Mr. and Mrs. Rives at the Hirsch mine.

Miss Nellie Lynd, sister of Harry Lynd who was mail clerk on the C. & C., accompanied by Mrs. Julia Church arrived from Hawthorne last Monday. The young lady has gone to Keeler for a short visit but will come to Independence in a few days. Harry Lynd has been transferred to the S. P. and is now running between Reno and San Francisco.

The marble quarry at Inyo is closed down and it will probably be some time before work is resumed. During the time that it has been in operation the concern has left not less than $50,000 in cash in this valley and it is to be hoped that the Company will yet succeed in establishing the works upon a paying basis and resuming operations upon a more extensive scale.

Will Dehy, formerly of Bishop, now a student at the Berkeley University, arrived here last Saturday night having left the railroad at Fresno and come across the Kearsarge pass on foot. He left Sunday morning for Bishop to visit his old home and friends for a few weeks, when he will return by a different route.

H. T. Thompson, a former resident of Camp Independence, but now a resident of Coveley, Mendocino county, has sold his farm at the latter place, realizing a handsome profit on it. A new railroad is being built to that place, causing a raise in the value of property.

L. F. J. Wrinkle returned home to Keeler on Wednesday's train from an absence of two weeks at Bodie, where he has been engaged upon a system of mining surveys, to be used in a big suit now pending in Mono county. Mr. Wrinkle came to Independence yesterday, returning to-day.

Mrs. Julia Church and her two children arrived from Hawthorne Monday on a visit to her mother, Mrs. J. D. Blair. She will be joined by husband, Mr. Abe Church in about ten days and a fishing party will be formed to go up on Oak Creek and camp for a few weeks.

Taboose school District will hold an election August 17th to vote on the question of issuing bonds to the amount of $1000, for the purpose of buying the necessary land and building a school house for the District.

John Cometti came down from Fish Springs last Tuesday bringing over 43 ounces of gold, a result of his last run. Tracey & Co. have also made a clean up, and Madden & Rose are still taking out ore.

Tom Morris, the sprinter arrived here last Monday evening and will spend a few weeks in town. It is said that while here he will do some training, and it is also reported that he will try to make a match with Ober.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of the Inyo Seminary, published this issue. Persons desiring any information should address the principal, M. E. Temple Stevens, A. M., Bishop, Cal.

P. Rasmussen came up from Inyo a few days ago and has been enjoying a vacation in town. He has been working for the Inyo Marble Company for over six years.

Miss Etta Naylor went to Keeler on Wednesday's train and will have charge of the R. R. station there while W. M. Richards takes a well earned vacation.

P. H. Mack Esq. went to Hawthorne yesterday to meet Hon. P. Reddy, who is on his way to Bodie. Mr. Mack expects to return to-day.

Are we going to have any Fair or fall races this year? It is getting along about that time now, if anything is to be done.

There were eight drummers in Independence yesterday, representing various San Francisco business houses.

Marsh. Naylor came down from the mines at Fish Springs yesterday, where he has been working for some time.

BUTTER from the Fairview creamery an be obtained from H. Levy.

As A Caution.

Parties who have had new stoves put into use the past two weeks by the agent selling them, might find it to their interest to examine the pipe running through the roof if they have not seen it put up. Mr. C. A. Walter of Camp Independence informs us that he came near having his residence burned last Monday, the 22nd. He says that the agent had agreed to set the stove up ready for use. Having business at other parts of the farm, he went to attend to that, and when he returned. was informed that everything was complete. Everything went well until last Monday morning, when fire was discovered in the shingles between the roof and ceiling. It was quickly extinguished, and upon examination it was discovered that in fitting the joints together between the roof and ceiling, they had not been fitted exactly, but had been driven together so as to leave a space of more than an inch for the smoke and sparks to escape, one joint cutting the other for a space of two or three inches. It being a dark place between the ceiling and roof there was not sufficient light to enable them to fit the joints correctly. Mr. Walter informs us of the fact, that others having had the stoves set up may examine them accordingly.

Steadily Gaining Strength.

Speaking of the return home of Senator Jones of Nevada the Carson Appeal says:

The Senator looked well and talked emphatically on the question of silver.

"Its no use bothering any more with the old parties, to h—ll with them. They are both with the gold ring and they will stay there. The reports that the silver agitation is dying out is false. It is spreading daily and now that the Eastern voters begin to see the real cause of the financial depression, they are, if anything, the more rabid on the question than we are in Nevada, because times are harder with them. Make no mistake, the present revival of business is only temporary. We will have no good times until the money question is settled, and it will only be settled by the new party. The party is gaining strength everywhere, and if we stand by our guns and no compromise, we will win in '96."

Departure Of The Holiness Band.

The Holiness Band made their exit from our town last Sunday in a blaze of glory. To the people of the town, large and small, old and young, their last day here will be a memorable one. Services were held in the large tent at ten o'clock Sunday morning, after which the congregation wended their way to Mr. Baxters' field where the following named converts were immersed by Mr. Asa Adams, the leader of the Band: Sam Andrews, Alexander Clark, John Lubkin, Harry Bert and Albert Salazar. At two o'clock p. m. the Band took charge of the Sabbath School, of which Mr Wilkinson is the Superintendent, and a most elevating and instructive hour was spent. At 5:30 o'clock occurred the most interesting event of the day, judging from the crowd gathered to witness it. At that hour two of the members of the band, Miss Vena Cranfield and Mr. George Washburn, were united by Rev. S. W. Albone in the holy bonds of matrimony, Miss Adams acting as bridesmaid and H. E. Wikinson as groomsman. The bride was dressed in a most becoming gown of tan colored silk and hat trimmed with the same, and carried pink roses. The bridesmaid wore grey silk, and the groom—but it isn't possible to array a groom gracefully in print. After the ceremony the newly married couple received the congratulations of friends and acquaintances who had becme interested in them since their arrival in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Washburn intend making their home in Independence for a time, and we trust their future may be most happy. At 7:30 a general hand shaking and farewell meeting was held and on Monday morning the Band took their departure carrying with them the good will and hopes of the Independence people for a pleasant journey.

Coolgardie.

Rich new finds are being constantly reported from Coolgardie gold fields. Coolgardie, Australia, is an accessible point, reached by steamer to Fremantle, thence by rail to Southern Cross and team to destination. The trip to Australia on the fine steamers of the Oceanic Steamship Company via Honolulu, Samoa, and New Zealand is pleasure sailing the day long. This line tickets passengers to Cape Town, South Africa. Map of Coolgardie district and Pacific ports reached by the Oceanic Steamship Company is mailed free to any address by the O. S. S. Co. 138 Montgomery St San Francisco.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Keeler, Cal. on June 24, 1895, three horses dessribed as follows: One brown mare, white star in forehead branded thus 2C on left hip. One chestnut mare, both ears split, white stripe in forehead both hind legs white branded thus TS on left hip and shoulder. One iron-grey mare branded thus S on left hip and shoulder (brands on this mare very dim.) The owner is hereby notified to claim his property and pay the charges upon the same, or I will, at the expiration of thirty days cause them to be sold according to law.

JOHN BARNES.

Keeler, July 15, 1895.

Weather Summary, Week Ending July 25, 1895.

Highest barometer	29.981 date, 21st.
Lowest "	29.732 date, 25th.
Highest Temperature	98.8 date, 25th
Lowest "	57.9 date, 21st.
Mean "	79.1
Average dew point	33 3
" humidity	21.7
Total precipitation	Trace

Prevailing direction of wind, NW.
Highest velocity and date, 28, NW 19th.
Number of clear days 4.
" " partly cloudy days 2.
" " cloudy days 1.
" " rainy days (.01 or more rain) 0.

H. E. WILKINSON,
Observer.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place on July 22, 1895, a grey mare, weight about 1100 lbs. no visible brand, large scars on back, swelling in knee of left front leg, gentle animal and a persistent gate breaker. Owner will call and prove property and pay charges.

R. L. ROSSI.
At Lacey Ranch.
Camp Independence, July 26, 1895.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE WHY ORDER OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE SHOULD NOT BE MADE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of the estate of James Daley, deceased.

H. H. Howell, the Administrator of the estate of James Daley, deceased, having filed his petition herein, duly verified, praying for an order of sale of the Mayflower mine and mining claim, and the decedent's mill site, being a portion of the real estate of said decedent, for the purposes therein set forth.

It is therefore ordered by the Judge of said Court that all persons interested in the estate of said deceased appear before the said Superior Court on Saturday, the 17th day of August, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, at the Court-Room of said Superior Court, at the Court House, in the County of Inyo, State of California, to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said Administrator to sell the said mine and mining claim and the said mill-site.

And that a copy of this order be published at least once a week for four consecutive weeks in the Inyo Independent, a newspaper printed and published in said Inyo county.

GEO. M. GILL,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Dated July 1, 1895.

[Endorsed.]

Filed July 3, 1895.

D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

Bennett & Forbes, Attorneys for Petitioner

FRED BURCKHARDT

Watchmaker & Jeweler

LONE PINE, CAL.

Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated ,atisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Fire arms repaired and loaded.

All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall." Lone

FRED BURCKHARDT

(Official.)

Treasurer's Report.

To the Hon. Board of Supervisors, Inyo County State of California.

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith submit my report of the receipts and disbursements of this office for the Quarter ending June 30th, 1895. Respectfully submitted,

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer.

RECEIPTS—

Apr. 1, 1895, Cash on hand	$12 075 31
A. M. Given, Sheriff fees	39 70
A. M. Given, Tax-Collector fees	19 00
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees	125 60
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees	44 60
J. E. Dunlap, J. P. 3rd twp fines	7 60
A. A. Armstrong, Int State land	27 85
Sam'l Levy "	125 28
Jos. Seely "	50 69
D. J. Hession, error warrant 74	45
E. H. Edwards, Int State land	32 00
P A Chalfant, Assessor	199 50
A. M. Given, Tax-Collectr fees	965 57
		13,713 15
May, F. J. Cooper, Int State land	44 80
D. J Hession, Recorder fees	44 15
D. J. Hession, Clerk fees	40 75
A. M. Given, Sheriff fees	23 20
A. M. Given, Tax-Collector	38 00
S. P. McKnight Int S Schl ld	51 74
Jas. E. Damon "	16 80
" " "	16 80
C. & C. R. R. Tax State Treas'r	1,195 68
Margie Shaw Int State ld	53 00
State Treas. ac't Treas. & Aud.	16 64
W. A. La Mar Int State land	22 40
W H Murray Red'mpt'n State ld	58 22
P. A. Chalfant, Assessor	433 23
A. M. Given, Tax Collector	6,687 43
		22,455 99
June, A. M. Given, Sheriff fees	20 55
A. M. Given, Tax-Collector fees	34 00
D. J. Hession, Recorder fees	93 40
D J. Hession, Clerk fees	37 50
J. J. Stewart Redemption fees	103 79
W. Stewardson and W. Neiswender, Int State land	22 40
Dr. L. Robinson Red'mpt'n fees	1 83
John Davies, Int. State land	33 60
State Treas' ac't. Treas. & Aud.	09 00
Jacob Koch, Redemption fees	3 57
R. P. Keating, " "	8 78
" " "	19 52
Mrs. C. Delaney, Int State land	8 00
P. A. Chalfant, Assessor	761 63
A. M. Given, Tax Collector	1,101 86
		24,706 42

DISBURSEMENTS—

Apr. Bridge	106 86
General Expense	1,740 62
Hospital Fund	563 00
Sundry Road Districts	916 66
Bishop School	250 00
Salary	1,374 78
Independence School	85 00
Lone Pine School	95 25
Round Valley School	130 80
Station School	67 63
Warm Springs School	70 00
Irving School	123 00
Big Pine School	200 00
Fish Springs School Dist	75 00
Milton School	2 00
Station Library	4 94
Independence Library	9 75
Bishop Library	3 00
Lone Pine Building	10 81
		6,859 13
May, State General	2,860 05
County Bond	1,005 55
Bishop School Bond	840 00
Big Pine Bond	640 00
Union Bond	355 03
Salary	1,094 98
Hospital	32 00
Rebate	35
Bishop School	146 10
Lone Pine School	223 00
Big Pine School	34 78
Independence School	37 32
Independence School	143 51
Union School	226 50
Fish Springs School	75 00
Warm Springs School	157 20
Milton School	19 00
Irving School	100 00
Station School	65 37
		13,914 87
June, Salary Fund	1,099 98
Hospital Fund	54 00
Irving School	140 40
Big Pine School	333 05
Fish Spring School	23 52
Bishop School	70 00
Union School	85 00
Milton School	79 52
Independence Special	26 49
Station School	25 37
Riverside School	82 00
Round Valley School	2 25
Warm Spring School	16 22
July, Cash on hand	8,753 77
		24,706 42

Treasurer's Trial Balance, Apr. 1, 1895.

To the Salary Fund	$	2,369 24
General Expense "	2 790 31
State General "	469 97
Hospital "	739 99
Bond "	732 45
Bishop Special Fund	5 13
State School "		1,233 00
General Road	260 72
To the various Road District Funds:
No. 1	363 47
No 2	289 70
No 3	243 85
No 4	146 80
No 5	148 61
Bridge Fund	491 62
Swamp and overflowed Land	264 61
Institute	80 00
Big Pine Special School	26 00
Teachers Library Fund	43 50
Coroner's	88 25
Unapportioned Property Tax	458 45
County School	32 38
To the various School Dist Funds:
Riverside	6 16
Round Valley	49 24
Irving	170 93
Bishop	289 34
Station	41 66
Warm Springs	201 64
Big Pine	428 94
Milton	106 90
Independence	137 17
Fish spring	36 28
Union	163 02
Lone Pine	341 67
To the various School Dist. Library Funds:
Milton	$ 68 52
Round Valley	8 76
Irving	26 82
Bishop	126 67
Station	82 34
Warm Springs	12 41
Big Pine	48 85
Independence	21 56
Union	46 44
Riverside	20 51
Lone Pine	50 30
Fish Springs	50
Independence Bldg Fund	3 00
Fish Springs " "	19 84
Independence Bond Fund	15 10
Bishop (old) " "	71 92
Union " "	17 72
Bishop (new) " "	200 87
Big Pine " "	39 99
Fish Springs " "	11 83
Lone Pine " "	1,439 55
Road Poll Tax	445 25
Cash Balance		$8 753 77
	$12,356 01	$12 356 01

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 1st day of July, 1895.

D. J. HESSION,
Clerk.

Examined, accepted and approved by the Board of Supervisors the 9th day of July, 1895.

FRANK FITZGERALD,
Chairman.

MERCHANDISE.

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, "DRESDEN" WARE.

The newest Style

OF

Fashionable Clothing

Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOD

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get the

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO Co. Cal.

Dealer in GENERAL MERCHANDISE, GROCERIES MINERS Supplies

PROVISIONS

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

MERCHANDISE.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere

E. CHENOT.

Bodie, Cal., March 9, 1884.

NATHAN RHINE,

Independence, Cal.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

ALSO TRANSACTS A

GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

AGENT FOR

WELLS, FARGO & CO'S EXPRESS,
WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO

MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO. OF NEW YORK.
LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE FIRE INSURANCE CO.

NATHAN RHINE.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

0-m RENO, NEVADA

MISCELLANEOUS.

Inyo Stage Company.

REGULAR LINE

—FROM—

Mojave To Keeler.

FINE COACH FAST STOCK

The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful

Redrock Canyon

And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.

Stage leaves Mojave,
WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS
at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

Stage leaves Keeer,
MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS
at 8 o'clock p. m.

W. K. MILLER,
Propr.

INDEPENDENCE

MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

Parties supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pound.

j19-tf

BELL'S Flouring Mills

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR

Having added Patent Rolls and other Improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, portable and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, on the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the managment of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

Livery Accommodations

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor

COOK BOOK FREE.

Every housekeeper wants to know the best things to eat, and how to prepare them.

"The Royal Baker and Pastry Cook."

Contains One thousand useful recipes for every kind of cooking. Edited by Prof. Rudmani, New-York Cooking School. Free by mail. Address (writing plainly), mentioning this paper,

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
106 Wall Street, N. Y.

A NEED OF THE AGE.

"Yes, riding a wheel is great sport and a bicycle is a great convenience," remarked a young business man to an Indianapolis Sentinel reporter, as he pumped away at the edge of the pavement, filling his tire with atomsphere. "But before bicycling will ever become a success a meeting must be called for the propose of allowing the wheelmen and the pedestrian to arrive at some understanding. I am in favor of a convention or something of that sort.

"As it is now a rider comes down the street and sees ahead of him at a crossing a man or woman who is supposed to be endowed with reasonable intelligence. This person is in the act of crossing the street. He looks up, sees the rider coming and stands still right in the middle of the street. Of course, he is mentally calculating his chances for getting across safely. One can see the workings of his mind in the muscular contortions of his face.

"In the meantime the rider is getting closer and closer and is in a study equally as profound as to what the person is going to do. The pedestrian takes a step forward, takes another glance up the street, stops, starts back, makes an effort to reach the pavement, stops again, starts forward, stops——

"Of course, by this time the cyclist is at almost a standstill and is also zigzagging from one side to the other waiting and muttering. What he says depends upon whether he is a man or woman. The pedestrian seems to give up all possibility of escape, faces the rider, both arms extended, jumps from one foot to the other, and the two collide. The cyclist is thrown to the ground, his wheel twisted, and he gets the blame.

"The same happens in the park when we are crossing it. A pedestrian ahead hears the crunch of the wheel on the gravel walk behind him, and, without turning around jumps to one side. He thinks he has made a mistake and jumps to the other right in front of the wheel. He is tossed over on the grass, the wheelman gets his trousers torn, his kneecap skinned, his bicycle bent, and himself blamed.

"And how easily this can all be avoided. Let the pedestrian instead of performing all these trying evolutions merely walk along as though there was nothing behind him, keep his course, and the cyclist will know what to do. He will turn his wheel to one side and slide past with perfect ease and safety. On the crossings let a man walk along as though there were not a bicycle in the state, and the wheelman will judge his course accordingly. He has control of his wheel and is as anxious not to collide as the other fellow. That's all we want. We merely ask that people walk along about their business and we shall not molest them.

"In the case of a horse which is not readily managed the rider or driver may be on the alert and skillful, and there may be a collision; but with a bicycle the rider has control, and if the pedestrian will only go along and not get rattled there will be no collisions. This is what I want the people to know, and the only way it seems for them to learn this is to hold a convention or something."

There are said to be over 100 female pulpit orators in this country.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

IN CARIBOO.

By JULES VERNE.

CHAPTER III.

"Oh, you are really the angel that people call you!"

Lucy Roberts was the only white woman, or, more correctly speaking, girl, for she was only twelve years of age, to make her appearance in the mining camps along the bed of the Fraser. Large for her age, her sweet girlish face lighted up by wide opened blue eyes of rare beauty, her head decked with an unusual growth of golden hair, Lucy, who was a most daring horseback rider, flitted through the mining camps like a sprite, her long hair thrown to the wind and glittering in the sunshine with a golden sheen.

The rough miners idolized her, and she often came like an angel of peace among them, quelling brawls, staying the hand uplifted with murderous intent, or rescuing some poor wretch from the clutches of the desperado. "Angel of Hell's Hollow," "Belle of the Cariboo," "Guardian Spirit of Gory Gulch," "Golden Lucy," were some of the picturesque names bestowed upon her by the inmates of the mining camps.

Strange to say, no one stood more in dread of Lucy's love of fair play and her vigor in bringing evil doers to justice than her own father, for he was only too prone to make use of his power for the purpose of furthering his own interests, or the gratification of his darker passions. The moment the arrest of the Morels became known to Miss Roberts, now a young lady of twenty, she at once suspected some evil design on her father's part—a suspicion which grew into a certainty when she learned of the existence of the beautiful French girl and the attempted abduction following so close upon the arrest of the father and brother.

"The captain's daughter desires to see the French prisoners!" said the officer at the guardhouse to his superior the morning after the arrest.

"All right, admit her," was the order given without the slightest hesitation.

So accustomed was Lucy Roberts to come face to face with the very offscourings of the world's market places, attracted to the province by the magical cry of gold, that she opened her blue eyes in unaffected astonishment as she was confronted by the Morels, especially Leon, whose frank, open countenance and manly bearing appealed at once to her innate love of honesty and fair dealing.

Leon had already heard of the "Angel of Hell's Hollow," but in the wildest flights of his imagination he had not pictured to himself any such modest and refined maiden as stood before him. He felt the blood tingling in his cheeks as those round, wide opened, liquid blue eyes were turned full upon him, and for a moment he even forgot his gold mine. After listening to their answers to her questions Lucy exclaimed:

"This is infamous treatment, gentlemen, and your imprisonment shall not be of long duration."

Leon stammered out a few words of thanks.

"And meanwhile," she continued, 'don't have the slightest anxiety about your mother and sister. I'll order food sent to their camp, and I'll ride down to see them today. With me for their friend they need fear no more ruffianism," and turning to the door she gave a few smart raps with the loaded handle of her riding whip. The guard made his appearance.

"Furnish these gentlemen with the best food the police camp affords," she said in a low tone, "and charge the extra expense to me," then with a graceful and friendly inclination of her body she bounded out of the room, roused her hunting dogs and was in the saddle and out of sight before the Morels had recovered the use of their tongues.

Leon stood by the heavily barred window straining his eyes to get another glimpse of the "Belle of the Cariboo," when he felt his father's hand laid upon his shoulder.

"Come, my boy, don't let 'Golden Lucy' reconcile you to your imprisonment," cried Morel with a laugh.

"Isn't she superb, father?" exclaimed Leon, still at the window.

"Permit me, Monsieur Morel," said his father, touching Leon gently on the arm. Leon turned quickly about. With a mischievous smile his father held out a little bunch of white violets.

"Were they hers?" cried Leon joyfully, as he took them and pressed them to his lips.

"Just as I used to be, just as I used to be, murmured the elder Morel, and then he added: "Yes, they were hers. She struck them with her riding whip and knocked them from her corsage. Don't be foolish, now, my son. The 'Belle of the Cariboo' has had many a millionaire mine owner at her feet. They say she is absolutely indifferent to men in the attitude of wooers. I can understand the reason, too, for once married her glory would be gone. Now everybody may love her."

"Well, then, count me in that list, too, father," cried the young Frenchman enthusiastically.

"I thought you were such a hater of old England and everything and everybody English," uged the elder Morel.

"I had not seen the 'Belle of the Cariboo' yet, father," returned Leon. "I had got my ideas of English women out of the French comic papers."

After leaving the police camp, Lucy Roberts determined to take a look at her dark eyed rival, whose beauty was calling forth such unstinted praise from all who had seen her, and in a short half hour her blooded mare was pulled up before the two French women, whom she found sitting in front of a tent, with clasped hands and sorrowful faces.

"The 'Belle of the Cariboo!'" whispered Pauline to her mother, as the two women rose and returned Lucy's smile.

"Captain Roberts' daughter?" cried Lucy, introducing herself, and then without giving Pauline and her mother a chance to recover from their astonishment at the unexpected visit, she cried out in a round, full voice, clear and musical as a bell, "I come from the police camp, madam, to tell you that your husband and son are quite well, and that I am fully persuaded of their innocence and intend to intercede for their release as soon as my father returns to the camp."

Pauline sprang forward, and grasping the gloved hand of the captain's daughter, who had not dismounted, pressed it to her lips.

"Oh, you are really the angel that people call you!" exclaimed Pauline, still clinging to Lucy's hand and keeping her dark eyes, now swimming in tears, riveted upon the fair face of the English girl.

"I fear you will not leave me that title very long, Mademoiselle Pauline!" returned Lucy, with a mischievous look. "However, we shall be the best of friends. The province is big enough and bad enough to need the services of any number of angels."

"Can you ride horseback?" inquired Lucy.

"Oh, yes," returned Pauline. "I learned to ride while we were in Seattle, only papa was afraid I'd kill myself and refused to bring a saddle for me."

"You shall have one of mine," was Lucy's reply, "and take a ride 'cross country with me some day. The miners must give you a name too. They're very apt at such business."

Pauline's eyes danced with joy, and turning to her mother she called out:

"I may go, mayn't I, little mamma? When I m on horseback I don't feel a bit like an angel, however," added Pauline laughing, "for I love the world more than ever."

"Miss Roberts smiled at the young girl's naivete, and then suggested that quite possibly Madam Morel desired to send a package to her husband and son and offered to carry it to them if she would strap it to her saddle. The package was quickly made up and strapped in place. Then with a hearty handshake the "Belle of the Cariboo" dashed away, followed by her three hunting dogs, which awakened the echoes with their loud baying.

Captain Roberts' anger knew no bounds when he learned of the failure of his trusted agent to separate the beautiful Pauline from her mother, and thus put such a curb upon the haughty spirit of the Morels that they would be forced to accede to his wishes. When, however, in addition to this piece of bad news, he was informed of his daughter's interference and her demand that either the Morels be confronted with their accuser or set at liberty, his wrath was so great that it threatened to gorge his brain with blood and put an end to his life then and there. For several days he kept aloof from the police camp, during which time the "Belle of the Cariboo" paid frequent visits to the guardhouse, and it was quite evident that something else besides mere desire to see justice done inspired these visits.

Lucy Roberts knew little and cared less for the conventional ways of love-making by which a woman—no matter how convinced she may be of the man's affection for her and certain of hers for him—must still dissimulate and await a declaration from him. And therefore it will be pretty hard to say just exactly how the Morels, father and son, felt the day that Lucy unfastened a bunch of mountain daisies from her white throat and handed them to Leon, and then, throwing her arms around his father's neck, kissed him and cried out:

"Ah, Monsieur Morel, if Leon is as noble and good as he seems to be, I love him!"

At last Captain Roberts became alarmed at the turn things were taking and consented to produce the witness upon whose testimony he had ordered the arrest of the Morels. In spite of the fact that the two men brought in by Roberts to testify against the Morels were notorious desperadoes, both known to be his paid creatures, and in spite of Lucy's indignant protests against the acceptance of such evidence, the Englishman's influence was strong enough to have the father and son held upon the charge and an order made for their removal to Richfield for trial. Miss Roberts was careful to conceal this piece of news from the wretched mother and daughter, whose poor hearts were rapidly losing courage, and no sooner had the "Belle of the Cariboo" taken her leave of Madam Morel and Pauline than another rider halted at their camp. It was "Mr. Timely," as he still requested the Morels to call him when speaking of him to the outside world, but no doubt the astute reader has already divined the concealment of Captain Roberts' son, Clifford by name, under this incognito.

At Pauline's request the existence of this accepted lover had been carefully concealed from his sister, Lucy Roberts—the French maiden feeling a little ashamed of herself for yielding so soon to the suit of her gallant rescuer and fearful that this Diana of the Fraser might lose interest in one so unlike her and now so ill adapted to become her twin angel, as had been proposed. Visions of black mares, riding habits and mad dashes through mining camps became fainter and fainter in Pauline's mind, but the regret was only a momentary one. When she felt her lover's strong arm wrapped about her, her happiness needed only the presence of her father and brother to make it complete.

"Mr. Timely" had come with the joyful tidings that that night the prisoners were to be set free, and that unless strenuous opposition should be made to their marriage by the elder Morel he asked that it be solemnized the moment the party reached the little camp, for that step would at once and forever put an end to the wild dreams of his father to make the beautiful Pauline his wife and end this wicked persecution.

The impatient lover promised to have "Bishop" Whitman, as the only clergyman in that part of the province was called by the miners, present to perform the ceremony.

"How shall I ever dare to face your beautiful sister, the Diana of the Fraser's valley?" murmured Pauline. "Only yesterday she informed me that she had her eye on a splendid black mare for me, and that she and I would be the twin angels of the mining camps. Ah, Lucy, I fear, prefers the admiration of all men to the love of one!"

"But you have both, dearest Pauline," urged her lover. "I'll buy the black mare for you, and when Lucy gets over pouting with you for 'marrying a man,' you and she may ride 'cross country to your hearts' content. Only, I implore you, keep out of her squabbles with the miners. She passes more than half her time regulating their conduct, settling their disputes and preventing good, honest brawls which keep such people's blood cool."

That night as young Roberts, armed with a crowbar, approached the door of the guardhouse with the intention of forcing it and setting the father and brother of his fiancee free from an iniquitous imprisonment, he was startled to hear the sound of footsteps and the rattling of keys. As he had taken the precaution to furnish the only man on duty with liquor enough for him to drink himself into a stupor, these sounds could only be accounted for by him on the theory that his movements had been watched and that his design was about to be thwarted. He halted and was on the point of making his escape, when his sister's form loomed up in front of him.

"Lucy!"

"Clifford! In heaven's name what are you about to do with that iron bar?"

"Force this door and free the French prisoners."

"Well, pardon me, but I think these keys will answer that purpose."

In another instant Leon Morel had sprung forward and caught the fair Diana of the Fraser in his arms, and she seemed not at all displeased with the ardor of her worshiper.

"Lucy! you are not alone?" stammered Leon, his face white as chalk in the moonlight.

"Oh, don't mind me, I'm only her brother," whispered young Roberts, and laying hold of his sister's arm he pinched her, saying:

"Cry, 'Peccavi,' Belle of the Cariboo!"

"Cry, then, 'Peccavi,' bold slayer of grizzlies!" replied Lucy.

In a few moments the party of rescued and rescuers had mounted four of the six horses awaiting them—three on each side of the guardhouse—and were on the way to the little camp, the elder Morel and young Roberts each leading one of the extra horses, while the lovers rode on ahead. The French women clung in speechless joy to their loved ones, and not until "Bishop" Whitman, fearing the loss of his double fee by the arrival of the ferocious captain, had sounded a note of warning, was Leon surrendered to the "Belle of the Cariboo."

The eastern sky was just beginning to show the first faint glimmer of coming day when Roberts, pistol in hand, dashed into the little camp. But it was too late. He had lost a wife, but gained a son and daughter.

The "Pauline mine" proved to be one of the richest in the Cariboo district, and the next year Leon returned to France with his fair English wife, and there is every reason to believe that he will one day be Senator Morel.

Clifford Roberts loves the wild western land so dearly that he is still there, although Pauline is longing to see Paris.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Douglas Jerrold and Leigh Hunt.

Douglas Jerrold's soul seemed to abhor every trace of study slovenliness. A cozy room was his in his home at West Lodge, Lower Putney Common, and his son's pen has given the world a welcome peep at the interior: "The furniture is simple solid oak. The desk has not a speck upon it. The marble shell upon which the inkstand rests has no litter in it. Various notes lie in a row between clips on the table. The paper basket stands near the armchair, prepared for answered letters and rejected contributions. The little dog follows his master into his study and lies at his feet." And there were no books maltreated in Douglas Jerrold's study. It gave him pain to see them in any way misused. Longfellow had the same sympathies with neatness and exactitude. Method in all things was his rule. He did not care to evolve fine thoughts and poetic images at a desk fixed like the one stable rock in an ocean or muddle.

But other distinguished writers have been as careless as these were careful. Carlyle gives us a curious sketch of Leigh Hunt's menage. In one room—the family apartment—a dusty table and a ragged carpet. On the floor "books, paper, eggshells, scissors, and last night when I was there the torn heart of a half quarter loaf." And above in the workshop of talent—something cleaner—"only two chairs, a bookcase and a writing table."—Chambers' Journal.

Counterfeit Dimes.

Counterfeit silver 10 cent pieces that contain as much if not more silver than genuine coin have been discovered in the United states subtreasury. They have been received from banks and are so carefully made that it requires the trained eye of an expert to detect their bogus character. The coins have the appearance of being well worn, a result of careful work on the part of the counterfeiter and a valuable aid to their circulation. Several of the coins have been sent to the secret service officials, who pronounce them most dangerous counterfeits and express the belief that they were made in Europe and sent to this country for circulation.

Your Health Depends

Upon pure, rich, healthy blood. Therefore, see that your blood is made pure by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

The only true blood purifier prominently in the public eye today.

HOOD'S PILLS act harmoniously with Hood's Sarsaparilla. 25c.

LECTURE ON TRAMPS.

Prof. John J. McCook, of Trinity College, in a recent lecture in New Haven on "The Pathological Aspect of the Tramp Problem," gave the following interesting facts about the knights of the road:

"New Jersey was the first State to pass a law punishing the professional tramp, and at the same time to define what he was. This was in 1876. Rhode Island was the next, and Connecticut came third. A recent writer asserts that there are about 60,000 tramps in the United States. This number is a trifle large, although it is safe to say that there are over 40,000. This is larger than the army of Wellington at Waterloo. We look on tramps as human wrecks and driftwood, and yet the majority of them are in the prime of life, and in better than the average health. Only 8½ per cent of the tramps from whom my statistics were gleaned claimed in the dead of winter, while the grip was raging that they were in bad health. They are robust, and will fill you with envy, malice and all other jealous feelings when you hear them snoring at midnight.

"Eighty-one per cent of tramps declare that they took to the road because they were out of a job, and only one man because machinery took his place. Over 60 per cent of the English tramps are given as taking to the road because of vagrant habits. The majoirty of our tramps are of American birth, 65 per cent of 1342 being of American parentage, and 272 Irish, who come next. Over 100 out of 1738 tramps could read and write, and they all spend money on the daily newspapers. Out of 1389, only seventy are married, fifty-seven are widowers and eighty-four have children. Thirty-eight per cent say that they work for their food, 24 per cent beg it, and 56 per cent steal it. Over 400 sleep at cheap lodging houses and nearly 300 in police headquarters. About 100 sleep in boxes."—Philadelphia Press.

In 1842 a Russian farmer named Bokareff conceived the idea of extracting oil from the seed of the sunflower. His neighbors told him that it was a visionary idea, and that he would have his labor for his pains. He persevered, however, and from that humble begining the industry has expanded to enormous proportions.

HOITT'S SCHOOL.

Nowhere are boys better cared for and more thoroughly taught than at Hoitt's School, Burlingame, San Mateo county, Cal. The school is in charge of Ira G. Hoitt, Ph. D., and will reopen August 6th.—S. F. Chronicle.

"Too many men," said Jenkins, "are like a thrashing machine." "How so?" "Only waitin' a chance to crush the hand that feeds 'em."

LIKE A SIEVE.

The chief function of the kidneys is to separate from the blood, in its passage through them, of certain impurities and watery particles which make their final exit through the bladder. The retention of these, in consequence of inactivity of the kidneys, is productive of Bright's disease, dropsy, diabetes, albuminuria and other maladies with a fatal tendency. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a highly sanctioned diuretic and blood depurent, impels the kidneys when inactive to renew their sifting function, and strain from the vital current impurities which infest it and threaten their own existence as organs of the body. Catarrh of the bladder, gravel and retention of the urine are also maladies arrested or averted by this benign promoter and restorative of organic action. Malaria, rheumatism, constipation, biliousness and dyspepsia also yield to the Bitters, which is also speedily beneficial to the weak and nervous.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself has said,
As home his footsteps he has turned—
"I clean forgot that, I'll be derned."

HOW'S THIS!

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligation made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Price, 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists. Testimonials free.

A quiet man was never quoted to his discredit.

Piso's Cure for Consumption has saved me many a doctor's bill.—S. F. HARDY, Hopkins Place, Baltimore, Md., Dec. 2, 1894.

Eve was the first woman to raise Cain.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Dr. PIERCE'S Golden Medical DISCOVERY

Cures Ninety-eight per cent. of all cases of Consumption, in all its Earlier Stages.

Although by many believed to be incurable, there is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its earlier stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 98 per cent. are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter) great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

Ely's Cream Balm QUICKLY CURES COLD IN HEAD

Price 50 Cents.

Apply Balm into each nostril. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N.Y.

MEN suffering from the errors, indiscretions, excesses of youth, or diseases of the reproductive organs, all of which lead to Consumption or Insanity if not treated in time, can find PERMANENT CURE by corresponding with us. Our remedies are endorsed by the medical profession. NO QUACKERY. HOPKINS MEDICAL CO., Manchester, Conn.

MOTIVE POWER!

HERCULES GAS and GASOLINE ENGINES.

PALMER & REY, San Francisco, Cal. and Portland, Or.

YOUR WIFE CAN RUN IT.
HERCULES GAS OR GASOLINE ENGINE
Best Power for Irrigating Purpose.
Palmer & Rey, S. F., Cal. & Portland, Or.

All Pain Goes When Pain-Killer Comes

For Colic, Cramps, Cholera Morbus and all Summer Complaints, there is no cure equal to Pain-Killer. Get a bottle to-day. Keep it constantly on hand, for there is no kind of pain or ache—internal or external—that will not relieve. Accept no imitation or substitute. Genuine has PERRY DAVIS & SON on bottle. The quantity has been doubled, but the price is still 25c.

Pain-Killer

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH, RED CROSS — DIAMOND BRAND

PENNYROYAL PILLS

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE. The only Safe, Sure, and reliable Pill for sale. Ladies, ask Druggist for Chichester's English Diamond Brand in Red and Gold metallic boxes sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other kind. Refuse Substitutions and Imitations. All pills in pasteboard boxes, pink wrappers, are dangerous counterfeits. At Druggists, or send us 4c. in stamps for particulars, testimonials, and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Name Paper. Sold by all Local Druggists.
CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO., 2819 Madison Sq., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

CABLED FIELD and HOG FENCE, 24 in. to 58 in. high; CABLED POULTRY FENCE, 24 in. to 68 in. high. STEEL WEB PICKET LAWN FENCE, 18 in. to 50 in. high. STEEL WIRE FENCE BOARD and ORNAMENTAL STRIP. Steel Posts, Steel Rail, Steel Gates and Steel Tree, Flower and Tomato Guards. We manufacture a full line of Wire Fencing, Gates and Posts, and solicit your patronage. Catalogue Free. De Kalb Fence Co., 100 High St., De Kalb, Ill.

JNO. WOODLOCK, PACIFIC COAST AGENT, 26 Beale St., San Francisco, Cal.

"HE THAT WORKS EASILY, WORKS SUCCESSFULLY." CLEAN HOUSE WITH

SAPOLIO

MALARIA! DO YOU FEEL BAD? DOES YOUR BACK ache? Does every step seem a burden? You need MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY. Three doses only. Try it.

Hercules

GAS OR GASOLINE

Engines

Workmanship the very best.
Always Ready, a boy can start them
No double or false explosions.
They Oil Themseves

A FEW USES TO WHICH THE HERCULES CAN BE PUT:

For Wood-working Machinery.
For Bean-cleaning Machinery.
For Hoisting-works in Mines.
Running Machine Shops.
Running Shoe Factories.
Bottling Soda Water.
Sawing Cord-wood.
Running Churns.
Sawing Lumber.
Pumping Water.
Running Elevators.
Running Paint Mills.
Running Electric Motors.
For Printing Machinery.
Running Sewing Machines.
For Electric Light Dynamos.
Running Ice-cream Freezers
For Carpe-beating Machinery.

ADDRESS:
PALMER & REY
405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal.

★ ASK YOUR DRUGGIST FOR ★

IMPERIAL GRANUM

★ THE BEST ★ FOOD FOR INVALIDS

★ JOHN CARLE & SONS, New York. ★

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

DR. BO-SAN-KO'S PILE REMEDY,

DROPSY

TREATED FREE.

Positively Cured With Vegetable Remedies. Have cured thousands of cases. Cure cases pronounced hopeless by best physicians. From first dose symptoms disappear; in ten days at least two-thirds all symptoms removed. Send for free book testimonials of miraculous cures. Ten days' treatment free by mail. If you order trial, send 10c. in stamps or pay postage. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Atlanta, Ga. If you order trial return this advertisement to us.

S. F. N. U. No. 680. New Series No. 27.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION,
532 California St., cor. Webb.

For the half year ending with the 30th of June, 1895, a dividend has been declared at the rate per annum of four and eight-tenths (4 8-10) per cent on Term Deposits, and four (4) per cent on Ordinary Deposits, free of taxes, payable on and after Monday, the 1st of July, 1895.

LOVELL WHITE, Cashier.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. 25 CTS.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc., AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. Woods & Co's.
"CASTLEWOOD" KENTUCKY BOURBON
CARTAN, McCARTHY & CO.
SOLE AGENTS, AND DISTRIBUTORS
SAN FRANCISCO

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE.

FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP - FOR CHILDREN TEETHING - For sale by all Druggists, 25 cents a bottle.

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, AUGUST 9, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVII. NO. 8. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., AUGUST 9, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1293.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.
One Year (post paid).....$2.00
Six Months.....2.00
Three Months.....1.25
One Month.....50
Single Copies.....10

BACK FROM THE WARS

Public Resorts Crowded With Heroes From China.

JAPAN NOW ALIVE WITH SOLDIERS.

The Populace Shows Its Strong Disapproval of the Government's Course—Making Large Promises.

The soldiers are returning to Yokohama by brigades from the seat of war and are being disbanded in various portions of the country. The streets are full of marching columns, followed by the excited and patriotic populace. The railway stations, the tea houses and other places of resort are crowded with the heroes just back from Japan, relating to their admirers the story of their experience and the incidents of the war. Yesterday a band came down the street at the head of a brigade of infantry playing "Marching Through Georgia."

The soldiers are received with great enthusiasm by the people, but the public temper was shown in a very decided manner the other day when Prince Komatsu, the generalissimo of the army, landed at Kobe to place his sword at the feet of the emperor and render him an account of his achievements. He was escorted from Port Arthur by a large fleet and was welcomed with highest honors and the greatest ceremony that could be paid to any man except the emperor, but it was all official. There was a large military escort, the public buildings were decorated with quantities of bunting and banners and lanterns; there were brass bands in every direction, and groups of school children carrying flags and singing patriotic songs. And in the evening the public places were handsomely illuminated, and thousands of dollars were spent for fireworks. But there was a conspicuous lack of enthusiasm among the people, although Prince Komatsu has always been a popular favorite, and is entitled to much of the credit for the management of the war. Very few private houses were decorated or illuminated. There seems to have been a studied display of coolness and resentment for the purpose of impressing upon the government the public dissatisfaction with its policy. So marked was this that there were quarrels between the owners and the tenants of certain property in regard to its decoration and there were two suicides during the day, both due to chagrin over the policy of the government and its surrender to the demands of Russia.

When a Japanese has no other way of expressing his disgust he falls upon his sword. One of the suicides was a major in the imperial body guard. He fought all through the war, but could not endure the taunts of friends who met him on his arrival at Kobe. The other was a coolie—a jinrikisha man—who was not aware that the fruits of victory had been forfeited until he heard the story from some persons who came down to welcome the prince. He at once became intensely excited; rushed through the streets shouting that Japan had been disgracefully betrayed, and on reaching his home proceeded to take his own life.

These things indicate the temper of the people and the crisis that has seemed to be impending. The resignation of the present cabinet at an early date was predicted until the recent action favorable to the government by the radical leaders, and some people have thought such an event would modify public sentiment and postpone if it did not prevent trouble. There is no question of the ability or the patriotism of the present ministry. There are no better men in Japan, but the people hold them responsible for the surrender to Russia and public sentiment may be satisfied with the amputation of their official heads.

Fifty daily newspapers have been suppressed this week. At no time since its existence has the censorship of the Japanese press been so stringent. Of the twelve leading dailies at the capital seven are under suspension, mostly because of their vigorous indignation over the submission to the demands of Russia. The few papers that are loyal to the government are making some very ingenious arguments and explanations. One declares that the return of the Liao-Tung peninsula will be regarded by the world at large as an act of chivalry well becoming the spirit with which the war was undertaken and conducted." Another, the Shimbun, says:

"Viewing the matter calmly, one realizes that it is perhaps a good thing for Japan that she has been compelled to be contented with only a part of her rightful prize. Had she obtained all she asked for she might have been satisfied with her present condition, which would have been very injurious to her future progress and development. But as it is the national pride has been strongly affected by European intervention, and the people are inspired with renewed energy to increase their resources and strength. Thus the loss of Liao-Tung may prove a blessing in disguise."

Some of the papers demand an increase of the indemnity as compensation for the surrendered territory. Others take the high ground that having "voluntarily" relinquished her territorial occupation of China it would not be manly or consistent for Japan to demand additional monetary compensation. With commendable but amusing pride, they assert that the Liao-Tung territory was given back to China as a mark of generosity and without any desire or expectation of receiving material compensation.

As a consolation to the people the government is making large promises in the way of public improvements and an extensive programme is semi-officially announced of ship building, navy yards, fortifications and other means of defense so that the country may hereafter be in a condition to fight even the Czar and hold its own with any of the nations of Europe. The papers say that Japan could now maintain herself against any one of them except England or Russia.

It is expected, although it is not officially promised, that the indemnity paid by China will be applied to the increase of the national armament and defense. The 200,000,000 taels, which amount to about the same number of dollars in our money, is to be paid in eight installments, 50,000,000 in six months, 50,000,000 more in twelve months and the balance in six annual installments with interest at 5 per cent. It is understood that 30,000,000 taels will be paid before July 1.

The total of the indemnity is equivalent in Japanese currency to 280,000,000 yen and it exceeds the national currency now in circulation by 113,000,000 yen, or an average of nearly 4 yen per capita of the population. The yen, is a silver coin equal to the Mexican dollar.

It is supposed that some of the indemnity will be used to cancel the war loans. There have been two, one of 30,000,000 yen, of which 70 per cent. has been called, and another of 50,000,000 yen, of which 60 per cent. has been called, making a total of 51,000,000 yen, upon which the interest amounts to 2,555,000 yen per year.

The financial side of the settlement with China has a serious aspect, as the government expects to get an annual revenue of 200,000,000 taels from Manchuria alone only one of the provinces that have been relinquished.

The indemnity will be paid through the local banks. There are several large financial institutions having branches in the commercial cities of both countries. They will probably divide the business and it will all be transacted without drawing bills upon London or invoking the aid of foreign financiers. The Chinese government will deposit the money in one or more of the local banks as it is due and it will be transferred to the credit of Japan and drawn against as in ordinary commercial transactions.

It is probably due to ex-Secretary John W. Foster that the Chinese government has been unusually prompt in complying with the terms of the treaty. Her conduct in this respect has been a novel phenomenon to those who are familiar with the habits and customs of Chinese officials, who never do anything until they are compelled to, and consider delay and deception the highest type of diplomacy.

There are written pledges from the highest officials of the Chinese foreign office in the legations of England, France and the United States at Pekin, that were written and received ten or twelve years ago, but which the ministers of those countries have never been able to persuade them to fulfil. When Mr. Foster accepted the somewhat difficult and unsatisfactory post of adviser to the Chinese government he exacted a pledge from Li Hung Chang that all the proceeding should be conducted upon business principles and with absolute candor and confidence, and it has been so.

It is understood that the Chinese government has already raised 30,000,000 taels of the indemnity and intends to anticipate tthe first payment. One of the stories in circulation is that the empressd dowager, who is the strong personality of the government and was regent until the present emperor came of age, has deposited 13,000,000 taels, which represent her savings for thirty years, to be paid as a part of the indemnity, thus furnishing a good example for other members of the royal family and for the officials and nobles who hang upon the favor of the court and get rich by squeezing every one who gets into trouble or has business to transact. It may be, too, that Li Hung Chang himself will take a hint from that act of patriotism, for it is said that he is the richest man in the world, even richer than the Rothschilds or the duke of Westminster or any of the American plutocrats.

His fortune is estimated at 500,000,000 teals, or nearly as many dollars.

The government expects to raise the money for the idemnity by direct taxation. The governors of the several provinces will each be assessed so much and the total amount apportioned among them, and then they may collect it from the people by any process or any pretense they please. England, which enjoys 95 per cent. of China's trade, will not permit her to increase the customs duties, which are now partially pledged to secure the payment of a foreign loan, and the other revenues are barely sufficient to supply the needs of the govrenment.

Although China has a very large population and the indemnity is only 50 cents per ccapita it is really a much larger sum in proportion to their productive capacity than the indemnity assessed upon France by Germany or the great war debt of the United States. Nine-tenths of the Chinese people are now engaged in a desperate struggle for existence. Their earnings will not average more than 10 cents a day, or $36 a year, and they are taxed without mercy.

With the increased burden will come to many of them the first news of the war. Those familiar with conditions in the interior of the empire assert that three-fourths of them have never heard of the struggle their emperor has been waging with his neighbor. In a country where there are no newspapers and no postoffices news travels slowly, and until some explanation is made of the increased taxation most of them will not be aware of recent events in their own history. It is expected that there will be resistance. There are already reports of a revolution in the populous province of Honan, which lies directly south of Pekin, and in the towns along the coast.

Where the incidents and results of the war are well understood there is said to be a very hostile feeling against Li Hung Chang. There is a general disposition to hold him responsible instead of the government at Pekin, and that fact probably has something to do with his repeated petitions to the emperor to be released from official cares and responsibilities.

Since the treaty of peace was signed he has three times tendered his resignation on the ground of illness and advanced age and physical weakness resulting from the attack of the Japanese assassin, but thus far the emperor's council at Pekin has taken no notice of his appeals, or at least has sent him no reply. It is understood to be Li's intention to spend the rest of his life in travel. He is now 76 years old and was never outside the limits of his own country until he went to Japan as an ambassador of peace. He has vast commercial interests. He owns steamships and coal mines and is the chief owner of the only railroad in China, which runs from Tien-Tsin to the coal mines, 120 miles north. He has sons and sons-in-law who are competent to look after the property they are soon to inherit and Li doubtless thinks he would be happier elsewhere during the next few years. He is particularly anxious to visit the United States and if he can secure the emperor's permission will doubtless spend next winter there.—William E. Curtis, in Chicago Record.

ST. ANDREW'S CIRCUS.

The Seven Dials were never notable for anything worse than thieves, dealer in live animals, old clothes, and theatrical "properties," and publishers of the Catnatch literature, for specimens of which collectors are now willing to pay such high prices. The opening up of the radiating streets has long rendered the neighborhood as harmless to the pedestrian as the once equally notorious Gray's Inn road. Yet middle-aged Londoners have no difficulty in recalling when they had to keep a sharp lookout in running the gauntlet of Little St. Andrew's street and its sisters after nightfall. How it drifted into being the dens of the criminal classes it is hard to say. For originally—so Evelyn tells us—the Seven Dials, thus named from the clock faces on a Doric pillar at the point where seven streets met, was intended as the residence of highly respected people who liked to be near the fashionable coffee houses at Covent Garden, the court in Whitehall and the gay world which then centered in Bow street and Drury lane.

But before the beginning of the century the Seven Dials had begun to share in the general squalor of St. Giles's, and less than fifty years ago it was a collection of rookeries at which modern sanitarians would stand aghast. Whole families lived in cellars as an eyewitness described them, "like cells in a convent of the order of La Trappe, or like onions on a rope." The inmates descended into these underground warrens by means of trap adders, and at intervals came up to breathe, disappearing with amazing alacrity when a constable or a Bow street runner happened to come within their limited purview. Beggars' lodging houses and "thieves' kitchens" were frequent, and were rather encouraged by the police, for the convenience they afforded the latter of being able to lay hands upon any particular individual when wanted. Men about town used to form parties to visit these haunts.

The Regent and Maj. Hanger are said to have attended a carnival in the Seven Dials, but wished they had abandoned their adventure when "that 'ere gemman with a shirt" was called on for a song. The Prince thus designated) finding it impossible to escape altogether, persuaded his friend to chant "The Beggar's Wedding," and left, after adding one more memory to the locality, which, it is hoped, is conscious of the distinction intended for it in the suggestion to rename it St. Andrew's circus.—London Standard.

TWO GOOD BOYS.

A Texas lady heard a tremendous racket in the kitchen, and upon investigation found her two boys, Jim and Bob, engaged in a rough and tumble fight. "What do you mean by all this racket" exclaimed the indignant mother. "Quit kicking each other, and let go of each other's hair. Jim, take your thumb out of Bob's ear. What are you quarreling about, anyhow?"

The boys separated and Bob exclaimed:

"We are quarreling about which is the best behaved boy, Jim says he is the best behaved boy, and I say he is a liar."

Here the two clinched again and the lady had to pour cold water on them to get them apart. The question as to which is the most quiet, orderly boy, has not yet been decided.—Texas Siftings.

Fanny—Mamma, Tommy can stand on his head so nice. May I stand on my head?

Mother—It is not nice for a little girl to stand on her head.

Fanny (with a sigh)—Then I suppose I'll have to wait until I'm a big girl!

"No," said Smallwort, "I hardly feel justified in saying that Peppers is inordinately vain, but when a fellow has a music box in his room, arranged to play 'Hail to the Chief' as soon as he opens the door what is one to think of him."

Wisconsin is important in manufacturing, having 132,031 hands and making $248,546,164 worth of product.

GIRLS, CAN YOU SWIM?

If You Cannot, Then Why Not Learn.

A NECESSARY ACCOMPLISHMENT.

It is Better to Begin When You are Young and Fearless—Silk Suits are the Best.

I learned to swim when I was 4 years old, and I remember it prefectly. It was off the coast of Florida; my mother sat in a rowboat, holding me by the back of my little cotton shirt, the only garment I wore. I would kick and splash in the cool, green water, sometimes delighted, sometimes shrieking at the top of my small lungs because the salt water would get into my mouth.

But I quickly learned not to be afraid of the water. The depths in which my mother held me were shallow, and the sand, as is usual on that coast, glittered white and firm a yard's length below the surface.

This was not swimming in its enlarged sense, but it was the rudimentary actions which many girls learn after they are in their teens and many more never learn at all. The legs and arms soon began to go out in the prescirbed rules, which teachers call the art of swimming. With me it was simply a natural law—the one of self-perservation. In a few years, when the legs and arms grew stronger, my mother would place me a yard or two from her and say: "Swim to me." With the instinctive faith that she would catch, did I begin to go under, I would strike out and swim to her in some sort of fashion. This was the way I learned to swim. I knew no method, had no theory; knew only that usually I didn't sink, that my motions propelled me through the water. No natatorium but the great bay, no scientific teacher, only a woman who had learned to swim even as I was doing, no life-preserver but my mother's hand laid under my stomach when the distance was lengthy.

Then I remember when my uncle used to sail up close in to shore in a small catboat, where I was swimming and give me a tow. I would catch the tow line he would throw me, and, holding on for dear life, go scudding along through the waves near in shore, behind the sailboat. This was exhilarating and exciting. For the spray would dash into my face, the movement was so rapid.

Timidity is an insurmountable barrier to good swimming, be your art ever so perfect. This is why, in all probability, women never make the fine swimmers men do. They are born with less physical confidence.

I have known a woman to swim along with the greatest assurance, because she thought a hand was held under her stomach, which in reality had been removed some time. When she found this out she sputtered and sunk. I have also known women to swim easily when they knew that by standing their feet would touch bottom. Get them beyond their depths and nothing could induce them to swim a stroke.

Swimming should be a necessity, not an acccomplishment. A girl once said that because she ran to the end of a short wharf, jumped off into thirty feet of water and swam back to shore she was a nine days' wonder at the hotel. Yet there were seventy-five men in the house, all of whom could do the same thing, thinking it only child's play.

Women go year after year to the seaside, but do they learn to swim? How many of them can go with men beyond the breakers? Singularly enough, city women are far better swimmers than their country or coast sisters.

How often is the case that a little urchin will be thrown from the side of a boat and told to swim? Why, they take to it as naturally as an alligator. To begin with, they never seem to have any instinctive awe of the water. For them no hidden stumps, undertows, oyster beds or tangling seaweed hold any terror.

When fear is eliminated good swimming is invariably the result. After all, it may be materially a question of strength, this marked differencce in the ability of the sexes to swim. A boy jumps into unknown depths, trusting to his strength of muscle and sinew to pull him through.

A woman has no such quality on which to depend. She knows her back is weak, her arms more like cotton than steel. It is this inherent consciousness of weakness that makes her shrink, although she couldn't probably define the reason of the feeling.

There is this peculiarity about a woman's swimming, she will either swim "dog" or "frog" fashion, the former being the easier, the latter the correct way.

A woman rarely, if ever, uses the overhand stroke to any advantage. There are women known to have done so, but they find it impossible to keep it up, or make any progress. All men use it to the exclusion of other methods. That it is swifter is shown, as swimmers all adopt it when racing. This may be another reason why all women swim slowly. The arm in this stroke, is brought backward, then over the head and plunged forward, the shoulder being entirely out of the water at each stroke. This motion seems to precipitate the body through the waves, the action being rarely graceful, but forceful. It is exactly as if one were pulling themselves through the water by means of a taut rope.

I lately asked a physician why it was that women never make use of this stroke. He answered that these powerful strokes were made by means of the muscles across the chest. In a man these muscles are strongly developed, giving to the arms their whole strength. For a woman the bosom takes the place of these sinews, cutting off the means of her ever making this stroke of any use to her.

Again, a woman is rarely a good diver, even though she is an expert swimmer. Physicians explain that it is owing to her weak back. She does dive in a sort of fashion, standing on a slight eminence and gracefully inclining herself head downward into the water. Even this is indulged in only by a few. A woman dreads giving herself up to space in this inverted attitude. Simply because her back may play her false, or the blood rush to the brain.

Now, a word about bathing suits. Women enter the race handicapped by the garments they wear. Does a runner put lead into his stockings when he races? Flannel is the heaviest kind of cloth, and yet the women cling to it as a bathing suit. A stockinet garment that comes from heel to shoulder, so that the weight is taken off the waist, is the best. Over that a long Russian blouse of black wash silk or alpaca loosely belted, and short sleeves. Then every muscle can work easily and naturally. The blouse throws off the water, ramains light and the swimmer has no extra weight to contend with.

Wear a suitable bathing suit, cultivate judgment, and there is no reason why any woman shouldn't swim. These two requirements once saved a woman who couldn't swim five strokes. She was in a rowboat, was run down by a steamer, overturned, and the boat rolled over her. She had on all wash-silk garments, and judgment enough to keep her mouth closed. This latter act excluded the water, thereby making her body bouyant.

When she came to the surface she used her five strokes, caught hold of the boat and pulled herself in. The boat began to sink and she stood up in it, forgetting that every inch of her body out of the water meant so much dead weight. The boat, being of wood, would not have sunk below the oar locks if she had sat still, for the presure of the water around her would have relieved it of her weight. Lo, over the skiff went again. She kept the air in her body and coming to the surface used her five strokes for the second time. This time she got astride of the stern and waited until the steamer's boat picked her up. True, silk garments and a cool head saved her, but had she known how to swim think of the danger she would have been spared?

That a natatorium should be connected with every large school for girls is a matter of prime importance. It may be beyond woman's power, from physical reasons, to ever equal men as swimmers, but it should be her duty, at least, to learn all she can of the art.—Harrydele Hallmark.

KEEPING OLD AGE AT BAY.

A few years ago an Italian bacteriologist proclaimed that he had discovered the "germ of old age." The idea was scouted by all scientific men, but there may be something in it after all. At any rate, says "Modern Medicine," there seems to be good ground for believing that germs, if not a specific germ, are at least one of the most important influences which bring on old age. It has long been known that the ptomaines or toxic substances produced by microbes are capable of setting up various degenerative processes. Degenerative changes in the joints, the liver, the kidneys, and other organs have been directly traced to this cause. The writer has for some time held the opinion that the degenerative changes incidenteto advancing age are due to the sam cause; namely, the toxins absorbed from the alimentary canal. These toxins are constantly present in greater or less quantity, according to the extent to which fermentative and putrefactive processes prevail in the stomach and intestines. These processes depend first upon the integrity of the digestive porcess in the individual, and, secondly, upon the character of the substances introduced into the alimentary canal as food.

These considerations suggest at once the thought while all human beings must necessarily be constantly subject to the influence of toxic substances generated in their own alimentary canal, and consequently must grow old and succumb sooner or later to the degenerative process of old age, these processes may be greatly accelerated by subsisting upon a diet which favors the production of toxic susbtances in the alimentary canal.

If this theory is correct we should expect to find the greatest longevity among those animals, and those men, who subsist on the simplest and purest diet, other conditions being equal. It would be impossible to find a sharper contrast than that which exists in this respect between carnivorous and vegetarian animals. Contrast for example, the dog, which grows old, becomes rheumatic and infirm in eight or ten years, with the donkey, who lives a useful life to forty or fifty years and the elephant, which is still active and useful at one hundred years. The same is true among men. The greatest number of persons who now live above one hundred years of age are to be found among Russian peasants, who rarely taste meat.

THE DELIGHTS OF HOUSEKEEPING.

"What is the matter with dinner, Jane?"

"It's the laundress' day out ma'am."

"What has that to do with it?"

"Well, you see ma'am, me an' the cook ain't on speakin' terms, and the laundress usually does our talking for us. There ain't anybody below as'll tell me whether the things is ready."—Harper's Bazar.

VINEGAR MAKING.

The Process of Manufacturing White-Wine Vinegar.

IDENTICAL WITH WHISKY MAKING.

The Atmosphere for Blocks in Every Direction Fairly Reeks With a Pungent Odor.

No farm cellar in the apple region is quite complete without its vinegar barrel.

Each fall, as soon as the sweet cider comes in from the presses, a part of it is funneled into a dusty barrel that occupies a place in the corner of the room. It is given every opportunity to turn "hard" and then sour—as sour as the sourest vinegar. Sometimes the housewife hurries the operation by adding a little "mother"—the thick, velvety growth, a product of fermentation, which sometimes rises in her cruets and jugs. By the next spring or summer, if conditions have been favorable, the cider has become vinegar and is ready for use with the early lettuce.

But that is a slow process and only small quantities are made at a time. If the city epicurean depended on such a source of supply he would have to take his salads without the acid element. For this reason great manufactories have sprung up, and many of them weekly make more vinegar than all the farmers of Michigan or any of the other apple states make in a whole year.

The visitor is warned of his approach to a vinegar factory while yet a long way off. There is a pungent odor not unlike that of long-confined smoke and the atmosphere for blocks in every direction fairly reeks with it. On approaching nearer it grows more and more acid, until inside of the building one has the rather novel sensation of tasting the air. It is almost equal to eating pickles.

Vinegar is of two or three different kinds. The most expensive is made from red wine and is of a deep purple color. It is very strong in acid—so strong, indeed, that it fairly bites the tongue. It costs about 40 cents a gallon. Then there is the cider vinegar of farm fame and it is the most popular of any for general household use. It retails at from 12 to 16 cents a gallon, and it may be said in passing that some disreputable concerns make a variety of "cider" vinegar that is wholly guiltless of apples. Great quantities of white-wine vinegar are also made, usually from corn and rye. It is perfectly colorless, very sharp to the taste and is usually used for making pickles and condiments of various kinds.

The process of manufacturing this white-wine vinegar is most interesting. In the first place, the manager starts out just as if he were going to make genuine corn whisky, but when he gets part way through with the work he suddenly switches off and the product is vinegar. The corn and rye come to the side of the factory in cars and are elevated to the top floor; where they go into big bins. In the morning when the superintendent gives the word a workman pulls the slide from a spout that leads down through four stories and into the top of the cooler, a huge iron boiler holding 100 bushels. The corn comes rattling down and it is soon boiling away under a steam pressure of sixty pounds. At the end of two hours it has been reduced to mash—a well-known whisky term—and is quite toothsome enough to tempt any cow home from a June pasture.

It is now blown through a pipe leading upstairs to the great mash-tubs holding 8,000 gallons each. Here about fifty bushels of malt, fresh from the malsters and ground to a pulp in a little mill on the next floor is dumped in and two awkward paddles begin to revolve, churning the mass until it looks like the surface of a geyser.

The cooking of the corn separated the starch, and the addition of the malt, together with a temperature of 148 degrees, turns the starch into sugar. At this period of the process the mash has a really sugary smell like molasses candy on the back of the kitchen stove. After being beaten and churned for three or four hours cold water is turned into a coil of pipes in the bottom of the huge tub to cool the mash. In the meantime some workmen have been preparing the yeast in a little room at one side. Malt and rye are boiled together in a copper-lined kettle holding 200 gallons, and, a little of the yeast ferment being added, the plant begins to grow. When the process has gone far enough just the right proportion of the yeast is taken and "planted" in the mash-tub, where without more ado it begins to make itself felt.

Now the mash is allowed to slide down through a pipe to the fermenting tanks, where it sizzles and bubbles away for seventy-two hours, hard at work fermenting. The alcoholic spirits are being slowly extracted by the "working" of the sugar. Thus far the process has been almost identical with whisky-making.

A busy chugging link pump now sends the mash upstairs to the still—real whisky stills, except in the use of "worms" or coils of pipe for collecting and condensing the alcoholic spirits. A "worm" would be used in vinegar manufacture, but Uncle Sam is afraid that some day a very well-meaning charge of corn might by some mistake turn to whisky instead of vinegar. Uncle Sam always looks after such things in a prompt and business-like way.

The alcohol is forced out of the mash and into the still by means of steam, which rapidly vaporizes it. The pipe in the still is surrounded by cold water, which quickly condenses the alcohol and collects it below in a receptacle. All the rest of the mash—"slops," as it is known to the vinegar man and the whisky man—is carried off to one side, where it is stored up ready to sell to the stock-raiser for cattle feed. It contains all the corn except the alcoholic parts, and it therefore makes very rich food.

The spirits are now pumped to the generators, the only distinctive vinegar making devices in the whole process. These consist of tall cylindrical tanks made of white wood and bound with iron hoops. They extend from floor to ceiling with an appliance on top for allowing the alcohol to trickle in and a cock at the bottom through which the vinegar may be drawn off.

Several floors are covered with these generators as thick as they can stand, and the visitor who goes among them is compelled to sneeze in deference to the pronounced acidity of the atmosphere.

The tanks inside are filled from top to bottom with beach shavings, nothing more. When the alcohol drips in at the top it spreads over the shavings where the air has ready access to it. The oxygen pounces upon it and changes it without more ado into acetic acid or vinegar, in which condition it runs out at the cock and into a trough that carries it down to the next floor into a huge storage tank. The shavings in the generators are merely for the purpose of providing a great amount of surface over which the spirits must flow.

After having seasoned for a time in the tanks the vinegar is pumped out into barrels, labeled and sent all over the country to the pickle manufacturers. Every bushel of corn makes about four gallons of white-wine vinegar, which sells all the way from 7 to 10 cents a gallon.

The cider used for vinegar comes almost entirely from Michigan, Ohio and New York, enough being secured every fall to last a whole year. The barrels are corded up in endless rows—a whole, great room filled full with only little alleyways piercing it—and allowed to stand until the cider is quite hard enough to make an old cider-drinker dizzy-headed. When at last it has sufficiently fermented it is run over the shavings in the generator and becomes a light-brown cider vinegar. It is now run into old whisky barrels and allowed to stand as long as possible. The whisky barrels assist greatly in the ripening process, which so much improve vinegar. Only a few firms in the country have this method of making their product more palatable.

Red-wine vinegar is made just like cider vinegar, a shade greater care being taken, perhaps, to keep it clean and pure. The wine used comes largely from California and Ohio, which of late years has been making a good deal of it. The factory can easily turn out eighty barrels a day and where one considers that a teaspoonful at a meal is a very large average for the ordinary adult it will be seen how far such a quantity will go. The prices are now so cheap that the farmer can hardly afford to make vinegar even for home consumption. He can sell the cider to better advantage.—Chicago Record.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.

Events are constantly occurring in large cities which illustrate the struggle for life among the poor beginning literally in infancy and ending often only with the determination of a miserable existence.

About nine o'clock of the evening of the day of the late election a gentleman passing up Washington street in Boston, was asked by a small boy to buy a paper.

"How is it," he inquired "that you haven't sold your papers before this?"

"These ain't my papers," he replied; "I've sold all mine. These are the other little fellow's, and I'm helping him clean 'em out."

"Where is the other little fellow?"

"Oh he's there in the entry."

The gentleman looked and saw a boy fast asleep upon the stairs. "How old is he?" he inquired.

"Oh, about six, and he lives in South Boston, and don't want to go home till he's sold out."

The evening was damp and chilly, and the sight of the poor, half-clad little waif, tired out and asleep upon the stairs, so tenderly moved him that he purchased his remaining stock of papers to the great delight of the child who rousing up from his nap, and shivering with cold, gladly took the quarter of a dollar given to him in the palm of his little hand, which was not much larger than the coin he receievd, and stowing it away safely in his pocket, started off on a run for his home, a mile or more away, in South Boston. He was probably afraid of punishment if he returned with his papers unsold.

The aid rendered the boy in the sale of his papers so generously and unselfishly by his associate, though but a child himself, was another and impressive testimony to the strength and beauty of that common bond of sympathy amongst the poor rarely known in the higher walks of life.

"I wonder who started that slang about getting it in the neck?" asked the curious boarder. "Some man whose wife bought him a necktie at a bargain sale, likely," said the cheerful idiot, and then the conversation languished.

Burglar Ben—We might as well skip right out of here, there's no dust in dis job. Burglar Biff—How do you know? Burglar Ben—I jist found de card o' de feller dat lives here; he writes for de funny papers.—Brooklyn Eagle.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
ITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 9 1895

The world has no more use for the girly-boy who parts his hair in the middle and wears corsets than it has for the woman who expects to conquer the world by wearing trousers; but it does admire and does need manly men and womanly women.

Another statement about assessment work has been started and is appearing in several newspapers that assessment work for '95 must be done by October 1st. It would be just as well to have it done by that date, but holders of unpatented claims have till December 31st to do the required amount of work for this year.

Kansas is deluged with rain. One season it is drought and the next a flood. Between the two the eastern farmers have a hard time of it. Some day they will conclude that a country where rains are made to order is about the right kind of a place to be in, and they will pull up the tent pins, call the dog and start for California.

Any reform that is worthy of the name must rest on the enlightened sense of the people, and enlightened sense comes only by education, in teaching people the better ways of life. Sunday laws that interfere with the rational comforts and recreations of the people can never stand in popular government.—Fresno Expositor.

After all that is said and done, the wealth of all great countries comes from the intelligent tilling of the soil, and the sooner our people realize that fact and govern themselves accordingly, by going to work, the sooner prosperity will come to us, and the arrival of free-silver legislation will not be at all delayed thereby. Standing on street corners and talking about it will not hurry free coinage.—Reno Gazette.

American politics may contain raw spots, but it is impossible to imagine even our toughest electors slugging women in the jaw, pelting candidates and their wives with filth, and doing the many other disgraceful things that occurred in England during the recent election over there. That country has a good big contract on its hands to civilize its own barbarians before sending missionaries to other lands or passing criticism upon the methods of its neighbors.—Los Angeles Times

The law regulating jurors' fees is getting an interpretation that is making service on juries anything but a pleasant pastime for people who have anything else to do. The Supreme Court has decided that jurors, after they are sworn to try a case, may get pay only for the actual days they are in court. In case a trial is interrupted by sickness or other cause and the jurors are excused for one day or a dozen they are not to be allowed pay, no matter how far they may be from home nor under what circumstances they may be put. This is probably the law, since the Supreme Court says it is, but it isn't justice.

It is very doubtful whether Emperor William ever expressed the hatred of Americans with which he is credited in a London letter. He is far too diplomatic to put his sentiments into writing, for he has already learned of the danger of letters. The Emperor at the Kiel festivities took occasion to visit the cruiser New York and to compliment Commander Evans on the American display. He would scarcely have taken the pains to make himself agreeable to "Fighting Bob" had he detested Americans.

The receipts of the Government for the month of July were the largest in nearly a year, and if it had not been for the heavy quarterly payments that had to be met there would have been a considerable surplus. It is now believed that the receipts will exceed the expenditures in every month of the present calendar year excepting October. In that month there may be a deficit of about $6,000,000. It is certain, however, that the Treasury will remain in excellent condition until Congress meets. Then it may be found advisable to take some step to increase the revenues.

LEVI STRAUSS & CO'S

COPPER RIVETED CLOTHING
EVERY GARMENT GUARANTEED.
FACTORY - SAN FRANCISCO - CALIFORNIA.

Estray Notice

There came to my place on July 22, 1895, a grey mare, weight about 1100 lbs. no visible brand, large scars on back, swelling in knee of left front leg, gentle animal and a persistent gate breaker. Owner will call and prove property and pay charges.

R. L. ROSSI.
At Lacey Ranch.

Camp Independence, July 26, 1895.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Keeler, Cal. on June 24, 1895, three horses described as follows: One brown mare, white star in forehead branded thus 2C on left hip. One chestnut mare, both ears split, white stripe in forehead both hind legs white branded thus TS on left hip and shoulder. One iron-grey mare branded thus S on left hip and shoulder (brands on this mare very dim.) The owner is hereby notified to claim his property and pay the charges upon the same, or I will, at the expiration of thirty days cause them to be sold according to law.

JOHN BARNES.

Keeler, July 15, 1895.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

NOTICE OF COMMISSIONER'S SALE ON FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGE.

O. I. MAIRS, Plaintiff, vs. JOHN ALEXANDER, Assignee of John Barnes, an Insolvent Debtor, and as Assignee of M. V. Barnes, an Insolvent Debtor, Defendant.

Under and by virtue of an order of Sale and decree of foreclosure issued out of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on the 7th day of August, 1895, in the above-entitled action, wherein, O. I. Mairs, the above-named plaintiff, obtained a judgment and decree against John Alexander, as Assignee of John Barnes, an insolvent debtor and as Assignee of M. V. Barnes, an insolvent debtor, defendant, on the 2nd day of August, 1895, which said decree was on the 5th day of August 1895, recorded in Judgment Book No. 1 of said Court, at page 506, I was appointed commissioner to sell and I am commanded to sell:

All those certain lots, pieces and parcels of land situate, lying and being in the town of Keeler, County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit: Lots numbers 1, 2, 17 and 18, in Block No. 4 in the said town of Keeler, as the same are commonly known and designated and as the same appear by the map of said town, made by James Oliver in the year 1884.

Notice is hereby given that on Saturday, the 31st day of August, 1895, at twelve o'clock, noon, of that day, in front of the Court House, in the town of Independence, in said Inyo County, I will, in obedience to said order of sale and decree of foreclosure, sell the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy plaintiff's judgment, with interest thereon and costs, to the highest and best bidder for cash in gold coin of the United States.

Dated, Independence, Cal., August 9, 1895.

O. I. MAIRS,
Commissioner.

P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

NOTICE.

SCHOOL BOND ELECTION NOTICE

NOTICE is hereby given to the electors of Taboose School District, in the County of Inyo, State of California, that, in accordance with the provisions of the Political Code of the State of California, as set forth in Section 1880, to and including Section 1888 of said Code, an election will be held on the 17th day of August, A. D. 1895, at the Public School House, in said Taboose School District, at which time will be submitted to the electors of said District the question of issuing bonds of the District and selling the same, for the purpose of raising money for purchasing school lots, and for building or purchasing one or more school houses in such District, and furnishing the same.

The polls will be opened and the election held at J. H. Miller's House, in Taboose School District, on the 17th day of August, 1895, and the polls will be open from 1 o'clock p. m. of said day until 6 o'clock p. m. of said day.

D. E. Smith, Inspector. J. H. Miller and George Calvert will act as Judges of said election to conduct the same.

The amount of bonds to be issued is One Thousand dollars, of the denomination of One Hundred and twenty-five dollars each, and to bear interest at the rate of eight (8) per cent per annum.

Said bonds are to be numbered consecutively 1 to 8 inclusive, and are to mature as follows to wit:

1. to mature, inclusive, One year from date.
2. " " " Two years from date.
3. " " " Three years from date.
4. " " " Four years from date.
5. " " " Five years from date.
6. " " " Six years from date.
7. " " " Seven years from date.
8. " " " Eight years from date.

Said election will be held in conformity with the provisions of the Political Code of California governing such elections.

A. L. CONKLIN.
J. W. CALLOWAY.
W. B. MOORE.
Trustees of Taboose School District.

Dated July 15th, 1895.

INYO SEMINARY.

A Classic and Scientific School for both sexes.

Competent Instructors in Art and Music.

BOARD AND TUITION REASONABLE

First term commences about September 1st.

For further particulars apply to the Principal, M. E. Temple Stevens, A. M. Bishop, Calif.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.

Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Fire arms repaired and loaded.

All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone

FRED BURCKHARDT

NEW FEE BILL.

CHAPTER CCVII.

An Act to establish fees of county, township and othe. officers, and of jurors and witnesses in this State.

[Approved March 28, 1895.]

The People of the State of California represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The following county, township, and other officers shall charge and collect the following fees.

COUNTY CLERK.

On the commencement of any action or proceeding in the Superior Court, except probate proceedings, or on appeal thereto, to be paid by the party commencing such action or proceeding, or taking such appeal $5 00

On the filing of a petition for letters of administration, testamentary, or guardianship five dollars, to be paid by the petitioner; provided that at the time of filing the inventory and appraisment in any such proceeding there shall be an additional deposit of one dollar for each additional thousand dollars of the appraised valuation, in excess of three thousand dollars.

On filing the petition to contest any will or codicil 3 00

On the appearance of any defendant, or any number of defendants answering jointly, to be paid upon filing the first paper in the action by him or them 2 00

On placing any action, except a probate proceeding, or default case, on the calendar for trial or hearing, to be paid by the party at whose request such action or proceeding is so placed 2 00

For every additional defendant appearing separately 1 00

The foregoing fees shall be in full for all services rendered by such Clerk in the action, up and including the making up of the judgment roll.

On the filing of any notice of motion to move for a new trial of any civil action or proceeding, the party filing same must pay to the Clerk, in full for all services to be rendered in connection with said motion, except as hereinafter in this section provided 2 00

For issuing an execution or order of sale in any action 1 00

In all proceedings begun or acts performed prior to this Act becoming a law, such and charges as were provided by the law at the time such proceedings were begun or acts performed.

The Clerk shall also charge and collect the following fees and compensation not above provided for:

For any copy of any record, proceeding or paper on file in the office of the Clerk relating to any civil action pending in said Court, when said copy is made by him, per folio 10

For each certificate of the Clerk, under seal of the Court 25

For filing each claim in probate or insolvency proceedings 15

No fees shall be allowed or charged by the Clerk for services rendered in any criminal case.

For services rendered by the Clerk, not in connection with civil actions or proceedings in Court, he shall charge and collect, for the benefit of the county, the following fees:

For issuing marriage license, one half to be paid to the County Recorder 2 00

For filing and indexing articles of incorporation 1 00

For filing and indexing certificates of copartnership 1 00

For filing and indexing all papers to be kept by him, other than papers filed in actions or proceedings in Court, and official bonds and certificates of appointment, each 25

For issuing any license required by law, other than marriage licenses 1 00

For examining and certifying to a copy of any paper, record, or proceeding prepared by another, and presented for his certificate, fifty cents, and one cent per folio for comparing the said copy with the original.

For making satisfaction of or credit on judgment 25

For receiving and filing remittitur from Supreme Court 50

For administering each oath, without certificate, except in a pending action or proceeding 10

For taking any affidavit, except in criminal cases 25

For taking and approving each undertaking and the justification thereof, except in criminal cases 50

For searching records or files, for each year 50

For taking acknowledgement of any deed or other instrument, including the certificate 50

For filing notices of appeal and appeal bonds, each 25

SHERIFF.

For serving any process, writ, order, or paper, except as hereinafter provided, required by law to be served by the Sheriff 50

For serving a writ of attachment, execution, or order for the delivery of personal property 1 00

For taking any bond or undertaking 50

For serving an attachment or execution on any ship, boat, or vessel 3 00

For keeping and caring for property under attachment or execution, such sum as the court may fix, provided, that no greater sum than two dollars per day shall be allowed to a keeper when necessarily employed.

For a copy of any writ, process, or paper actually made by him, when required or demanded according to law, per folio, ten cents; provided, that when correct copies are furnished to him for use, no charge shall be made for such copies.

For advertising sale of property and posting notice, exclusive of cost of publication, or furnishing notice for publication, each 50

For publication of notice in newspaper, the reasonable cost of publication, subject to the approval of the Court.

For serving writ of possession or restitution, putting a person in possession of the premises, and removing the occupant 1 50

For subpoenaing witness, including copy of subpoena, each 25

For summoning trial jury of twelve or less 2 00

For each additional juror 10

For traveling in the service of any paper required by law to be served, for each mile actually and necessarily traveled, one way only, fifteen cents, when such travel can be made by rail, in other cases, twenty-five cents. No constructive mileage to be allowed.

For collecting money on execution, with or without levy, one per cent on the first thousand dollars or less, and one half of one per cent on all sums over one thousand dollars.

For executing and delivering Sheriff's deed 1 50

For executing and delivering certificate of sale 50

For transporting prisoners to county jail, actual cost of such transportation.

For executing and delivering any other instrument, per folio 10

RECORDER.

For recording every instrument, paper, or notice required by law to be recorded, per folio 10

For indexing every instrument, paper, or notice, for each name 10

For filing every instrument for record, and making necessary entries thereon 20

For each certificate under seal 25

For every entry of discharge, credit, or release on the margin of record, and indexing same 25

For searching the records of his office, for each year 50

For abstract of title, for each conveyance or incumbrance 25

For recording each map or plat where same is copied in book of record, for each course 10

For recording each map or plat, where same is not copied in a book of record 50

For figures or letters on maps or plats, per folio, ten cents; provided, that the fees for recording any map shall not exceed fifty dollars.

For taking acknowledgement of any instrument 50

For recording marriage license and certificate, to be paid by County Clerk 1 00

For recording transcript and all services in estray cases 1 00

For recording each mark or brand 50

For administering each oath or affirmation, and certifying the same 25

For filing, indexing and keeping each paper not required by law to be recorded 25

The Clerk, Sheriff, and Recorder shall account for all fees in this section provided for, and the Clerk, Sheriff and Recorder, unless otherwise provided by law, shall pay the same to the County Treasurer on the first Monday of the month following their collection, as provided in this Act.

County Officers must, and township officers may, demand the payment of all fees in civil cases, in advance.

SECTION 2. No fees or other compensation shall be paid for certificate of declaration to become a citizen of the United States, and for making a record thereof, or issuing a certificate of citizenship to become a citizen of the United States, or for making a record thereof; and no fees or other compensation shall be paid for filing the statement and affidavit of a committee or candidate voted for at any public election held within the State; and this section shall apply to all the counties in the State.

SECTION 3. All Acts or portions of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. This Act shall take effect immediately.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, to all persons having business with the offices of Clerk, Sheriff or Recorder of the County of Inyo that the above provisions of the Fee Bill are mandatory, and will be strictly enforced.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk and Recorder.

Independence, Cal., June 3, 1895.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R.R.

H. M. YERINGTON, General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER, General Freight and Passenger Agent.

STATIONS.		From Mound House No. 1		To Mound House No. 2
		Leave		Arrive
Mound House		10 20 a. m.		5 20 p. m.
Dayton		11 25 a. m.		4 45 p. m.
Wabuska		1 40 p. m.		2 30 p. m.
Hawthorne	Ar.	4.00 p. m.	Lv.	11 00 a. m.
		No. 3		No. 4
		Leave		Arrive
Hawthorne		6 00 a. m.		2 25 p. m.
Luning		7 15 a. m.		6 45 p. m.
Sodaville		7 50 a. m.		5 35 p. m.
Belleville		8 10 a. m.		4 35 p. m.
Candelaria		9 40 a. m.		3 50 p. m.
Benton		1 30 p. m.		11 50 a. m.
Bishop Creek		3 10 p. m.		9 50 a. m.
Alvord		05 p. m.		8 35 a. m.
Independence		2 35 p. m.		7 35 a. m.
Lone Pine		4 20 p. m.		6 10 a. m.
Keeler	Ar.	7 00 p. m.	Lv.	6 00 a. m.

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (29 miles); Bodie (13 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salsbury & Co's tri-weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downieville Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma Allen Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

AT KEELER with stages from Cerro Gordo (6 miles) Darwin (24 miles), and Bogacia (110 miles).

ALIAS SUMMONS.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

Adolph Gerckens Plaintiff, vs. Annie J. Gerckens Defendant.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Annie J. Gerckens, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this Inyo County, or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain judgment against you and a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the plaintiff and defendant as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 18th day of June, A. D. 1895.

[SEAL.] D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

P. W. BENNETT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

NOTICE OF ASSESSMENT.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA.

Location of principal place of business: San Francisco, California. Location of works, Inyo, Inyo County, California.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Directors held on the 5th day of July, 1895, an assessment (No. 27) of ten cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, Room No. 12, Rotunda, Mills Building, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this Assessment shall remain unpaid on the 8th day of August, 1895, will be declared delinquent, and advertised for sale at Public Auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Wednesday, the 4th day of September, 1895, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.

W. W. SARGEANT, Secretary.

Office—Room 12, Rotunda, Mills Building San Francisco, California.

Carpet Weaving.

MRS. J. F. ELDRED.
BIG PINE, CAL.

PRACTICAL CARPET WEAVER

We have recently purchased the Celebrated NEWCOMB FLY SHUTTLE LOOM. We do all kinds of carpet and rug weaving.

Hit and miss, yard wide and warp furnished, at 25 cents per yard. Striped carpet, 30 to 35 cents per yard.

First class work guaranteed at low prices

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

ARTHUR M. GIVEN
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

DENNIS J. HESSION,
COUNTY CLERK,
AND
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. T. BUNNEY,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
SURVEYOR
AND
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
A. V. DAVIDSON.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

P. W. FORBES
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
Land Office business and land cases contests etc. given careful and prompt attention.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Abstracting and Searching Records.

WALTER A. LAMAR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Independence, Cal.

J. D. LEWIS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
BISHOP, INYO CO., CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

P. W. BENNETT,
ATTORNEY--AT--LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

BEN H. YANDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
INDEPENDENCE CAL.
OFFICE—Court House. Special attention U. S. land cases.

Brown & Wills,
ABSTRACTORS AND REAL ESTATE DEALERS.
Special attention given to abstracting and searching records. We have the only set of abstracts in Inyo County. Office at corner of Edwards and Rearsarge Sts.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

DR. J. S. MC QUEEN,
DENTIST.
Graduate Chicago College Dental Surgery.
All kinds of dental work done according to latest improved methods.
Examination free. Office in H. E. Wright's Drugstore

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING PARLOR.
J. TUCKER, Prop'r.
HAIR CUTTING IN ANY STYLE.
SHAMPOOING
Norman House Reading Room.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of MARGARET DODGE, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at the law office of Mack & Densmore, at the town of Independence, Inyo County, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate, in the County of Inyo State of California.

J. G. DODGE.
Administrator of the estate of Margaret Dodge, deceased.

Dated at Independence, July 18, 1894.
P. H. Mack, Attorney for Administrator.

HOTELS.

NORMAN HOUSE,
Independence. - Cal.
New House
New Furniture.
Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure comfort of guests.
O. I. MAIRS Pro
feb12tf

BIG PINE HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
Thos. Callow,
Proprietor.

THE NUCLEUS,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.
O. Whiting, Prop'r.
First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.
THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS.

FOR SALE.
THE WHITNEY HOUSE
—The only hotel in—
LONE PINE INYO COUNTY CAL
Reason for selling, failing health. For terms address
MRS. A. STEWART,
Lone Pine, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

REWARD.

TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS will be paid by the Sheriff of Inyo County, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons guilty of selling, giving, or in any manner furnishing intoxicating liquors to Indians in the County of Inyo.

A. M. GIVEN, Sheriff.

Dated February 2nd 1895

JOHN B. CLARKE,
Successor to John Clarke,
—PROPRIETOR—
John Clarke's Bishop Stables,
BISHOP, CAL.
First-class Turnouts of Every Kind
Fine horses and Carriages.
horses Boarded for any Time
Best of Care and Attention

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY
L. MUNZINGER & CO., Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modoc Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Executor's Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of a power to sell, contained in the Last Will and Testament of John Allen Hannah, deceased, (which last will and testament was duly admitted to probate,) the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, and subject to confirmation by the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on and after TUESDAY the 8th day of March 1892, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Allen Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate of John Allen Hannah deceased, has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Allen Hannah at the time of his death in and to those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit:

The South half of the South-east quarter and the South half of the south-west quarter of Section No. 10, and the North-east quarter of Section No. 15, all in Township No. 10 South, Range No. 34 East, M. D. M., containing 320 acres.

An undivided one-half interest of in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo and particularly described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the South-east corner of the south-east quarter of North-east quarter of Section No. 18, in Township No. 13 South, Range No. 35 East, M. D. M., and running thence West eleven chains and 98-100; thence North-east following the meanderings of the bed of the Creek along its North branch to Edwards street, in the town of Independence, thence following said Edwards street along its West line to the place of beginning, six and 80-100 acres; also lot No. 4 in Block No. 9 in the town of Independence, all constituting what is known as the Reddy place.

Lots Nos. 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, in Block No. 29, in the town of Independence, the said County of Inyo, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county, having been the residence of said John A. Hannah, deceased, at the time of his death.

Lots Nos. 2 and 4, in Block No. 22, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, as the same appears by the official plat of the said town of Independence, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of the said Inyo county.

Two hundred feet undivided, of in and to that certain mining claim, lead, or lode, situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, known and designated as the "Ida Discipcada Lode."

That certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Ventura State of California, commencing at a point twelve and nine-twentieth (12 9-20) rods south of the general corner of the North west quarter and the North east quarter of Section No. twelve (12), and the South west quarter and the South east quarter of Section No. one (1), in Township No. three (3) North, of Range No. twenty one (21) West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, running thence South sixty eight and eleven-twentieth (68 11-20) rods; thence West twenty-three (23) rods; thence North-westerly along a small branch or swale to a point twenty four (24) rods North of the general corner of the North East quarter and the South east quarter, and the North west quarter and the North east quarter of the North west quarter of Section No. twelve (12), in Township No. three (3) North of Range No. twenty one (21) West; running thence North forty four and eleven twentieth (44 11-20) rods thence East eighty (80) rods to the place of beginning, containing thirty acres. Together with ten inches of the Capital stock of the Highland Water Company.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned at Georges Creek, Cal., and may be left at said place, or at the office of the District Attorney at Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the offices of the Clerk of said Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

The Executor reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, lawful money of the United States, ten per cent of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

WILLIAM L. HUNTER.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament John Allen Hannah deceased.

Dated, Independence, Cal., February 11th 1892.

SAVE YOUR SHOES
AMES' SHOE PROTECTOR
SAVE YOUR SHOE
tector is warranted to make the sole wear as long as the remainder of any ordinary shoe, and to save from 20 to 60 times its cost in repairs. Causes the shoe to be easy, elastic and springy. A true godsend to heavy people and heads of large families. Sent prepaid for 10 cents. Send stamp for catalogue and testimonials. Agents wanted. CROCKER & AMES, 619 Montgomery St., S. F.
PAT. APPLIED FOR
SAVE YOUR SHOES

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
AND
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROP'R.
Horseshoeing ..... $2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call as above
W. F. MATLACK.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday	January 5th
"	February 9th
"	March 9th
"	April 6th
"	May 4th
"	June 1st
"	June 30th
"	August 3rd
"	August 31st
"	October 28th
"	November 2nd
"	November 31st

THOMAS C. BOLAND, W. M.
BERTRAND RHINE, Sec.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL

FRIDAY, AUGUST 9.....

OUR PRESIDENT,

GROVER CLEVELAND,

OF NEW YORK.

OUR VICE-PRESIDENT,

GEN. STEVENSON,

OF ILLINOIS.

OUR

Congressman .....GROVE L. JOHNSON.
Assemblyman.....CYRUS COLEMAN.
Superior Judge.....GEO. M. GILL.
Sheriff.....ARTHUR M. GIVEN.
Clerk.....DENNIS J. HESSION.
District Attorney.....P. W. FORBES.
Assessor.....P. A. CHALFANT.
Treasurer.....W. T. BUNNEY.
Coroner.....I. J. WOODIN.
Surveyor (endorsed).....JOSEPH SEELY.
Supt. Schools.....S. W. AUSTIN.
1st Supervisor Dist.....FRANK SHAW.
2d Supervisor Dist.....A. C. FREEMAN.
3d Supervisor Dist.....J. R. ELDRED.
4th Supervisor Dist.....J. J. STEWART.
5th Supervisor Dist..FRANK FITZGERALD.

Religious Services.

Rev. S. W. Albone will conduct services until further notice as follows: Independence, every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock; Lone Pine, every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, except the second Sunday in the month.

Fort School House, the second Sunday in the month, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Georges Creek, first Sunday in the month, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

METAL MARKET.

Following are the latest prices quoted in the San Francisco metal market:

Refined silver, per oz	$ .66¼
Antimony	10
Borax, refined, in car lots	5½
Pig lead	3.90

DIED.

HALBRECHT—At Camp Independence, August 6, 1895, Heinrich A. F. Halbrecht, aged about 45 years.

S. G. Sneden Esq. returned to Bishop on Tuesday morning.

Roadmaster McBride of the C. & C. was in town last Tuesday.

J. D. Lewis Esq., came down from Bishop on last Friday's train.

Miss Ida C. Adams of Lone Pine was a visitor in town last Tuesday.

O. H. Hill was a visitor at Independence at the end of last week.

Geo. H. Palmer of Lone Pine visited Independence early in the week.

W. L. Zimmerman went to Bishop last Saturday, returning Monday evening.

Louis De Tourniel is at Snow's canyon in charge of Mr. Garlock's interests.

Thos. J. McComas came down from Bishop on Tuesday, returning next day.

Mark Hand and Jim Stansbury have leased the Keynot mine at Beveridge.

Henry Walsh, one of the best known horse trainers in California, died last week.

Cearley Collins came down from Warm Spring yesterday and will remain in town a day or two.

T. C. Boland and J. A. McKenzie came up from Lone Pine last Saturday returning Sunday morning.

The price of silver has remained practically unchanged for some time, being 66 to 67 per ounce.

The weather has been very sultry for a week past, the thermometer reaching as high as 102 degrees.

B. Ardizzi, senior member of the firm of Ardizzi & Olcese, died at Kern City on Saturday, July 27th.

Arthur Robinson and Bill McCoun left last Tuesday morning for a fishing trip to the Kern river country.

Supervisor Fitzgerald came up from Lone Pine last Saturday and spent a couple of days in town.

Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Blair and Judge Arnot spent last Sunday with the Church party in Kearsarge Canyon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Carrasco of Lone Pine have gone to Mojave, where they will make their future home.

Mrs. W. G. Watson, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Wayland, were down from Bishop early in the week.

Misses Maud Cook, Annie Schabbell and Lizzie Thompson are home from their camping trip to Mammoth.

George Mead came down from Bishop on Wednesday. He expects to be detained here for some time on court business,

Horace Bellows came up from Haiwai last Wednesday on business connected with the estate of August Matschke, deceased.

E. Chenot has left Paul Houard in charge of his store and has gone up in the Sierras for a few days fishing and hunting.

Pasted a dime on a sheet of paper and send to Crocker & Ames, 619 Montgomery St., San Francisco, for Ame's Shoe Protector, the wonderful saver of shoes.

Marshall Naylor came down from Fish Spring at the end of last week, returning Tuesday morning. He will soon make a run of ore from his mine.

Some fine fruit appeared in town this week from the ranches of W. L. Hunter of Georges Creek and C. A. Walter of Camp Independence. Orders for fruit promptly filled at both places.

Potatoes are retailing for a cent and a half per pound; eggs, thirty cents per dozen.

Mrs. S. W. Austin has returned home to Lone Pine from a three months visit with friends at Bakersfield.

Bert. Ehine has been quite ill during the week. He is improving however and was able to be about yesrerday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Underhill have returned to Mojave after a visit of several weeks to friends in the Valley.

Chas. Walter of the Invo Index and Charley Kaiser came down from Bishop this morning, returning this afternoon.

The dog poisoning fiend is again in evidence, the last victim being a valuable "purp" belonging to P. W. Bennett Esq.

Niel McLean started for Cerro Gordo this morning to haul ore for Pat Clinton. John McSweeny will go down early next week to assist him.

A band of sheep were sold at Bakersfield last week at Sheriff's sale for 47½ cents per head and the local sheepmen said it was a good price.

A. E. Janvier has been engaged to teach the Georges Creek school for the coming term, which commences about the middle of September.

J. J. Morton came in fromSnow's canyon early ia the week, returning to Keeler Wednesday. He does not intend to return to his mine until the weather gets cooler.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Holland, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Conklin, John Shepherd and E. Robinson all returned from their camping trip to Long Valley at the end of last week.

Charlev Houle will ship a carload of ore from his lead mine in Mazourka Canyon to San Francisco in a few days. It assays 116 ounces per ton in silver, and carries a large percentage of lead.

Mighels and McDonough have bought the running horse "Proxy" from E. Robinson and will take him below. Proxy is more than an average horse and with good care should prove a bread winner.

J. H. Shannon has been engaged to teach the Round Valley school during the coming term and in consequence has turned over the management of the Whitney House at Lone Pine to J. J. Stewart.

Charlie Reed is pumping water for 60 acres of alfalfa and corn tnis year, and both crops are doing well. He has an abundance of water. Others in his neighborhood are doing as well.—Californian, Bakersfield

Tom Ferguson and Hugh White have gone to Mazourka canyon to work on a placer mine belonging to the former. They expect to stay with it until wet weather comes and makes dry-washing an impossibility.

The Fish Spring contingent left town on Tuesday with a load of mining supplies. Paddy Jack says he always knows how he gets to town but that it is ever a matter of conjecture how he gets home. The other boys say the reason for this is that he is always in the bottom of the wagon.

Billy Mighels and Mike McDonough arrived at Independence on Monday last from Humboldt, Nevada, and have gone to Los Angeles. Mighels, it will be remembered, trained and drove the trotting horse, Pete, for J. G. W. Birchim three years ago.

The citizens of Bishop have taken the matter in hand and will make a strong effort to hold a Fair this year. It is regarded as a certainty that every district that keeps up its organization will receive an appropriation when the legislature meets.

Last evening the young folks of town joined in tendering a surprise party to Miss Maggie Gorman at Camp Independence. The party proved the surprise it was intended to be and a jolly evening was spent. Shortly after midnight the surprisers bundled into a big wagon and rode merrily home by the light of the moon.

Thos. C. Boland has died a complaint in the Superior Court to quiet title to the waters of Lone Pine Creek. There are about seventy defendants all using or claiming a title to said waters. The title of the suit is "Thomas C. Boland, plaintiff, vs. the Lone Pine Water Company et als., defendants." P. H. Mack and P. W. Bennett are Mr. Boland's attorneys. All the residents of Lone Pine who use water on town lots are defendants, which accounts for the large number of them.

Messrs. Shelhamer, Church and Freeman, of Pasadena, spent several days in this vicinity during the week looking over desirable ranch properties. The gentlemen all agree that the only thing lacking to effect the immediate settling up of this valley is a railroad south. There are plenty of cheap lands in Inyo county and there is a big demand for such lands in real estate circles; but the long trip across the desert discourages most would-be investors from coming here.

Weather Summary, Week Ending August 8, 1895.

Highest barometer, 30.046 date, 21.
Lowest " 29.596 date, 7th.
Highest Temperature 101.6 date, 5th
Lowest " 63.2 date, 3d.
Mean " 81.4
Average dew point 44.4
" humidity 34.7
Total precipitation .04
Prevailing direction of wind, NW.
Highest velocity and date, 22, W 7th.
Number of clear days 3.
" " partly cloudy days 2.
" " cloudy days 2.
" " rainy days (.01 or more rain) 1

H. E. WILKINSON,
Observer.

Coolgardie.

Rich new finds are being constantly reported from Coolgardie gold fields. Coolgardie, Australia, is an accessible point, reached by steamer to Fremantle, thence by rail to Southern Cross and team to destination. The trip to Australia on the fine steamers of the Oceanic Steamship Company via Honolulu, Samoa, and New Zealand is pleasure sailing the day long. This line tickets passengers to Cape Town, South Africa. Map of Coolgardie district and Pacific ports reached by the Oceanic Steamship Company is mailed free to any address by the O. S. S. Co. 138 Montgomery St. San Francisco.

Fatal Accident

A shocking accident occurred at Black Rock early Monday morning. Two men named Joseph Zink and Heinrich Halbrecht left Bishop on Sunday evening to come to Independence on land business. Halbrecht had been drinking and insisted on driving the team. When they reached the Rawson place Zink told Halbrecht he must give up the lines or he would go back on foot, and after a squabble Halbrecht agreed. The latter then went to sleep and did not wake up till Fish Springs was reached. He then insisted on driving again, and Zink gave up the lines. About two miles north of the Curtis ranch Halbrecht struck the horses with the whip and they lunged to one side, throwing Halbrecht out in such a manner that one foot caught between the front spring and the wagon bed, and his body was left to drag on the ground. The team began running at the top of their speed with their lines dragging on the ground. Zink managed to recover the lines with the butt of the whip and succeeded in stopping the frightened animals after they had run about a quarter of a mile. He then unhitched the team and got Halbrecht freed from the wagon, but was unable to get him in without assistance. It was then about six o'clock in the morning and he went to the Curtis ranch for assistance, A. L. Conklin bringing the unfortunate man to Independence. He was terribly bruised about the body and received such internal injuries that he died at the County Hospital on Tuesday. Only great presence of mind on the part of Zink prevented the rig from being utterly demolished and Halbrecht killed outright. Mr. Zink returned to Bishop from the scene of the accident and came to Independence on Wednesday's train.

Clippings.

Carson News.

An emigrant train of twenty people passed through Carson yesterday bound for Inyo. More disappointed Washingtonians.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Richards of Keeler are guests of C. H. and Mrs. Rulison of this city. Mr. Richards is telegraph operator at the terminus of the Carson & Colorado Railroad.

Chronicle-Union.

Gov. Budd has stirred up a "hornets nest" in San Francisco by proposing to appoint Ed. Reddy, brother of the Senator, to the Superintendency of the Alms House of that City and County, the politicians being opposed to an "importation from Mono county," when there are so many of the "faithful" in that city. It might be a good thing for San Francisco if a few Mono county men were imported from this section to take charge of many of its public institutions. There would not be quite so much corruption in high places, as we hear of daily now. But Ed Reddy does not hail from Mono, but from Inyo.

On Tuesday George A. Montrose, for an assault to commit murder, was arraigned in the Superior Court and plead "not guilty" Hon. P. Reddy appeared as his counsel, and the trial was set for the 8th. Thursday next. Harry D. Cole was also arraigned on two charges, for an attempt to murder T. B. Rickey and Merit Olds. Having no counsel Mr. Reddy agreed to defend him, by appointment of the Court. He plead "not guilty" to both charges, and his trial set for the 9th.

Inyo Index.

Mr. Henry Fehrman of Independence, Fred Albers, wife and children, and Fred Strohmeyer, of Georges Creek, were visiting friends at Bishop Sunday. Monday morning they continued on their way to the pleasure grounds of Mono.

Gov Adams, Gen. Keating and P. Prendergast were at Bishop last week looking over their property, the Hillside Land and Water Co. They made a thorough investigation, are well pleased with the outlook and will continue making improvements on their valuable property.

A. St. Merry has leased from J. J. Gunn the Blacksmith shop on main street opposite the Courthouse, and is now ready for business. All kinds of general blacksmithing, including horseshoeing, wagon repairing etc., will receive prompt and careful attention. See advertisement next week.

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
WEATHER BUREAU.

MONTHLY METEOROLOGICAL SUMMARY
FOR JULY, 1895, AT
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA

Date	Temperature Max	Min	Mean	Range	Rain	Day
1	84	63	76	17	.....
2	87	61	74	26	.01
3	82	60	71	22	.....
4	82	55	68	27	.....
5	85	57	71	28	.....
6	90	64	77	26	.....
7	93	57	80	26	.....
8	94	59	82	25	.....
9	93	70	82	23	.....
10	90	68	79	22	.....
11	87	67	77	20	.....
12	90	61	76	29	.....
13	93	67	80	26	.....
14	93	69	81	24	.....
15	98	71	84	28	.....
16	96	74	85	22	.....
17	95	71	83	24	T
18	91	67	79	24	.....
19	90	64	77	26	.....
20	84	60	72	24	.....
21	90	58	80	32	.....
22	96	64	80	32	.....
23	96	68	82	29	.....
24	98	68	83	30	.....
25	99	72	86	27	.....
26	98	67	82	31	.....
27	90	68	79	22	T
28	88	64	76	24	T
29	89	65	77	24	.....
30	90	62	76	28	.....
31	88	54	71	34	.....

Mean Barometer	29.82
Highest Barometer	29.98
Lowest Barometer	29.61
Mean Temperature	78
Highest Temperature	98
Lowest Temperature	64
Greatest Daily Range	34
Least Daily Range	20
Total deficiency in Temp during month	99
Total " " since Jan. 1	133
Prevailing direction of wind, SE
Total movement of wind, 6114 miles
Maximum velocity, 28 NW on 19th
Total Precipitation	T.
Days with .01 or more Precipitation	0
Total deficiency in Precip. for month	.11
Total " " since Jan. 1	.36
Clear Days	18
Partly Cloudy Days	6
Cloudy Days	7

H. B. WILKINSON,
Observer, Weather Bureau.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of A. A. DIAZ, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Executrix of the estate of A. A. DIAZ, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Executrix at the law office of W. A. Lamar, in the town of Independence, Inyo county, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the said Inyo County.

DELFINA DIAZ.
Executrix of the estate of A. A. Diaz, deceased.

Dated at Lone Pine, Inyo Co., Cal., August 2nd 1895.
W. A. LAMAR, Attorney for Executrix.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.,
July 29, 1895.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. (Main Line) has filed in this office a list of lands situated in the townships described below, and has applied for a patent for said lands; that the list is open to the public for inspection, and a copy thereof, by descriptive subdivisions, has been posted in a convenient place in this office for the inspection of all persons interested and the public generally.

Within the next sixty days following the date of this notice, protests or contests against the claim of the company to any tract or subdivision described in the list, on the ground that the same is more valuable for mineral than agricultural purposes will be received and noted for report to the General Land Office at Washington, D. C.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Register.
A. W. EIBESHUTZ, Receiver.

SUPPLEMENTAL TO CLEAR LIST NO. 25, TRACTS SELECTED BY SOUTHERN PAC. R. R.—MAIN LINE—GRANTED LIMITS.

Independence District.

Lands situated in Township 29 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.,
July, 25, 1895.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that the Soutnern Pacific Railroad Company has filed in this office a list of lands situated in the townships described below, and has applied for a patent for said lands; that the list is now open to the public for inspection and a copy thereof, by descriptive subdivisions, has been posted in a convenient place in this office for the inspection of all persons interested and the public generally.

Within the next sixty days following the date of this notice, protests or contests against the claim of the company to any tract or subdivision described in the list, on the ground that the same is more valuable for mineral than agricultural purposes, will be received and noted for report to the General Land Office at Washington, D. C.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Register.
A. W. EIBESHUTZ, Receiver.

SUPPLEMENTAL LIST NO. 23
SOUTHENR PACIFIC RAILROAD LANDS
INDEMNITY SELECTION (MAIN LINE).

Independence Land District,
California.

List No 8, approved September 28, 1889.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

List No 11, approved September 26, 1894.

Lands situated in Township 25 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.
Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 34 East, M. D. M.

List No. 7, approved June 18, 1889.

Lands situated in Township 27 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.,
July 25, 1895.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that the Southern Pacific Railroad has filed in this office a list of lands situated in the townships described below, and has applied for a patent for said lands; that the list is open to the public for inspection, and a copy thereof, by descriptive subdivisions, has been posted in a convenient place in this office for the inspection of all persons interested and the public generally.

Within the next sixty days following the date of this notice, protests or contests against the claim of the company to any tract or subdivision described in the list, on the ground that the same is more valuable for mineral than agricultural purposes, will be received and noted for report to the General Land Office at Washington, D. C.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Register.
A. W. EIBESHUTZ, Receiver.

SUPPLEMENTAL TO CLEAR LIST NO. 24.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD LANDS,
MAIN LINE.

Independence Land District.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 34 East, M. D. M.

Lands situated in Township 26 South, Range 33 East, M. D. M.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE WHY ORDER OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE SHOULD NOT BE MADE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF INYO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

In the matter of the estate of James Daley, deceased.

H. H. Howell, the Administrator of the estate of James Daley, deceased, having filed his petition herein, duly verified, praying for an order of sale of the Mayflower mine and mining claim, and the decedent's mill-site, being a portion of the real estate of said decedent, for the purposes therein set forth,

It is therefore ordered by the Judge of said Court that all persons interested in the estate of said deceased appear before the said Superior Court on Saturday, the 17th day of August, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, at the Court-Room of said Superior Court, at the Court House, in the County of Inyo, State of California, to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said Administrator to sell the said mine and mining claim and the said mill site.

And that a copy of this order be published at least once a week for four consecutive weeks in the Inyo Independent, a newspaper printed and published in said Inyo county.

GEO. M. GILL,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Dated July 1, 1895.

[Endorsed.]

Filed July 3, 1895.
D. J. HESSION, Clerk.

Bennett & Forbes, Attorneys for Petitioner

MERCHANDISE.

STEEL, BLUE AND WHITE ENAMELED, "DRESDEN" WARE.

The newest Style
OF
Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc
AT
L. WOOD
CASH STORE
A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.
Fresh Produce, and Grain
Flour, etc., constantly
on hand.
CANDIES,
PEANUTS
WALNUTS,
TOYS!
THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get the
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

A. K. EUGLEY,
BIG PINE, INYO Co. Cal.
Dealer In GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies
PROVISIONS
&c., &c., &c
A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

MERCHANDISE.

A. W. Eibeshutz
Independence, Cal.
—DEALER IN—
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE
Agent For
Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:
Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,
INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
...Consisting of....
GROCERIES.
PROVISIONS
Tobacco, Cigars,
WINES AND LIQUORS
FLOUR & GRAIN
Together with an Assortment of
DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING
ETC., ETC
☞ Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere
E. CHENOT.
Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
j164tf

NATHAN RHINE,
Independence, Cal.
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN
GENERAL MERCHANDISE.
ALSO TRANSACTS A
GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

ACRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.
AGENT FOR
WELLS, FARGO & CO'S EXPRESS,
WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO
MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO. OF NEW YORK
LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE FIRE INSURANCE CO.
NATHAN RHINE.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.
Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.
The attention of the people of Inyo and neihboring counties is respectfully invited to the
LARGEST AND BEST STOCK
of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finer Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.
PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.
☞ All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.
Address orders and packages to
HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
0-m RENO, NEVADA

MISCELLANEOUS.

Inyo Stage Company.
REGULAR LINE
—FROM—
Mojave To Keeler.
FINE COACH
FAST STOCK
The route lies through the picturesque and beautiful
Redrock Canyon
And along the base of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the grandest scenery in America.
Stage leaves Mojave,
WEDNESDAYS AND SUNDAYS
at 8:30 o'clock a. m.
Stage leaves Keeer,
MONDAYS AND FRIDAYS
at 8 o'clock p. m.
W. K. MILLER,
Propr.

INDEPENDENCE
MEAT MARKET,
J. C. ROEPER, Prop.
Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.
☞ artier supplied by the quarter at 5 cents per pour.
j19-tf

BELL'S Flouring Mills
A. N. BELL, Prop.
TRY BELL'S
EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR
Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully
Equal to the Best
Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.
Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.
$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.
It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.
Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.
For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address
ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

J. E. DUNLAP.
Harness Maker.
Harness of all kinds, om the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Vailey View Hotel.
O. H. Hill, Prop'r.
A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Having returned and resumed the managment of the above well known livery and feed stables patrons can be assured of finding there the best buggy teams saddle horses and
Livery Accommodations
in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.
O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

A DEADLY DILEMMA.

By GRANT ALLEN.

CHAPTER I.

He waved his hand and turned along the footpath.

When Netta Mayne came to think it over afterward in her own room by herself, she couldn't imagine what had made her silly enough to quarrel that evening with Ughtred Carnegie. She could only say in a penitent mood it was always the way like that with lovers. Till once they've quarreled a good round quarrel, and afterward solemnly kissed and made it all up again, things never stand on a really firm and settled basis between them. It's a move in the game. You must thrust in tierce before you thrust in quarte. The Roman playwright spoke the truth after all—a lovers' quarrel begins a fresh chapter in the history of their lovemaking.

It was a summer evening, calm and clear and balmy, and Netta and Ughtred had strolled out together, not without a suspicion at times of hand locked in hand, on the high chalk down that rises steep behind Holmbury. How or why they fell out she hardly knew. But they had been engaged already some months, without a single disagreement, which of course gave Netta a natural right to quarrel with Ughtred by this time, if she thought fit; and as they returned down the hanging path through the combe where the wild orchids grow, she used that right at last, out of pure, unadulterated feminine perversity. The ways of women are wonderful; no mere man can fathom them. Something that Ughtred said gave her the chance to make a half petulant answer. Ughtred very naturally defended himself from the imputation of rudeness, and Netta retorted. At the end of ten minutes the trifle had grown apace into as pretty a lovers' quarrel as any lady novelist could wish to describe in five chapters.

Netta had burst into perfectly orthodox tears, refused to be comforted in the most approved fashion, declined to accept Ughtred's escort home and bidden farewell to him excitedly forever and ever.

It was all about nothing, to be sure, and if the two older or wiser heads had only stood by unseen to view the little comedy, they would sagely have remarked to each other, with a shake, that before twenty-four hours were out the pair would be rushing into each other's arms with mutual apologies and mutual forgiveness. But Netta Mayne and Ughtred Carnegie were still at the age when one takes love seriously—one does before thirty—and so they turned away along different paths at the bottom of the combe, in the firm belief that love's young dream was shattered, and that henceforth they two were nothing more than the merest acquaintances to each other.

"Goodby, Mr. Carnegie," Netta faltered out, as in obedience to her wishes though much against his own will Ughtred turned slowly and remorsefully down the footpath to the right, in the direction of the railway.

"Goodby, Netta," Ughtred answered, half choking. Even to that moment of parting (forever—or a day) he couldn't find it in his heart to call her "Miss Mayne" who had so long been "Netta" to him.

He waved his hand and turned along the footpath, looking back many times to see Netta still sitting inconsolable where he had left her, on the stile that led from the combe into the Four acre meadow. Both paths, to right and left, led back to Holmbury over the open field, but they diverged rapidly and crossed the railway track by separate gates and five hundred yards from each other.

A turn in the path, at which Ughtred lingered long, hid Netta at last from his sight. He paused and hesitated. It was growing late, though an hour of summer twilight still remained. He couldn't bear to leave Netta thus alone in the field. She wouldn't allow him to see her home, to be sure, and that being so he was too much of a gentleman to force himself upon her. But he was too much a man, too, to let her find her way back so late entirely by herself. Unseen himself, he must still watch over her. Against her will, he must still protect her. He would go on to the railway, and there sit by the side of the line, under cover of the hedge, till Netta crossed by the other path. Then he'd walk quietly along the six foot way to the gate she had passed through, and follow her, unperceived at a distance along the lane, till he saw her back to Holmbury. Whether she wished it or not, he could never leave her.

He looked about for a seat. One lay most handy. By the side of the line the government engineers had been at work that day, repairing the telegraph system. They had taken down half a dozen moldering old posts, and set up new ones in their place—tall, clean and shiny. One of the old posts still lay at full length on the ground by the gate, just as the men had left it at the end of their day's work. At the point where the footpath cut the line was a level crossing, and there Ughtred sat down on the fallen post by the side, half concealed from view by a tall clump of willow herb, waiting patiently for Netta's coming. How he listened for that light footfall. His heart was full, indeed, of gall and bitterness. He loved her so dearly, and she had treated him so ill. Who would ever have believed that Netta, his Netta, would have thrown him over like that for such a ridiculous trifle? Who, indeed? And least of all Netta herself, sitting alone on the stile with her pretty face bowed deep in her hands, and her poor heart wondering how Ughtred, her Ughtred, could so easily desert her.

In such strange ways is the feminine variety of the human heart constructed. To be sure, she had of course dismissed him in the most peremptory fashion, declaring with all the vows propriety permits to the British maiden that she needed no escort of any sort home, and that she would ten thousand times rather go alone than have him accompany her. But of course, also, she didn't mean it. What woman does? She counted upon a prompt and unconditional surrender. Ughtred would go to the corner, as in duty bound, and then come back to her with profuse expressions of penitence for the wrong he had never done, to make it all up again in the orthodox fashion. She never intended the real tragedy that was so soon to follow. She was only playing with her victim—only trying, womanlike, her power over Ughtred.

So she sat there still, and cried and cried on, minute after minute, in an ecstacy of misery, till the sunset began to glow deeper red in the western sky, and the bell to ring the curfew in Holmbury tower. Then it dawned upon her slowly, with a shock of surprise, that after all—incredible! impossible!—Ughtred had positively taken her at her word, and wasn't coming back at all tonight to her.

At that, the usual womanly terror seized upon her soul. Her heart turned faint. This was too terrible. Great heavens, what had she done? Had she tried Ughtred too far, and had he really gone? Was he never going to return to her at all? Had he said goodby in earnest to her forever and ever?

Terrified at the thought and weak with crying, she rose and straggled down the narrow footpath toward the farther crossing. It was getting too late now, and Netta by this time was really frightened. She wished with all her heart she hadn't sent away Ughtred—if it were only for the tramps—a man is such a comfort. And then there was that dreadful dog at Milton court to pass. And Ughtred was gone, and all the world was desolate.

Thinking these things in a tumult of fear to herself, she staggered along the path, feeling tired at heart and positively ill with remorse and terror. The color had faded now out of her pretty red cheeks. Her eyes were dim and swollen with crying. She was almost half glad Ughtred couldn't see her just then, she was such a fright with her long spell of brooding. Even her bright print dress and her straw hat with the poppies in it couldn't redeem, she felt sure, her pallor and her wretchedness. But Ughtred was gone and the world was a wilderness. And he would never come back, and the dog at Milton court was so vicious.

As she walked or rather groped her way (for she couldn't see for crying) down the path by the hedge, at every step she grew fainter and fainter. Ughtred was gone, the world was a blank, there were tramps and dogs, it was getting dark, she loved him so much, and mamma would be so angry.

Turning over which thoughts with a whirling brain, for she was but a girl after all, she reached the little swing gate that led to the railway, and pushed it aside with vague, numbed hands, and stood gazing vacantly at the long curved line in front of her.

Suddenly a noise rose sharp in the field behind her. It was only a colt, to be sure, disturbed by her approach, dashing wildly across his paddock, as is the way with young horseflesh. But to Netta it came as an indefinite terror, magnified ten thousand fold by her excited feelings. She made a frenzied dash for the other side of the railway. What it was she knew not, but it was, or might be, anything, everything—mad bulls, drunken men, footpads, vagabonds, murderers.

Oh, how could Ughtred ever have taken her at her word, and left her like this, alone, and in the evening? It was cruel, it was wicked of him; she hated to be disloyal, and yet she felt in her heart it was almost unmanly.

As she rushed along wildly at the top of her speed her little foot caught on the first rail. Before she knew what had happened she had fallen with her body right across the line. Faint and terrified already with a thousand vague alarms, the sudden shock stunned and disabled her. Mad bull or drunken man, they might do as they liked now. She was bruised and shaken. She had no thought left to rise or recover herself. Her eyes closed heavily. She lost consciousness at once. It was a terrible position. She had fainted on the line, with the force of the situation.

CHAPTER II.

He stretched it at last full across both rails.

As for Ughtred, from his seat on the telegraph post on the side of the line five hundred yards farther up, he saw her pause by the gate, then dash across the road, then stumble and trip, then fall heavily forward. His heart came up into his mouth at once at the sight. Oh, thank heaven he had waited! Thank heaven he was near! She had fallen across the line, and a train might come along before she could rise up again. She seemed hurt too. In a frenzy of suspense he darted forward to save her.

It took but a second for him to realize that she had fallen and was seriously hurt, but in the course of that second, even as he realized it all, another and more pressing terror seized him.

Hark! what was that? He listened and thrilled. Oh, no; too terrible. Yes, yes, it must be—the railway, the railway! He knew it. He felt it. Along the up line, on which Netta was lying, he heard behind him—oh, unmistakable, unthinkable, the fierce whirr of the express dashing madly down upon him. Great heavens, what could he do? The train was coming, the train was almost this moment upon them. Before he could have time to rush wildly forward and snatch Netta from where she lay, full in its path, a helpless weight, it would have swept past him resistlessly and borne down upon her like lightning.

The express was coming—to crush Netta to pieces.

In these awful moments men don't think, they don't reason, they don't even realize what their action means; they simply act and act instinctively. Ughtred felt in a second, without even consciously feeling it, so to speak, that any attempt to reach Netta now before that devouring engine had burst upon her at full speed would be absolutely hopeless.

His one chance lay in stopping the train somehow. How or where or with what he cared not. His own body would do it if nothing else came. Only stop it, stop it. He didn't think of it at all that moment as a set of carriages containing a precious freight of human lives. He thought of it only as a horrible, cruel, devouring creature, rushing headway on at full speed to Netta's destruction. It was a senseless wild beast, to be combated at all hazards. It was a hideous, ruthless, relentless thing, to be checked in its mad career in no matter what fashion. All he knew, indeed, was that Netta, his Netta, lay helpless on the track, and that the engine, like some madman, puffing and snorting with wild glee and savage exultation, was hastening forward with fierce strides to crush and mangle her.

At any risk he must stop it—with anything—anyhow.

As he gazed around him, horror struck, with blank, inquiring stare, and with this one fixed idea possessing his whole soul, Ughtred's eye happened to fall upon the dismantled telegraph post, on which but one minute before he had been sitting. The sight inspired him. Ha, ha! a glorious chance. He could lift it on the line. He could lay it across the rails. He could turn it around into place. He could upset the train! He could place it in the way of that murderous engine.

No sooner thought than done. With the wild energy of despair the young man lifted the small end of the ponderous post bodily up in his arms, and twisting it on the big base as on an earth fast pivot, managed, by main force and with a violent effort, to lay it at last full in front of the advancing locomotive. How he did it he never rightly knew himself, for the weight of the great bulk was simply enormous. But horror and love, and the awful idea that Netta's life was at stake, seemed to supply him at once with unwonted energy. He lifted it in his arms as he would have lifted a child, and straining in every limb stretched it at last full across both rails, a formidable obstacle before the approaching engine.

Hurrah! hurrah! he had succeeded now. It would throw the train off the line—and Netta would be saved for him.

To think and do all this under the spur of the circumstances took Ughtred something less than twenty seconds. In a great crisis men live rapidly. It was quick as thought. And at the end of it all he saw the big log laid right across the line with infinite satisfaction. Such a splendid obstacle that—so round and heavy! It must throw the train clean off the metals! It must produce a fine, first class catastrophe.

As he thought it, half aloud, a sharp curve brought the train around the corner close to where he stood, great drops of sweat now oozing clammily from every pore with his exertion. He looked at it languidly, with some vague, dim sense of a duty accomplished, and a great work well done for Netta and humanity. There would be a real, live accident in a moment now—a splendid accident—a first rate catastrophe!

Great heavens! An accident!

And then, with a sudden burst of inspiration, the other side of the transaction flashed in one electric spark upon Ughtred's brain. Why—this—was murder! There were people in that train—innocent human beings, men and women like himself, who would next minute be wrecked and mangled corpses, or writhing forms on the track before him! He was guilty of crime—an awful crime. He was trying to produce a terrible, ghastly, bloody railway accident!

(To be continued.)

WHAT IS AN ANTHEM?

People who know little about a subject explain it more clearly than those who know all about it. An old sailor had heard in church an anthem which greatly pleased him. He was telling a shipmate who asked, "I say, Joe, what's an anthem?" "What," replied Joe, "do you mean to say you don't know what a hanthem is?" "Not me." "Well, then, I'll tell yer. If I was to say to yer, 'Ere, Bill, give me that 'and spike,' that wouldn't be a hanthem. But was I to say, 'Bill-Bill-Bill-giv-giv-giv-giv me, giv me that Bill, giv me, that hand, giv me that hand, handspike, spike spike-Bill-giv me that that hand-handspike, hand-spike-spike-spike, ah men; Bill, giv me that handspike-spike, ah men! that would be a hanthem."

A GENTLE HINT.

Johnny—Mamma it ain't wicked when you do things you can't help, is it? His Mother—I suppose not, Johnny. Why?

Johnny—'Cause I can't help thinkin' all the time how I'd like to go to the circus.—Chicago Tribune.

In 1860 the wages paid to cotton-mill hands aggregated $42,000,000; ten years later it had increased to $66,000,000.

You may imitate, but never counterfeit.—Balzac.

OUR MANUFACTURES.

It is said that the New Englander makes the best mill hand.

Philadelphia manufactures every year $525,000,000 of material.

The manufacturers of Brooklyn are annually valued at $228,000,000.

Utah has 4,980 factory hands, making $8,911,047 worth of goods.

St. Louis annually makes up and sells $225,000,000 worth of goods.

Nebraska has 23,876 factory hands and an annual product of $93,037,794.

The United States is the leading manufacturing nation in the world.

The manufactures of Baltimore are valued annually at nearly $150,000,000.

The value of the manufactured products of New York exceeds $750,000,000.

San Francisco manufactures each year about $150,000,000 worth of goods.

Florida has in her factories 13,927 persons the annual output being $18,222,890.

Maine has 75,780 mill hands, who make annually goods valued at $9,689,500.

Washington has 20,366 factory hands and makes $41,768,022 worth of product.

Tennessee has 42,759 manufacturing hands and makes $72,355,286 worth of goods.

The colored people of the South soon acquire great dexterity in the cotton mills.

Georgia has 56,383 factory hands, who make annually $368,917,020 worth of goods.

South Dakota employs 2,422 hands in her factories with $5,682,748 worth of product.

In the Northeastern States manufacturing has increased to the detriment of agriculture.

Oregon has 18,978 hands in her factories and makes every year $41,432,174 worth of goods.

Twenty years ago England produced nearly three times as much iron as the United States.

The manufactories of Illinois employ 312,198 persons, the annual output being $908,640,280.

Delaware has 21,906 persons engaged in its manufactories, the annual output being $37,571,848.

Louisiana has 31,901 hands engaged in its factories, their annual product being $57,806,713.

Minnesota employs 79,629 factory hands, with an annual output of $192,033,478 worth of goods.

Wyoming has 1,144 persons, engaged in manufacturing and makes $2,367,601 worth of goods.

Kentucky's factories employ 65,579 hands, and send out annually a product valued at $126,719,857.

Kansas has 32,843 mill and factory hands, making every year a product valued at $110,219,805.

The factories of Indiana furnish employment to 124,349 persons, the output being $226,825,082.

Colorado has 17,067 employes in its factories, making annually a product valued at $42,480,205.

In Arkansas 15,972 persons are employed in manufacturing who turn out a product of $22,659,179.

Califronia has 83,642 employed in its manufactories, turning out an annual product of $213,403,996.

The factories of Missouri employ 143,139 hands, the annual output being valued at $324,561,993.

Nevada has 629 persons, said to be engaged in manufacturing, and their annual product is $1,105,063.

Our immigrants from Italy, Bohemia, Hungary and Russia rarely engage in any line of manufacture.

In 1890 there were in this country 562 blast furnaces, 224 being in the State of Pennsylania.

In 1890 there were 158 steel works in this country, nearly half of which were in Pennslyania.

Little Connecticut has 149,939 hands in its factories, making every year goods valued at $248,336,364.

Idaho has 774 persons engaged in the manufacturing business, the annual output being $1,396,096.

The Indian population are not skillful in any line of manufacture, save their own crude industries.

Dakota has 426 persons engaged in manufactories, the annual output of the factories being $10,710,855.

In 1892 the manufacture of iron rails had almost ceased while nearly 1,500,000 steel rails were made.

In the Indian Territory only 175 persons are engaged in manufacturing, their annual output being $248,932.

Vermont has 24,834 persons employed in its factories and turns out an annual product valued at $38,340,066.

Of all classes of foreign laborers, the Germans are said to become the most dexterous operators with machinery.

Michigan is rich in manufacture, employing 163,941 men and sending out every year $277,896,703 worth of goods.

Every year sees a development in the manufacturing interests, and it has spread toward the West and South.

Oklahoma is said to have 195 persons employed in manufacturing, and their annual product is valued at $180,445.

In 1880 the value of the cottonmill product in this country was $192,000,000; in 1890 it had increased to $268,000,000.

MISUNDERSTOOD HIM.

Yeast—Bacon refers to his girl across the East Riverr as his Brooklyn angel.

Crimsonbeak—You don't mean to tell me that there's another trolley victim.—Yonkers Statesman.

The channel between Siberia and Alaska is seldom frozen over, and only very rarely is it possible to cross on the ice from either side to the islands, which lie about midway in the channel and are known as the Little and Big Diomedes.—Argonaut.

COMPLETELY PARALYZED.

PHYSICIANS ARE ASTOUNDED BY A PECULIAR CASE.

A Young Man Stricken with Landry's Paralysis and Yet Recovers.

From the Times, Philadelphia, Pa.

Stricken with Landry's Paralysis and yet cured. That means but little to the average layman, but it means a miracle to a physician. Such is the experience of O. E. Dallimore, now a resident of Madison, N. J., and a rare experience it is.

"Yes, it's true that I had Landry's Paralysis," said Mr. Dallimore to a reporter, "or else the most celebrated physicians of London were mistaken.

"It was on the 15th of March, this year," he continued, "when I was in New York City, that I first felt the symptoms of my trouble. I experienced difficulty in going up stairs, my legs failing to support me. I consulted a physician, who informed me that I had every symptom of Locomotor Ataxia, but as the case developed he pronounced it a case of Landry's Paralysis, and, knowing the nature of the disease, advised me to start for my home and friends. I gave up my work, and on April 1st started for London, Ont. A well known physician was consulted, but I grew rapidly worse, and on Saturday, April 7, several eminent physicians held a consultation on my case, and informed me that I was at death's door, having but three to six days to live. Still I lingered on, by this time completely paralyzed, my hands and feet being dead. I could hardly whisper my wants, and could only swallow liquids. Oh! the misery of those moments are beyond all description, and death would really have been a welcome visitor.

"Now comes the part that has astounded the physicians. Rev. Mr. Gondy, a clergyman who visited me in my last hours, as he supposed, told me of the marvellous cures of paralysis that had been performed by Dr. William's Pink Pills for Pale People. I started to take the pills about April 28, and a week after that felt an improvement in my condition. There was a warm, tingling sensation in the limbs that had been entirely dead, and I soon began to move my feet and hands. The improvement continued until May 28, when I was taken out of bed for a drive, and drove the horse myself. By the beginning of July I was able to walk upstairs alone, and paid a visit to Niagara.

"Slowly but surely I gained my old health and strength, leaving Ontario for New York on October 11, and beginning my work again on October 26, 1894, cured of Landry's Paralysis in eight months."

To confirm his story beyond all doubt Mr. Dallimore made the following affidavit:

Sworn and subscribed before me December 3, 1894. AMOS C. RATHBUN, [SEAL.] Notary Public.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

"THE BANAVIE FLEA."

All tourists in the highlands know Banaviel. They may not know why a lobster is in the West Highlands, called "a Banavie flea." From the book referred to we gather that a good many years ago an American was stopping at the Banavie Hotel, and he made himself very obnoxious by his contemptuous remarks on Scottish scenery. "Ben Nevis!" he said, "do you call that a mountain? You should see our mighty Rockies! Loch Linnhe! Do you call that a lake You should see our Lake Superior," and so on. The Highland waiter was exasperated, and procuring a live lobster he secreted it, in requital of the insults, in the American's bed. Hardly had the American gone to sleep when lobster caught him firmly by the toe, and he jumped out of bed with a yell and rang for the Boots. "Boots,' he said solemnly, rubbing his toes as he spoke, "you may not have such big mountains and big lakes here as we have in the States, but you have the most tarnation big fleas I ever experienced."—London Paper.

Love is more pleasing than marriage, because romances are more amusing than history.—Chamfort.

THE KEYSTONE OF THE ARCH

In the edifice of health is vigor, which means not merely muscular energy, but an active discharge of the various functions of the body, such as digestion, secretion of the bile, the action of the bowels, the circulation of the blood. Nothing more actively and thoroughly contributes to the united performance of these functions than the renowned tonic and regulator, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The result of its use is a speedy gain in strength, together with the agreeable consciousness that the tenure of life is being strengthened—that one is laying up a store of vitality against the unavoidable draughts which old age makes upon the system. The fortifying influence of the Bitters constitute it a reliable safeguard against malaria, rheumatism and kidney trouble. Appetite and sleep improve through its use, and it protects the system from the effects of cold and damp.

She—I've been told that you are grave and sedate, but I'm sure I find you jolly. He—Yes, I lose my specific gravity when you are the center of attraction.

I am entirely cured of hemorrhage of lungs by Piso's Cure for Consumption.—LOUISA LINDAMAN, Bethany, Mo., Jan. 8, '94.

He knelt before her. "I love you," he protested. "Do you mean it?" "Ay." She was evidently concerned. "This is serious," she said. "I wonder whom we can get to introduce us?" This is at the seaside, some months hence.

ON THE ROAD to recovery, the young woman who is taking Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In maidenhood, womanhood, wifehood and motherhood the "Prescription" is a supporting tonic and nervine that's peculiarly adapted to her needs, regulating, and strengthening the system and curing the derangements of the sex. Why is it so many women owe their beauty to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription? Because beauty of form and face radiate from the common center—health. The best bodily condition results from good food, fresh air and exercise coupled with the judicious use of the "Prescription."

It reaches the origin of the trouble and corrects it.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

HOITT'S SCHOOL.

Nowhere are boys better cared for and more thoroughly taught than at Hoitt's School, Burlingame, San Mateo county, Cal. The school is in charge of Ira G. Hoitt, Ph. D., and will reopen August 6th.—S. F. Chronicle.

The British empire in 1873 did not contain 50,000,000 inhabitants; now it has 350,000,000, and is still growing.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Dr. Texter—Why doesn't your husband come to church, Mrs. Goodworks? Mrs. Goodworks—Well, he's a somnambulist, and I don't want to take any chances with him, so I make him stay at home.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.....

Sold by Druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

F. M. Peter, leading costumer, theatrical, masquerade costumes, wigs and play-books. Country masquerade balls a specialty. 729 Market St., S. F.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

All Out of Sorts

Tired, weak and weary. If this is your condition, stop and think. You are a sufferer from dyspepsia and great misery awaits you if you do not check it now. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine you can take. It has peculiar power to tone and strengthen the stomach.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the only true blood purifier prominently in the public eye today. $1; 6 for $5.

Hood's Pills act harmoniously with Hood's Sarsaparilla. 25c.

It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and is worth its weight in gold. I can use Ely's Cream Balm with safety, and it does all that is claimed for it.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from Colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

INFORMATION WANTED OF THE Whereabouts of James M. Neward, husband of Ellen M. Neward, whether alive or dead; resided in Marysville, Cal., in 1871. Address P. O. box 2518, San Francisco, California.

A SURE CURE FOR PILES

Itching Piles known by moisture like perspiration, cause intense itching when warm. This form and Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles yield at once to DR. BOSANKO'S PILE REMEDY, which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, allays itching, effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Druggists or mail. Dr. Bosanko, Philada., Pa.

Walter Baker & Co. Limited,

The Largest Manufacturers of PURE, HIGH GRADE COCOAS and CHOCOLATES On this Continent, have received HIGHEST AWARDS from the great Industrial and Food EXPOSITIONS IN EUROPE AND AMERICA.

Caution: In view of the many imitations of the labels and wrappers on our goods, consumers should make sure that our place of manufacture, namely, Dorchester, Mass. is printed on each package.

SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE.

WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD. DORCHESTER, MASS.

MEN suffering from the errors, indiscretions, excesses of youth, or diseases of the reproductive organs, all of which lead to Consumption or Insanity if not treated in time, can find PERMANENT CURE by corresponding with us. Our remedies are endorsed by the medical profession. NO QUACKERY. HOPKINS MEDICAL CO., Manchester, Conn.

ECZEMA From early childhood until I was grown my family spent a fortune trying to cure me of this disease. I visited Hot Springs and was treated by the best medical men, but was not benefited. When all things had failed I determined to try S.S.S. and in four months was entirely cured. The terrible eczema was gone, not a sign of it left. My general health built up, and I have never had any return of the disease. I have often recommended S.S.S. and have never yet known a failure to cure.

FROM CHILDHOOD

GEO. W. IRWIN, Irwin, Pa.

SSS Never fails to cure, even when all other remedies have. Our treatise on blood and skin diseases mailed free to any address.

SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

★ ASK YOUR DRUGGIST FOR ★

IMPERIAL GRANUM

IT IS ★ THE BEST ★ FOOD FOR NURSING MOTHERS, INFANTS AND CHILDREN

★ JOHN CARLE & SONS, New York. ★

MEN Dr. LIEBIG & CO. Special Doctors for Chronic, Private and Wasting Diseases.

Dr. Liebig's Invigorator, the greatest remedy for Seminal Weakness, Loss of Manhood and Private Diseases, Overcomes Prematureness and prepares all for marriage life's duties, pleasures and responsibilities; $1 trial bottle given or sent free to anyone describing symptoms; call or address 400 Geary St., private entrance 405 Mason St., San Francisco.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION,
532 California St., cor. Webb.

For the half year ending with the 30th of June, 1895, a dividend has been declared at the rate per annum of four and eight-tenths (4 8/10) per cent on Term Deposits, and four (4) per cent on Ordinary Deposits, free of taxes, payable on and after Monday, the 1st of July, 1895.

LOVELL WHITE, Cashier.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP - FOR CHILDREN TEETHING - For sale by all Druggists, 25 cents a bottle.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE BEST IN THE WORLD

Its wearing qualities are unsurpassed, actually outlasting two boxes of any other brand. Free from Animal Oils. GET THE GENUINE. FOR SALE BY CALIFORNIA MERCHANTS and Dealers generally.

THE BEST IN AMERICA

W. G. WOODS & Co's. "CASTLEWOOD" KENTUCKY BOURBON CARTAN, McCARTHY & Co. SOLE AGENTS, AND DISTRIBUTORS SAN FRANCISCO

DR. GUNN'S IMPROVED LIVER PILLS A MILD PHYSIC.

ONE PILL FOR A DOSE.

A movement of the bowels each day is necessary for health. These pills supply what the system lacks to make it regular. They cure Headache, brighten the Eyes, and clear the Complexion better than cosmetics. They neither gripe nor sicken. To convince you, we will mail sample free, or a full box for 25c. Sold everywhere. BOSANKO MED. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHICKEN RAISING PAYS

If you use the Petaluma Incubators & Brooders. Make money while others are wasting time by old processes. Catalog tells all about it, and describes every article needed for the poultry business.

48 Page Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

The "ERIE" mechanically the best wheel. Prettiest model. We are Pacific Coast Agents. Bicycle catalogue, mailed free, gives full description, prices, etc., AGENTS WANTED. PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal. BRANCH HOUSE, 231 S Main St., Los Angeles.

S. F. N. U. No. 681. New Series No. 28

"A FAIR FACE MAY PROVE A FOUL BARGAIN." MARRY A PLAIN GIRL IF SHE USES

SAPOLIO

Hercules GAS OR GASOLINE Engines

Workmanship the very best.
Always Ready, a boy can start them
No double or false explosions
They Oil Themseves

A FEW USES TO WHICH THE HERCULES CAN BE PUT:

For Wood-working Machinery.
For Bean-cleaning Machinery.
For Hoisting-works in Mines.
Running Machine Shops.
Running Shoe Factories.
Bottling Soda Water.
Sawing Cord-wood.
Running Churns.
Sawing Lumber.
Pumping Water.
Running Elevators.
Running Paint Mills.
Running Electric Motors.
For Printing Machinery.
Running Sewing Machines.
For Electric Light Dynamos.
Running Ice-cream Freezers
For Carpe-beating Machinery.

ADDRESS: PALMER & REY. 405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal.

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.
FRIDAY, AUGUST 16, 1895.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXVII. NO. 9. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., AUGUST 16, 1895. WHOLE NO. 1294.

INYO INDEPENDENT
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.
One Year (post paid) $2.00
Six Months 1.00
Three Months 125
One Month 50
Single Copies 10

WILDE AT WORK.

Remarkable Transformation in the Erstwhile Aesthete.

ILL-DRESSED, SHAVED AND SHORN.

Will Have to do the Labor that a Man Would Do in Climbing Eleven Miles of Stairs.

Who would have thought not long ago that Oscar Wilde, the apostle of a dainty æstheticism, the wit and poet, feted everywhere and even worshipped at times by people of position and discernment—who would have dreamed it even?—would come to sweating on a prison treadmill? Yet there he is, shaven and shorn, rough clothing chafing his flesh that once knew only the softest fabrics, the associate of vulgar and brutal criminals—himself a criminal. No more unlikely transformation could have been imagined. He who predicted such a future for this lover of the beautiful would have been regarded as a malicious iconoclast or an idiot. Yet there is Wilde, treading, treading, treading with the drear prospect of continuing to tread for nearly two years to come.

At Pentonville, where Wilde is serving the sentence, the prison suit is of dirty drab canvas marked with three arrows, heavy rough shoes and an ugly Scotch cap. Life in this prison is not pleasant by any means. Wilde's sleeping accommodations are the scantiest. Cots are unknown to the prisoners there. A plank bed, composed simply of a board raised six inches above the floor, without a mattress, is what he sleeps on. He is given each week two clean sheets of heavy coarse material and two rugs as rough as ordinary horse blankets. The rules about communication with the outside world are exceedingly severe. He can neither write nor receive a letter from his friends or family until three months of his sentence have been served, and then he may write and receive one letter a month, and be visited for twenty minutes by three friends.

The treadmill is the great bugaboo of the English convict. It is almost barbaric in its severity and savors somewhat of the torture inflicted upon unfortunates 500 years ago. It is shaped somewhat like the wheel of a stern-wheel steamer or the paddle wheel of a ferry-boat, except that the treadmill is considerably wider than they are. For the accommodation of the many involuntary workers at a height which a man of ordinary physique can easily reach is a long bar of wood. When all is ready the prisoner jumps upon one of the steps of the wheel and grasps the bar with his hands. The steps are called floats in the far land of Pentonville. The weight of the men turns the wheel and as they sink down on one foot they must step up to the next float when it comes round. It is much like climbing a particularly nasty flight of steep stairs with no ending at the top.

What is more there is no dodging or shirking the work. When the float comes round, Oscar Wilde, like all his brother felons, must step on it, other wise he will get an ugly knock on the shins by the ever-turning wheel, which will peel the bark off from the knee to the instep. It is not pleasant work by any means. It is the kind that completely takes the heart out of the most hardened criminal. At the end of a long day of ceaselessly stepping from float to float there is nothing to show for it. Each man is nothing more than a very insignificant section of a huge mass of machinery. The work of the convicts in America is play in comparison with it. In Pentonville all that the workers of the treadmill have to look forward to is the short breathing spells permitted by the prison regulations.

Oscar Wilde was sentenced to do hard labor, and this means that his time at treadmill will be four hours a day, the most severe work provided for by the prison rules. Two hours of this is done before dinner and two hours after. Some idea of the awful physical strain of the work can be gained from these facts: The men work twenty minutes and then have five minutes rest. In those twenty minutes they have made the equivalent of an ascent of 6,000 feet, or a trifle more than a mile and an eighth. In four hours' work they have done the same labor that a man would do in climbing eleven miles of stairs. Going up four or five flights of stairs makes an ordinray man wish for an elevator.

The disheartening feature of the treadmill is that the criminal is always just where he started from hour after hour and day after day. No talking is allowed on the wheel, and the silence is unbroken, except for the creaking of the ponderous machinery as it whirls around.

The food of Pentonville Prison is not what Wilde has been accustomed to by any means. On week days the prisoners get a dish of "skilly" for breakfast. Skilly is not very palatable, being a species of tasteless mush, but it is said to be healthy. Dinner consists of a tin bowl of broth, heavily charged with grease, and a chunk of bread as heavy as the traditional lead. Supper is a very light affair, consisting of bread and milk, the milk being extremely thin and of a light blue shade, indicating an intimate acquaintance with water.

The rules against any of the prisoners getting food other than that of the regular fare are very severe. More money than Oscar Wilde has at the present would be required to bribe the warders to smuggle food to him. Besides, all the warders watch one another, and no one of them could enjoy a fat income from Wilde for any length of time without being discovered. Then the feeling against Wilde is so strong among the prisoners that he will be made as uncomfortable as they possibly can make him.

Charley Mitchell, the prize-fighter, something over two years ago, served a brief term in Pentonville for assaulting an old man. Mitchell did treadmill work for a short time, and he afterwards said that it almost killed him. After his first half hour at it he resorted to every artifice to be excused from futher work, but without avail, as the physicians said that he was the strongest man in the place.

Wilde is a man of large frame, and it is a question whether he will break down under the arduous task he will have to perform or develop strength and health.

OUR WAGE EARNERS.

The farther west the higher the wages paid.

In 1880 there were 72,726 printers in this country.

There were 79,626 engineers in this country in 1880.

The merchants of this country numbered in 1880 481,476.

In 1880 there were 234,225 miners of all kinds in this country.

The iron and steel workers of this country numbered 114,539 in 1880.

Fifteen years ago there were 44,851 barbers in the United States.

Fifteen years ago the bread of the nation was suplied by 41,309 bakers.

By the tenth census there were 16,528 stock-raisers in the United States.

The clothing of the American nation was in 1880 manufactured by 133,756 tailors.

In 1880 there were 177,586 draymen, hackmen and other drivers of vehicles for hire.

The saw mill operators of the United States numbered 77,050 at the tenth census.

The gardeners and wine-growers of this country, when the tenth census was taken, numbered 51,482.

In the early days of gold-mining in California waiters in the hotels were paid $5 a day for their labor.

Over 85 per cent. of the breadwinners in this country are males, a little less than 15 per cent. are females.

It is believed that the numbers of the farmer class are principally recruited from native-born Americans.

According to the statistics of the tenth census the agricultural laborers of this country numbered 3,323,876.

The household work of the families in the United States was, in 1880, done by 1,075,653 domestic servants.

Of all handicraftsmen the carpenters were the most numerous when the tenth census was taken, numbering 373,143.

The professional men among our immigrants has generally borne a very small proportion to the total number.

Over one-half the population of Rhode Island and nearly one-half that of Connecticut is employed in the mills.

Native-born farmers of this country form 26 per cent. of its population; farmers of foreign birth number 17.6 per cent.

Over 43 per cent. of the Irish citizens of this country find employment in some form of personal or professional service.

According to the tenth census there were 1,859,225 laborers in this country whose occupation was not otherwise specified.

Native-born American traders constitute 2.5 per cent. of the population; those of foreign birth are more numerous, forming 4 per cent.

Native-born teachers form 1.5 per cent. of the whole population; foreign-born teachers are much less numerous, constituting but 0.4 per cent.

According to the tenth census, out of a total population of 50,000,000, over 17,000,000 were breadwinners, being a percentage of 34.8 of the whole number.

GAVE HER HER MONEY'S WORTH.

Sir Edwin Arnold had traveled all night from Indianapolis to Omaha, and expected great things of the people of the latter city. Upon reaching his hotel early in the morning Sir Edwin said to his manager when he called upon him:

"I suppose we'll do well here, won't we?"

"Well, I dont' know," said the manger, in rather a crestfallen way. "I have just been to the place where the advance sale has been going on for ten days, but the rush has not been very great."

"Oh, well," said Sir Edwin, encouragingly, "it can't help having been tolerably large. How many seats have been sold?"

"Well, since you ask, Sir Edwin, so pointedly, I will tell you. We have just sold one seat, and the buyer of that is now waiting down stairs to see you."

The English poet was crestfallen, but, recovering himself, he asked that his visitor be shown up to him. It turned out to be a young woman who was an intense admirer of Sir Edwin. He kept his visitor there for two hours, reading to this audience of one the entire lecture. Then, bowing his audience out, he called his manager and said:

"Well, I have delivered my lecture. Why should we stay here?"

This struck the manager as rather a sensible idea, and, hurriedly arranging with the owners of the hall, the lecture was canceled, and by noon the lecturer and his manager were off for the next stop.—Philadelphia Press.

There were 102,473 stonemasons in oth United States at the tenth census.

LANDS FORFEITED.

Court of Appeals Decides for the Government.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS INVOLVED.

Judge Ross' Decision Affirmed in Southern California Cases Concerning Nearly a Million Acres of Land.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday decided against the Southern Pacific Railroad Company in the famous $5,000,000 suit of the United States against that corporation for the recovery of more than 700,000 acres of land in Los Angeles and Ventura counties.

The case was the appeal of the corporation from a decree by Judge Ross some months ago, and the suit was originally brought by the Government to enjoin the cutting of timber upon and determine the title to the lands in question. The lands lie within the limits of a grant by Congress to the Atlantic and Pacific Railway company of July 27, 1866. By the same Act the Southern Pacific was authorized to build its road from its junction with the Atlantic and Pacific to San Francisco, and to aid the construction under the Southern Pacific grant.

In 1871 Congress authorized the Southern Pacific Company to build from a point near Tehachapi pass, by way of Los Angeles, to the Texas and Pacific Railroad at or near the Colorado river. The complication arose because of the discovery of the fact that on July 6, 1886, lands which had been granted to the Altantic and Pacific were forfeited by Act of Congress, and the lands in controversy are within the limits of both the Southern Pacific and the Altantic and Pacific grants at a place where the line of the Southern Pacific crosses what is claimed by the United States to be land of the Atlantic and Pacific conveyed in the original grant.

The question decided was whether the grant made in the first place to the Atlantic and Pacific prevented the lands from passing to the Southern Pacific by a subsequent conveyance. The Government alleged various frauds of the Atlanitc and Pacific Company in making the original maps and in making false oaths as to the boundary of the lands. It came to light in the trial that the first route map filed by the Atlantic and Pacific Company did not comply with the law, and the company attempted a subsequent amendment, by which it sought to save to itself the lands in controversy. The Court of Appeals practically held that the making of the first plats established a permanent record which could not subsequently be changed. The lands in question were made a part of the San Gabriel Forest Reservation in 1892. The railroad company claimed that it had fully complied with all the terms of the Act of Congress by which these lands were conveyed to it, and that the title of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad was not divested by due process of law.

The decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals affirms that delivered by Judge Ross of the Southern District some months ago in every particular. The decision holds that the Southern Pacific Company received most of its powers, farnchises and public grants from the United States, and that it is bound to comply with all the technical rules pertaining to the filing of maps of denfiite location or the construction of railroads. The decision holds that Congress never assented to or authorized the consolidations of various railroad companies, which now compose the Southern Pacific, and that the United States never in any way consented to a transfer of Government franchises to the new Southern Pacific Company. It further holds that the railroad that was built by the consolidated company, and that this was not a compliance with the Act of 1871, as such transfer was illegal and void. The suit quiets the title of the United States to the valuable lands in question. It is probable, however, that the case will be carried to the Supreme Court, for the reason that the defeated corporation stubbornly fought every point of the contest, and that its attorneys feel that the decision works a great injustice on their client.

In reply to the Southern Pacific Company's contention that the lands were fraudulently surveyed by the Atlantic and Pacific Company the court said:

The Southern Pacific Company was not injured in any right by the alleged failure of the Atlantic and Pacific Company in its duty, or by that company's want of good faith. If fraud was practiced, it was upon the Government. If there was injury it was the Government that was injured. How, then, can the Southern Pacific Company, to whom there was no obligation or duty, and in whom there was no right in respect to the matters complained of, take advantage of the fraud alleged to have been practiced on the Government? And upon what principle of justice or morals can it expect to make use of a fraud practiced upon the Government to make a case for itself against the Government?

At most, then, the alleged frauds in the maps of definite location constituted a cause of forfeiture, and this gave no right of succession to the Southern Pacific Company to the lands liable to forfeiture. This was decided by the Supreme Court in the case of the United States against the Southern Pacific Company, 146 U. S. 604. In that case it was contended by the company that Congress intended by the Acts of July 27, 1866, and March 3, 1871, that these lands should pass to some company to aid in the building of a railroad, either the Atlantic and Pacific or the Southern Pacific; that if they were not applied to aid the former company, then the latter company was to be entitled to them, but the court held the contention erroneous.—Examiner.

BREEZY BITS.

A Friend—"If you love her, old fellow, why don't you marry her?" Bachelor Doctor—"Marry her! Why, she is one of my best patients."—New York Advertiser.

Robbins—"Higbee is a genius." Bradford—"Can do anything, I suppose?" Robbins—"Yes, anything except make a living."—Truth.

Woman does all she can to render herself irresistible, and then orders man to keep his distance.—Galveston News.

Mamma—"What do you think your papa would say if he had heard you swearing?" Robbie—"Just about the same thing I said."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Miss Oldun—"I'd like to see any man alive kiss me?" Mr. Sharpe—"I guess you would."—Yonkers Statesman.

"So the insolent fellow refused to pay his rent?" "He did not say so in words, but he intimated it." "How so?" "He kicked me down stairs."—Le Figaro.

"I don't believe that Timmins ever had an original idea in his life.' "Oh, I know of one. He has an idea that he is a great poet."—Indianapolis Journal.

No rumor concerning President Cleveland should be taken as geniune hereafter unless it has Private Secretary Thurber's name blown in the bottle.—Chicago Tribune.

Lady, in Centarl Park, to baby in carriage—"Why, you pretty little thing!" Nurse proudly—"Yes, it's a good thing." Policeman approaching—"Well, push it along, then. Your'e blocking the sidewalk."—New York Herald.

"Did you think my sermon too broad today?" "Oh, no; not for the length of it." At that point the parishioner hastened to ask his pastor if he preferred light or dark meat and the discussion was not prolonged.—Detroit Tribune.

SLANG WORDS AND PHRASES.

Until the nomination of Franklin Pierce for the Presidency the word "outsider" was unknown. The Committee on Credentials came to make its report, and could not get into the hall because of the crowd of people who were not members of the convention. The chairman of the convention asked if the committee was ready to report, and the chairman of the committee answered. "Yes, Mr. Chairman, but the committee is unable to get inside on account of the crowd and pressure of the outsiders. The newspaper reporters took up the word and used it.

"You are a daisy," is used by Dickens in "David Copperfield" in the sense of calling a person a daisy in the way to express admiration and at the same time to laugh at one's credulity. Steerforth says to young Copperfield: "David, my daisy, you are so innocent of the world. Let me call you my daisy as it is so refreshing to find one in these current days so innocent and unsophisticated. My dear Copperfield, the daisies in the field are not fresher than you."

"Too thin" was given currency by Alexander H. Stephens of Georgia in the United States Congress in 1870. Some members had made a reply to Mr. Stephens, and the latter had his chair wheeled out in the aisle and said in that shrill, piping voice that always commanded silence: "Mr. Speaker, the gentleman's arguments are gratuitous assertions made up of whole cloth—and cloth, sir, so gauzy and thin that it will not hold water. It is entirely too thin, sir."—Boston Post.

PETER.

Peter lived on the prairie. When he was 3 years old the first railroad train came through. Uncle Peter carried the small boy to see it.

A train-boy threw a peach to Peter. He ate it, and laughed and squealed with delight.

"Don't throw away the stone," said Uncle Peter. "We'll plant it."

